Since 1909 the working youth of Spain have been shedding their blood on the rocks of Morocco—for such is the command of the Sindicato Minero del Rif (now the Cia de Minas des Rif); such is the demand of the monarchy and the army. The events of 1909, which marked the commencement of all the Moroccan campaigns, were due to the greed of the mining companies of the Rif. The ostensible cause, however,, was the justifiable demands of the native workers of Morocco.

The company exploited the mining works of Beni-Bu-Ifrur which are the richest districts of Morocco. An accident occurred during the work

CAL WANTS LARGER APPROPRIATION FROM CONGRESS FOR WAR PLANS

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13.—President Coolidge, as part of his drive to push larger military appropriations thru congress, announced that he is not in favor of holding a national defense day military demonstration this year as we have done in 1924.

Instead, Coolidge said, the war department should take up the question in congress, "and adequate appropriations made so that expenses of the day will be charged against the war department as a regular part of the national defense."

The war department, backed by the capitalist press, is spreading propaganda for the further militarization of the Pacific territories of the United States. Coolidge and his followers are mouthing the wishes of the big business interests for a larger appropriation for Hawaiian fortifications, in order to protect the property of the sugar trust and other business interests there

Government to Buy Planes.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Postmaster General New announced today that bids will be opened here on July 15 for supplying whatever number of planes are needed by the postoffice department for the air mail service.

The department has $2,600,000 available to equip and operate the air mail, but it has not been decided how much of this will be expended for planes.

WILLIMANTIC TEXTILE STRIKERS JEER SCABS; COSSACKS RUSH IN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARTFORD, Conn., May 13.—Twelve state policemen had to be hurried to Willimantic to help local police control demonstrations of strikers at the plant of the American Thread Co. The company is trying to use strikebreakers and is housing them in company boarding houses. Strikers jeer at the strikebreakers as they pass on the streets, hence the police!

ZANKOV BUTCHERY IS RESPONSIBLE FOR CATHEDRAL BOMBING IN SOFIA

By BOYAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

The outrage in Sofia is no ordinary event.

On the 15th of April Reserve General K. Gheorghieff, the president of the "Kubret" (a conspiratory military organization which really governs the country) was murdered in Sofia. During the funeral service which took place the following day in the "Sveti Kral" cathedral, an infernal machine exploded. The explosion was terrific. The cathedral was almost destroyed. There are over 200 killed and 500 wounded.

Who has committed this terrible outrage, which constitutes a blow at the heart of the official government in the country, the government of the professors and generals?

Murder Workers

The blow is very severe, the horror is very great; hence therefore the hsterical outcry against the "agrarian Communists." The bourgeois press of the whole world once more has the opportunity of launching a furious attack against "bloody" Bolshevism, against Communism. The rage of the kept press of Bulgaria knows no limits. The bourgeois press gives expression to the rage and the lust for

Anti-Klan Bill of Negro Reaches Third Reading in House

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 13.—After hours of wrangling, the anti-klan bill introduced in the house by Representative W. E. King, Negro of Chicago, demanding that all organizations having more than twenty members, file a roster with the secretary of state, was passed to third reading today.

UNEMPLOYMENT REQUIRES TREATY WITH SOVIET RUSSIA, DECLARE BRITISH TRADE UNION LEADERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 13.—The general council of the British Trade Union Congress has passed a resolution, in which, "in view of the abnormally protracted unemployment crisis in England and the impossibility of rapidly restoring British industry to its prewar level without the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics being admitted without any reservations into the 'committee of nations'—the general council urges the British government to resume negotiations with the Union with a view to finally settling the questions of normal intercourse in its full scope, and, in particular, adjusting the question of extending to the commerce with the U. S. S. R. the application of the overseas trade facilities act." Soviet Russia has already received de jure recognition, but there is no treaty negotiated.

The general council of the Trade Union Congress further stresses "the importance of including the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in the family of nations, with a view to creating more tangible possibilities of a stable peace in the Oriental countries."

YELLOW DOG PLEDGE PUT ON DETROIT

Hutcheson Again Insults Carpenters

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., May 13.—The carpenters of Detroit are beginning to learn that Wm. L. Hutcheson's conceit and arrogance are as boundless as his ignorance and stupidity. After the representatives of local unions meeting with John Potts, the agent of Hutcheson, had agreed to make shameful and humiliating concessions to placate the peevish czar in Indianapolis, so that the organization might not suffer further damage and the rank and file suffer further losses, that worthy, with an arrogance that would shame a feudal lord, has decreed that each and every member of the four suspended local unions, namely Nos. 19, 2140, 1191 and 420, must sign a pledge that practically puts them at the mercy of the whims of the over-lords in Indianapolis.

The pledge, which is printed on the stationery of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, reads as follows:

Hutcheson's Yellow Dog Pledge.

"I, the undersigned, do hereby promise and agree that I will observe and comply with all the laws, rules and regulations of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and that I will in no way affiliate with or give support, assistance or comfort to the Trade Union Educational League, or any similar or kindred organization.

"In subscribing to the above, I do so of my own free will and accord, and agree that if I should violate said agreement, or pledge, it is understood that my membership in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America be forfeited without complaint by me.

Signature

Witness."

A motion made to repudiate the action of the delegates to the district council in voting against a one-way vote proposition submitted by Hutcheson some weeks ago, to elect new delegates, and to instruct the members of Local 19 to sign this pledge individually as the conditions upon which the charter could be regained and retained, occasioned some very bitter discussion in which many members declared they would never sign such a document.

Angry Member Tears up Pledges.

Many who supported the motion in order to get the local functioning again, declared that they would later consider whether or not they would sign the "pledge." The motion carried by about a 4 to 1 vote. Then the fun began.

Potts and a pious old faker by name of Botterill sat at a table garnering in the pledges of the weak-willed and servile members of the local, when a righteously indignant brother jerked the table away from them, upsetting its contents, and then proceeded to tear up the pledges and scatter them over the hall. Several husky flunkeys came to the assistance of the "general disrupters," but not before the good work had been accomplished.

It seems that each time the local unions comply with the unreasonable conditions set forth by Hutcheson, this present cattleman and former boxmaker and lumberjack conceives of some new infamy with which to humiliate the carpenters of Detroit. In this last move he has obviously gone a little bit too far. To bludgeon an organization where the mass mind prevails is one thing. And convincing each individual member that he must forfeit his constitutional and legal rights and crawl before the intellectual vacuum at Indianapolis, will very probably be another proposition.

League Too Deep to Dig Out.

Hutcheson's attack on the Trade Union Educational League and his craven fear of its teachings is quite logical from his faker's point of view. However, the leaven of the league's teachings has raised the spirit and intelligence of the carpenters of Detroit to too high a level ever again to be fooled by the stupid lies of the official family.

The majority vote of Detroit for the left wing program of Rosen in the last general elections reflected the advanced intelligence of the carpenters here. Since then, Hutcheson and the league (quite unintentionally and unconsciously on the part of Hutcheson) have carried this educational process a long way. The mass learns objectively thru concrete situations. "Concrete" describes Hutcheson's intellectual apparatus.

Much Obliged, Hutch!

The league in Detroit thanks Hutcheson for his assistance. May we continue to have his co-operation!

Plan Jap-U. S. Liquor Treaty.

TOKIO, May 13.—Japan is negotiating a liquor treaty with the United States, it was learned here today at the foreign office. The treaty was declared to be similar to existing liquor treaties already in force between the United States and England and other countries.

USE FINGERPRINTS TO BLACKLIST LABOR; PROVEN FORGERY DENIED BY "EXPERTS" WHO WOULD LOSE JOBS

By CARL HAESSLER

(Federated Press Editor)

Fingerprinting, the pet of Henry Ford and Secretary of Labor Davis, enters a new realm of falsification and oppression with the recently perfected development of sending fingerprints by wire. From Chicago the convention in New York of American police chiefs is to receive the fingerprints of a criminal in the local rogues gallery, sent by telegraph on a plan that will permit the sending broadcast of these telltale marks which differ in every human being.

For Criminals, Soldiers, Aliens and Workers.

The scheme is primarily a police identification measure. But the ease with which fingerprints can be fraudulently imposed on objects never touched by the individual in question and the extension of fingerprinting from criminals to all U. S. soildiers in the world war and since then to civilian workers in large plants like the Ford Motor Co. make the wire printing a matter of concern to all labor men.

The propaganda by Secy. of Labor Davis for the registration of aliens, carrying fingerprinting with it, has been energetically fought by labor organizations as the entering wedge for an enormous national blacklist system by which union men can be infallibly spotted especially in the important but poorly organized basic industries where immigrants concentrate.

From alien workers it is only a step to all workers under the pretext of industrial mobilization for the "defense days" which are to become annual affairs. From employer blacklists it is only a step to political persecution via the criminal identification route, particularly when the movement for a class party gets well under way. Men obnoxious to the authorities need simply be held while a fake fingerprint is flashed over the wire as elleged evidence to convict them.

Faked Fingerprints Possible.

Fingerprints can easily be faked. This has been demonstrated to perfection by a former political prisoner, Albert Wehde, who worked in the fingerprint bureau of the department of justice while confined at Leavenworth federal penitentiary during the war. In a book entitled "Fingerprints Can Be Forged," Wehde shows how he baffled the country's experts by taking a genuine fingerprint of his and transferring it by etching and further processes from the original article to an entirely different one.

Thus the police might take a fingerprint of a union man from the glass top of a desk where he was being interviewed in a police station and transfer it to the nickel case of an alarm clock attached to an infernal machine that would be planted in a factory and later "discovered" with the print implicating the innocent worker.

"Experts" Afraid Soft Jobs Would Vanish.

At the convention of the Illinois State Assn. for Identification in 1923 Wehde was denied the floor to show up the possibility of planting fingerprints that could not be detected. He had privately demonstrated the week before to officials of the organization that he could fake prints beyond their power to spot them.

Ford and his factory fingerprinting, Davis and his proposed alien printing, the police and their wire system, are strands in the growing net around labor.

CLOSE 80 JAPANESE SCHOOLS IN HAWAII IN FEE LAW PROTEST

HONOLULU, May 13.— Eighty Japanese language schools were closed here today, pending the filing of an injunction to prevent the school department from enforcing an amendment recently passed by the territorial legislature requiring an annual fee of $1 a pupil.

The amendment also provides for a fine of $25 for failure to comply with the fee provisions. The schools were considered by the school department to have ceased to function.

An unusual angle in the case was that the new amendment specifically provided against injunction proceedings.

Russian Trade Mission Visits Pacific Coast

it is the nearest to that country. If successful agreements are concluded, hundreds of millions of dollars worth of commodities will in the future be shipped thru Seattle annually.

All commodities purchased in San Francisco, Chicago, New York or Seattle, will be shipped thru this port.

Increase in Trade.

This will be their initial buy here for the time being, but in the future such commodities purchased in China, Japan or any Far Eastern country will be purchased in the United States, provided that a satisfactory agreement is concluded. Now, a large amount of commodities consisting of dry goods, clothing and household articles including a large sailing vessel, will be purchased in Seattle for cash.

Questioned by the writer about whether they intend to purchase commodities on credit, Comrade Rasumovsky replied, that they are not anxious for credit as they have all the cash they want, but should the American businessmen desire to sell them in the future commodities on credit, they would only accept credit on satisfactory terms.

Propaganda Talk Silly.

Questioned on various phases of the Russian situation, the representative of the Dalgostorg politely declined to talk, explaining to the writer that they are on a business mission and that so much nonsensical talk about propaganda was being published in the American press therefore, they prefer to refrain from expressing themselves on such matters.

"To what extent would the establishing of commercial relations between Soviet Russia and the United States help the American workers?" asked the writer. Comrade Rasumovsky's face beamed up. "It would help immensely both the American workers and Russian workers. It would bring about the employment of the unemployed. We could purchase machinery and commodities in this country and build up our industries which would provide work for the Russian workers while the commodities and machinery produced in America and sold to us would provide work for the American workers," he said.

Recognition Necessary.

"Would the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States facilitate and give impetus to greater commercial intercourse?" the interviewer ventured to ask.

"The recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States would bring about exchange of a tremendous volume of business between the two countries," he replied. "The fact that there does not exist any consular service of the two countries in either of them is the greatest hindrance to such commercial intercourse and the carrying on of trade between the two great countries. The vast area of the Far East is immensely rich in minerals and natural resources, but transportation facilities need to be built up. For instance, miners working in the Tomote gold mines receive three pounds in gold for an eight-hour day.

"The Dalgostorg representatives expect in the future, to export to America some of the finest and highest quality of furs from Siberia."

U. S. Needs Russian Markets.

Questioned whether Soviet Russia could purchase commodities outside of America without affecting its progress, Comrade Rasumovsky smiling, replied, "Most certainly." They can obtain all commodities elsewhere if necessary but that common sense and economic necessity will bring about a trade intercourse between the two countries. After all, the United States needs foreign markets and Soviet Russia is the finest field at present.

Sold Pardons for Former Governor, Ex-Convict Says

TOPEKA, Kans., May 13.—Today's session of the trial of former Governor Jonathan M. Davis, charged with conspiracy and soliciting a bribe while in office was expected to bring forth a definite ruling on testimony bearing on the Fred Pollman case.

Davis has two charges against him. One is known as the Walter Grundy case; the other the Pollman case. The defense has continually claimed that such testimony is irrelevant. Pollman and Glenn Davis, former convicts, have testified.

Testimony went into alleged dealing between the former governor and Glenn Davis, an ex-convict, and Davis and Pollman. Davis told the jury of a conversation with the former governor in which, he testified, the governor suggested that he take $1,250 down to his farm and give it to his son Russell Davis in order that a full pardon might be granted Pollman. Pollman was a convicted banker of Lacygne, Kansas.

Woolsorters' Union Finds Unemployment and Accuses Bosses

LAWRENCE, Mass., May 13—(FP)—The Lawrence Woolsorters' Protective Union is trying to combat unemployment in the wool-sorting business. A meeting held in Boston attempted to analyze causes and blamed manufacturers for "dumping of wool."

The United Textile Workers' Union is assisting the wool-sorters and will enlist co-operation of the American Federation of Labor.

A list of manufacturers making poor products will be compiled and submitted to buyers in order to deter the practice of substituting poor materials and increasing wool-sorters' unemployment.

FRANCE TELLS THE U. S. TO GO TO BLAZES

Will Pay Not a Cent More Than Germany

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PARIS, May 13.— Ever since the American reparation commissioner under the Dawes plan, Seymour Parker Gilbert, reported last week that the German nation could not meet the Dawes' plan reparation payments, the chancellories of the world capitalist powers have been in turmoil.

Passing the Buck.

France, thru Caillaux, finance minister, announced that the reparations payments were, in effect, too doubtful for France to count upon in its domestic budget, but that since America and England had sponsored the Dawes plan, and since General Dawes had been elected vice-president largely by the advertisement of having drawn up the plan which is supposed to make Germany pay, France would generously turn over fifty per cent of anything Germany pays to apply on France's debt to the United States and Britain.

At once, the U. S. Ambassador Herrick, was pressed to put the screws upon France, and Coolidge issued a statement objecting to France basing her debt payments upon reparation payments. Evidently Mr. Coolidge is not so firmly convinced that General Dawes' plan draws as well as his pipe.

Ambassador Herrick applied the upholstered club by a press interview in which he declared that while France had made no concrete proposal on the funding of the debt to America, he, Herrick, was of course, thoroly convinced that France really wants to pay. He added, as an evidence of the awkward position he is being put into, that hereafter he would not discuss the situation with the press, and would leave it to the Washington government to hand out statements.

Tells Allies to go to the Devil.

Meanwhile, France calmly announced yesterday, in Caillaux's instructions to the French experts on the reparations commission, that it is "impossible for France to pay one penny more than she gets from Germany and that the British and American creditors may do as they like about it."

He added that if Germany does pay anything, half of it must go toward reconstruction expense of the devastated area in France.

This leaves the English and American governments to suck their thumbs for consolation at the unfunded French debt. America has $7,000,000,000 in unpaid debts from the various allied countries on her books, a large part of this due from France and $2,000,000,000 from fascist Italy, which is also worrying Mr. Coolidge. Mussolini has never made a gesture toward even recognizing Italy's debt.

An Unhappy Position.

With the past French finance minister, Clementel, having declared that the debt to America was "merely political" and Caillaux taking the viewpoint outlined above, Uncle Sam does not seem to occupy a very happy position. Caillaux even refuses to negotiate with America over the debt "until France's budget is balanced." This is in the realm of misty possibilities, very misty. But if it is not done, the American nation can get ready to pay thru its nose for the world war, and it is certain that the big business interests will shove the burden onto the workers.

Twenty Million Dollar Cake Trust Organized Alongside Bread Trust

NEW YORK, May 13—(FP)—The Continental Baking Corporation may be making a bread trust but Grennan Bakeries Inc. is trrying to make a cake trust. Grennan, already the largest cake concern in the country, is now owner of Purity Bakeries corporation, which adds 35 plants in all important centers to the already numerous bakeries of Grennan.

The gross business of the two organizations, now one, is estimated at $20,000,000. Purity Bakery plants are in Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, Indiana, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ilinois, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas.

Quake Felt in Illinois.

CHICAGO, May 13.— The seismograph at the University of Chicago began registering a slight earthquake at 6 a. m., today. The vibrations lasted one minute and five seconds and according to observers, were so slight that no record of the distance or direction of the quake could be determined.

Reports reaching Chicago this afternoon from various Illinois towns, however, said that a slight quake had been felt there.

Phone Rome to London.

LONDON, May 13.—Rome and London are on speaking terms today. The first direct telephonic communication between the Italian and British capitals was established last night and a conversation of five minutes length was held.

Cotton Prices Go Down As Growers Prepare New Crop for the Profiteers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the cotton crop over the South is again growing toward the picking. The new crop is coming in.

It is with the same certainty that the seasons roll around that this time of year finds the price of cotton dropping. The new cotton crop, promising to be a very plentiful one, is still in the hands of the cotton grower, who will soon be trying to sell; like his brother of the land, the wheat grower of the North. So it is to the interest of the millionaire gamblers on the cotton exchanges to beat down cotton prices.

• • • •

Texas alone is this year producing 6,000,000 bales of cotton on a 10 per cent increased acreage. That news comes simultaneously with the report that cotton closes 20 to 32 points lower on the Chicago Board of Trade; from 22 to 31 points decline in New York City, with net losses of 29 to 37 points in New Orleans.

At the same time the New York dry goods market reports that the prices of the finished cotton products are holding steady. This is just another showing how the profiteers are buying the raw cotton at low prices and selling the finished product at high prices.

• • • •

The conditions of the cotton growers of the South affect the whole nation. Great masses of Negro cotton farmers in the South steadily going into bankruptcy, or disgusted with the endless slavery to banker, landlord and cotton buyer, quits the land and drifts North, into the great industries; an unorganized mass ready to compete with the white workers. The same holds true of the white cotton grower of the South; the impoverished renter masses of Oklahoma and Texas especially. Plentiful crops do them no good when the profiteer stands in the cotton exchanges and the boards of trade beating down prices below even the cost of production.

• • • •

This year the American cotton grower will also face a better stocked world market. The Asiatic republics of the Soviet Union, almost fully recovered from the devastating wars of intervention and civil struggles, are raising crops from an acreage greater than ever before. Moscow will not be buying so heavily in the future, as it has in the past, in the American market. Moscow may soon have cotton to sell instead of appearing as a purchaser in foreign markets.

British interests have been developing great areas of cotton raising in the upper regions of the Nile—in the Sudan—which "The Empire" insists must remain under a British protectorate, and not revert to Egypt. Here cotton is king just as oil rules in the Near East.

These are some of the facts that the cotton grower may well ponder as he picks his crop this year. Like the wheat grower he faces a world problem. He will gradually come to realize this, if he does not already understand his dilemma. Realization will make him see the necessity of world organization—the need that brought into existence the Peasants' International, and that will force him to ally himself with it, and join in a well organized and revolutionary struggle against his oppressors.

The cotton grower and the wheat farmer, facing low prices for their products, and the city worker and his family, faced with high prices for foood and clothing, going hungry and wearing cheap clothing, bodes ill for American capitalism. Its profit hunger drives it to its doom.

BRITISH passengers on a houseboat belonging to the Asiatic Petroleum company, were fired upon by a Chinese gunboat on the Whampoo river, according to news dispatches. The British ware waving the union jack and singing "God save the king." This was more than the peaceful Chinese could stand. They have seen some pretty sick looking specimens of the king species in the Orient but they could not understand how anybody in his proper senses could shout for the salvation of the imbecile-faced King George. Taking the Britons for a party of escaped lunatics, they fired a few shots at them, to drown the noise. The Britons feel sore.

THE anti-Russian policies of the Gompers regime will be continued by his administration declared William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor in a statement issued to the capitalist press a few days ago. The policies of the Russian government are inimical to the workers of all countries, declared the Ohio baptist. Perhaps Mr. Green is looking for a pension from Judge Gary and a last resting place between Gary and John D. Rockefeller. His predecessor lies between Andy Carnegie and William Rockefeller.

GREEN also thanked the Calles government in Mexico for issuing a statement against Communism. Calles is a socialist and is acting true to type. No doubt the message was written by one of the accomodating penmen of Wall Stret. While the Mexican government was fighting Wall Street, there were no American roses going to Mexico City. But the bargain between Calles, the socialist, and Wall Street was clinched during the De la Huerta revolt. Calles, the socialist, is now eating out of Morgan's hand and Morgan's labor agent, William Green, will see to it that the officials of the Mexican labor movement do not get off the Morgan track. There is a united front for you.

PALESTINE REDS LEAD FIGHT ON BRITISH RULE

Arabs and Jews Unite Against Imperialism

By J. B.

JERUSALEM, Palestine, May 13.—Little Palestine again has been the centre of interest for a few days. The telegraphic agencies and special correspondents of the big English newspapers sent out detailed descriptions of Lord Balfour's journey in the "Holy Land," his arrival, his welcome, and everything else concerning the matter. But all these announcements and descriptions—probably purposely rather than otherwise—ignored the true political significance of the Balfour trip. The ceremony of the opening of a Jewish university in Jerusalem (which, by the way, has a thoroughly clerical character, and will be a bulwark of reaction, and with the splendour of which the Jewish bourgeoisie will dazzle the broad Jewish masses in various countries), is naturally not a sufficient reason for luring a British aristocrat, advanced in years, of high standing in political circles, such as Lord Balfour is, to Palestine.

Tests, British Policy.

And the other "popular" explanation—that Lord Balfour came to Palestine in order to see with his own eyes how the Zionists have put the "Balfour Declaration" of 1917 into practice, in which Palestine was set aside for the Jewish peoples as a "national home"—also does not suffice. The crux of the matter is that Balfour, as one of the most "moderate" conservatives in intimate relation with the foreign office at present, has been entrusted with the task, under the guise of a "visit," to subject British policy in the Near East to a test.

After the "stabilization" of British power in Egypt by the Ziwar Pasha cabinet, and the dissolution of parliament, and the security of the other "wing" of the British possessions in the Near East—Mesopotamia—by the cleverly incited uprising in Kurdistan, the time has now come for British policy to introduce the policy of the firm hand in the centre, i. e. Palestine and Arabia. Lord Balfour's journey, as the British conservative weekly Near East itself states, was a provocation of the Arabians, just as the journey of Lee Stack to the Soudan was five months ago. But that is just what the imperialists wanted. At the same time a test was to be made to find out how capable the native population was of resisting British imperialism, and also how far the alliance with, or rather the lackey service of the Zionist bourgeoisie and the social-democrats could be depended upon.

Socialist Allied With Imperialists.

The second test was a glorious success. The Zionist bourgeoisie and their lackeyes, the social-democratic "Poale Zion" of various tendencies, showed that they place a good deal more value on the smile of the English lord than on the peaceful relations with the Arabian population of Palestine. The Zionist organization, which, by the way, not only in Palestine, but also in the other countries, has put itself completely into the hands of the reactionary sections of the Jewish bourgeoisie (which recently went beyond an unscrupulous offensive against Soviet Russia and has again begun taking an active part in the intervention schemes), is ostentatiously challenging the Arabians to battle by abusing the Arabian central committee and the Arabian nationalist leaders. When tanks and aeroplanes are holding the Arabians in check, the Jewish bourgeoisie courageously attacks them. As a consequence, the Arabians break out in wild fury against the Jews and instigate pogroms against innocent poor Jews. It is this which constitutes the greatest service rendered by the Jewish bourgeoisie to British imperialism, because it can maintain its position in Palestine only on the basis of national antagonisms.

Arabs Unite Against British.

Thus, whilst the Jewish bourgeoisie in Palestine showed to Lord Balfour that it was a trustworthy lackey, the attitude of the Arabs showed that the native population has much more power of resistance than was expected. The two parties in the Arabian camp (the "nationalists"—the party of compromise, and the extremist party of the "Arabian Executive Committee"), as well as the various small peasant parties of Palestine have made common cause in answer to the British-Zionist provocation, anda the protest against Balfour was unanimous. Apart from the slavish and fawning Zionists, the whole countrry was united in its protest against brutal British imperialism personified by Balfour.

But it would be wrong to assume that this great anti-Balfour demonstration was only caused by the national questino. The nationalism of the Arabian peasants, artisans and workers is not developed enough for that. It was rather a vehement protest against the economic impoverishment of the masses of Palestine and against the oppression under which they are groaning. And not only the Arabian masses, but also the lower classes of the Jewish population of Palestine, except the small group of Zionist agents, have experienced nothing but evil from imperialism, andknow that there is worse to come.

Reds Lead Demonstration.

The Palestine Communists took an active nay, a leading part in the anti-Balfour demonstration and urged the Jewish and Arabian workers to make common cause against the predatory lords. Thus the national protest was converted into a class protest: the entire working class population of Palestine demonstrated against imperialism and Zionism!

It is as yet impossible to guage the results and consequences of the Balfour visit. But one thing is quite certain: the more brutal the measures of British imperialism against the population of Palestine and Arabia, and the more the Zionist lackeys lend themselves to the role of the imperialist agents—the stronger and the more united, the bolder and the more revolutionary the national liberation movement will become. And the Communist Party, which the British government hopes to throttle by arrests and persecutions, will in spite of it, or rather because of it, get into closer and closer contact with the masses and will take the lead in the coming struggles.

'A LITTLE JUDICIOUS LYING CAN HARM NOTHING,' SAYS MAJ-GEN. FRIES IN ATTACK ON SOVIETS

WASHINGTON, May 13.—If generous retirement pensions are to be paid to major generals of the army of the United States, it would seem only fair that these highly decorated officers should be possessed of ordinary common sense and average eighth-grade information at the time they are granted this allowance. Otherwise they should be subjected to special supervision.

Here, for example, comes Major General Amos A. Fries, late chief of the chemical warfare service, with a fiercely-scowling portrait of himself showing seven military medals—in an article, "Can the United States be Sovietized?" in the current issue of the National Republican. This is the propaganda magazine conducted by that Geo. B. Lockwood, former secretary of the republican national committee.

"No Harm in Lying," Says General.

Fries does not say that the United States is in danger of coming under Soviet government at any particular time, but he warns: "If we over-estimate the danger a little, no harm is done, and the sooner we will probably remove the danger. If, however, we entirely under-estimate it the time will come when we must face revolution—and bloody revolution—on a greater or smaller scale. On any scale that might be started, it would involve an economic loss comparatively greater than the cost of stopping agitation now."

This incitement to "stopping agitation now" is followed by a defense of the use of poison gas in warfare, and an attack on the National Council for Limitation of Armaments. He asserts that his office investigated the reasons for this opposition to chemical warfare, and discovered that a mysterious superior authority was directing the council's work, and this mysterious authority might be located in Vienna.

General Mixes His Drinks.

"We very quickly ran into the socialist camp," the general proceeds. "I use the word 'socialist' as inclusive of the various organizations that are operating openly or under cover as Communists, Bolsheviks, anarchists, I. W. W., Soviets or similar terms. The basic idea in them all is Communism. That is, all property is common, or as more often now expressed, all property belongs to the state.

"Under this theory each man shares equally with every other man, notwithstanding his efforts or his results. One of the disturbing facts is that so many people who have accumulated considerable property, or who have made considerable success, are deceived by this idea. They take this idea up, not realizing that if it is put thru everything they possess in the world will be wiped out."

Grotesque as this statement is, with its bristling stupidities, it reflects the actual mentality of a very large group of active and retired military nabobs in Washington.

BOSSES THOUGHT UNION COULDN'T TRAVEL, TOO, NOW SHOPS ARE STRUCK

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., May 13.—(FP)—The M. & H. shop of Port Chester is completely tied up by the organization strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union. The employer laughed at Union Organizer Wertheimer at the suggestion of the union winning his workers, but the union is enjoying the last laugh and expects the employer, Magid to sign on the dotted line shortly.

The Amalgamated is making a steady drive against open shops in Port Chester, wither many New York shops fled to attempt evasion of union working conditions.

Cotton Prices Go "Down."

Weakness in cotton still prevailed yesterday. At the opening prices were 22 to 37 points lower. May opened at 22.50, down 26; July 22.19, down 37; Oct. 21.45, down 28; Dec. 21.58, down 22; Jan. 21.69, down 26.

TWO MORE MINES CLOSE AS MEN GROW DESPERATE

3-Year Agreement Now Realized as Suicide

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 13.—"They shall not work," so say the mine operators. "Thy will be done," answers the reactionary officialdom of the U. M. W. of A., headed by the Lewis-Farrington combine. So the scheme of "deflating" the mining industry goes on.

The so-called "deflating" scheme scheme hatched out by John L. Lewis in conjunction with the operators is nothing more than a plan to drive the miners to desperation by the starvation process, also to eliminate the militants from the union and kill the fighting spirit of those who remain in the organization so the operators will be able to put over their program of wage reductions, etc.

Two More Mines Close.

Two more mines in the Springfield sub-district have just been shut down. One in Springfield, that of the Sangemon Coal Co., known as "No. 2," employing 500 men, and one at Divernon, Ill., known as Madison Coal Co. mine No. 6, employing about 800 men.

The Divernon mine just re-opened about five months ago after a nine months' shut-down. Of the five months it has supposed to have been operating, it worked just twenty-eight days.

Provocation by Operator.

The notice of the shut-down was posted at this mine two days after pay day. The men had spent their money as usual, paying off old debts, etc., not knowing the mine was to shut down..

After word of the shut-down became generally known, the local grocery stores posted notices that they were on a strictly cash basis.

Bourgeois Out of Business.

One store keeper posted a notice that he was forced to quit business and was closing out his stock for cash. It is believed that others will also quit as soon as their stocks are exhausted.

The situation of many of the miners at Divernon is almost unbelievable. A typical case is that of a Divernon miner who has six children and a wife to provide for. The shut-down found him with a $180 debt on hand and just $1.60 in his pocket. It is useless to try to get credit, there is none to be had in this town.

"Deflating" Process Starves Miners' Families.

The three-year contract with its deflating process is working to perfection. The progressive miners (who fought so militantly at the district and International conventions to prevent Farrington, Lewis and the mine operators from hog-tying the coal diggers) did not muster enough strength to prevent the three-year agreement, and so the miners are now being skinned alive.

In the face of these grim tragedies, Farrington continues to draw his fat salary and turn in huge expense accounts of $20 a day railroad fare and $1,500 for telegrams for a period of three months. Any talk of forming unemployed councils is met with charges of "dual union," and threats of expulsions.

Organize the Left Wing.

The rank and file of the miners must organise their forces to fight, and must fight hard if they are not to have all of the hard won conditions taken from them and open shop conditions given instead.

Says Rebels of 1776 Would Revolt Against the Tyranny of 1925

ST. LOUIS.—The free people which revolted against tyranny of the British government in 1776 would never stand for the tyranny of the United States government in 1925, declared Isaac Lionberger, former assistant U. S. attorney general, addressing a meeting of the St. Louis electrical board of trade.

"It was the obstinacy of the British government, backed by the rapacity of merchants, which refused us relief and thereby set us to organizing for rebellion," the speaker asserted, characterizing repressive laws, search and seizures and the gradual nullification of the bill of rights as "some of the tyranny of the U. S. government." He concluded: "This march of tyranny cannot be stopped unless a large body of the citizenry becomes as indignant as it ought to be, as we once were in the face of British tyranny."

FORD SPEEDUP SYSTEM PRODUCED $100,000,000 PROFIT IN 1924, BUT WORKERS GOT NO PAY RAIS

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The last word in scientific exploitation of labor produced for the F family 1924 profits of more than $100,000,000. This means approximately profit on each of the 2,100,000 cars turned out in contrast with $97 per in 1923.

Ford's extra $10 profit per car in 1924 came from the simple trick further speeding up the work until workers produced as much in 5 days fo days' pay as they had previously turned out in 6 days for 6 days' pay.

This step was first announced to the country as another of Ford's progressive ideas. Ford advocated a 5-day week. With an extra day of rest, he said, workers can produce as much in 5 days as in 6. Of course, nothing was said about the cut in wages. But the Detroit bureau of the Wall Street Journal predicted that the idea would be given practical effect because "1923 profits were unsatisfactory." And within a week or two the change was made.

Deadening Monotony.

What this speeding up means to the Ford worker is suggested in the answer of a German employe of the Highland Park plant to Herr Lichthard, director of the Stinnes companies, now visiting this country. According to Wall Street Journal the worker said his job was easy—all he did all day was to turn a certain bolt to the right 8 times. He had been doing the same thing every day for 4 years. It has become so familiar that he does it automatically.

There you have it. A complete picture of the deadening monotony produced by the discipline of a machine dictatorship. Suppose this employe makes 20 turns a minute, probably an underestimate. That's 1,200 turns on 150 bolts per hour or 7,200 turns on 900 bolts per day if we assume he only works the equivalent of 6 steady hours. That means 36,000 turns to 4,500 bolts in a 5-day week and 1,800,000 turns to 225,000 bolts in a 50 week year. Four years represents 7,200,000 turns to 900,000 bolts. That is all he can show for 4 years of his life in Ford's kingdom. Continued long enough it would surely produce a new form of insanity, a Fordophobia.

Income Reaches Millions.

But it also would produce the profits which Ford is after. This worker is typical of the tens of thousands of human cogs which produced $100,000,000 profits in a single year for a single family. Incidentally this $100,000,000 represents a return of $581.72 a share of the $17,264,500 common stock. As a matter of fact, the entire Ford works has been built on an original cash investment of $28,000 thru investment of surplus profits made at the expense of the workers.

In 1922, the last year for which individual income tax data are available, the two Fords had a combined personal income of $13,397,930 from dividends alone.

RUSSIAN PACT HOLDS DESPITE FRENCH CHANGE

Herriot Did Not P Trade, Rykoff Says

MOSCOW, May 13.— In an inter- view with journalists at Leningr where he came for a short vi Rykoff, president of the council people's commissaries, declared th for a number of years yet, priv commerce was bound to play a co siderable part in the economics the Union of Soviet Socialist Rep lics.

No Obstacles to Private Capital

While the commercial exchange h rapidly grown lately, neither the st nor the co-operative trading organ tions actually could increase th capital in a measure fully correspon ing to the general growth of natio economy. The relation between st and private trading must be ba entirely on the principle of sou economic competition, Mr. Rykoff o served, and no administrative obst cles should be created to the priva capital.

Franco-Russian Relations Unchange

In reference to the resignation the French premier, the president the council of people commissari remarked that the good intentions Mr. Herriot's cabinet in the dom of mutual relations with the Sovie Union had been better than what th practically put into effect, so th the new French cabinet could hard be expected to make those relatio any the worse.

Herriot Lacked Confidence

Indeed, Mr. Rykoff stated, while th progress of restoration of normal re lations had been extremely slow sinc the recognition, the lack of any pro gress in the solutions of such import ant questions as the old debts or th Wrangel fleet partly hung on th want of confidence of Mr. Herriot's cabinet in its own forces.

That it was necessary to move th Franco-Soviet inter-relations fro their present abnormal "dead point," was Mr. Rykoff's conclusive remark.

C'mon Over!

If you have a day, an hour, or a minute to spare—why, c'mon over. There is so much work piled up on the small force in our office that we need your help so very badly, to insert letters, address, seal and stamp envelopes and ever so many other little jobs that have us swamped. If you volunteer your services that's a fine way to help the DAILY WORKER. We'll be glad to see you—so just for fun, c'mon over!

Look Here, Comrades!

You know that if there were a hundred new subscribers to the DAILY WORKER in the streets around the hall where your branch meets—

That some of these subscribers would be only too glad to come to your branch meetings when they learned from the DAILY WORKER just what a Communist Party stands for.

You know this. And you know also that if these workers came to your branch meetings—many would become branch members.

But . . . . you haven't got a hundred workers in the streets around your branch who read the DAILY WORKER!

In order to make a branch membership campaign—don't you think it would be a good idea to get a hundred new subscribers to the DAILY WORKER in the streets around the hall where your branch meets?

Bring this up at your next branch meeting!

CAPMAKERS WAR OVER EXPENSES OF ORGANIZING

Fakers Want Salaries Paid by Dues Raise

NEW YORK CITY, May 13.—The Capmakers' International Union in convention here is rocking in the midst of a struggle over the budget that will provide for the organizations' expenses for the next two years.

A budget committee appointed by the president has been meeting in session for a week. Two reports have come from this committee; the majority report accepts the proposed budget submitted by President Zaritsky, which calls for increased expenditures above the income of the organization. The majority report did not make any recommendation to provide for this deficit.

The minority report which is recognised by the officials as a document of the left wing in the organization and provides for a special strike fund of $30,000 to enable the union to wage a militant struggle against the employers.

The officials are opposed to both the majority and minority reports. Their opposition to the majority report is that it does not provide for an increase in per capita tax, which would necessitate and increase in dues.

However, their opposition to the minority report is of a bitter nature. President Zaritsky and Secretary Zuckerman denounced the minority report in the most extragavant red baiting terms.

O, How They Don't Like the Daily!

Zuckerman in attacking it read from the DAILY WORKER a list of the various union conventions, along with the Capmakers, which the T. U. E. L. followers were urged to take notice of and participate in. Zuckerman went out of his way to intimate that the left wing delegates in the convention were "taking their orders" from the Trade Union Educational League and were being directed by Foster and Manley.

Secretary Zuckerman was particularly indignant at the section of the minority report that cut the number of international officers from three to two. In arguing for more money for organizing expenses he made a splendid argument for amalgamation of the unions in the industry.

Afraid the Union Will Grow.

He dwelt at great length on the terrible expense and liability of organizing locals in such cities as St. Louis, Kansas City, etc. He closed with a fervent appeal for unity—unity on the basis of an increase in dues and greater per capita tax for the international.

At this writing the convention is still for the last two days locked in debate on this problem. The majority of the committee have withdrawn their report for the purpose of reshaping it in line with the desires of the officials.

The characteristic thing in the whole debate is that practically none dare to come out flatfootedly for an increase in dues—tho all know if the incrase demanded by the officials is to be met it will mean an increase in dues.

Left Wing Has Only Honest Program.

The left wing, on the contrary, has refused to play petty politics with this issue but has come out boldly for rigid economy in the administration of the union and at the same time made provision for a militant struggle against the employers. The minority report will be a basis for real reform in the future of the union.

BEET FIELD WORKERS SLAVE AS "COMRADES TO THE HOE"; CHILD WORKERS TOILING LIKE ANIMALS

By J. E. SNYDER.

OMAHA, Nebr., May 13.—From the crowded and ill kept districts of packing town, the workers are now being recruited to go to the beet sugar fields. There seems to be quite a competition for Russian workers, between the beet sugar companies.

Thus they hasten to the settlements in the various cities and play up the advantages they have to offer, including special privileges, if the family will go at once, taking the children from the school, of course, before the term is out, so as to get into the fields, getting in on the ground floor, etc.

Slaves Caught Changing Masters.

Quite a stir has suddenly arisen in Lincoln, Nebraska because a dozen Russian families were caught in the act of "beating it" for the beet fields. It seems that this particular Russian group go every year and contract with farmers, engaged in the beet raising industry, for from fifteen to fifty acres per family and stay until along in October or November, the children leaving school before the term is out, and getting in from a month to two months late.

The dozen families were rounded up and fined one hundred dollars each for violation of the compulsory education law. This, of course, was a joke apparently on the part of the judge, whose name is Frost. He remitted the fines.

One of the heads of a family put it up to the Lincoln folks—"Can Lincoln give us jobs?" Of course Lincoln cannot, and neither can Omaha, where whole train loads are being shipped out like so much live stock, every day.

Why They Wanted to Hold Them.

In an interview with Miss M. A. Sadler, of Omaha, Nebr., who runs an employment agency, I learned that there are some economic reasons why some folks, at least, want to keep the Russians from leaving the state. Altho there are thousands unemployed, still it is not wise to let too many go and thus thin out the working class population. Hungry people outside the packing house gates helps to hold down those inside the gates from demanding living wages.

Then there are beet sugar companies, in the state that want them to stay and take care of the crops here and along next summer, if there is a crop, the wheat farmers will want harvest hands. And of course a big reason for the battle over these families is that they are trained beet raisers, having done the same kind of work in Russia and also seem quite adept at raising large families. Like in cotton districts the larger families the better. Neither are they adverse to long hours and walking on their knees regardless of weather.

Russians and Mexicans are "Comrades to the Hoe." Under the Czar these people worked for about thirty five cents a day and of course in Mexico the wages are equally as low, if not less.

So when say a family of seven, gets a thousand dollars for seven months work, shack rent, transportation, with household goods, to the place of employment, with a little garden spot and pasture for a cow free, it is an inducement to escape the dirty streets and vile smelling industrial centers of the big cities, to the "wide open spaces" of a beet field of Colorado, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa or Nebraska.

Long Hours.

Of course the hours during the work periods run around fifteen per day, but what of that when you have a two room shack about ten by fifteen feet, (even with windows in it) and plenty of fresh air and sunshine? And then when there is no work to do, the surrounding farmers will give some more long days to work in the potatoes, the wheat and the mellons at about nine dollars a week.

The contracts drawn up between the beet sugar farmers and the workers are arranged so that the sugar beet refineries are the dictators and can practically be cancelled at any time they see fit. Through the farm owner the workers and their families are practically sold by the labor agent for the summer to the soil, and should they displease there is every opportunity under the contract to drive the workers off the place without compensation.

What a Contrast to the Old Homeland.

By a bonus system the usual driving force is at work and men, women and children are being used to establish a "peon" contract system in America.

While Russia, where these people were born is breaking the feudal chains, freeing the children from irksome toil and establishing a new order for women, our American farmers are introducing feudalism here. The contracts are so drawn that they do not put the burden of "child labor" on the farm owner but upon the father, and in order to make a "fair season" the children must be worked in the most inhuman way along with the women.

INJUNCTION GRANTED BY CAPITALIST COURT AGAINST MINE WORKERS

PHILIPPI, W. Va., May 13.—Members of the United Mine Workers of America were restrained from picketing the activities at eight non-union mines in Barbour and adjoining counties by a temporary injunction issued by Judge Warren B. Kittle in the circuit court upon application of the coal companies. Barbour county is in the northern coal fields, where a general strike was called by the union on April 1.

The companies charged in their petition that a series of "acts of violence" have occurred in the district for which "there is no other or possible reason," except that they were "perpetrated by members of the United Mine Workers of America," or persons affiliated with the union to prevent the operation of their mines on a non-union basis.

The injunction, in addition to the picketing clause, restrained members of the union from "loitering" near the mine properties.

MEMBERSHIP MEETING HARLEM - YORKVILLE Y. W. L. FRIDAY, MAY 15

NEW YORK, May 13.—A very important membership meeting of the Harlem-Yorkville section of the Young Workers League will be held on Friday, May 15, 8 p. m., at the section headquarters, 64 E. 104th St. There will be a report from the section committee and also a report by Comrade Jack Stachel, district organizer on the work area branches. The question of work area branches is a very important one and every member of the section must be present at this meeting on order to become thoroly acquainted with it.

Expect Big Audience for Olgin-Guthrie Debate Next Sunday

NEW YORK, May 13.—Tickets for the Olgin-Guthrie debate on Russia are in great demand as May 17 draws near. Militants everywhere express enthusiastic interest in the event, and it is expected that every seat in Central Opera House will be taken next Sunday when Moissaye J. Olgin of the Workers Party and Professor William B. Guthrie of City College take issue on the question of proletarian dictatorship versus capitalist democracy.

With Russia and the Communist International occupying the center of the stage in international politics, with the Communist movement everywhere strengthening its ranks and increasing its influence amongst the broad masses, a debate on the merits of the Soviet system as against parliamentary democracy has special value. No class conscious worker should miss this debate if he is alive to the issues of the day.

The debate which will be held on Sunday, May 17, 2 p. m., at Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave., is arranged under the joint auspices of the Workers' School, and the Trade Union Educational League. The subject is, Resolved, That the Russian Soviet system is superior to parliamentary democracy. Tickets can be obtained at the office of the Workers Party, East 14th street, the Freiheit, 30 Union Square; Jimmie Higgins' Book Shop, 127 University Place. Admission is 50 cents.

New York Comrades Attention.

NEW YORK, May 13—The Yorkville English and Hungarian branches of the Young Workers' League will hold a joint entertainment and dance at 350 East 81st street on Saturday, May 16 at 8 p. m. A fine musical program is assured and there are some exceptionally good numbers.

Tickets are 50 cents each and can be obtained at 350 E. 81st street and at the door.

Important Meeting of Russian Branch.

An important meeting of the Russian branch W. P. will be held Thursday, May 14, at 1902 W. Division St., Comrade A. Chramov, national organizer of the Russian section Workers Party, will report. All members are urged to attend.

British Rule Ends "Peace" Ideas

are Caesar's—and acknowledge that in this short time he did everything that was humanly possible to bring a sufficient number of Zaghlul's adherents "to their senses" and to gain a majority, even though an artificial one. All the Egyptian "miracles" and the whole English technique were set into action, and yet Zaghlul's adherents did not "come to their senses." On the contrary, when after the speech from the throne, they proceeded to the election of the president of parliament, Zaghlul's candidature for the presidency was supported by 125 votes to 81. This is why the European journalists had to race one another twice to the telegraph office.

Zaghlul Afraid of Struggle.

What does all this mean? It means that firstly, English reaction is firmly determined to make not the slightest concession to the national revolutionary movement, led by the opportunist bourgeoisie, has not the power to carry on a serious campaign against English imperialism. It was enough to watch the press of Zaghlul's party immediately after the English ultimatum and Zaghlul's resignation in November 1924, and further until March 23rd, to be more and more convinced that Zaghlul has no desire for a serious struggle but rather dreads it. Zaghlul is endeavouring to liberate the Egyptian bourgeoisie from the intolerable taxes, he is making efforts to free them from the yoke of the laws which leave them no scope for normal development, he is anxious to give them the possibility of developing their own textile industry and of carrying on independent commercial operations with other countries; this naturally compels him to undertake some action against England, but Zaghlul dreads revolution.

Zaghlul is afraid of the many millions of the disinherited peasantry who, in 1919, almost overwhelmed him and his immediate co-workers by their unbridled desire to fight, not only for liberation from the English yoke but also for land, water and the right to human conditions of living. In 1919, the peasants of Upper Egypt destroyed the railway network which connects Egypt with the Soudan and Upper Egypt with Lower Egypt, and proclaimed an independent republic. It is true that all this only lasted a few days, it is true that it all bore an elementary, confused character, nevertheless the peasants did it and proceeded to commandeer the property of the large landowners and of the state. Zaghlul Pasha himself is a landowner (though a small one), and he fears and hates the peasantry. He is afraid of "letting the wild animal out of the cage," but yet, by means of nebulous promises, he plays at "easing the situation of the peasantry;" he shrinks however from leading them into battle.

Workers Full of Fight.

Zaghlul Pasha fears not only the peasantry but also the working class of Egypt. In the days when he had no suspicion that his coquetting with England would come to such a pitiful end, when he was still president of the first "real people's" government, the Egyptian workers in Alexandria, Tantah, Port Said and other places, dared to resort to general strikes and even to proceed to commandeering factories and works. Zaghlul Pasha was personally compelled to enter into negotiations with representatives of the revolutionary workers, and to lay it on their conscience to return the factories to their owners, as otherwise the "people's government" would be compromised in the eyes of the European "guests."

The Egyptian bourgeoisie in spite of its youth, suffers from that disease of old age, cowardice. It is seeking "legal constitutional" methods of fighting, it is incapable of class heroism, of self-sacrifice, and hopes to convince the enemy, as it is afraid to risk a fight. English imperialism understands how to make the very best of this. It knows that this fear of a real popular revolution renders Zaghlul harmless and it is trying to defeat him once for all; in these efforts it finds Zaghlul's enemies of the right, the feudal nobility, only too ready to help.

The opening and immediately dissolution of parliament indicate that England no longer fears a repetition of the events of 1919, and has made up its mind to put an end to this playing at democracy, which has become tiresome. A certain form of constitutionalism must indeed be maintained in order to justify England in the eyes of its own freedom-loving people, especially the English workers, but this is a mere trifle which can always be created out of nothing. With this object in view, new elections will take place in November, but this time with a census franchise in which only 1 to 2 per cent of the population will take part. It will be easy to say to the English democrats and workers: "Egypt is not England, the Egyptian people is not yet ripe for our system of parliamentarism."

Parliamentary Illusions Shattered.

And yet this calculations is wrong. If the English diplomats would take the trouble to see and hear more exactly what is going on in the depths of the working masses of Egypt, we are convinced that their composure would not be so Olympic as it is at present. The dissolution of parliament, this most cynical action, which was only to be expected, means at the same time that a huge boulder has been cleared out of the way of the revolution of the Egyptian masses who are fighting for their liberation.

Parliamentary illusions have not yet taken deep root in the masses of the Egyptian people. They have only touched its surface, but even this has been checked by the brutal methods of English imperialism. In the final event this is of course only an advantage for the revolutionary movement for the liberation of the working masses of Egypt. The Egyptian Fellaheen (small-holders) and workers are now more than ever prepared to fight for their liberation from slavery. Whether the cowardly bourgeoisie wants to or not, it will be compelled by the pressure of these masses to exchange its absolutely useless "constitutional" equipment for one which is more dangerous to the enemy, that is for organized mass action. Otherwise the initiative of the struggle will pass into other hands.

Seattle Open Forum to Hear Tallentire in Two Big Lectures

SEATTLE, Wash., May 13.—The forum of the Workers Party is making a huge success in attracting the workers of Seattle. Stanley J. Clark is occupying the platform the first two Friday evenings of this month, and Clark is liked by all audiences.

The next two lectures this month will be given by Norman H. Tallentire, district organizer of the Workers Party. On May 15th, Tallentire will speak on "Craft Unionism versus Industrial Unionism," and on May 29, Tallentire's subject will be "The Collapse of Capitalism." Seattle workers can look forward to these two lectures as a treat. Tallentire being known as a capable speaker thoroly familiar with his subjects.

These Workers Party forums are held every Friday night in the Painters' Hall, Union Record building at 8 o'clock. There is welcome to all and no admission is charged.

Apologist of Fascism Accidentally Defends Revolutionary Force

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

NEW YORK CITY, May 13.—The following defense of revolution is written by the international moneylender Otto H. Kahn and is taken from a little reprint entitled Europe Today. Though Otto means to defend only the Mussolini revolt and present dictatorship, his words carry more than he intended:

"The fascist movement was a patriotic revolution, a revolution not for reaction, not against liberalism, but against governmental inefficiency and corruption, social disintegration and national decay. 'Every revolution has the right to defend itself,' as the Italian ambasador to the United States said in a recent speech. Every successful revolution naturally seeks to consolidate, and give permanence to, the principal things which it set out to attain.

"Revolutuions do not run their course in the short span of two years. For the purpose of completing its program and safeguarding it against the assaults of enemies, it still feels justified to employ methods, when for such purpose it deems them needed, which could not claim, or find, sanction under normal circumstances."

Zankov Butchery Responsible for Bombing

revenge of the governing class. This bloody desire for revenge is again directed against the defenceless workers and peasants. Numerous murders have already been carried out in Sofia and in the whole country as revenge for the outrage. The bourgeois press characterizes these murders as "regrettable incidents."

The whole bourgeois press today is bemoaning the fate of some generals, members of parliament and higher officials. The murderers are weeping: those who shed no tears when those who are now buried beneath the ruins of the cathedral organized the wholesale slaughter of thousands of workers and peasants. May the indignant journalists, professors, generals and parsons weep! The workers and peasants of the whole world fully realize that there is nothing of humanity and culture to be moaned for here.

These bearers of culture of the bourgeoisie did not weep but triumphed when, in June 1923, over a thousand peasants were slaughtered and when in September of the same year over 10,000 workers, peasants and intellectuals were done to death in the most brutal manner. It was in the same cathedral that there was then celebrated the victory of "law and order," the salvation of the state.

Zankov Kills 20,00.

The 200 dead do not even number one per cent of the workers and peasants who have been murdered during the 23 months' existence of the Zankov government. Up to now the Bulgarian people have lost in their struggle against Zankov over 20,000 Victims, among them being 2,000 teachers, lawyers, pupular representatives and village clergy.

We do not write these lines in order to justify the outrage. It requires neither our justification nor our condemnation. It is our task to explain it.

The outrage in Sofia is inseparably connected with the countless mass and individual assassinations which the Zankov government has for 22 months committed without cessation against the freedom and the existence of the Bulgarian working people.

June and September 1923 and September 1924 were nothing else than periods of mass assassinations which cost the Bulgarian people almost as much blood as did the first Serbo-Bulgarian war.

Political murders became quite usual events. Since the beginning of the present year in particular there have been fresh murders every day. The months of January, February and March were full of arrests and murders. At the end of March alone over 1,000 workers and peasants were arrested within the course of 10 to 15 days. The month of April was marked by fresh "revelations" and murders.

The massacring of political opponents was legalised by the extension of the law for the protection of the state and by the law as to the police.

In this stifling political atmosphere of murder and violent suppression of the workers and peasants and their political and economic organizations, the economic situation of the broad masses of the people became unendurable. The journal of the Bulgarian economic society represented the situation as follows: If one reckons the cost of living in the period from 1900 till 1910 as 100, the cost of living in the year 1924 was 3580 times dearer, in January 1925, 4230 times and in February 1925, 4375 times. On the other hand, the workers wages sunk from 100 in 1913 to 68 in 1924 and to 64 in 1925. In February 1925 the real wages of an official amounted to 32.2 The cost of living index amounted last year to 3572; in this year to 4375.

Regarding the economic and political situation the Zname wrote on 6th April: "Human patience is not inexhaustible. The economic policy of the government, as far as it has one, leads to fresh suffering, to new increases in the cost of living; and what then?"

At the beginning of April a fresh wave of high prices set in. In the cities one could only obtain a very bad quality of flour which has been imported from America. Still greater were the restrictions in the sphere of political life. All workers' newspapers, whether political or trade union, are suppressed, meetings of any kind are prohibited. Freedom of the press is abolished for the workers and peasants, while they are also deprived of the right to organize on the political, the trade union or the cooperative field. They are likewise robbed of all possibility of conducting any kind of struggle to better their position. Any protest against this rank reactionary policy of the government of professors is replied to by their organs with bestial murders.

Zankov Butchery Responsible

All opposition parties of the bourgeoisie have condemned this policy. The newspapers of these parties warned Zankov repeatedly that "his bloody reaction would be answered by a still greater strengthening of the activity of the conspirative elements."

Because all other ways of struggle were barred, we now experience such terrible events. The outrage is terrible, just as the causes which gave rise to it are also terrible. "How fearfully must the Zankov government have misruled in order to call forth this elementary and inhuman rage?" whote even the Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung on the 18th of April.

Who has committed this outrage? It is not the work of a party. The whole population is conducting the struggle against the bloody reaction. The will to revenge is assuming such monstrous forms in order to give expression to the hatred against the present rulers. Perhaps it is an insane act. But as the cultured rulers of Bulgaria have allowed themselves to commit insane acts the people have the right to reply to the same.

It depends upon whether the Bulgarian rulers abandon their insane policy whether the causes of an insane act such as the outrage in Sofia will be removed in the future.

Monessen Comrades to Have Swell Party on Sunday, May 16th

MONESSEN, Pa., May 13—The Y. W. L. of Monessen, Pa. is holding an entertainment at the Finnish Workers Hall Saturday night, May 16 at 8 o'clock.

There will be selections by the Y. W. L. orchestra, not forgetting the Y. W. L. prima donnas who will offer us solos and duets.

We will have a cake walk, three cakes will be given as prizes and they will all be homemade. Java will be served with the cake.

The music for the dance will be taken care of the by the Y. W. L. players. They will play jazz for the young but will not forget the old and they will render some good old time polkas.

We extend our welcome to the nearby townsfolks to come and enjoy a nice evening with us.

Free DAILY WORKER Distribution in New York City

May 25 to May 30

NEW YORK CITY.—Every member of the party of the Young Workers League in New York must be mobilized for the free distribution of the DAILY WORKER every day from May 25th to 30th. During that week the DAILY WORKER will send you, without cost to you, a bundle of as many copies daily as you will agree to distribute.

This distribution in New York takes place three weeks later than in the rest of the country, because during the early part of May the New York membership has its hands full with the task of visiting the four thousand short time subscribers secured thru the press pageant to secure renewals from them. By the last week of May this job should be finished, and all energies organized for the city wide free distribution of the DAILY WORKER.

The requirements are:

1. That you order your bundle of DAILY WORKERS from the New York office by May 20.
2. That you agree to distribute them each day for a week.
3. That you will then ask the same people to whom you gave the papers to subscribe.

Every member should distribute AT LEAST five copies per day in shops of at homes. The DAILY WORKER will send you as many as you will promise to use.

You may either get the bundle at the New York DAILY WORKER Office, 108 East 14th Street, or you may have them sent to your branch headquarters, or to your home, whichever is most convenient to you, but you must notify the New York office by May 20 how many you want and where you want them sent.

Every member in New York should take full advantage of this wonderful offer. If your branch does not meet before the 20th, then send in an order yourself, and GET BUSY.

POSTAL WORKERS DEMAND CHANGE IN BUREAUCRACY

Department Has Been Speeding Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, May 13—(FP)—Presidents Collins of the Railway Mail association, Gainor of the Letter Carriers and George of the Postoffice Clerks, with Secretary Flaherty of the Postoffice Clerks, have been addressing meetings of postoffice workers on postal policy, and have aroused a general determination among them to ask congress to fix the fundamental policies of the service. At present the policies are dictated by the bureaucrats in the department, to the detriment of the public and the workers in the service.

Collins states that since 1914 the department has taken 2,600 railway mail distributors from the cars, and that there are 1,260 less men in railway mail service than at that time, altho the business handled is 100 per cent greater. The number of mail cars is less, by many hundreds. Railway mail is sent to terminal railway postoffices for slow distribution and for forwarding after delays of from 8 hours to several days.

Magazines published in Washington, for example, take two weeks to reach offices in New York State. Departmental policy here is injurious to good service, while the postmaster general boasts of big "savings" in distribution.

Unemployment Dole for Jobless I. L. G. W. Begins on June 8th

NEW YORK, May 13.(FP)—A registration office for workers eligible for unemployment insurance under the pact between employers and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union cloak and suit branch is opening at 6 East 29th street.

Payment of unemployment benefits becomes effective on June 1. Workers who have lost nine or more weeks work since Feb. 1, 1925 are eligible for benefits and will receive first payment June 8.

Chinese Actors in New York Theatres

NEW YORK, May 13.—(FP.)—Chinese actors evidently do not accept the standards of unionized American actors in Actors Equity, because they work seven days a week, five hours an evening. The Chinese troupe which has played for two years steadily in the Bowery playhouse is returning to China for a vacation, however, and a new group is coming to take its place. A second Chinese theatrical company will open in the old Thalia Theatre, New York, which has been used by Italian players for years.

Send Youth to Die in Morocco

which resulted in several killed and many injured among the native workers. The injured demanded compensation. Their right to this was beyond dispute. The company refused to grant compensation. Thereupon the Riff people revolted against this act of open robbery. The native workers of the French company of North Africa rose at the same time against the capitalists. The French authorities succeeded in quelling the revolt of the natives.

Exploit Riffians

The Spanish authorities made use of the events in Morocco as an excuse for carrying on an imperialist policy. Another factor which played a certain part in this connection was the fact that a year later, in 1910, Alphonso XIII, "the idiot on the throne," was egged on by courtiers, and of course before all by the greedy Spanish and other capitalists, to an imperialist undertaking against Morocco in order to conquer "new countries for the fatherland" and to appear, in history as Alphonso the African.

The Spanish officers, who, as a result of the former colonial wars, were in very ill repute, desired an opportunity whereby they could freshen up their faded military laurels. Morocco seemed to promise an easy victory. With the help of the army chiefs there was founded a "Colonization company for the Rif Area." The colonisers, immediately and without any compunction commenced to expropriate the Rif people for the advantage and benefit of the capitalists and of the army chiefs and officers.

Prospectors had announced the existence of rich mineral treasures in the Rif district. The blood of the Spanish soldiers and of the Rif population which was shed for years in Morocco was coverted into fat profits. The mining company of the Riff recently distributed its dividends for the year 1924: 75 pesetas per share instead of 50 pesetas in 1923. The miserably paid labor of the native mine workers serves to compete with the labor of the miners of Spain and to depress their already scandalously low wages still further. The crisis in the mining industry is becoming more acute. This is characterized by a striking fact, reported in the financial journals: A treaty has been concluded with German firms, according to which the latter will purchase 50,000 tons of pig iron in North Africa.

Krim Will Not Be Bribed

Since 1921 the Morocco question has assumed another character for Spain. Hitherto Spanish imperialism had only encountered the hostility of some of the native tribes, who carried out scattered revolts without any coordination and without political aims. Spain combined military action with so-called "civil" action, which consisted in bribing the more influential tribal chiefs in order that the latter should betray their people and their cause. This policy was specially made use of the native leaders Roghi, Muley, Hafid and Reisuni. They carried on a prosperous and, for them, a very profitable trade with the colonizers; in fact one of their methods was from time to time to provoke a revolt among the tribes against Spain for the sole purpose of extracting fresh bribes from the Spanish masters.

The appearance of Abd-el-Krim at the head of the Africans changed the the whole significance of the Morocco question. Abd-el-Krim is the leader of an independent movement of the Rif-Kabyles. The corruption policy proved a complete failure with him. Abd-el-Krim perceived that the most advantageous thing was to defeat the Spaniards.

He therefore seizes from them the weapons and money he requires in order to carry on the fight and to found the Rif republic. He is not prepared to bargain away the freedom of the country. The English capitalists who wished to colonize the Rif district by means of granting loans, know this very well. Abd-el-Krim has recently adopted a hostile attitude towards Reisuni, the agent of Spanish imperialism and Muley Jussef, the sultan by grace of the French colonisers.

British Imperialism Trembles.

Abd-el-Krim reckons with the sympathy and the solidarity of Islam, which rightly sees in the victorious war of the Rif-Kabyles against the Spaniards a war of independence. At the last Islamic conference, which took place in Balgaum (India), over 2,000 Muselman delegates voted for a proclamation of solidarity with the Rif-Kabyles. A correspondent of an American newspaper recently visited Adfir, the capital of the Rif republic, and had an interview with Abd-el-Krim. The latter, so states this journalist, daily receives numerous messages from the Mohammedan world and from secret societies in London and India. The Daily Herald, the organ of the English labor party, considered it necessary when commenting upon this article to call the attention of the Foreign Minister Chamberlain, to the danger threatening English imperialism!

An attempt is being made to represent the Abd-el-Krim movement as a revolt on the part of savages. This is an old method adopted by the imperialists in order to bring discredit upon the movement for emancipation of the colonial peoples. The Rif-Kabyles appreciate civilization, the advantages of which they have begun to learn, more than the civilizers. After the defeat of Annual (1921,) when the Spanish army recaptured the lost territory, they found that the Rif-Kabyles had spared all the public buildings built by their enemies. In the course of their raids the Spaniards frequently find among the natives, European furniture, sewing machines, safety razors, Kodak cameras and gramophones. The new scientific expedition which have been able to penetrate into the independent area have been excellently received.

All those who have visited Adfir are astonished at the extraordinary changes which Abd-el-Krim has brought about in the capital town of the Rif-Kabyles. He is endeavouring to "modernise" it. In this work he is supported by his brother, a man of great culture, who completed his studies in Madrid, where the sons of the Spanish intellectuals are educated.

The Spanish army has learnt to its cost regarding the military talents of Abd-el-Krim. Since the liberator of the Rif took over the conduct of operations, the Spaniards have suffered defeat after defeat. Their losses are very great. Thousands of Spaniards fell last November. The military censor has maintained silence over their death. But one correspondent was able to write:

Spanish Workers Perish

"In a period of 20 minutes there were 234 killed in Xatura, I counted them... And Xatura was only an episode of the retreat, which according to official reports had only cost 15 dead! I estimate the total losses of the Spaniards at 3,900 men."

It is thus that the young workers of Spain are perishing.

After the recent Moroccan defeat Primo de Rivera wished to win a victory at home. He has obtained it. He has thrown into prison hundreds of Communists, who declared their solidarity with the Rif people.

When it became apparent that the military defeat in Morocco was a complete one, the idea was suggested of a "civil" intrevention and of a "protectorate."

What will come of this? Nothing. Our imperialists know that themselves. A Spanish journalist has stated why these half measures will fail: "Because the Spanish guns and the bombs from their aeroplanes have made more holes in the interior of the Rif than did the German and allied artillery in the plains of Champagne."

Court Favors Kansas Politician.

TOPEKA Kan., May 13—Jonathan M. Davis, former governor of Kansas, now on trial here on a charge of conspiracy, won the first point in his fight for freedom when Judge McClure of district court ruled out references in the state's opening statement regarding the Fred Pollman case. Pollman, former banker of Lacygne, is alleged to have ben offered a pardon for a consideration of $2,500.

The court's ruling is not final, however, as it pertains only to mention of this testimony in the opening statement. The real battle over its admissability will come when the state offers such testimony on the stand.

REDS MURDERED BY ESTHONIAN WHITE TERROR

Socialists Take Part in Base Slaughter

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVAL, Esthonia, May 13.— The Esthonian bourgeoisie is murdering more workers and peasants. Since the first of December hundreds of workers and peasants have been foully murdered. According to the reports of bourgeois papers, a whole number of political trials are about to be held in which hundreds of workers and peasants are to be tried, solely because they have hands which have been hardened by toil and lead a miserable existence in the "independent republic."

A few days ago the military court of Reval sentenced to death Comrade Welt and Comrade Ulgekutt for having, it is stated, taken part in the revolt of December 1, 1924.

Get Death Sentence.

The two condemned comrades were peasants and active workers in the Esthonian peasant movement. Comrade Welt was a tenant farmer. Already in 1920 he worked among the peasants of Parnu. At the elections in 1923 he was put forward as a candidate for parliament in two constituencies on the united front ticket of the workers and peasants. Comrade Welt enjoyed enormous influence among the peasants. He was a leader of the working peasants, who suffer under a heavy burden of taxation and are fighting for their emancipation. When at the beginning of 1924 the parliamentary fraction of the united front were arrested, Comrade Welt took the place of these arrested and steadfastly continued the struggle for the interest of the Esthonian peasants and their allies, the workers, until he was himself arrested.

Comrade Ulgekutt was a peasant from the Isle of Osel where he had been for several years a well-known worker among the village poor. The great majority of the population of the Isle of Osel consists of land poor peasants. They elected him on the united front ticket of the workers and peasants as a substitute deputy to parliament.

Socialists Aid Hangmen.

The Esthonian bourgeois democratic murderers of workers and peasants have worked expeditiously in the interests of the international profitmakers. Comrades Welt and Ulgekutt have already been executed.

The proletariat of all countries must carry out an energetic protest action against the murderous fury of the Esthonian bourgeoisie, in which the "socialist" international is participating. This is all the more necessary as the Esthonian "democratic" coalition government, in which the social democrats are participating, is preparing, after the bloody vengeance of December 1, to get rid of further workers and peasants by "legal" means. At the military courts there come forward as "eye-witnesses," drunken spies who make monstrous assertions regarding the 'criminal" character of the accused. No witnesses are allowed to come forward on behalf of the accused, and when the accused refer to people who can give evidence in their favor, these people are straight away arrested and brot before the court as "equally guilty terrorists."

The base and monstrous character of the Esthonian white justice is indescribable.

Down with the Esthonian hangmen! Long live the solidarity of the workers and peasants of the world!

Polish Consul Is Recalled on Protest of Soviet Russia

MOSCOW, May 13.—Replying to Foreign Minister Chicherin's note protesting against the murder of the Polish officers Wieczorkiewicz and Baginsky (who were to be exchanged for Poles arrested in Soviet Russia) and demanding a strict investigation of the case and severe punishment of the murderers,—the polish minister at Moscow, Mr. Kentchinsky, while expressing regrets at the murder, at the same time voices his "regret at the charges preferred in this case by the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

Poland Refuses to Talk

He further states that the determining of the responsibility and the severity of the punishment for the murder is a matter of the internal affairs of Poland, whose government does not consider possible to continue the correspondence on this question.

Polish Consul Recalled

However, in his reply, which was handed to the Polish representative today, Mr. Chicherin points out that, having officially agreed to the exchange of the above-named officers, the Polish government had by that very fact admitted that the Soviet government was concerned with their fate and, consequently, could not be indifferent to all this affair.

It is officially announced that Mr. Karoczevsky, formerly Polish consul at Minsk, who has been recalled by his government at the request of the Soviet government, has left for Poland.

First Returns in From Daily Worker Week

COMRADES, IT WORKS!

In Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis and a thousand other cities thruout the country workers who have never seen the DAILY WORKER before, got acquainted with it during the past week. With only very brief preparation, the total distributed went well over 75,000 copies and never was the message of Communism so widely spread as during this week. Many locals just insist that they continue it during this week also and are now doing it.

And now subs are beginning to roll in. In most places the homes covered with sample copies will be visited during all of this week, especially where the territory has been large and the members few. But very indication brings ever brighter notice of the splendid work done.

Such a great way to build the Communist movement by means of the DAILY WORKER is sure to be used again soon. New York is going to have a giant distribution during the week of May 25 to 30—and a drive following it to gather in subs. The actual results of the past week's distribution, if no greater than they are right now are well worth a full party mobilization on this plan.

We have in the past, and we are now reaching the worker in the shop and the trade union. And now, periodically, we will follow the worker to his home with "Our Daily" for we have found a new and effective means of building the Communist movement which we have TRIED and found that IT WORKS!

Miners Lose Jobs for May Day.

To the DAILY WORKER:— The miners of Bentleyville organized a May Day demonstration for May 1st. A committee waited on the general superintendent of the two mines out of the ten here that are still working 2 days a week and told him that the men would not work on their holiday, May 1st. The committee also called on the burgess for a permit to parade. The burgess told them to go to some other town on May 1 if they wanted to parade. He said he absolutely would not issue a permit for the May Day parade because that would get him in bad with the city council.

More Freedom in Europe.

The general superintendent told the committee if they wanted to celebrate May 1, they had better go to Europe. When the committee made its report at the miners' meeting, the miners decided to hold a protest meeting instead of a parade at 2 in the afternoon, on May 1. Also that no one was to report to work on that day.

When the general superintendent heard of this he ordered the two mines to work on May 1. To make a real test case out of it these mines were shut down 3 days before the first.

On the first of May the one mine known as the Ellsworth Mine No. 1, was 100 men short out of a shift of 500 and the other mine known as the Acme Mine No. 2, had only 145 men working out of its 500. The general superintendent ordered the Acme Mine No. 2 closed at once and all the men to remove their tools on May 2. On that very same day he opened one of the other mines that had been shut down only recently, because he said, "There are no reds at the Marianna mine." But he is mistaken. If anything, there are more reds there than at the Acme Mine No. 2.

This shows the complete control the bosses have over the lives of workers. They can throw men out of work whenever they please. But if the miners lay off one day for their own holiday they are punished. Our "good" officials of the United Mine Workers of America are standing pat with the local operators and say that it is not more than right. But we Communists will show them that organized under the Communist International, we will some day get rid of this bunch of labor fakers and establish a real workers' and farmers' government for the benefit of the workers.—Adam Getto.

Meren Maule Film.

This was the second attempt wi three days to show this film, the f at the May Day celebration in Fr Gemeinde Hall, having been ruin apparently by sabotage. Tho the had been run thru without a hitch break in a private projection room the morning of May Day, the pictu were clear and steady and brilli and the committee member who the showing was flushed with anti pation of the effect on the big cro at the celebration where the film to be the principal and pleasing f ture.

When time came to show the f the operator seemed very ill at ea Himself a strapping lad, he had w him two husky friends, potenti bodyguards. No sooner had the fi titles flashed on the screen when t film broke. That was not so seriou altho it took an exceptionally lo time to fix it. Then another sce and another break. After this h been repeated nine times within thr minutes of running time the chairma announced that the picture woul have to be dispensed with for th evening, since something seemed t have happened to the film during th day.

Comrades Take Legal Action.

The reporter for one of the loc capitalist papers smelled the troubl when he wrote a facetious report i his sheet the next day. The Com munists, he wrote, would like ver much to find out just who was respo sible for the capitalist plot again their movie revolution. The operato also hinted at the cause of the troubl when he said that someone must hav tampered with the film, and asked i there were any "enemies" who coul be held responsible. The film ha been in the custody of his employers who also furnished the projection, al day. Legal action for damages is co templated by the local comrades.

The film was taken to another com pany and inspected, and it was foun that aside from the first hundred fee that had been butchered in the a tempted showing the night before, the film was in excellent shape. So an other show was immediately arranged the following night, and this time the film showed clearly and without hitch or break before an even more enthusi astic audience.

This little episode shows that our enemies recognize the power of the working class film as a weapon of our movement, and that they will do everything in their power to check its influence. Where censorship prevails it is used to choke off such pictures. Where there is no such restriction other means are sought. The Milwaukee comrades have run every film ever issued by our movement, some of them twice, and now they are waiting for more.

Such occasions as this one in Milwaukee are very rare, happening perhaps in one out of two hundred shows, but where possible they should be guarded against.

Any locals seeking movies as features of their meetings, or as complete programs for education, entertainment and the raising of finance for worthy labor causes, should communicate immediately with the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Labor's Friends Again

The women's eight-hour bill introduced in the Illinois state legislature by Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill, failed of passage by a margin of four votes. This bill was one of the chief "labor" planks in the famous Kankakee platform of Len Small, published at the time he announced his intention of being a candidate to succeed himself as governor for a second term. The injunction issue was another. Both have now fallen by the wayside and the workers of this state have been given another lesson in the futility of depending on capitalist politicians or capitalist legislatures for any relief from the exactions of capitalism.

The politicians to whom the workers are urged by their renegade leaders to look for succor are in the pay of the capitalists. The employers own them body and soul. Here and there a few exceptions may be found, but those exceptions don't last long. As soon as they have gained popularity by posing as friends of the workers their itching palms become receptive to the golden grease that always flows generously from the employers' coffers. Then the workers become disheartened only to turn to another bourgeois Moses and tread the same weary path to another disillusionment.

The workers, women or men, will never win the eight-hour day in a capitalist legislature. The bosses know this. So do the politicians and so do the labor leaders. But the politicians and the labor leaders keep teasing the workers along, with promise of a victory without sacrifice. The old story of the proverbial carrot dangling in front of the donkey's nose. This serves the purpose of the labor leaders admirably. The workers keep quiet. The fakers draw their official salaries and by threatening to make it unpleasant for the employers, unless they come across, make the latter contribute to the family larder. This is how the game is worked.

Is it not peculiar how those labor bills get beaten by such a narrow margin? No doubt the labor fakers will blame the chamber of commerce and the solons who voted against the women's eight-hour bill. But the blame belongs on the shoulders of the treacherous labor skates, who have no concern for the interests of the unfortunate workers who are paying them large salaries. The injunction bill sponsored by labor was defeated. The chamber of commerce got its state cossack bill thru, with the help of the labor fakers. Now let us listen to Small's labor lieutenants boast about their accomplishments in behalf of the workers and tell of the governor's heroic efforts to push thru the labor bills!

The women working in the industries of this nation will never secure any concession worth a fountain pen-full of ink, thru the efforts of their hack lobbyists in the capitalist legislatures. They can secure the eight-hour day, higher wages and better working conditions when they organize industrially into unions. The labor fakers realize this, but they are lazy, incompetent and corrupt, and prefer to have their feet under the boss' table, smoke the boss' cigars and drink the boss' booze than fight for the interests of the exploited workers.

Wanted: A Site for a Chunk of Bronze

One of the accomplishments of the May session of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor was to listen to the recommendation of the Gompers memorial committee relative to the erection of a monument to the late president of the federation. As usual the fakers lacked originality. The best they could do in the line of presenting a plan was to recommend a bronze heroic figure of Sam, to be located in the national capital.

The sum of $50,000 has been suggested by the committee as necessary to get enough bronze together in order to fittingly commemorate the deceased capitalist tool. But why pick on bronze? Why not brass?

The only fly in the ointment is where to place the memorial. The lawn of the A. F. of L. building is too small for the purpose. A city park across Massachusetts avenue would suit it nicely, but the Andrew Carnegie library is in the vicinity and so is a methodist church, and the fakers think it enough to have Sam buried between Carnegie and Rockefeller without having his statue looking the Carnegie monument straight in the face.

If Gompers could have his say in the matter, it is quite likely that he would be perfectly satisfied with the location. Or perhaps he might prefer to have the chunk of bronze placed on the steps of the department of justice. That's where it belongs.

The Cleveland Railways company has established the open shop. This means "closed to union men."

Prison Contract Labor

Prison contract labor is one of the most damning indictments against the capitalist system. Under this infernal system unfortunate victims of a robber society are speeded to death by the greedy bandits who secure contracts from the prison officials. Thousands of convicts are now employed under this system. The prison contract labor trust is immune from the pressure that is sometimes brought to bear on employers of labor, that is sentenced to a life of slavery, but outside the walls of a penitentiary.

Not alone is prison contract labor an indictment of capitalism, but it also points the accusative finger at the official leadership of the trade union movement. While those reactionaries and the employing class put their heads together worrying over waste in industry, the human wrecks of the capitalist system who have found their way into the penitentiaries are competing with so-called "free" labor outside. And the product of those prison hell holes are sold on the market in competition with union labor!

What should be done about this? A good union man will immediately suggest trade union action. Why not have the transportation workers refuse to haul prison manufactured goods to the markets? Or why not compel the prison trust to pay union wages to its slaves? Why not attempt to organize the workers in the distributive industry? Thus a watchful eye could be kept peeled for products of the prison hells of the country. None of these ideas occurred to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. No, that would mean work and a fight with the state and perhaps the federal authorities.

When the question of prison labor came up before the executive counvil of the federation, the legal department was called in and a nice scheme to solve the problem came forth. A model state law was drafted, prescribing that convict labor shall be employed in manufacturing such articles as are to be supplied to the various departments of the state government, or its institutions, or to political divisions of the state. No goods produced by convict labor shall be sold in the open market.

This is the gist of the proposed state law as reported by the Washington correspondent of the working class news agency, the Federated Press. The F. P. man commenting on the law naively remarks: "Wherever this measure is enacted, the prison contract labor evil is automatically killed, except in so far as politicians in the states violate its spirit by letting contracts for the making of goods, in prisons, for state use." "Except" in this instance is the rule. That's the infernal trouble with all those laws passed in capitalist legislatures, even when by a miracle they do favor the workers. The powers of administration are in the hands of the capitalists and they see to it that business goes on as usual.

The prison convict labor trust can settle down joyfully to the business of grinding dollars out of the sweat and blood of the prisoners, knowing that the comfortable officials of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor have no more intention of fighting to abolish prison convict labor than they have of fighting to abolish wage labor. And if the unexpected happened the prison trust has the supreme court to fall back on.

The longer this unholy process continues, the better it is for the sobsisterhood of fake prison reform. This kind of toothless propaganda will sit lightly on the fat bellies of the labor leaders and the sob sisters, male and female, will not be wanting coffee and doughnuts.

G'wan! We've Gotta Cracked Lip

By way of diversion we occasionally (speaking by way of apology) read the Chicago Tribune. Usually we pass over the "revolutionary section" where are set forth the allegedly humorous antics of "Moon Mullins" and "Uncle Walt." These are far too serious and thoughtful. There may be cause for tears and even profanity in the supposed "funny" paper, but the funniest thing in the Tribune is the news.

The correspondents sent abroad with a college ignorance concealed behind a vocabulary and the sartorial equipment of an American petty bourgeois, can perpetrate the most howling comics when most trusting that they speak in deadly seriousness. An instance is the strange interpretation as to "Moscow's interference in British affairs," as made by John Steele, the Tribune's correspondent. He writes:

> "J. T. W. Newbold, formerly a Communist member of parliament, has resigned from the Communist Party, saying he is proud to be an Englishman and he resents Moscow's interference in British affairs. The instance which finally disgusted him with Russia, he said, was the murder of the Polish priest, Budkiewicz, in Petrograd. He telegraphed an appeal for the priest to Moscow and was censured for this by the Communist Party."

While it is true that the Polish spy was executed, regardless of the attempt by all the capitalist world to conceal his counter-revolutionary acts behind his cassock, and while it is also true that his counter-revolutionary activities were a matter in which Great Britain was certainly interested and involved, yet it is not obvious to the average worker that such secret interests are the ground for international insult if the spy happens to be checked in his career by Bolsheviks who are villainous enough to uncover him.

What is obvious, is the asinine Newbold's interference in Russian affairs. Some of the dispatch is reminiscent of the comic opera character who "might have been a Russian, a Frenchman or a Prussian; but in spite of all temptations to belong to other nations, he remains an Englishman."

The funniest part of the capitalist newspaper is not the "funny paper."

Jerry Bartlett Another Bum -

By Robin E. Dunbar

JERRY isn't quite so prominent a figure in Los Angeles life as his friend, Sunny Jim was, and yet he is known like he says Jim was "from the West side to East Los Angeles!" Jerry too is an unfortunate. Fourteen years ago he was struck by an automobile and his ribs were stove in and his hip broken, so he has to limp around with the aid of a cane, but he didn't get nothing out of the accident.

Also Jerry has lost all the fingers off his left hand. However, he has a clear complexion, a fairly clean beard and a very dirty shirt. He has lived around here for 20 years; long enough to know enough "not to mess up with a fellow like Sunny Jim," whom he accuses of having had police protection during his stormy and unfortunate career. It seems quite en regale for those leading members of local society who habituate the lower side of the town to have spent their bit in hock; after which they learn to operate without interference. Jerry doesn't operate, unless you would call driving a trash wagon operating.

The history of the trash wagon is illuminating. Some years ago Jerry was in hard luck. He was put out of his shack on St. Andrews and 34th place, and a neighbor, a Mr. McLane, took pity on him and gave him a nice room in a comfortable bungalow. McLane also gave him a horse and wagon, having an old nag to spare, since the transfer business was passing from the horse to the horseless age. So Jerry is happy and independent; no cloud on his horizon to disturb his peace; no dark past to point its accusing finger at him and say, "Thou art the man. . ." You see Jerry while he did get drunk occasionally with his old friend, Sunny Jim, never went into the high life that Sunny affected. In Jim's case it was not wine alone at two bits a gallon from the Sorraul Bros. winery on Jefferson street that gave him that "fire in his innards," it was the food and song that went with it, and presumably the women too, for they did have women around the old Burbank Theater the same as they have now, and where there are women and scene painters who paint the figure there is apt to be some smoke, if there isn't actually some fire. So Jerry learned early in his career to beware the famous trilogy and walk the straight and narrow path that leads to the ash heap and not to San Quentin. Sunny liked to sing something terrible when he was drunk. He would sing his German songs and keep the neighbors awake for blocks around. It was all the police could do to quiet him. But you see Jim practiced what he preached: wine-women AND song; while Jerry only occasionally indulged in the first of the famous three I. W. W.'s.

Jerry worked in a winery at Culver City, where he didn't take a drink for two years. That's not saying he didn't get drunk. For to tell the truth, he did; but he wasn't to blame for it. It was done in the course of his vocation. He had to climb down a ladder into the large wine vats and clean them out when empty. The fumes there made him tipsy; particularly the fumes from the brandy vats. Lots of times he could hardly stagger up the ladder and crawl out of the small hole at the top, he was so intoxicated. But out in the fresh air he soon recovered. He sobered up almost immediately. It was different from a drinking bout in that way. He got soused breathing the foul air, and got sober breathing the fresh air. Such is the power of the atmosphere good and bad over the lives of pure and keen men. Brothers, when passing thru life's stormy waves learn to look at the barometer, and by all means when the skies are afoul and reeking, cease to breathe and you will avoid temptation. That is the first lesson.

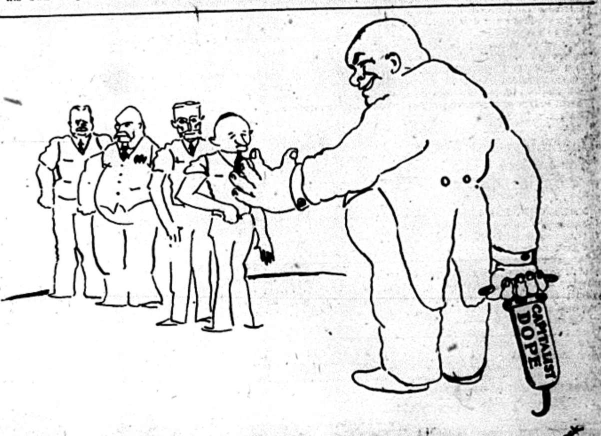
Eleven years now poor old Jerry has been living with the McLanes, and they like him so well they treat him like one of the family, tho he is no relation. The broken old man is free from care; he picks up a few dimes hauling ashes and rubbish; turns them into the family larder to pay his own keep and his horse's, and harms nobody.

The object of this little sermon is to teach life's ironies; but amidst the lotteries here recorded we hope to include instances of just such charitable deeds as those of the McLanes towards Winston ("Jerry") Bartlett. It helps us give back our faith in human nature, when we run across a lot of hard boiled adventures and adventurers. Capitalism still has its heroes, be they ever so humble.

"When I was driving Sunny Jim back from the San Fernando winery I kept my eye out for his blackjack, for he was in an ugly mood, and didn't know when he would hit me," said Jerry.

It is to be presumed both had been drinking over there while making their purchase of five gallons vinum for $1, and quarrelling on the way back. Such things are done and forgotten; but not the fact that your companion holds his blackjack in his hand and wields it viciously on occasion too. That is one unforgettable incident that makes vivid the remembrance of the whole journey, there and back. In one way it seems good, said Jerry, to think of Jimmy being cared for in his last moments in the hospital where everything was clean and sweet, tho he died hard, raving, his vitals on fire, and was buried in a pauper's grave. But we should know we can't do such things as Jimmy did, they don't pay.

They have torn down the old shack in the rear of the corner of St. Andrews and Jefferson where Jimmy used to crawl in after his down-town debauches and sing at the top of his voice. He lived there on sufferance thru the pity and tolerance of the owner. The old landmarks are fast disappearing. A new era is rising. The days of wineries, wholesale liquor houses, breweries, distilleries, saloons, wine room, etc., etc., have gone forever. And with them much of the gruesome and disgusting misery of olden days. You can walk around all over Los Angeles and never meet with such a hideous picture as the old Burbank scene painter afforded in his last days. Jerry comes the nearest to it, so far as I can judge at the present moment; but Jerry is miles cleaner and sweeter and better than old Sunny Jim. Bootlegging may manufacture a replica of him in time, so for while it has filled the grave-yards, it hasn't filled Los Angeles St. and the San Fernando road with men like them. The mold was broken when these were turned out on the streets of Los Angeles, ever blessed and fair. Jack London knew them and no doubt bummed around with them at times when in search of hard liquor mixed with local color—bums and revolution don't mix well together.



OFFICIAL WASHINGTON SUBMITS TO INOCULATION
"perhaps against the Red Menace"

CAL WOULD CUT LUXURY AND BIG INCOME TAXES

To Slash Tax on the Wealthy, Not Workers

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Coolidge conferred today with Representative Bacharach, republican of New Jersey, a member of the house ways and means committee, on contemplated tax reduction legislation.

Bacharach recommended that any new tax readjustment should include the elimination of all surtaxes as a measure both of reduction and simplification.

"I believe we can figure on reducing federal taxes to the extent of $400,000,000," said Bacharach. "I would favor elimination of taxes on autos and accessories, motor boats, jewelry and club dues. This would mean a reduction of $130,000,000.

"We could modify amusement taxes so as to apply on admission above $1.50. This would result in an additional cut of $30,000,000.

"The inheritance and estate taxes could be reduced to a maximum of 20 per cent, the minimum rate to begin at $100,000 which would mean a reduction of $50,000,000. A cut on the gift tax on the same basis would make a further reduction of $5,000,000.

"I favor a reduction in the surtax schedules to a maximum of 20 per cent to apply only to incomes of $15,000 and upward, eliminating the surtax on incomes between $10,000 and $15,000. I would reduce the taxes on incomes between $2,000 and $10,000, either by reducing the rate or giving increased allowance for dependants."

2,200 Boston Painters Striking for Raise, Face Strikebreakers

BOSTON, Mass., May 13—(FP)—Over 2,200 Boston painters are still on strike for $1.25 an hour. International vice-president, Charles A. Cullen is in Boston investigating the five weeks' strike. The master painters' association is considering an attempt to man all jobs with whatever strikebreakers can be found. The old rate of pay was $1.10 per hour.

Second "Dawes Plan" Also Going to Fail

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(FP)—Careful inquiry into senate sentiment as to changes in the rules demanded by Vice-President Dawes has shown that not more than a dozen out of the 96 members of that body are interested in trying to put a gag on debate.

These supporters of Dawes are third-rate men or new men, who have no power as leaders or speakers, and at the first attempt on their part to raise the issue the opposing fire will be so devastating that they will probably drop it for the remainder of the session.

Keeping Patriotism Alive.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 13.—While the fair grounds is fully two miles from water of any description, except fire water, and that from the lowly hydrant, the American legion will stage a bathing revue at that location July four, in which shapely girls will parade the grounds clad in one piece suits to the edification of elderly men, long past the age of usefulness, and members of the legion of this citiy who will mingle with the girls and gloat over the magnificent specimens of American womanhood in the making.

During the world war when the troops were stationed in this city the American government in Washington closed all places of evil resort for the protection of the "boys in khaki." To all intents and purposes they are still closed, but the legion at this day brings innocent girlhood clad in flimsy bathing suits to parade before them on a section of ground as barren of water as they themselves are of common decency.

Violator of Garment Agreement Is Fined

NEW YORK, May 13—(FP)—Damages of $4,858 to be paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by R. Sadowsky, Inc. is the order of Chairman Raymond B. Ingersoll, special arbitrator between the cloak concern and the union.

The firm is fined for uneqal division of work between outside and inside employes and for sending work to nonunion shops for manufacture. The union has been checking up on the Sadowsky's violations of the agreement for some time. The firm is one of the largest cloak and suit manufacturers in New York.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IN ART

By SIMON FELSHIN.

The last important event of the art season in New York is the Spring Salon of the Salons of America at the Anderson Galleries, 59th Street and Park Avenue, running to May 16.

The exhibition is on two floors. They have segregated the artists according to tendency. The two large rooms on the two floors are in sharp contrast to each other. They are two different worlds. Here one can see vividly the struggle going on in the art world as well as elsewhere, between the old and the new. In the room of the modernists you feel a vitality, a dynamic quality. It compels your attention.

You go one floor higher and you are taken aback by the contrast. There is a distinct come-down. The canvasses are lifeless. It is another world, an old world, weary, with a pallor of death upon it, bloodless, faded. The conservatives have absolutely nothing more to say. They are bankrupt. Their methods are obsolete. They are repeating old formulas which were alive at one time but are now dead. They imitate the past masters, but fail woefully.

The exhibition has been invaded by Japanese artists who have contributed some of the best pictures of the exhibition. There is "The Clinch" by Eitaro Ishigaki who is a Communist, "Window View—New York" by Noboru Foujioka, "Machine Shop" by Bumpei Usui, "The Life Guard" by Yasuo Kuniyoshi. The interesting thing is that these Japanese are the most American of all in their choice of subjects.

Paintings By American Communists.

Louis Lozowick, known to readers of the Communist press for his pictures reproduced in the Daily Worker and the Liberator has a picture "Butte, Montana." It is one of the finest, striking for its colors, workmanship, composition. Evidently the artist did not take out his easel to Butte and give a photographic reproduction of actuality. This picture is the essence of Butte and its copper mines. The colors are the artist's free choice; they are not gray as would be usually found in a realistic treatment of an industrial scene. Though the tone is subdued, the colors are warm in effect, with red predominating. The picture is masterfully constructed—hills and mining structures struggling with each other for mastery, piling upwards, mass upon mass. There are no people in the picture, for they would mar it. People don't belong in this monumental construction, in this massivenes, in this flow and magnificent sweep of line. People are not monumental, not in appearance anyway, and they are therefore eliminated, leaving monumentality, solidity, set down on the canvas with a sure hand. It is truly an epic of industrial America, as only Lozowick can render it, an artist whose work is of the best that America has to show.

There is a painting by Lydia Gibson, a competent portrait of Floyd Dell, a rather summery picture, done in bright colors. Wm. S. Fanning, another Communist, has four drawings. All of the Communists can be classed with the modernists and near modernists. One must naturally ask the question: "Is there a connection between politics and art?" To answer it would require another article.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A ruling on the motion of minority stockholders of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad to dismiss the application of the Van Sweringen brothers for authority to unify five railroad systems, will not be made by the interstate commerce commission until after the Van Sweringens have completed their case, Commissioner Meyer announced today at the resumption of hearings on the consolidation plan.

HENRY FORD HELPS BUY Y. M. C. A. BUILDING FOR HIS FLIVVER SLAVES

DETROIT, Mich., May 13.—Henry Ford, who invests either in antiques or to increase production in the Ford Motor Co. shops, has given $750,000 in the $5,000,000 building campaign of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. It was announced that the Ford gift would be used for the construction of a Y. M. C. A. branch on the East Side near the huge Ford plant on the Rouge River in Springwells. The Y. M. C. A. plans to build seven branches with the total fund.

MAY GET IN ON IT

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

It is not easy to predict [illegible] election of Leon Trot[illegible] presidium of the federal congress of the Soviet republic will have an adverse effect on the sale of Max Eastman's book: Since Lenin Died, but it was rather inconsiderate of Comrade Trotsky to leave Max minus a martyr, at such an auspicious moment. Max should present a nice picture of a man left holding the bag when Trotsky's telegram affirming his loyalalty to the Communist Party of Russia and pledging his support to its leadership was made public in London.

EMPLOYERS and representatives of labor met together recently in New York under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. The object of the conference was to discuss the question of waste in industry. William Green was there and the Seattle Union Record gloats over the fact that Green sat "with cabinet officials and representatives of great employing interests." The conferees agreed that lots of energy is wasted in industry as it is now run. So do we. But we assert that the workers have no interest in solving the problem of industrial efficiency so long as the capitalists get the benefit of any service that is made thereby.

WHAT the workers should worry about under capitalism is getting as much of the product of their toil from the capitalists as is possible and preparing the way for the taking over of industry and getting all the fruits of industry minus that portion necessary to run the government and reproduce machinery, or in other words, minus the overhead that the capitalist now pays out of his share of the dollar produced by labor. This share according to a United States government report is approximately 33 cents.

WILLIAM GREEN would be spending the time, for which the organized workers of the United States are paying him for, if he devoted it to organizing the workers instead of confabbing with the employers as to the best method of getting more work out of the hide of the membership of the American Federation of Labor. When the workers get together with the boss to check waste, produce more and increase the efficiency of a particular industry, what happens is that the boss finds he can get along with less help and the army of the unemployed gets new recruits.

THE workers of Soviet Russia are interested in the elimination of waste and properly so. Nationalized industry in Russia is owned by the workers thru their government, which they control and run. As production increases so does the compensation of the workers. A slacker in Russia today is an object of scorn, the same scorn that should be heaped on the worker in a capitalist country who acts as pacemaker to the rest of his fellow workers in order to make per capita production jump and make more profits for the boss. FOREIGN TRADE OF U. S. FALLS OFF IN BOTH IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

WASHINGTON, May 13.—American imports and exports declined in April, the department of commerce announced today.

Imports in April were $349,000,000 as against $385,490,733 in March.

Exports in April were $400,000,000 as compared with $453,434,288 in March.

"OPEN SHOP" IS ISSUE IN NOVA SCOTIA STRIKE

Canadian Communists for Mass Pickets

TORONTO, Ontario, Canada, May 14.—The Communist Party of Canada has issued the following appeal to the striking Nova Scotia coal miners to picket the mines more energetically and make the strike 100 per cent effective. The statement says:—

"It is becoming a tragic thing for the class conscious to watch the way matters are going in Nova Scotia.

"It makes one's heart bleed to realize how conscious the capitalist elements are of what they are doing to break the strike, how cunningly they are exploiting it for their own ends—and then to have to watch McLeod trailing around in the wake of these treacherous elements while they are laughing at him up their sleeves.

Union Officials Allow Scabs

"For nine weeks there is supposed to have been a one hundred per cent strike in Nova Scotia. The convention of the miners had decided on a one hundred per cent strike. A hundred per cent strike means that every piece of labor is withdrawn. It means that the maintenance men are withdrawn and the corporation property can go where the corporation consigns the men in a strike—to hell!

"No wonder when the labor betrayor Lewis appeared on the scene, he asked McLeod what this one hundred per cent strike was, anyway. The union maintenance men have been withdrawn but the McLeod executive has peacefully allowed the corporation to maintain its own staffs and the maintenance men of the union

CARPENTERS NOT UNIONIZED ON MARKET PROJECT

CHICAGO, May 14.—(FP)—Victory is announced by the Chicago building trades council in its fight to unionize the big McLennan Construction Co. Job on the new commission market at 14th and Racine Ave. The victory is complete so far as unions affiliated with the council are concerned, but the carpenters, who still remain outside the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, do not come within the view of the local council.

Cement mixers and building laborers, hitherto non-union, will now affiliate with the hod carriers and building laborers' district council if they want to keep their jobs. Union ironworkers, bricklayers, plasterers, tile setters, electrical workers and plumbers, about 2,000 in all, walked out two weeks ago at the call of the building trades council.

"The strike has been settled with the unionizing of the men that come under our jurisdiction," says Secretary J. J. Conroy.

SIDETRACKS MINERS' FIGHT ON INJUNCTION TO HEAR LIQUOR CASES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WHEELING, W. Va., May 14.—After hearing opening statements of counsel for officers and members of the United Mine Workers of America today, contending service was illegal on defendants in application of the West Virginia-Pittsburgh Coal company for a new strike injunction of a drastic nature, Judge Baker continued proceedings until afternoon. The continuation was the result of desire of the court to proceed with pending liquor conspiracy cases.

The miners' attack on service in the application for the new injunction is that it was illegal, because they were in court answering to bond upon another contempt proceedings, still pending.

ZANKOV MURDER JUNTA PREPARES PUBLIC HANGING

Building Scaffold in the Public Square

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, May 14.— The Zankov hangmen are literally living up to the title bestowed on them by the outraged workers and peasants of Bulgaria and by the class conscious workers of the world. A public scaffold is being erected in the streets of Sofia so that the populace can be impressed by the spectacle of seeing three men dangle from a rope for alleged complicity in the bomb explosion.

No effort was made by the court or the prosecution to prove the condemned men guilty. Victims were wanted and those three served the purpose. One of the three sentenced to death is a priest, but the bourgeois press which went into hysterics over the execution of the Polish spy Butchavitch, by the Soviet government, has no word of condemnation for the judicial murder of Pejer Zadgorsky, the Bulgarian priest whose opposition to the hangman, Zankov brought him to the gallows.

New School Board Trustees Approved by City Council

The city council approved Mayor Dever's six appointments on the school board which now makes the board of education complete.

The new members are Edward B. Ellicot, electrical engineer and former city electrician, to fill the vacancy of the president of the board; John A. English, organizer of the Typographical Union and indorsed by the Chicago Federation of Labor; Theophilus Schmid, a druggist living at 10856 Wabash Ave.; Charles T. Byrne, retired capitalist and former automobile manufacturer; Dr. Victor R. Schiller, a dentist living at 1725 So. Ashland Ave., and James Mullenbach, a present member of the board.

Following their confirmation they were rushed to the board rooms where the old board was meeting and officially took their seats. After electing Julius F. Smietanka vice-president for an unexpired term, the new board adjourned until Friday.

Council jurisdiction of the school board was recommended by Alderman Jacob N. Arbey, who believes the city council should have power over school trustees. The matter was referred to the schools committee.

Teachers' Meeting Saturday.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation will hold its regular meeting on Saturday, May 16, at 10:30 a. m. There will be reports on the salary situation and on the meeting of the schools committee of city council for consideration of the board of education appointees. The meeting will be held in Corinthian Hall, 17th floor. Capitol Building.

COURT MARTIAL OF BULGARIAN TERROR A FARCE

Fascist Murder of Workers Legalized

VIENNA, May 14.—(I. R. A.)—Members of the Communist Party of Bulgarian and agrarian revolutionaries in exile here say that the court martial in Sofia that sentenced eight to death for the explosion of a bomb in Sveti Kral cathedral during funeral services for General Gheorgeff that resulted in the death of 200, is simply a continuation of the effort of the Zankov regime to save its face before the world—a face, they say, that has been spattered with blood since the beginning of the present military dictatorship.

The exiles are of the opinion that the complete blame for the disaster can be laid to the door of the merciless terrorism that has reigned Bulgaria since the military coup of the "Kubret," a secret military organization that established the Zankov government in power and that today actually rules the country.

Zankov Does Not Weep for Workers.

They are unanimous in their expressions that the Communist Party of Bulgaria did not cause and could have gained nothing by causing the explosion. There is nothing strange they say, in incidents of that kind, and

FOREIGN OFFICE DIPLOMATIC LEAK SHOCKS BRITAIN

Disclosure Leaves John Bull Naked

LONDON, May 13.—The publication by the New York World of a secret memorandum prepared by the British foreign office for the sole use of cabinet members has caused one of the biggest sensations in years.

The document was written some time ago and was never intended for publication. Much speculation is indulged in as to where the leakage occurred. The suggestion that the British government favors a future revision of the Versailles treaty is not comforting to France. Neither is the hint that the Polish frontier would be modified in the interest of Germany conducive to equanimity in Warsaw.

At first the British capitalist press tried to cast doubt on the authenticity of the document. But it is now accepted by all papers as genuine. Nobody would be surprised to see Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, lose his official head over the scandal caused by the disclosure of the private views of the tory government.

Britain Against Arms Meet.

LONDON, May 14.—A call for a disarmament conference cannot be expected from Great Britain, said Premier Stanley Baldwin in the house of commons today.

Answering a labor member's question, he said:

"The question of disarmaments is now under consideration by the league of nations. I do not think it advantageous for Britain to take the initiative of summoning a disarmament conference now."

CAPITALISM'S NORMALCY IS THING OF THE PAST, AMBASSADOR HOUGHTON!

LONDON, May 14—Ambassador Huoghton, newly appointed to the court of St. James, expressed the opinion that a new era of prosperity was due when normal conditions are resumed. The trouble with this prediction is, say some plain-speaking politicians, who will not speak for publication, that normal conditions for capitalism nowadays would be considered very abnormal in pre-war days.

INJUNCTION AGAINST MINERS CONTINUED BY INDIANA JUDGE

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 14.—The temporary injunction recently granted on complaint of William H. Howe, Chicago coal agent, restraining international and local officers of the United Mine Workers of America and the East Side Coal company of Bicknell, Ind., from "interfering with the co-operative mining projects" in Knox County, continued in effect today.

Following a hearing yesterday on the operations of the Tecumseh mine near Bicknell in connection with Howe's petition for a permanent injunction, Judge Robert C. Baltzell in federal court ordered the temporary injunction continued in effect until next Tuesday morning.

FAULTY SWITCH CAUSED WRECK THAT KILLED 3

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 14.—Three men were killed and five injured, when the fast east bound Pennsylvania passenger train No. 6, a double header, was derailed at Dupont, Illinois, 35 miles west of here today.

The dead are Engineer George Munch, Engineer Daniel Walsh, Fireman Edward Zimmerman.

Three mail clerks, an express messenger and E. W. Harper, second fireman were injured. No passengers were reported injured.

Both engines left the rails and turned over, followed by three mail and baggage cars. Cause of the derailment had not been officially determined, executives of the Pennsylvania lines announced.

Members of the train crew expressed belief that a broken rail had caused the accident. All the dead lived in Terre Haute. Harper, the most seriously injured of the five members of the crew to escape death, was removed to a hospital in Effingham, Ill., badly scalded. He was expected to recover.

Kansas Ex-Governor Fights to Keep Out Pardon Sale Facts

TOPEKA, Kans., May 14.—The trial of former Governor Jonathan M. Davis, charged with conspiracy and soliciting a bribe, entered its fourth session today with indications that it will continue far into next week.

The former governor is on trial for the alleged solicitation of a bribe from A. L. Oswald, of Hutchinson, Kansas.

Son Caught With Goods.

The state's attorneys so far have confined their efforts to trying to present testimony bearing on Davis' actions in the Fred Pollman case, in which it is charged that Russelll Davis, his son, was caught delivering a pardon to Pollman in exchange for $1,250.

Fred Pollman, former banker of Lacygne, who was sent to the penitentiary for forgery and later granted an absolute pardon by Governor Davis, was recalled to the stand when court opened.

Exposed Pardon Sale.

In reply to questions, Pollman said he went to a Kansas City newspaper with the plan to expose Davis "because there was so much grafting among public officials."

He testified he did not receive money from the paper for working up the expose.

BRITISH ADMIRAL HINTS FUTU WAR WITH AMERICA AS ENGL BUSINESS LOSES IN TRADE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 14.—That the increasing commercial between England and the United States, despite certain jo terests against Japan and France, is bringing the danger between the two great imperialist nations, is seen in the developments of trade and diplomacy. The threat to Bri America's grand fleet maneuvers in the Pacific has cropp in the house of commons.

Rear Admiral Beamish asked "the particulars" of the of the American war fleet and whether, "in view of our in interests in the Pacific" arrangements would be made for a similar cruise of the British grand fleet.

Got Instructions.

Unquestionably, this question was not a spontaneous observation by Beamish. Rear admirals do not ask questions of such diplomatic significance without purpose, provocation, or even instruction. There is little doubt that Rear Admiral Beamish was closely informed of all "the particulars" before he asked for them.

The First Lord of the Admiralty Bridgeman responded by saying that the American fleet was, of course, merely "engaged in practice maneuvers," and that since a special British squadron had made a cruise in Pacific waters last September no new movements of British warships are now proposed.

This incident is a polite notice served on American imperialism that the British empire has its own interests in the Pacific which it will guard against trespass by America by diplomacy if possible and by war if necessary. It is a softly-worded notice that Britain is watching the United States and a warning of "Hands Off the Empire!"

It is sufficiently annoying to Britain's interests that the American fleet has chosen to visit Australian waters, and to demonstrate to that dominion (which is not altogether pleased with the parent government in London) that the United States, too, has warships as powerful as those which have ruled the waves for Britain's farflung empire.

It is also to be remembered that Australia is a large and rich territory, and a prize for the contending imperialist groups of the world.

British Trade Losing.

Another source of irritation is the state of British trade, which shows a continuous dependency on American imports. The month of April statement of the British board of trade

French Negotiate Debt Tangle with the U. S. Government

PARIS, May 14.—The sudden popularity of Joseph Caillaux, French finance minister, in the American capitalist press, is attributed to his decision to make immediate steps looking towards the solution of the debt tangle with the United States.

Negotiations are scheduled to start within fifteen days. Briand and Caillaux are of one mind on this question.

Callaux's repudiation of the capital levy made a great hit with Wall Street, which is now satisfied that Caillaux is a constructive statesman and a wholesome patriot.

Washington is known to be gratified with the new developments in the financial relations between the United States and France. British diplomats are not so satisfied, looking on this move by Caillaux as part of his anti-British policy.

RAILROAD WAGES OFF $7,000,000 IN FEBRUARY

Government Figures Prove Reduction

By LELAND OLDS.

Railway employes received $7,000,000 less in wages in February, 1925, than in February, 1924, according to the interstate commerce commission. This resulted from a reduction of 27,923 in number employed and of about $2 in the average monthly wage.

Over 40 per cent of this reduction in wages came out of the pockets of the train and engine service employes whose monthly total fell 5 per cent from $61,712,680 in February, 1924, to $58,807,423 this year. The railroads carried on their payrolls 11,334 fewer train and engine men in 1925. The average monthly pay in this group fell from $184 to $181.

More detailed study of the figures shows that while total straight-time compensation of train and engine service employes fell 3 per cent the reduction in overtime and arbitrary pay amounted to 11 per cent. Apparently the railroads are taking advantage of the changes in rules in recently negotiated agreements.

The average wages of various classes in Feb., 1924 and 1925 follow:

Rail Workers	1924—Feb.—	1925
Passenger
Brakemen	$151	$154
Conductors	225	228
Engineers	245	244
Firemen	181	183
Freight
Brakemen	161	158
Conductors	219	212
Engineers	246	241
Firemen	171	163

Freight service employes were the chief sufferers from any changes in traffic or in operating conditions compared with a year ago.

For the railroad industry as a whole the average wage was $130 in Feb., 1925, compared with $132 in Feb., 1924. The range of wages for able bodied male labor was from $66 to about $250 a month. These include 169,338 section laborers at $66; 38,810 extra-gang laborers at $69; 61,411 common shop laborers at $75; 46,479 shop and engine house workers at $88; 38,450 freight handlers at $86; 119,482 skilled trades helpers at $100; 86,389 freight carmen at $131; 63,149 machinists at $144; 6,800 skilled electrical workers at $150; 8,404 signalmen at $145; 133,452 class B clerks at $122; 26,269 telegraphers and towermen at $131; 5,413 dispatchers at $251.

These monthly wage statistics reiterate monotonously the fact that the wage structure in the railroad industry rests on a minimum inadequate to let the worker meet the demands of life. For the entire month of February a quarter of a million men received less than $75 each. Such a minimum depresses wages all along the line.

Blacklist Working on the Lumberjacks Who Hit Seattle Skidroad

SEATTLE—(FP)—The blacklist of the lumber companies of the Pacific northwest is in full operation. Men who have been working in the woods for years are denied a job because they have incurred the enmity of the employers' association.

After an applicant for work pays a dollar in one of the many Seattle employment offices, an agent of the lumber combine looks him over. If the applicant's answers are not in accordance with the servility demanded, the fee is refunded and he cannot work despite the law making it illegal for employers to combine to prevent workmen from securing employment.

ENGLAND FORCES WORKERS TO PAY FOR PENSIONS FROM LOW WAGE; GENERALS GET IT FREE

(By The Federated Press)

LONDON, Eng., May 14.—The decay of capitalism in England is reflected in the national budget submitted by the conservative Baldwin government. Workers' pensions are regarded no longer as socialistic but as necessary provision by state capitalism for the increasing number of dependents it is creating.

The widow's pension proposal coupled with the extension of old age pensions will probably increase the number receiving money or maintenance from the state to 6,500,000 in a population of 43,000,000. These include at present 2,100,000 war pensioners, 900,000 old age pensioners, 1,250,000 unemployed and 1,500,000 paupers.

Philip Snowden, finance minister in the former MacDonald Labor government, says the budget, "shorn of the scheme of widows' pensions, would have appeared to everybody what it really is—the worst rich man's budget." Sugarcoated by the pension proposals the government has handed about $165,000,000 of the $175,000,000 tax reduction to income and supertax payers. The burdens of the workers will be increased.

The pension proposals are advanced as compulsory insurance covering practically the entire wage-earning population. A widow will receive $2.50 a week for life with an additional $1.25 for the youngest child and 75c for each additional child until the youngest child reaches 14½ years. Old age pensions will begin at 65 and workers over 70 will receive pensions without question as to other means of support. Workers and employers are to contribute equally to support these pensions beginning at 8c. per man and 4c per woman per week and increasing at 10-year intervals to 14c. per man and 7c. per woman in 1956 when the scheme will be fully effective. All persons whose incomes do not exceed roughly $25 a week must contribute.

Ramsay MacDonald and Pethick Lawrence for Labor attack the contributory feature as a direct burden on industry which ought to be placed on wealth. They say it will mean an increased cost of production forcing either a decrease in wages or an increase in prices. Jack Jones, known for spicy interruptions when conservatives have the floor, wants to know why those who work must contribute to their pensions while generals, admirals and all in high authority get theirs without paying. He says the scheme will double the weekly contribution the casual laborer must make out of his scant earnings.

The budget will also increase the workers' cost of living through the new protective duties theoretically imposed to protect struggling industries. This pretense appears a joke when manufacturers of artificial silk are found among the protected. This is practically a monopoly in England. Courtauld is the biggest unit in the combine. This concern made $18,850,000 profit in 1924 on $58,200,000 capital, or more than 32 per cent.

But the capital has been increased from $12,150,000 to $58,200,000 by stock dividends so that the 1924 profit means about 155 per cent on the original investment. In 1924 cash dividends were at the rate of 20 per cent (96 per cent on the real investment), and in addition a 62½ per cent dividend in 5 per cent preferred stock was distributed.

American Buildings by Speculators Are Shoddily Constructed

PENNSYLVANIA LABOR PARTY HAS HOT FIGHT OVER UNITED FRONT

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 14.—The convention of the Pennsylvania labor party decided to organize thruout the state, basing the organization on the trade unions, women's organizations, and the working class political parties.

Comrade Otis led the fight for the admission of all working class political parties. The Workers (Communist) Party was broadly discussed at the convention, and its united front policy was taken up.

There are ten planks in the platform. The government ownership of the basic industries, under democratic control was approved after strong opposition. A fight was made for the trade union control of the party.

A state executive committee of eleven was elected, including Stoers, who was elected by three votes.

LUMBER BARONS APPEAL $50,000 MURDER JUDGM'NT

Expect to Beat Widow in Higher Court

By J. W. LEIGH

NEW ORLEANS.—(FP)—A verdict for $50,000 is being appealed by the Great Southern Lumber Co. of Bogalusa and five citizens of that town. It was returned in federal court in favor of Mrs. L. E. Williams, widow of Lem Williams, labor man killed at Bogalusa in November 1919. Lem Williams operated a garage and was president of the trades council which was supporting the mill workers in unionizing, a policy opposed by the lumber company. When white workers were displaced by Negroes there followed partial organization of the colored men. A party of men came to Williams' garage and Williams and two others were killed and two wounded. Williams' widow charged her husband was murdered by agents of the Great Southern Lumber Co. It was further charged that the whistle on the company's plant was used to assemble the mob to kill her husband.

MUDDLED FARM BUREAU OFFICIALS STILL DREAM OF AID FROM CAL— PREACH PEACE, RELIEF FIGHT LAGS

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 14.—An export corporation to handle surplus agricultural products, financed by the federal government, but controlled by a united farm organization, was the feature of a "farm relief program" offered the midwestern agricultural conference in session here by a sub-committee of nine today.

Appointment of an agricultural commission composed of farmers to be selected by farm organizations was urged.

The sub-committee program will be considered by the conference this afternoon.

"The committee purified itself of factionalism which in the past has been an obstacle to agricultural relief," Chairman Hirtz said.

The conference was attended by hundreds of delegates of farm bureaus, farmer unions, granges, and other agricultural organisations from Minnesota, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa.

Big Per Cent of All Workers Concentrated in Few Great Plants

NEW YORK, May 14.—Thirty-two per cent of the workers are employed in 1 per cent of the country's 196,267 industrial plants, the national industrial conference board, connected with the National Civic Federation, states.

The 1 per cent represents the plants employing over 500 workers each. Only one-tenth of this 1 per cent employ over 1,000 workers each, but this makes one-fifth of all workers employed. Most industrial establishments are under corporate control and this tendency is increasing, the board states.

The board's studies do not show how many workers are employed under the same financial control as each plant having a separate manager was counted as a unit.

Seek New Teapot Indictment.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of interior, testified today before the grand jury investigating the naval oil reserve leases.

Government oil counsel, Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Capitalist Press in War Over Sensation Hunting; Trib Wins

Responding to the plaints of the Chicago Tribune, the circuit, criminal and superior courts in Chicago are banning the taking of photographs in courtrooms. They are also forbiding the use of typewriters and radio and telephone instruments.

The keen competition between the Trib and the Hearst papers for the best pictures and the quickest service has so far left the Trib a step or two in the rear. So it roared editorially for the suppression of a news field in which it was not holding its own.

Andrew R. Sheriff, chairman Chicago Bar Assn. committee on relations of the press to judicial proceedings, admits that the Tribune is responsible for the new prohibition. "That editorial was the backbone of the whole movement," Sheriff says of the Trib complaint.

No Interference Yet.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(FP).—Thus far, the state department has not seen fit to interfere with the relations between Mexico and Japan as set down in the treaty of amnesty and commercial relations recently signed and ratified. Under the terms of this treaty Mexico raises no barrier to the coming of Japanese citizens to Mexico as laborers and settlers on the land.

It is pointed out by Latin-Americans, however, that the reason why Mexico has made such a treaty, on terms of non-discrimination, is that Japanese do not like to do such pioneer work as must be done in Mexico, and hence no large number of immigrants is likely. Mexico is not California, and her politics are not swayed by anti-Japanese agitation.

"INDUSTRIAL COURT" LAW PASSED BY NOVA SCOTIA GOVERNMENT TO KILL FIGTING MINERS' UNION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, May 14.—The provincial government of Nova Scotia in their corporation house of assembly at Halifax put one of the second-hand laws of the state of Kansas on the statute of the province May 6, "the Kansas industrial court act of compulsory arbitration."

All industries that the minister of public works and mines decrees are public utilities, are included in its scope and such others as both parties to a dispute agree.

Labor fakers attended the public hearings of the act in swarms and fought for positions at its first washing, at its premature birth.

Fakers Gather At The Feast

William Best, a dominion lobbyist for the International railway running trades, urged carefulness that this bastard legislation be safely delivered. When asked by an astute enemy politician, what else the government could do when conciliation boards failed, he was stumped flat as all fakers are.

J. R. Stewart an insurance agent holding a card in a International running trades organization in Nova Scotia stated, "It must be a good thing because both employer and employe were against it."

Pat Healey, for the Halifax Trades and Labor Council pointed out that it would put workers in jail but be unconstitutional when it was invoked against the employers.

Joe Wallace for the Communist Party showed that the act wasn't to stop strikes but to hamstring the strikers by jailing the leaders. And that the act made the supreme court where British Empire Steel representatives hold the majority dictator of wages and working conditions, as well as of the fate of those who opposed it.

He showed that there was nothing to prevent the employer concerned being put on the arbitration commission; that there was no provision against them accepting gifts or subsequent graft from the owning class, and nothing to prevent any paper or person urging the employers not to accept an award, while a worker would be jailed for so doing.

He also made it clear that any organizer who urged better conditions for the workers would be liable to imprisonment. So that while Jack MacDonald and Malcolm Bruce of the Communist Party took the jury route to freedom the last time they were arrested, next time wouldn't have a chance.

In addition to fighting the measure before the legislature, and putting iron into the opposition of the Trades and Labor Council, the Communist Party has been instrumental in summoning delegates of all trades unions to deal with this and related matters.

Expose Parliament From Within

The benefit of having class conscious working class, even in the bosses' parliament was demonstrated when the three men elected by the workers of Cape Breton county, fought its many clauses, pointing out the clauses intended to be used to skim the cream of the labor movement and place the leading spirits in the ranks of labor behind prison bars.

Nova Scotia now has the distinction of having the most vicious law in its statutes of any English speaking country, and at the same time not one labor law that can be said to have been enacted in the interest of the workers, such as 8-hour day, minimum wage for women etc.

The following observations of a capitalist paper after its enactment serves to show the work it is intended to do:

A Capitalist View

"When this tribunal shall have decided a wage dispute, it will be illegal for the McLachlans and the rest of that class to incite the workmen to go on strike, on the other hand the employers will have to obey also.

"What did the labor party do to help him, (Armstrong) what did they do towards peace and good understanding? They hounded and badgered him. They sent him long abusive telegrams marked 'collect'. Yet the international leaders of their union said in a speech in this city that Mr. Armstrong had acted like a statesman."—Halifax Morning Chronicle May 9.

When John L. Lewis, while in Nova Scotia in connection with the present lockout of the miners of District 26 United Mine Workers of America, stated that "Armstrong, premier of the province, had done all possible to bring about an amicable settlement" he stated what every class conscious workers in the district know to be a lie.

Mill Operation at Fall River, Mass., Falls Off Again

FALL RIVER, Mass.—(FP)—Another curtailment of mill operations in Fall River puts cotton workers back where they were before the recent temporary revival. Unemployment is handicapping the organization campaign of the United Textile Workers Union. Mills are cutting production.

Would Transform Tornado Relief.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill.—Tornado victims in southern Illinois are being properly cared for, the West Frankfort relief committee of the International Workers' Aid reports. It urges that food be shipped to the unemployed starving miners in the district who did not have the good fortune to be storm victims and so are unable to get food or supplies.

SWALES' MAY DAY TALK STARTLES A. F. OF L. FAKERS

British Union Leader Wants "Emancipation"

WASHINGTON, May 14.—(FP)—Copies of the labor day (May Day) message of A. B. Swales, chairman of the British Trade Union Congress, who was a fraternal delegate at the El Paso convention last November, have reached A. F. of L. headquarters. They show that Swales' first summons is for all workers to "reaffirm their determination to use every means within their power to establish the most complete working class unity."

He declares that all signs point toward new wars, more ghastly than the last. Hours of labor are being lengthened by the masters of European industry in defiance of the Washington (eight-hours) convention.

"We have passed from savagedom to serfdom, from serfdom to wagedom," he says, "and we must be determined to go forward and not flinch in the struggle to secure full economic and industrial emancipation. Long live the international working class movement!"

Conductors Crawfish from LaFollette at Minneapolis Meeting

MINNEAPOLIS,—(FP)— The 700 delegates to the 38th convention of the Order of Railroad Conductors, in session at Minneapolis, represents 59,011 members in good standing and assets of over $5,000,000, according to General Secretary E. P. Curtis' report.

This compares with 58,570 members at the 1922 Cleveland convention. The number of locals, or divisions, increased from 576 to 583. The order traces its beginning to a union of Illinois Central conductors formed in 1868.

President L. E. Sheppard has held office since the 1919 convention at St. Louis.

Though very active in the LaFollette presidential campaign of 1924 Sheppard agrees with the legislative committee of the order in its recommendation that the commitment to form a national labor party be abandoned as "impracticable so far as its effectiveness in the cause of labor is concerned."

Why Not Notch Their Ears or Brand Them?

THREE RIVERS, Que.—All the workingmen of Three Rivers and Cap de la Madeleine will have to wear a badge to show they paid their license fee to the city. The order is directed against workers from other cities employed here.

Ship Disaster Averted.

MONTREAL, May 14—By careful and skilful navigation a possible repetition of the steamship Titanic disaster was averted by Captain Peel of the liner Aurania, when an iceberg loomed up thru the fog.

Captain Peel ordered reverse on the engines and avoided a collision with the big iceberg.

WORKERS PARTY CANDIDATES IN CLEVELAND RACE

Circulate Petitions for City Council

CLEVELAND, May 14.—The Workers Party of Cleveland has begun the work of circulating nomination petitions for candidates for city council and school board in the fall election.

Councilmen are elected from each of four districts, five to seven being the number from each. Elections are held on the proportional representation plan, the voter designating first, second, third choices, etc.

Must Get 500 Signers.

Candidates to be on the ballot must secure 500 signers to a nominating petition, and a voter is allowed to sign but one petition. The election is nonpartisan, the candidates appearing on the ballot without party designation. Of course in the campaign party allegiance is made an issue.

The Communist candidates for whom petitions are being circulated are: First district (west side), Alfred Wagenknecht, district organizer of the Workers Party; second district (south-east quarter), Sam Holzman, member of the Auto Workers' Union; third district (down-town section of the east side), J. A. Hamilton, local organizer of the Workers Party; fourth district (north-east quarter), A. V. Severino, member of the Bricklayers' Union No. 5. John Fromholz is a candidate for the school board.

Need Assistance.

Anyone wishing to assist in the work of circulating petitions should get in touch with the local Workers Party office, at 5927 Euclid avenue, Room 13, telephone Randolph 4065.

A John Reed Junior

This is a member of the John Reed Pioneer group of Soviet Russia. The youngster is proudly exhibiting the name of the group, John Reed, which they wear on their caps.

In the United States, in the city of Chicago, there is also a John Reed Junior group functioning quite successfully. To celebrate the first anniversary of their organization the group is giving a surprise party and dance, Saturday eve., May 23, at the Workers' Home, 1902 W. Division St. There will be an interesting program for children and for adults. They promise something new in entertainments. Besides that, there is a surprise. Admission for children will be 10 cents and for adults 20 cents.

Max Shachtman, editor of the Young Worker, will bring greetings from the Pioneers of Soviet Russia.

Music furnished by the Y. W. L. orchestra.

Don't forget the date and place, Saturday, May 23, at 1902 W. Division street.

ANTI-WHITE TERROR MEETING TO BE HELD IN CHICAGO SUNDAY

An anti-white terror demonstration will be held on Sunday, May 17, at 2:30 p. m. at the Hod Carriers Hall, 814 W. Harrison street.

It is arranged under the auspices of the Workers Party, Local Chicago with the main support coming from the Balkan federation branches of the Workers Party.

The speakers for this demonstrations secured thus far, are Earl R. Browder, in English; K. Mikalachki, in South Slav; C. Koteff, in Bulgarian; K. Kostis, in Greek; M. A. Stolar, in Russian, and other speakers. Admission is free.

CLEVELAND, May 14.—All Workers Party members and sympathizers; all members of the Trade Union Educational League, and progressive trade unionists, must mark down Sunday, June 21, in their calendars, and make absolutely no plans for that day to conflict with the big picnic and dance to be held by the Clevelaand Trade Union Educational League, at Saxonheim Garden, 7001 Dennison Ave., West Side.

The committtee is planning to have one of the biggest events of the season, with lots of sports, chorus singing, and a speech by a nationally known speaker in the progressive trade union movement. In the evening a dance will be held, and it should be kept in mind that the Saxonheim floor is one of the finest in the city. The floor is covered and the picnic will be held rain or shine.

Anyone who wishes to volunteer their services in the line of entertainment for this affair, should get in touch with H. Wagenknecht, secretary, T. U. E. L., Room 13, 5927 Euclid Ave.

Tickets Now on Sale for Athletic Carnival in N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 14.—Good news for New York!—The Workers Party, District No. 2, is arranging its second Annual International Athletic Carnival and Picnic for Sunday, June 21st, at Pleasant Bay Park, the Bronx.

Which means an outdoor treat for the New York militants as the 1,600 can testify who attended the first carnival held last summer.

All athletic events will be under the direction of the Workers' Sport Alliance, and are planned on a wider scale than last year. In addition there will be a newspaper popularity contest and other attractions.

New Yorkers! Keep Sunday, June 21st open. Plan to spend that day with your friends at Pleasant Bay Park, which is situated on Long Island Sound and has beatful groves and woodland.

Tickets may be obtained at the Workers Party headquarters, 108 East 14th Street, the Freiheit, 30 Union Sq. Jimmie Higgins Book Shop, 127 University Place, and all party branches and newspapers.

Phillips, Negro Organizer, Talks at Y. W. L. Branch

Comrade H. V. Phillips, Negro organizer for the Y. W. L., who has recently been touring the district organizing the Negro youth of Illinois and adjoining states, will give a talk at Area Branch No. 5 of the Young Workers League tonight, 8 p. m., at 19 So. Lincoln street.

Branch No. 5 has been conducting an intensive campaign among the Negro youth of the west side and 600 copies of the special Negro edition of the Young Worker as well as 1,000 leaflets have been distributed this week. The meeting tonight is one of the first that will be held thruout all the branches in the present Negro campaign. All league and party comrades are urged to come and hear Comrade Phillips and help us organize the Negro youth of Chicago.

Lerner Lectures at Revere, Massachusetts

REVERE, Mass., May 14.—The fourth lecture of the course being given by Max Lerner of the Workers Party in this city was held here tonight. The fifth lecture, the last of the series, will be upon "The Contrast of the Three Internationals," on Thursday May 21.

The audience, though small, is of those who are intensely interested in the instruction given by Comrade Lerner and feel better equipped for the struggle. The present lecture was on "Communist Tactics and Strategy."

The lectures are held at Eagles Hall.

Vote for Workers Party in Mpls. Shows Gain in All Wards

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 14.—A comparison of the vote counted in this city for the Workers (Communist) Party in last year's election campaign, and that credited to the Communist candidates in the recent municipal election, shows a gain in votes, even tho many votes were undoubtedly stolen from the Workers Party.

The total vote counted for Dan Stevens, Communist candidate for mayor, was 1,658, and the vote given for Foster and Gitlow, according to the politician's count, was 358.

By wards the vote given for Foster in the presidential election, was as follows: Ward 1, 16; ward 2, 6; ward 3, 64; ward 4, 60; ward 5, 26; ward 6, 10; ward 7, 15; ward 8, 9; ward 10, 25; ward 11, 62; ward 12, 27; and ward 13, 26.

The vote credited to the Communist candidate for mayor in the election held this week, is given by wards as follows, showing a gain in Communist votes.

Ward 1, 79; ward 2, 25; ward 3, 129; ward 4, 107; ward 5, 86; ward 6, 70; ward 7, 60; ward 8, 29; ward 9, 134; ward 10, 136; ward 11, 71; ward 12, 168; and ward 13, 19.

The comparison shows a gain in nearly every ward.

Workers' Aid Meets on Monday, May 18

NEW YORK, May 14.—The next conference of the International Workers' Aid, New York Division, will take place on Monday, May 18, at 8 p. m., at 108 East 14th St., Room 32.

International Red Aid is one of the most pressing tasks of the revolutionary workers. The Communists must be in the forefront in arousing the interests and support of the workers of this country for the revolutionary workers and peasants in the capitalist prisons of Europe adn Asia. The arrest of our two comrades Crouch and Trumbull in the United States army, shows that the task is coming close at home.

Every branch of the Workers Party and Young Workers League must have a delegate at the conference. Every branch must do its share.

Labor Defense to Meet in New York to Consider Arrests

NEW YORK, May 14. — The next conference of the Labor Defense Council, New York Section, will take place on Tuesday, May 19, at 8 p. m., at 108 E. 14th St., Room 32.

It is absolutely necessary that every branch of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League be represented. The increasing frequency with which party and Y. W. L. members are arrested demands that reserves be built up to take care of the cases.

This can only be done by the party and Y. W. L. branches doing their share in arousing the interest of the workers of this country to the necessity of protecting their best fighters. Don't neglect the Labor Defense Council meeting.

Concert and Ball for Communist Poet Comes Off May 16th

NEW YORK, May 14.—Every worker, young and old, is invited to spend an enjoyable evening with the Russian comrades of the Bronx branch of the Young Workers League at their concert and ball on Saturday evening, May 16th at 1347 Boston Road, Bronx.

The affair is given in honor of the young proletarian poet Bezimensky who in his famous "Comsomolis" pictures the life and work of the Russian Comsomol. An exceptional program is provided. A playlet, recitations, songs and scenes from the life of the Russian Comsomol, will be performed by a group of young Communists. After the entertainment there will be dancing. Come and bring your friends.

Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Fund International Picnic.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee has planned for an international picnic, to be held on July 4 next, at the Page Estate, Brookline street, Needham, Massachusetts, in order to raise funds to meet the obligations assumed for the legal defense of the two prisoners.

This announcement is made in order that other sympathizers may not start any other initiative, around Boston, on the same date for the same purpose.

At a later date a detailed program of this event will be made public.—Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, Amleto Fabbri, Secretary.

NEGRO WORKERS HEAR WHITEMAN ON IMPERIALISM

Labor Congress Subject of Cleveland Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

CLEVELAND, May 14.—Preparations are being made by the local committee on the American Negro Labor Congress, for a packed house on Thursday, May 21, when Lovett Fort-Whiteman, of Chicago, organizer of the congress, speaks in the Buelah baptist church, 31st and Cedar Ave., at 8 p. m.

Fort-Whiteman has recently returned from Soviet Russia, where he devoted considerable time to the study of the problem of the colored races, which make up a large percentage of the world's population, but are subject to the domination of the white imperialistic nations of Europe and America.

Negroes Must Fight as Workers.

Fort-Whiteman's belief is that the American Negroes must and will furnish to a large extent the leadership for the Negroes of the world in their part of the struggle of the colored races from imperialistic exploitation and oppression. He believes that this struggle must be carried on, however, only as part of the general struggle of the working class for freedom from the domination of the capitalist class.

Inasmuch as these views are somewhat different from any program offered to the Negroes of Cleveland hitherto, a large amount of interest is expected to be shown in his talk. The Garvey movement is to said to have a large following in Cleveland, but many influential Negroes realize that Garvey's program is not just what the race demands.

Negro Union Members Take Part.

The committee arranging the meeting include the following prominent Clevelanders: J. D. Whitlow, member Cleveland Building Trades Council; Rev. B. G. Glover, of the Beulah baptist church; Frank Fitzsimmons, Gabriel Walters, of Building Laborers' Local No. 10; Brothers Small, Thompson, and Cruse; Rev. Mack T. Williams of Antioch Community House; and Henry Lee Moon, of the Cleveland Herald.

The organization work of the American Negro Labor Congress was iniated in Cleveland by H. V. Philipps, who held a well-attended meeting on April 23.

Sheboygan, Wisconsin Will See Russian-German Movie Film

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., May 14.—For the first time in the history of this city the International Workers' Aid will show one of its best productions, "Russia and Germany." The population of this city is chiefly German counting among its members a large number of Russian Germans from the Volga valley. It is expected that a large number of this people will be interested to see the pictures of two countries which are nearest to them by traditions. A large number of tickets have been sold in advance and it is expected that there will be a large crowd.

Comrade John P. McCarthy will be the principle speaker at the evening performance. Comrade McCarthy recently returned from Ireland and will give the Irish angle of the general European situation.

New York Workers' Correspondence Are to Hold Conference

NEW YORK, May 14.—The meeting of worker correspondents scheduled for the New York Workers Party headquarters, 108 East 14th Street, for Saturday evening may 16th is to begin promptly at 7:30 and adjourn at 9 p. m. so as to give all the participants the opportunity to attend some other affair on the same evening. Therefore be on time.

Press Agent for N. Y. Maypole Dance Assures Good Time

NEW YORK, May 14—The Downtown English Branch of New York will give an entertainment and May pole dance Saturday evening, May 16 at the headquarters, 108 East 14th. Admission is 35 cents and worth a dollar.

Soviets Switch Ambassadors.

MOSCOW, May 14.—Yureneff, ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics at Rome, has been appointed as Soviet ambassador to Teheran, while, in his stead, Kerjentzeff, formerly minister of the Union of Soviet Socialist Russia at Stockholm, has been transferred as ambassador to Rome.

Cleveland Workers Defy Police

the police, acting under orders of Public Safety Director Barry, will also speak.

Police Interfere.

Barry made the arbitrary ruling that no collection would be permitted for political prisoners in Europe, and when an attempt was made at the April 18 meeting to take the collection anyway, the police dispersed the meeting.

The affair received considerable publicity in the local press, and the American Civil Liberties Union, thru its local attorney, M. C. Harrison, took the matter up with Barry as being an unwarranted infringement of civil liberties. Barry also was severely criticized by the progressive wing in the city council, where he has quite a bit of opposition.

To Discuss White Terror.

This meeting will deal with the white terror in Poland, Bulgaria, and other Baltic and Balkan states; the harsh sentences given Crouch and Trumbull, Communist soldiers in the U. S. army on Hawaii; the deportation campaign of the government against Communists and radicals; the various oppressive laws on the books and proposed, including the criminal syndicalism laws and laws against the foreign-born; and the Severino case.

All these questions are related in being the manifestations of a world-wide offensive against the working class, which is exhibited in a governmental policy of suppression of the militants among the workers, both Communists and the more progressive non-Communist elements as well.

The Severino case is one which involves issues of national importance. The government is making an effort to have his citizenship papers cancelled, which he had held since 1915. The case was begun in October, 1923, but has been postponed from time to time. It has now been set for hearing on May 27, in the federal district court in Cleveland.

Attempt to Annul Citizenship.

The case of the government rests on their contention that Severino's statement that he was "attached to the principle of the constitution of the United States," made when he applied for naturalization, was "untrue, false, and fraudulent." The prosecution maintains that Severino believed since 1907, in "violent revolution and armed insurrection directed against the government of the United States, and all other governments founded upon the capitalist system of economy," and therefore, the attempt is made to have his citizenship annulled as fraudulently obtained.

One issue involved in this case will doubtless be the right of a Communist to United States citizenship. If the government can establish this, many foreign-born workers will be deprived of citizenship rights, including the use of the ballot, and the right to be a candidate for office. Such a situation would be a striking evidence of the lack of faith of the 100 per centers in the "democracy" they talk so loudly about. Why do they fear to permit the Communists the ballot?

An Active Unionist.

Severino has been candidate for various offices on the Workers Party ticket and is in the field in the 1925 election as candidate for city councilman. He is an active members of Local No. 5 Bricklayers' Union; and vice-president of the City Co-operative Dairy. He will also speak at the May meeting, as will Carl Weisberg of the Young Workers' League. The meeting is under the joint auspices of the Labor Defense Council and the International Red Aid. Admission is 10 cents.

Charley Schwab's Dicks Fail to Stop May Day Demonstration

By A. BURLAK.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BETHLEHEM, Pa., May 13—The International May Day meeting, the first ever held in Bethlehem was a big success. Three speakers addressed the meeting—Comrade Wicks in English, Comrade Duranovich in Ukranian and Comrade Barabosh in Hungarian.

Some workers of Bethlehem worked on International May Day because they did not know what it means, others worked because of the iron ruling of this city. If they dared to take one day off for a holiday Charley Schwab would make it hot for them.

Charley Schwab was among the first to disqualify the child labor amendment. By enslaving the children he makes the parents slave longer hours and for lower wages. Charley Schwab employs agents and stool piegons to spy upon and break up Communist meetings.

Despite the threats from Charley Schwab's policemen to break up our meeting it went off successfully. In order to lead them off our track, we called the meeting at a different hour than the one advertised and everything went off in fine shape. The workers all appreciated the meeting.

In the evening we held a May Day dance which was attended by all who came to the meeting.

EN SHOP' IS ISSUE IN NOVA SCOTIA STRIKE

might just as well never have been withdrawn for all the real effect their withdrawal has had.

"The corporation has all these months been able, to its own complete satisfaction, to keep its officials on the jobs. Scabs have been doing the work and the whole world, McLeod included, knew it.

"And only now, after these heartbreaking weeks, has the McLeod executive been forced by the local unions, to picket the mines.

"In a communication to the local unions, the good-natured and christian tempered executive write: 'Brothers: From information received in the district office, it appears that the company have been introducing outside labor in some of the departments. Each local union should therefore appoint pickets and make their investigations, and promptly send to this office written reports as to the results of these investigations as to outside labor doing any scabbing. Each local union will see that pickets do not interfere with company officials, and that there is a continuation of the good order that has prevailed and no destruction of public property.'

"In this very communication permitting the locals to picket, the tame executive again surround the picketing with all sorts of limitations. The company officials are not to be interfered with because the constitution allegedly prohibits interfering with company officials, but the union constitution also is against withdrawing the union maintenance men. Where ist he argument? It is only some more belly-crawling to a 'public opinion' that is killing the strike— to a government that is forging more iron shackles and chains for the workers.

Quit Class Collaboration.

"We say to the miners—for the sake of your women and children! For the sake of your organization! For your own sake! Give no quarter! No quarter will be given to you!

"Do the miners know that Father Nicholson of New Waterford informed their executive that McLurg, vice-president of Besco had made the statement to him that the corporation was thru with the United Mine Workers as an organization and that Besco was going to deal with the men in the pits as local committees.

"What does this mean but company unionism—but the open shop?

"A dirty game is being played at the expense of the miners.

"Miners of District 26: Picket the mines! The company officials included! Fight the slave act of your enemy Armstrong! Put no trust in class enemies! Make the executive quit its policy of class collaboration! Make it a real one hundred per cent strike.

STRIKE OF NEGRO NURSES AT NEW ORLEANS BACKED BY DOCTORS, WHO FILE CHARGE AGAINST WHITE BOSS

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 14.—The Negro student nurses have struck at the Flint-Coodridge Hospital operated here by the Negro division of the methodist episcopal church, and the Negro doctors of the institution have filed charges against Dr. T. Restin Heath, white head of the hospital, it has been disclosed.

Altho the hospital officials are suppressing publicity, it is learned that the student nurses struck against the intolerable conditions imposed on them. They complaint particularly of the poor food they are forced to eat.

The doctors filed the charges with the board of trustees of the church at Cincinnati, Ohio. Heath has been busy canvassing the local board of the trustees of the hospital here, composed of Negro ministers, and is endeavoring to line them up with him against the Negro doctors. He has had poor success so far.

One of the charges filed with the trustees by the doctors is that Heath called the doctors, "nigger doctors," in a staff meeting, and issued orders that they must not stop in the halls or be seen in front of the hospital. Another charge is that the superintendent refused to allow them to inspect the charts of patients who have been treated by white doctors without first obtaining permission of the white doctors.

The doctors declare they will resign 'unless conditions are bettered.

Houston Victims Still Imprisoned

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 14—In response to a letter from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, inquiring about the treatment of the former 24th infantrymen, transferred from Leavenworth penitentiary to the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Col. G. O. Cress, the commanding officer, states that their records continue good.

Col. Cress states that none of the men have been released on parole since their transfer from Leavenworth penitentiary. He continues:

"On the whole, the conduct of these men has been very satisfactory since their arrival here, and their records have been in keeping with the reports received from the federal penitentiary."

The N. A. A. C. P. is continuing its efforts for the release of the remaining prisoners and is leaving no stone unturned to procure fair treatment for them while their imprisonment endures.

Board Backs Building Taxes Bill.

The board of education endorsed the school revenue bill before the legislature which would permit the board to obtain by referendum vote an increase of 75 cents in the tax rate for building purposes and would add $12,000,000 to the present $18,000,000 construction budget of the Chicago school system.

JAPANESE REDS SPEAK AT M. E. CHURCH IN N. Y.

Tells of Communist International

NEW YORK, May 14—The Oriental branch of the Workers (Communist) Party, New York section, discussed Communism for an entire evening before the Japanese methodist episcopal church here. Comrade Kawashima spoke on the subject of The Workers Party of America, Its Principles and Tactics. Comrade Sasaki then spoke on the development of the world nad the Communist International.

There were ministers, secretaries of Y. M. C. A.'s, students of the Union Theological Seminary, and of Columbia University present. The religious atmosphere thus created by such an audience was ridiculed by the chairman, and was completely destroyed by Kawashima's introductory speech.

Discussion followed the speeches of the Communists. Russian conditions were fully explained by the two speakers. The ideology of Second International and the reformists was exposed by the speakers.

The meeting lasted until midnight. The Japanese newspaper in New York reported this meeting with a criticism of the Oriental brnach of the Japanese M. E. church, which conducted the discussion.

Wet Celebration of Lafayette's Visit.

HARRISBURG, Ill., May 14.— Two hundred gallons of pre-war whiskey and thirty-five gallons of alcohol, valued at $10,000 comprised the cache found in the hayloft of a barn near here by police early today.

The liquer was believed to have been stored for distribution at the 100th anniversary of Lafayette's landing at Shawneetown tomorrow.

MUSSOLINI RANTS AT COMMUNISM BUT BOWS TO POWER OF SOVIETS

MOSCOW, May 14.—As reported from Rome, the Il Popolo d'Italia, Mussolini's organ, has published an editorial under the title of "The Soviet Republic and Europe." Dwelling on the question of the relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Poland, the author of the article remarks that "It was the Bolshevist revolution of 1917 that gave the possibility of restoring 'greater Poland.'"

"However, the Poles themselves seem to fail to understand that if czarism had not been overthrown and had remained among the victors of of the so-called great war, Poland would have been quite a different state from what it actually became by virtue of the Versailles treaty."

"Thus, the existence of the Soviet order in the former Russian Empire, an order in which the Poles see or affect to see a danger to themselves, is in fact a blessing for them.

Must Deal With Russia

"Under such conditions, a hostile policy towards the Soviet republic, a policy carried on only because of the Soviet regime ruling in that republic, is an utterly absurd line of conduct. Everyone else in Europe has realized that by this time. Indeed, one may be perfectly assured of the economic and political prosperity of the Union of Soviet Republics, such a development being entirely in the interests of European countries, the industrial ones as well as those that possess a surplus of labor hands, as all such countries may find a way open for a mutually profitable exploitation."

The semi-official Italian organ concludes by stating that "the fact of consolidation of the Soviet regime with all the ensuing consequences makes it expedient for Italy to consider and explore, from the viewpoint of her own interests, all the possibilities of consolidating the good mutual relations with the great country united under the rule of the Soviet order."

Affects Italy Too

Commenting upon the above article, the Mondo, the organ of Mr. Nitti's democratic group, feigns genuine astonishment. "We have been accustomed to the fascist press warning us against the danger of Communist propaganda and other 'terrors,' but now it appears that, far from being a menace, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is an ideal for all Europe, including our own country.

"All this Mr. Mussolini's organ publishes under the guise of advices offered to Poland," but—rightly concludes the opposition organ—"all the views of the fascisti paper have a definite significance for Italy, too."

BUILDERS AT WORK

CHICAGO LEADS THE PARADE TODAY!

DETROIT, PHILADELPHIA AND GRAND RAPIDS RIGHT BEHIND

Grand Rapids Michigan has tossed its hat in the ring right with the big locals with seven subs sent in today after a week's free distribution. Here they are with the rest of the comrades who have sent in new subs to build "Our Daily" on May 13.

DETROIT, MICH.—A. E. Goetz (11)
CHICAGO, ILL.—Benjamin Maller (7); Sam Hammersmark (3)
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Eugene Bechtold (7).
PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Lena Rosenberg (7)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Ralph Kominsky (3)
CINCINNATI, OHIO.—L. A. Weeks
CLEVELAND, OHIO.—J. A. Hamilton; Paul Lukachie
PONTIAC, MICH.—B. Mircheff (2)
OMAHA, NEB.—David Coutts (2)
SOUTH BEND, IND.—A. E. Kirk
BOSTON, MASS.—Elsie Pultur
COLCHESTER, CONN.—Nathan Liverant.

NEW YORK BUILDERS, ATTENTION!

COMRADES GRECHT AND BEN LEVY—YOU ARE CALLED TO ACTION

This system of getting a sub and then calling another comrade to action is chock-full of possibilities. Many have been challenged and have responded nobly like the good Red Soldiers they are and went out to get new subs and GOT THEM.

Comrade Malkin of New York, a veteran Builder in getting subs, got another and with it challenges Comrade Rebecca Grecht to "go out and do likewise."

Comrade L. Cooper of the Williamsburg English branch is even more ambitious. He got two subs and issues a double challenge to Comrade Ben Levy of New York to get two also.

• • • •

Answer the challenge comrades and keep the ball rolling to bring more bricks to build a greater paper to help us build the Communist movement!

• • • •

Since the idea was first proposed by Comrade Shklar of Milwaukee, who got the habit from our comrades in Russia, challenges to get subs have been coming in a steady stream. Many have brought splendid results and the rest we are sure will respond before June 15.

If you have been successful in getting a sub (and for a Communist this job is a cinch!) send it in at once and call another Communist to action.

C'mon Over!

If you have a day, an hour, or a minute to spare—why, c'mon over. There is so much work piled up on the small force in our office that we need your help so very badly, to insert letters, address, seal and stamp envelopes and ever so many other little jobs that have us swamped. If you volunteer your services that's a fine way to help the DAILY WORKER. We'll be glad to see you—so just for fun, c'mon over!

PATRIOTIC WOMEN HIT AT AGAIN BY WOMEN'S COUNCIL

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 14—The American patriotic women were given a jolt when the international women's council in convention here voted to endorse the league of nations, the world court, disarmament and kindred projects. More ill feeling cropped up when they issued a statement charging the council with being merely the "propaganda agent" of the league.

"Members of the Daughters of the American Revolution," said Mrs. Harris, "have been trying since the convention began to promote ill feeling in the council itself over these resolutions."

Mrs. Harris also charged th daughters with "bad faith" in repudiating their contract to permit thei auditorium to be used by the council for its meeting.

"Three years ago Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the D. A. R. agreed to permit us to meet in thei memorial auditorium.

"Last October we were sudden notified we could not use it. The said our use of the hall would be 'inconvenient,' and gave no other explanation."

The council, she said, had lost because of the withdrawal of the hal approximately $2,000.

Mrs. Harris said officials of th council, to assure the D. A. R., tha no unpatriotic propaganda would occur during the meetings, had mor than one year in advance obtaine copies of speeches to be made at th present meeting, all of which wer found to be proper.

By a vote of 112 to 215 a motion fo affiliation with other international organizations of women was defeated. two-third majority was necessar under the council's constitution fo adoption. The names of about thirt international bodies that might affi ate were given.

The fight against affiliation was l by the American delegation. Pro Marian P. Whitney of Vassar colleg Poughkeepsie, N. Y. chairman of th council's education committee d clared affiliation with other intern tionals would make the council unwieldy organization.

The Flivver to the Rescue

The growers of apples have not yet learned to increase their sales by frightening the populace into devouring their product or else be devoured in turn by the "Bolshevik menace." They could argue that radicalism was caused by a nervous disorder which could be traced to eating an over-abundance of proteins and starches. Specialists in dilapidated human anatomies attribute most of our physical ills to ill-treatment of the boiler. Most of them agree that apple juice, when not aged, is a good lubricant.

An orderly stomach produces smiles instead of grouches, and who ever saw a cartoon of a smiling revolutionist in the capitalist press? Apples as a cure for Bolshevism. A slogan: "An apple a day will keep Communism away" would get babbits, labor fakers and all members and potential members of the ku klux klan eating up whole orchards. But the apple growers lack originality. Not so the flivver manufacturers.

George M. Graham, chairman of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, declares that the automobile is the greatest foe of Bolshevism in the United States. This should bounce the sale of tin lizzies over night. A capitalist editorial writer agrees.

It must be confessed the editor writes that the automobile has aided the devil considerably in his nefarious work. What is more conducive to sin, than a triangle composed of an auto, a male and a female of the human species parked in some shady lane out the ken of a ku klux klan dragon or a methodist minister? Without the auto youthful sinners might have to serve Satan precariously on a front porch lighted by an ubiquitious street lamp and within call of an easily angered and particular parent. But rapid travel stirs the blood and distance makes the heart grow fonder. Therefore many sermons have been preached on the evil results flowing from the increased sales of automobiles. So much so that automobile manufacturers have been obliged to pay the preachers handsomely to preach about something else.

But the automobile has redeemed itself. Not only does it tempt those of weak flesh to stray from the front parlor, but it also tempts the whole family to take excursions into the country.

Those excursions, says the worthy capitalist scribe are "soul expansive, wholly wholesome and enjoyable." His peroration is worth quoting in full:

"This sort of family life, of course, makes for contentment, and where there is family contentment there is community loyalty and countrywide patriotism. It is not in this sort of atmosphere that Bolshevism thrives. Therefore avaunt Bolshevism as a menace to Americanism!"

This may explain the gift of $1,500,000 given by the Ford family to the Y. M. C. A. recently. If the flivver is an antidote to Bolshevism, why should not the owners of the medicine fork up? When the masses are purchasing flying machines on the installment plan and take week-end trips to the North Pole, Bolshevism will be completely frozen out. When there are no unemployed and all workers are capitalists there will be less Bolshevism than ever. And when morons are not allowed to write editorials for capitalist papers, we may rest assured Bolshevism will no longer be a menace. No, Bolshevik professors will then be lecturing on the "Recent Collapse of Capitalism."

Charles Moyer, president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers is lining up with the labor fakers in Montana, who want to kill the lively little paper known as Great Falls Town Topics. The men Charles is now fighting helped to save his neck from getting dangerously stretched some years ago. But Charlie's memory is even shorter than his neck, tho his conscience is more elastic than either.

Karl Kautsky has written another book in which he vomits every revolutionary idea he ever entertained. The renegade tries to dismiss the Russian revolution in the first chapter, but it keeps bobbing up in the rest of the book. Kautsky says it is our business to help capitalism transform itself into socialism. We might as well try helping a pole cat to transform itself into a lily.

Harriot Stanton Blatch, writing in a New York socialist paper, not the official organ of the General Electric company, congratulated the German people on the election of Hindenburg. He is a fine fellow, she says, and the women like him. It looks that way. So do the socialists, men and women.

The Seattle Union Record commends the meeting of capitalists and labor fakers with a view to solving the problem of waste in industry. Capital idea, says the Record. Yes, for the capitalists.

A Wise Fool Speaketh

It is said somewhere in the bible that the "truth shall be spoken out of the mouths of fools." Perhaps in biblical days as today only those to whom truth was dearer than material success said what they wanted to say instead of what should be said. The biblical quotation above seems to fit the case of William Jennings Bryan versus evolution.

The perennial candidate for the presidency has entered the lists against the teaching of evolution in the public schools.

The specific object of attack from the leader of the Neanderthalers is a Dayton, Tennessee, schoolteacher who purposely violated a state law against the teaching of evolution in order to test the strength of the moron element and their right to block the advance of freedom of thought.

William Jennings Bryan is what the title of this editorial designates, a "wise fool." He has made millions peddling his religious hokum and Florida real estate. God has been good to him in the way of making a living, so he stands by his friend. And he speaks the truth at least once, when he stated that "the hand that writes the teachers' pay check rules the schools."

Upton Sinclair, expert on pedagogical goose and gosling factories, never hit the nail on the head with more unerring aim than did Bryan on this occasion. The capitalist class in the industrial centers do not particularly care whether the product of their universities believes in one god, half a dozen or in a hole in the wall, provided they understand chemistry and other sciences needed in runing industry profitably. But to the witch hunting Southern brain, the odor from the burning flesh of a heretic is like incense to the nostrils.

Education under the capitalist system will be the kind that finds favor in the eyes of those who foot the bills, who as Bryan puts it write the teacher's pay check. There is an object lesson for workers' education here, which should not be lost on the radical movement. They who pay the piper can call the tune. The workers cannot expect to be told their place in society by college professors paid by the money of a Rockefeller, a Ford or a Gary any more than they can expect to be told the truth about the bible in schools supervised by medieval relics like William Jennings Bryan. The workers must own and control their own schools.

The Kaiser Is Next?

Field Marshal von Hindenburg is at last installed president of the German republic. The leader of the kaiser's armies during the most critical period of the world war, now occupies the wing in the imperial palace where the "Iron Chancellor" Bismarck once made his plans to forge the scattered states into the empire which staked its existence on the flash of the sword in 1914.

Hindenburg, one of the kaiser's closest friends, now sits in the chair vacated by the traitor Ebert. There is nothing now left of the German republic but its name. The monarchists are not acting precipitately. They have probably read the history of the French revolution to good advantage. Hindenburg can play the role of "First Consul" for a while and gradually prepare the masses for the return of the Hohenzollerns.

Democrats, socialists, centrists, catholics, nationalists and fascists—all join in paying tribute to the "sterling character" of von Hindenburg. Only the Communists provide a genuine opposition. No sooner was Hindenburg elected than the Communists issued an appeal to the followers of the socialist party to join in a united front campaign against monarchism and its allies. Against the dictatorship of the capitalists and their Hindenburgs, Marxs and Brauns, the Communists advanced the slogan of a workers' and peasants' government.

Hindenburg may prove to be the entering wedge for the return of the kaiser to the throne. The social-democrats have succeeded in demoralizing the German masses sufficiently to make the restoration a probable success. For generations led to believe that the socialists once in power would prove a real government of the toilers, the German workers learned that Ebert and his gang were but the servile tools of big capital. In their desperation a large number of them turned to the monarchists.

This is the result of the social-democratic policy in Germany. They have betrayed the workers and betrayed the republic, which was never anything but the tool of the capitalist and landowning classes. Ebert kept the president chair warm for von Hindenburg. The latter will hold his seat until the kaiser turns it into a throne.

The only party in Germany today that carries the banner of the class war against collaboration with capitalism and monarchism is the Communist Party. It has not yet secured the leadership over a majority of the workers. But its propaganda and the conditions forced on the German workers by their masters will accomplish that aim.

It is rumored that a certain judge who is all het up over radicals having ulterior designs on the capitalist constitution, confiscates dice preparatory to using them in a crap game. He is alleged to spend his salary on booze and cannot afford to invest in gambling machinery. It is also reported that he auctions off the dice after he is thru with them.

Now that Coolidge has joined the anti-rum allies we may see the cider industry take a jump, and Vermont chin whiskers wiggle as they have not done in years. Coolidge is strong for home industry.

Inspiration for the Struggle - By Max Bedacht

The years immediately preceding the revolutionary period of 1848 were years of indescribable political misery in Germany. Its several dozens of miniature monarchs were just that many bulwarks of reaction, so much so, that even thinking of a political change was regarded as a major crime and prosecuted as such. It is true there existed a budding capitalist class which dreamt of a unified nation and that possessed aspirations toward acquiring the political rule over this nation. But the behavior of the German bourgeoisie towards its hereditary parasitical princelings has ever been characterized by cowardice, and this cowardice enhanced by fear of the independent revolutionary ambitious of the newly developing proletariat, resulted in the bourgeoisie never permitting its dreams to become inspirations to action. And even when in an unguarded moment they were drawn into the turmoil of the revolutionary struggles in the days of March, 1848, the bourgeois quickly became frightened by their own courage and repaid in decades of slavish servility for the moments of insubordination.

In this stifling atmosphere of pre-revolutionary Germany it was impossible for men with spirit and intelligence to live. For the privilege of thinking, speaking or writing, the best men of the nation paid the price of exile in this period. One need only mention the names of Karl Marx and Heinrich Heine as examples.

During this epoch when the old semi-feudal order in Germany was pregnant with the new, capitalist order, revolutionary thinking was not confined solely to the proletarian elements. The revolutionary circles of German refugees in the large cities of Europe, in Brussels, Paris, London, were therefore by no means heterogenous groups. Alongside of the proletarian elements, the revolutionary bourgeois intellectuals were quite numerous. Among the proletarian elements it was the most intelligent and most advanced itinerary journeymen (Handwerksburschen), that dominated. This class, not yet fully proletarianized, had developed its own ideology which found its clearest expression in the theories of one of their number, Wilhelm Weitling, a journeyman tailor.

These groups of emigrant revolutionists developed the queerest ideas and programs for their circle. The socialist ideas of the ingenious journeyman tailor, Weitling, the teachings and preachings of the revolutionary bourgeois intellectuals in their midst, the influence of the labor movement in the countries in which they lived, like that of the Chartist movement in England and of the Proudhonists or the Blanquists in France—all these together resulted in a theoretical mess extremely conducive to fruitless squabbles that were barren of all practical results and revolutionary activity.

Such were the conditions that prevailed in the circles of revolutionary proletarian emigrants from Germany in Brussels, in Paris and in London in 1847. Repeated attempts were made to unite these groups organizationally, these efforts culminating finally in the organization of the "League of Communists," in 1846. In converting these clubs of philosophizing, debating and quarrelling emigrants into active revolutionary organizations with proletarian predominance, Marx and Engels were tirelessly active. Marx later wrote about these activities as follows:

"We published simultaneously a number of partly printed and partly lithographed pamphlets, in which we subjected the mixture of French-English socialism, Communism and German philosophy which at that time represented the secret principles of the league to a merciless criticism; in place of this we tried to spread a scientific understanding of the economic structure of bourgeois society as the only firm theoretical basis, and finally we explained in a popular manner that the question is not the establishment of some Utopian system, but the conscious participation in the historic process of change of society that takes place before our very eyes."

This positive criticism found a ready echo in the league. In January, 1847, its central bureau, in London, dispatched some representatives to Brussels to invite Marx and Engels to join the league. With the development of a more lucid understanding by the members and the clarification of the purpose of the league itself, the need for a unifying program became daily more obvious. Marx's indefatigable efforts in Brussels soon succeeded in transforming the Brussels organization into a proletarian revolutionary club. Engels, meanwhile, had gone to Paris, where old revolutionary illusions and new illusionary theories had created a most disastrous ideological chaos in the heads of the members of the league. Engels did his best to disentangle the prevailing confusion.

In an attempt to give the League of Communists a clear program, the London committee prepared a draft entitled, "Confession of Faith," and sent it to the affiliated clubs for discussion. This draft also reached Paris, where Moses Hess, a "philosophical" socialist, made what he thought were improvements and prevailed upon the Paris club to accept this document. But in a later meeting the decision was reversed. Engels writes about the incident in a letter to Marx, dated November, 10, 1847:

"I have played an infernal trick on Most (Moses Hess). He had forced thru a ludicrously improved 'Confession of Faith.' Last Friday I took it up in our circle and criticized question after question. Before I had gone thru half of them our people declared themselves satisfied. Without opposition I then had a motion passed instructing me to draft a new one."

Meantime a congress had been called of the League of Communists to meet in London on November 30, 1847. The purposes of the gathering were to work out a constitution for the league and to adopt a program. In preparation for this, Marx who came to London for this congress from Brussels, and Engels, who represented the group of Paris, had written separate drafts of such a program. Engels evidently had used as a basis for this draft the one that he had prepared in compliance with the instructions given by the Paris league. On November 24, 1847, Engels wrote to Marx:

"You had better consider this 'Confession of Faith' somewhat. I think we had better drop that catechism form and call the thing 'Communist Manifesto'; for inasmuch as it must deal more or less with history, the previously accepted style does not fit at all. I'll bring with me the one that I made here. . . I begin: What is Communism? And then right after the proletariat, origin, difference from former workers, development of antagonisms between proletariat and bourgeoisie, crises, conclusions. In between a number of minor points and finally the policies of the Communists. This one from here has not yet been submitted for adoption; but I think nothing is contained in it against our views."

This last sentence seems to indicate that Engels' draft made for the London conference is that same one prepared by him for the Parisian league, while the first part of the letter suggests that there was an understanding between the two friends to make individual drafts for the London gathering and that the form of a catechism should be followed by both.

The "Principles of Communism" herewith published for the first time in English evidently represents the draft of Engels. The manuscript written in German was found among Engels' posthumous papers.

We know now the final and classical form which the program of the Communists took when it was published ultimately as the "Communist Manifesto." However, the world fame that this document has achieved does not in the least lessen the value of the Engels' draft.

The Communist Manifesto is a carefully prepared document. Each one of its sentences stands out like a work of art hewn in granite. Altho a document prepared for the political struggles of the hour of its publication and tho dealing with problems characteristic of a period long past, the manifesto is not only a historic document but also a timely source of inspiration for the struggles of today.

The draft of Engels is a manuscript written on the spur of the moment and was never put into final form for publication. Yet we find in it a clear outline of the ideas and gems of historical analysis in which the manifesto excells. The Engels' draft is proof that the Communist Manifesto is truly the result of the combined efforts of thhe great intellectual heroes of scientific Communism: Marx and Engels.

The draft, as contained in the discovered manuscript is not complete. Question No. 9 is unanswered. Questions twenty-two and twenty-three are answered with a remark referring to an earlier manuscript, and as no such manuscript could be found, these questions remain unanswered. For the sake of completeness we will supply, in an appendix, answers to these questions based upon the writings of Frederich Engels or from the Communist Manifesto.

For the convenience of the readers, and to make possible a clear understanding, a number of explanatory notes have been prepared and printed in the appendix. Clarifying interjections in the text, set in parenthesis, are supplied by the translator.

SOME time ago, the DAILY WORKER carried a story of the kidnaping of Harry Pollit, leader of the British Minority Movement, by a gang of fascisti. The minority movement in England is the prototype of the Trade Union Educational League in the United States. When Pollit's kidnapers were brot to trial they were acquitted by the court despite overwhelming evidence that they had violated the law which the British ruling class is supposed to be so particular about. This miscarriage of "justice" so outraged British labor that even a reactionary like C. T. Cramp, industrial general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, wrote to the London Daily Herald protesting against the verdict.

HIS letter is herewith published as a sidelight on the difference between the official leadership of the labor movement in England and in the United States. Can you imagine William Green or John L. Lewis writing a letter like the following, when William Z. Foster was kidnaped by the cossacks of Pat Hamrock in Colorado a few years ago?

THE Daily Herald: "I am in complete agreement with your leader of Saturday. On the subject of trade union methods, Mr. Pollitt and myself are in profound disagreement, but I wish to say with emphasis that, whatever may be the views of Mr. Pollitt, every effort should be made to see that he receives elementary justice in precisely the same way that every citizen has a right to claim. If hooligans are to be allowed the privilege of physical force while other citizens are to be condemned for merely advocating the same thing, a very serious position arises, in which very wide public issues are involved. I do not know what legal remedy is now open to Mr. Pollitt as against this iniquitous verdict, but I certainly believe no means should be left untried to obtain a reversal of the same. If necessary, I should be prepared to subscribe to any fund which may be opened to carry this matter further.—C. T. Cramp, Industrial General Secretary, National Union of Railwaymen, London, N.W. 1."

Do Some Militant Decorating at the T.U.E.L. Picnic, May 30

If you miss that T. U. E. L. picnic on Decoration Day, Saturday, May 30, you are just naturally throwing away a big time. If you must decorate something on this day, come out with the rest of the folks aand help decorate Aldenheim Grove. Get a ticket from any live wire and come early.

Ball game, bowling, swings for the youngsters, merry-go-round, singing societies and races galore. Yes, and dancing to the music of Mitchell's orchestra.

If, after the day is over and you are ready to go home, you think you haven't had the biggest 50c worth of your life, just tell the committee and see what happens to you.

Our Readers' Views

Worker Loses Hand.

Editor the DAILY WORKER:—In view of the fact that despite the letters received from Soviet land by the DAILY WORKER, the yellow socialists still claim that the American worker is better off than the Russian worker, therefore, I have decided to send your column the facts of an incident in the shipping room where I work in New York City, the financial metropolis of the capitalist world.

One of the recently invented machines which altho it lightens the labor of the toiler nevertheless thru the anti-social use to which it is put, in the end hurts the workers, is the stripping and nailing machine which nails and strips cases automatically.

While working at this machine my mate threw on the power accidently whereupon the trigger which drives the nails began to shoot out nails. I immediately jumped but had both of my thumbs hurt anad barely escaped losing them entirely.

The other worker obeying the slavish ideology inculcated into him by the schools of the masters attempted to stop the machine and as a result of his attempt to save his master's property, lost his right hand and the ring finger of his left hand. He is twenty-six years of age aand has only been married for seven months. All he received from his grateful master was the regular workmen's compensation of four hundred dollars.

Brothers, compare this with the status of the Russian workers and ask yourselves if it is worthwhile to keep on selling our birthright, the earth, for a mess of pottage, a fair day's pay.

Fraternally yours,
Israel I. Hurwitz, New York City.

NEW MOVE TO BETRAY RAIL LABOR

Washington Gets Ready For Big Coal Strike

COOLIDGE THREATENS TO BREAK STRIKE OF ANTHRACITE MINERS TO AID OPERATORS' WAGE CUT

WASHINGTON, May 15.—President Coolidge and his cabinet are frankly concerned over the possibility of a strike in the anthracite coal fields when the present wage agreement between the operators and the United Mine Workers expires August 30, it was learned today.

The possibility of a strike hinges on the announced intention of the miners to ask for an increase of from 10 to 30 per cent over the present scale, while the operators are expected to insist upon a reduction of anywhere from 10 to 30 per cent. The miners also undoubtedly will include a demand for the "check off" which provides for the withholding of union dues from the pay envelopes of the men. The "check off" strengthens the union's hands and the operators will fight against it.

Coolidge Anxious to Break Another Strike.

The government will closely watch the wage negotiations and if a deadlock ensues, undoubtedly will take active measures to break the strike of the miners in the hard coal regions.

The first step in the negotiations will be taken late in June, when the tri-district convention of the United Mine Workers meets in Scranton, Pa., to frame the demands to be submitted to the operators. The latter will then hold their policy meeting and formulate the action they propose to take when the two contending groups meet in some "neutral" point, probably Atlantic City, about July 15, to begin the negotiation of a new wage agreement.

Bosses Preparing.

In anticipation of a possible strike of hard coal miners after August 30, production is now nearly touching the two million ton a week mark. It has been rising steadily since the week of April 18, when it was 1,567,000 tons. During the week of May 2, production reached 1,984,000 tons, making a total of 29,752,000 tons for the calendar year to date. Production of bituminous to date is approximately 164,475,000 tons.

Operators in Strike Talk.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 15.—If anthracite miners ask more wages in the coming negotiations for a new agreement there is likely to be a strike, Walter G. Merritt, counsel to anthracite operators conference and probable chairman of the operators' wage committee in dealings with the union, told the National Coal Merchants' Association.

PEOPLE who could not solve the riddle why Victor Berger continues putting out such intellectual hokum in his daily column in the Milwaukee Leader, may set their minds on some worthier problem, such as cross-word puzzling, provided they read a recent contribution on the art of eating. Unless we are misinformed, Victor should be testifying as an expert on this question. What appeals to us most is the confession that "the greattrouble in our country is—we are eating too much." It is said that "a good confession is good for the soul." Let us hope Berger goes on a long, long fast.

IF Berger takes the advice of "cer[illegible] wise teachers" whose pupils have benefited from fasting to such an extent that "at the end of a few days their minds had become so clarified that facts they could not grasp before were easily understood." Perhaps there is hope for Berger. If he stops gorging himself for a few months he may be able to understand the difference between a government owned and controlled by the revolutionary workers like that of Soviet Russia and a government owned and controlled by the capitalists such as the United States government.

JOKING aside, it seems to us that more people die in the United States from lack of food than because of surfeiture. The rich may die of overeating. That is not our worry. The poor, are undernourished, because they have not the money to buy good food. The food faddists would have us believe that the whole social problem could be solved by eating garlic and onions or nuts and tomatoes. But fatigue and worry about loss of unemployment and other evils of the capitalist system do more to poison the human system than large gobs of hamburger steak, frankfurters and sauerkraut or Boston baked beans and fat pork.

SOUTH AFRICA must have an evil-looking collection of snakes when such an experienced veteran snake charmer as the Prince of Wales was horrified at the sight of a snake park filled with the squirming reptiles. The prince braved the snakes of Long Island, New York. He even got away from Chicago with a whole skin even tho it was full. But the spiritual pabulum produced in South Africa must be the real McCoy. When Edward P. saw the snake garden he exclaimed: "'Tis very like my idea of hell."

GERMAN TEXTILE BOSSES ATTACK 8-HOUR DAY RULE

Start of Reaction Under Hindenburg

BERLIN, May 15.—Chemnitz textile manufacturers have introduced a 53-hour working week.

This action is considered in trade circles here to bear out the views of German industrialists who believe that the dominance of the labor unions may be curtailed under the Hindenburg regime.

Curbing of the unions' power, they assert, would presage the institution of a longer working week and the imposition of increased discipline, resulting in the reduction of prices and a consequent increase in export trade.

Chemnitz manufacturers are doing a big American business in gloves and hosiery. Otherwise, American textile orders are practically nil. There are but few American buyers in Germany at present.

ARBITRATION AGAIN BETRAYS A TEXTILE WORKERS' STRIKE

PITTSFIELD, May 15.—Recommendation of a 4 per cent wage cut instead of the 10 per cent cut against which the workers of Monument mills in Houseatonic struck is the thanks the workers get for allowing the board of arbitration to enter the controversy.

Former U. S. Senator David I. Walsh, William H. Heffernan of Housatonic and Edward Kelly, mill representative, were the three arbitrators. Heffernan was the textile union's representative.

"Bill" Lee, Capitalist "Labor Leader," Proposes To Turn Railroad Unions Into "Company" Unions

Unity of Workers Against Companies, or Unity of Leaders with Capitalists, Is the Great Issue

Statement of the Trade Union Educational League.

The proposal of W. G. Lee, of the Brotherhode of Railway Trainmen, that all rail unions meet in conferenc efor collaboration with the railway corporations, told about in an adjoining column of this issue of the DAILY WORKER, has resulted in the following spirited statement from the national committee of the Trade Union Educational League. It reads:

• • • •

WM. G. LEE, chief of the Trainmen's Union, has announced that he is inviting a conference to meet in Cleveland on June 28th.

The composition of this gathering is announced to be the chiefs of the 16 standard railroad unions, together with the executives of 200 railroads of the "Class I" group.

Its purpose is announced to be the welding together of capital and labor so tightly that there can be no more strikes on the railroads.

• • • •

THE Trade Union Educational League denounces this move, on the part of the notorious Lee, as a deliberate and public attempt to transform the figthing organizations of the railroad workers into company unions.

This is but another one, among a host, of schemes to take away from the railroad workers their most precious possession—the right to strike—without which they are left powerless in dealing with the greedy railroad executives.

It is another institution, following the lines of the infamous Civic Federation, the so-called "B. & O. plan" sponsored by Wm. H. Johnston, and the outspoken policy of class collaboration enunciated by Gompers in Portland and El Paso, and continued by Green, his successor. Under the poisonous influence of these policies and institutions, the trade unions, especially on the railroads, are being demoralized and broken up, and wages and working conditions are being made the playthings of the railroad executives.

IT is not an accident that the public announcement of Lee's plan in the capitalist press is accompanied by strong expressions of approval from railroad executives. It is their plan, devised in their interests, and striking at the heart of the railroad unions, whose power they fear and hate. For the very reason the railroad presidents greet the proposal joyfully, the railroad workers must fight against it, and must demand that their officials repudiate it.

Neither is it an accident that it is Wm. G. Lee who has been chosen by the railroad presidents to launch their plan. Lee is the man who broke the strike of 1922 by the organized use of union men as scabs. But recently Lee was announced by the capitalist press as having become the president of a great corporation that manufactures railroad equipment. In his policies, in his ideas and in his material interests, Lee belongs to the class of railroad capitalists and not the railroad workers.

LEE'S proposal is put forward in the name of unity of all railroad workers' unions. But what kind of unity does he propose? LEE PROPOSES UNITY WITH AND UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF THE RAILROAD CORPORATION PRESIDENTS!

The slimy hypocricy of using the term "unity" to describe Lee's plan can be fully realized only when his long record of disruption, organized scabbing, and cultivation of craft jealousy and division, is remembered. On the list of

'NO STRIKES!' IS 'SCABBY' BILL LEE'S MOTTO

Trainmen's Head to Call Conference

William G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, known among railroaders as "Scabby Bill" has announced his intention to issue a call for what is characterized as the biggest get-together conference between workers and employers in the railroad industry ever held in the United States.

Invitations will be sent out, Lee announces, to twenty rail labor organizations and to the executives of every big railroad in the United States, for a meeting which is scheduled to take place in Cleveland on June 29. Whether the invitations will be sent out or not is a problematical matter.

The following rail unions are invited:

Order of Railway Conductors.

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

Switchmen's Union of North America.

Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of North America.

International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America.

Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance.

International Association of Machinists.

International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers.

Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen of America.

United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes.

Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes.

Brotherhood of Stationery Firemen and Oilers.

Order of Railroad Telegraphers.

The Big Boss.

Lee has appointed himself chairman of the proposed meeting in Cleveland. He named Bruce V. Crandall of Chicago, an executive of the Western Railway Club, as secretary of the movement. That Lee's action has been taken on the instruction of railroad executives is easily inferred from the enthusiastic way in which Lee's announcement has been received by railroad officials.

The leaders of the railroad brotherhoods are as reactionary and conservative as can be found in the United States, but "Scabby Bill" Lee is too filthy even for them.

Lee and Warren Stone of the locomotive engineers have conducted a

'DEFENSE DAY' KILLED TO KEEP WORKERS ON JOB

Cal Guards Profits of Big Business

WASHINGTON, May 15.— When war department officials thot up the scheme of turning Armistice Day into a regular annual military mobilization or national defense demonstration they did not let President Coolidge know of it until they had given it to the public. Now Coolidge says, thru his mythical spokesman, that he does not approve because such days are costly to business. They force factories to shut down, stores to close professional men to neglect their regular duties They cost a lot of money directly as well as thru loss of production and service.

President Coolidge believes it means one less working day for business, with the inevitable loss of that much profit by every capitalist. Just after his message has been delivered by Ambassador Houghton to the governing politicans of Europe, that American loans cannot be made for further war preparations over there, lest they start fighting and destroy the security for the many billions already loaned to them, this mobilization day scheme comes as a most unhappy inspiration.

Of course the White House will remain open to persuasion by practical men. If Dwight Morrow, of Morgan and Co., and Secy. Mellon should jointly advise him that an annual mobilization day is good insurance of the institutions of private monopoly, he would listen. If they should hold that it is worth its cost to big business, in its indirect intimidation of the workers and in its stimulation of the power of the special privilege caste, he might be converted. All of his instinct for economy did not prevent him from sending the great fleet to Hawaii and Australia.

Referendum on Dry Question.

OSLO, Norway, May 15.—The Norwegian government, after five years of prohibition, has introduced a bill providing for a referendum next year.

STATE POLICE OF W. VA. ARREST 138 PICKETS IN MASS TERROR AS NON-RESISTANT STRIKE WEAKENS

FAIRMONT, W. Va., May 15.—Operators and mine workers' leaders alike surveyed the northren West Virginia coal fields today to ascertain what effect, if any, local number 4009 withdrawal from the strike will have on the morale of the hundreds of miners who walked out April 1. There were 138 pickets arrested here Wednesday, including eleven women.

Operators were jubilant over the Shinnston, W. Va., union's action in handing in its charter and offering to negotiate a new wage scale. They hailed this as their first outstanding victory in the present industrial war.

In union circles, however, there was no concern on the surface at least. Strike leaders explained that the Shinnston local represented only a very small part of the miners on strike, and that their withdrawal could not be taken as a criterion of sentiment among the rank of the strikers.

Lack of Spirit in Leaders.

A letter from Shinnston to a Fairmont miner tells the tragic story of why the Shinnston miners are surrendering. In essence it is that they are beaten by the lack of fighting spirit of the U. M. W. leadership, which actually punishes any militant miner who attempts effective picketing. Bittner has paralyzed the strike by his order to "co-operate with the sheriffs and obey every law and every order" of the operator-controlled state police. The Shinnston miner says:

"The international officer addressed the crowd of miners and told them, 'Go out every morning on the picket line and talk to the men; tell them they are taking bread away from

PICKETING BEGUN AT LAST AT COLLIERIES OF BESCO THE BRUTAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, May 15.—Picketting of the collieries of the British Empire Steel corporation was commenced here by representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, in an endeavor, it was stated, to ascertain the number of bona fide officials engaged in the work of maintaining the mines which have been idle since March 6 owing to a wage dispute involving 12,000 miners. Company officials, it was added, would not be interfered with, but others would be invited to refrain from protective work.

REPUBLICAN PROMISES TO WORKERS FORGOTTEN IN ILL. LEGISLATURE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 15.—Failure after much maneuvering to pass the women's 8-hour bill in the Illinois lower house is regarded as the death of such legislation this session. Like the defeated injunction limitation measure it was a republican platform pledge.

LANDLORDS KEEP UP HIGH RENTS DESPITE EMPTIES

Survey Shows Gouging of Tenants

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 15.—Although there is a surplus of vacant houses now existing in Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Housing Association reports that there is little hope of more houses at low rental so that Philadelphia workers, including the doubly crowded Negroes, must remain congested.

Out of 486 houses vacant and for rent only 73 rent for less than $30 a month; 286 rent for from $30 to $50. And of these lower-rent houses almost half, the association declares, were found to be in poor or bad state of repair, many with grave nuisance conditions within the dwelling.

Most of the vacant houses had been left by tenants because landlords refused to make repairs or neglected the property's upkeep. The survey covered 63,118 residences in 15 industrial areas.

STEEL WORKERS FIGHT TO FREE RED SOLDIERS

Ex-Service Men Form Protest Organization

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 15.—Ex-servicemen amongst the steel workers are being told about the imprisonment of soldiers Crouch and Trumbull of the Hawaiian Communist League and with few exceptions the former servicemen are indignant over the unfairness of the court martial and the long terms of imprisonment meted out to these buck privates for giving expression to their political beliefs.

A temporary committee with Jos. A. Winters, Box 852, Youngstown, O., as chairman, has been appointed to carry on the local fight in behalf of Crouch and Trumbull and the committee would like to get in touch with other ex-servicemen and extend their campaign.

Resolutions should be presented in all veteran organizations, labor unions, fraternal organizations in which ex-servicemen are members, calling for a congressional investigation of the court martial that convicted the soldier members of the Hawaiian Communist League and that Crouch and Trumbull be immediately released and restored to full citizenship of which the dishonorable discharge deprives them.

The committee would like to get into communication with former members of the Siberian and North Russian expeditionary forces.

FINNISH GOVERNMENT ORDERS LIQUIDATION OF LABOR PARTIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 15.—The Finnish government has ordered the liquidation of 300 branches of the labor parties, and has announced that charges will be brought against 2,000 officials and members, dispatches reaching here state.

The instruction for the assault on the labor parties are contained in a letter by the minister of the interior to the governors.

TWELVE TEXTILE STRIKE PICKETS ARRESTED AT WILLIMANTIC; 2,200 STRIKERS STAND FIRM TEN WEEKS

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., May 15.—In spite of the importation of state police to protect, the employers said, the reopening of the American Thread Co.'s Willimantic mill, none of the 2,200 strikers returned to work. Twelve of the strikers were arrested when they were picketing the mill.

The mill owners failed to win any strikers back into the mills altho the strike is in its tenth week and no strikebreakers could be brought in. City officials are denying to the United Textile Workers' Union that they asked for state police to assist the local force on duty at the mill.

COMMUNIST PARTY RALLIES THE FRENCH WORKERS AGAINST DRIVE OF IMPERIALISTS IN MOROCCO

PARIS, France, May 15.—The Communist Party of France has appealed to the workers to refuse to fight the Riffian workers of Morocco.

The statement of the Communist Party demands that the campaign of the French imperialists in North Africa shall cease immediately, that the French young workers who have been sent into Morocco to slaughter and be slaughtered by the Riffians in order to make secure the French mining interests in Morocco be brought home.

The socialists, as usual, have to date made no active protest against the foreign invasion of the French army. They have been content to "withhold support" in parliament when appropriations were voted for the bloody Morocco campaign. But they are participating in the Painleve government, which is sending 100,000 French workers to suppress the colonial workers.

Meanwhile the Riffians are concentrating large forces in the Chechouan district. The neutral tribes in that district have joined Abd-el-Krim in the fight to save their native soil from the foreign foe.

Painleve Works for Capitalists.

Premier Painleve has sent all available troops to Morocco. Three hundred airplanes are now dropping bombs on the Riffian natives. The French attackers are under the command of Marshal Lyautey, military dictator of French Morocco. In the past week, colonial troops stationed in France have ben sent across the Mediterranean into Africa, and the metropolitan regiments have now been instructed to follow.

Painleve is attempting to justify the attack by stating that the slightest set back at the hands of the Moroccans migh mean a general revolt against the French occupation of the north African territories.

The Moroccans have been oppressed by the French military dictatorship because of the valuable natural resources in Morocco, which are being exploited by French capitalists.

The workers are being slaughtered to protect the property of these imperialists, which was stolen from the native Africans, the Communists point out.

SOVIET OIL INDUSTRY EXPANDS; EXPORTS OVER PRE-WAR, SAYS REPORT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.—Oil exports from Soviet Russia have doubled since last year, and are now greater than in 1913, says the Russian Information Bureau. Newly installed apparatus includes $1,000,000 worth of machinery purchased in the United States. A new pipeline from the Caspian to the Black Sea is under construction, to connect Baku with Batum.

Demand Children Work Overtime.

DETROIT, Mich., May 15—Two 16-year old boys employed at the Briggs Manufacturing company, Hamtramck plant in this city, on their first day at work were ordered by Mr. Frank, the foreman, to work overtime. They worked eleven hours that day, the regular hours of work in that plant. The boys said they couldn't work overtime as they had a long distance to travel home and they had to get to bed early to get back to the job on time the next day. Besides they were too young to work overtime. They were promptly told to get out and never to come back again.

Another Ship Scandal Brewing

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The proposal of Chairman T. V. O'Connor of the United States Shipping Board to sell four hundred of the government war time ships to Henry Ford brought on another row today among members of the board.

Various shades of opinion were expressed, one of the most outspoken members being Commissioner F. I. Thompson, who asserted that the governmentshould not sell the ships to Ford or anyone else.

Jersey Bakers Settle Strike

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 15.—Jewish bakery employes in Atlantic City settled their week's strike with a six-day week and $60 minimum wage which was formerly paid for seven days work.

STRIKE OF 1200 NEGRO STUDENTS ENDS WHEN DRILL RULE IS LIFTED

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.—The strike of the 1,200 Negro students of the government-supported Howard University was settled following a five-day suspension of all classes, when the faculty agreed to suspend the rule aglanst which the students rebelled.

The rule decreed that all students who missed twenty of the compulsory military drill classes would be expelled.

The faculty agreed to suspend the rule pending the consideration of its abrogation. The faculty also agreed to consider the other demand of the striking Negro students—that control of all social activities be placed in the hands of the student council.

your children and wives. But, boys, obey the law!'

Just Marching Not Effective.

"I myself went out several mornings to Killarm mine, but the blockheads, you can't tell them anything. If we march every day in the year on the picket line it is not going to do any good—not marching alone and with hands empty.

"State police are standing on the picket line to see that the scabs enter the mine safely. If a union man calls the scabs—'Hello scab!' he is right there handcuffed. And the rest of the union miners see what is going on but dare not open their mouths, even, while their brother is being arrested.

"And where is this from? It is from the fakers who tell the miners who want to fight, who must fight—'Boys keep order and peace. Don't violate the law!'"

Cossacks Arrest Pickets En Masse.

State police and deputy sheriffs today arrested 127 men and eleven women near the New England Fuel and Transportation company mine at Grant Town, on charges of intimidating miners employed by the company. Police said they were union miners and sympathizers and were picketing the mine, which has been operating on a nonunion basis.

They were brought to Fairmont and committed to the city and county jails pending a hearing.

A Taste of Capitalist Dictatorship.

The arrests followed Judge L. S. Schwenck's charge to a grand jury yesterday, in which he said that while workingmen had the right to combine for their mutual advantage and protection, their rights must not conflict with the rights of ohers. He defined picketing, adding that he believed that more than three persons, congregated for such purpose, constituted a violation of a state law prohibiting intimidation of workmen.

running fight against each for several years and only recently Lee circulated thousands of copies of the United Mine Workers' report on the scab Coal Rivers collieries of the locomotive engineers of which Stone is general manager. It is not likely that Stone, clever political faker that he is, will allow Lee to take his place in the sun and snatch the leadership of the railway organizations away from him.

Calls Lee Stool.

In the current issue of the Switchmen's Magazine, T. Cashen, head of the switchmen, charges Lee with being a stoolpigeon, with hiring stoolpigeons to spy on members of the trainmen's union and with strikebreaking. Cashen cites documentary proof of the truth of his charges. In view of the fact that Lee is held in such bad odor by the other brotherhoods; that he has refused to participate in wage agreements with the engineers, firemen and conductors, or in the deceased conference for progressive political action, it is very unlikely that his proposed conference will come to anything except a place on the front page of the newspapers for the scabbiest labor faker in America, William G. Lee.

Lee has been the most brazen advocate of class collaboration in the railroad unions. But he has seen alleged radicals like William Johnston and Warren S. Stone, burst into the limelight and into the inner sanctums of the employers with practical plans for collaboration between the workers and their masters. This would never do for Bill, who felt that it was only a question of time when his hated rival Stone would call a conference such as Lee has now proposed. He tried to beat them to it.

ATTACK ON HARD COAL MINERS BY BOSSES BEGINS

Wage Agreement Ends on August 30

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 15.—The attack of the coal operators on the coal miners' union was continued at the convention of the National Coal Merchants' Association, when Walter Gordon Merritt, counsel for the anthracite coal operators' association, declared that increases in wages would be denied the anthracite miners and a reduction in wages would be attempted. The agreement between the coal operators and the miners' union, covering the anthracite fields, expires on August 30.

"The anthracite coal operators in the coming negotiations must be plaintiffs and not defendants," Merritt, who is about to succeed S. D. Warriner as chairman of the anthracite coal operators' committee, declared.

Merritt attacked "outlaw strikes in violation of existing agreements." The strikes in the anthracite fields have been brought about by violations of the existing contract by the operators.

The operators highly praised President Coolidge and admitted that he has been their best friend in their moves against organized labor. "It is particularly gratifying to note that President Coolidge has taken cognizance of the widespread dissatisfaction with the policies and practices of the federal trade commission," said Roderick Stephens, in his report presented on behalf of the governmental relations committee. Stephens urged that governmental "interference" be stopped, except when the government decisions are against the union.

"It is also gratifying to note that by a recent appointment President Coolidge has given a majority of the votes to the republican members, thru whose action there has been announced a change of procedure," Stephens said.

MALE REAL ESTATE SHARKS IN CHICAGO BAR FEMALE SHARKS

Women cannot be "realtors" in Chicago. The Chicago real estate board which has a copyright on the term so ruled today, after a woman had applied for admission to the board.

And immediately there came a storm of protest which finally sizzled down to "We wouldn't join their old board anyway," from a score or more of the women real estate dealers in the city.

SCHEDEL FIGHT ON DEPORTATION BEFORE COURT

Immigration Inspector "Cites the Law"

Inspector of Immigration C. H. Paul said yesterday afternoon at a hearing of the deportation case of John C. Schedel, "There is nothing else to be done as far as the law is concerned in preventing the deportation of Schedel."

In a private statement after the hearing Paul said that the new law passed by congress and in effect last July that puts the burden of proof in showing legal entry completely upon the alien is responsible for the ease with which aliens are now able to be deported by the authorities.

Case Drags Long Time.

Prior to that, when the burden of proof rested on the government, he said, all the alien had to do was to keep his mouth shut and his chances were good.

The Schedel case has been dragging on now for months. Schedel is back in the country after having ben deported to Germany five years ago. When he came back and at what port he refused to reveal on advice of counsel because criminal charges are still pending against him for illegal entry.

The present hearing was called by Inspector Paul for the introduction of a government exhibit in the case which consists of the immigration bureau files on the Schedel case. These include letters to the government from Schedel while he was still in Germany. These were presented to show that Schedel was in Germany. That is all the evidence the government needs. The inspector announced that steps would now be shortly taken to deport Schedel.

Not Much to Be Done.

Isaac E. Ferguson, appearing as counsel for Schedel studied the government's exhibit and announced he would submit a brief. But he said after the hearing that there was very little to be done to save Schedel from deportation.

The best feature of the Schedel case is that the department of justice will probably not press the charge of illegal entry, a charge that carries a sentence in prison on conviction. Even if clemency were given Schedel by the department of labor and he were allowed to remain in the country it would be still doubtful whether the department of justice would press the criminal charge.

The Labor Defense Council, which is carrying on the legal fight for Schedel, announced after the hearing that despite the government's action in practically declaring the matter closed and Schedel deported, it would carry on the fight both legally and by protest and petition in every effort to prevent the deportation of Schedel.

Shades of Palmer.

Geeorge Maurer, secretary of the council, said today at the Labor Defense Council national headquarters at 19 So. Lincoln street: "We are of the opinion that this second deportation of Schedel is simply a continuation of the persecution of aliens begun five years or so ago by the frenzied attacks of the then Attorney General Palmer of 'red raid' fame and made easier for the government officials by the passage of a new and more iniquitious immigration law. We are determined to fight out the Schedel case to the end of the rope."

Marine Engineers to Ask Shipping Board for Contract Renewal

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Negotiations for renewal of their annual wage contract with the U. S. shipping board will be begun June 15, at Washington by the national board of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association. This contract covers 358 vessels now in service.

Restoration of the 1920 wage scale—the highest in its history—has been secured by the union from the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Co., operating passenger steamers on Lake Erie. The Detroit & Cleveland and the Goodrich lines, with eight other companies and associations on the Great Lakes, have signed union agreements at the existing rates.

Seven towing companies operating in Baltimore harbor and Chesapeake Bay have also signed since March.

"Hands off China!" Cry From Soviet Union Halts U. S. Intervention Plot

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the path of one of Wall Street's best diplomats, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, crosses the threshold of the White House at Washington, D. C., on its way from Pekin, China, to Berlin, Germany. Schurman had a talk with President Coolidge and the argument of Morgan's agent is that intervention by the United States in China under present circumstances would be bad for world imperialism.

This is a confession that the United States government does not consider armed interference in the affairs of the Chinese people, concretely established in the fact that special warships, for operation along the rivers of China, are being built for the American navy, feasible at the present time. The United States government does not now intervene in China, for the same reason that it keeps its army north of the Rio Grande in its relations with Mexico;—it is not the proper time to unleash its war dogs on these nations. But that does not mean that such a policy may not be adopted at some time in the future.

To be sure Schurman sees the "red menace" in China. But his attitude toward it has been pretty much the same as his attitude toward L. M. Karakhan, the Soviet ambassador at Pekin, contained in the statement, "Of course, so far as I was concerned, he did not exist."

Thus Schurman declared that evidences of Communism were to be found only in "some of the interior sections of China," all of which he charges to the "persistent propaganda from Soviet Russia." That is "dollar diplomacy" at its best.

• • • •

This view will not be taken seriously by anyone informed as to revolutionary conditions in China. The vitality of the Chinese revolution, headed until his death by the late Sun Yat Sen, is best shown by the fact that it has endured for more than a decade against all the maneuvers, thru wars and diplomacy, of the world's greatest imperialist nations.

• • • •

No doubt the big reason why Schurman tried to ignore Karakhan's presence grew out of his own admission that the ambassador of the Soviet Union, "appeared to get on amicably with the representatives in China of those countries that have recognized the Soviet power." Every day sees a greater solidarity develop between the liberated workers and peasants of the Soviet republics and the revolutionary masses of the Chinese republic still suffering under the yoke of both native and foreign oppressors. Karakhan was a symbol of that unity, no doubt a symbol that gave Schurman many nightmares. He saw the 150,000,000 of workers and peasants under Soviet rule demanding "Hands off China!" That is no ordinary demand. It is the demand of workers and peasants who have power to carry it into action.

• • • •

But Schurman's slumbers at his new post in Berlin will not be without their restless hours. In Germany, Schurman becomes an official agent of the Morgan-Dawes plan, that already rises to trouble the Hindenburg regime. In the days to come Schurman will feel the full impact of many blows struck at the Morgan-Dawes plan by well organized proletarian masses under the standards of the German Communist Party. These blows will be struck in those great industries upon which the international bankers depend for the carrying out of the Dawes plan. Schurman will learn that the strength of Communism in Germany grows out of the breakdown of German capitalism itself, that Communism in Germany builds upon its own German substructure and does not depend upon an imported foundation from the Soviet republics. If Schurman did not learn that in China, where the social revolution is still in its early stages, he will surely discover it in Germany, where he can behold the mighty demonstrations of Communist inspired German labor from the windows of his own domicile. Perhaps he may even write a book against Communism in Germany; that will be widely circulated among America's goose-step universities, that Schurman left behind in order to enter the dollar diplomatic service. Surely the restless masses of labor everywhere keep the diplomatic lackeys of the great financiers continuously on their anxious seats.

NEGRO TAXI DRIVERS BEATEN AND INSULTED IN NEW YORK, MUST FORM UNION TO FIGHT DISCRIMINATION

NEW YORK, May 15.—That in the taxicab industry in New York, the Negro is discriminated against there is no doubt. The largest taxi corporation in this city, the Yellow Taxi corporation, does not hire colored drivers.

There are about eleven hundred Negro taxi drivers in this city and the only places where they can get any employment is in the garages of the individual taxi owners. In many instances where a Negro driver had answered an advertisement for a driver, he is browbeaten, insulted and chased away from the garage.

In a garage, in Brooklyn where one had gone to answer an advertisement for drivers, he was told to wait. He waited from 3 p. m. till 7 p. m. and then was told that there was no cab to be had and that they did not employ "niggers."

This worker protested against such treatment and the result was that he was given a beating by the boss and was after told that if he talked too much about his being beaten the boss would see that he would do no more hacking in New York.

This is only one case and the only remedy is organization. There are enuf colored taxicab drivers in this city to organize and then and only then can they go to the taxi bosses and demand a square deal. As individuals they are lost and the bosses will continue to insult, abuse and browbeat them.

KLAN EMPLOYER TO BE TRIED ON MURDER CHARGE

Motion to Quash Rape, Killing Charge, Lost

INDIANAPOLIS, May 15.— D. C. Stephenson, former ku klux klan leader in Indiana, and Earl Gentry and Earl Klinck will go on trial here on June 2, for murder in connection with the death last month of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, 28. Judge Collins overruled the motion of defense counsel to quash the indictment charging the employer and politician with raping and then murdering the girl.

The decision came with unexpected suddenness just a few minutes after Judge Collins had rapped for order and the crowd had settled back comfortably anticipating a spirited legal battle.

Eph Inman, chief counsel for Stephenson and his alleged accomplices, arose and stated he did not wish to offer any oral arguments in support of the motion.

He had hardly resumed his seat when Judge Collins announced the motion was overruled.

In setting a date for the trial, Judge Collins ended a series of strategic moves by defense attorneys that promised to develop into a long drawn out legal battle.

After the indictment was returned, Inman first entered a plea of abatement. This was overruled. Then Inman filed a motion to strike out certain parts of the indictment which would have virtually wiped out the murder charge. This also was overruled. Inman then filed a motion to quash the indictment in its entirety. He got an adverse decision on this today.

The indictment grew out of the death of Miss Oberholtzer last April 28, from the effects of poison self-administered, after, it was charged, she had been attacked and mistreated by the defendants. After she swallowed the poison, the accused men, according to the indictment, refused to summon medical aid and kept her imprisoned in a garage so that she could not go out herself to get an antidote.

Prisoners Arraigned.

The three entered pleas of "not guilty" when arraigned in criminal court on the murder indictment and Judge Collins set June 2, as the date for trial after a brief wrangle between opposing counsel.

Arraignment of the prisoners came after Judge Collins a few minutes earlier had overruled a motion of defense attorneys to quash the murder indictment against the trio.

Immediately on hearing the court's decision, William H. Remy, county prosecutor, demanded that the prisoners be arraigned without further delay.

Judge Collins called the accused men manacled to each other before the bar and Judson Starke, assistant prosecutor, read the lengthy indictment in full while Stephenson and Klinck smiled and talked with each other in monotones. Gentry wore a serious troubled expression on his face.

The reading of the indictment completed, Judge Collins put the question to the prisoners who, after a hurried whispered consultation among themselves, entered pleas of not guilty. They were then taken back to their cells.

TAX COLLECTOR QUITS JOB SOONER THAN TAKE LAST CENT FROM POOR

SOUTHAMPTON, England, May 15.—The most talked-of man in Southampton is A. G. Parry, tax-collector of the South Stoneham Union, who resigned his job because his conscience which, he said, would not permit him further to collect the high taxes which he felt were causing distress among people of the district. Mr. Parry has a wife and three children and no work in sight. His position paid $1,500 a year.

"I could not continue squeezing people for taxes," he said recently, "as I have realized for two years that when I took $5 from many persons, it meant they would he short of food. I understand there have been several hundred applicants for my job."

Propose to Turn Rail Unions Into Company Unions

disruptors of railroad labor solidarity (and the list is a long one) Lee's name leads all the rest.

• • • •

Lee prevented, as long as he could, the joint action of the four brotherhoods. When it was once achieved for a short time, Lee broke up the alliance at the first opportunity. A most bitter opponent of unity of the running trades organizations, he has been especially vicious in fighting against the yard and shop men's unions. For years he has tried, by all means including the use of railroad detectives, to break up the Switchmen's Union. He was largely instrumental in breaking the shopmen's strike of 1922. He has even betrayed his own membership, as in 1920, when he "outlawed" and destroyed by organized scabbery the great trainmen's strike. His latest treachery is this proposal of a sort of glorified "B. & O. plan."

AGAINST this proposal of UNITY WITH THE BOSSES, which means disunity of the workers, the fighting members of the railroad unions must put forward the slogan:

AMALGAMATION OF THE RAILROAD UNIONS AGAINST THE BOSSES.

United into one powerful combination of railroad labor, the railroad workers will, for the first time, take their rightful place as the dominant power in the railroad industry. Only then, when they have the POWER of a united organization, will they be able to determine their own wages, hours, and working conditions.

The rank and file must demand:

Railroad labor leaders stop collaboration with the railroad presidents, whose only aim is to destroy the unions.

Railroad labor leaders must unite their own organizations against the railroad corporations!

LEE proposes uniting the unions in a joint slavery under the oppression of railroad capital!

We propose to unite the unions for a joint struggle against capitalism for the achievement of emancipation of labor!

AS AGAINST LEE'S PROPOSED CONFERENCE, WE DEMAND A CONFERENCE OF THE RAILROAD UNIONS TO BREAK DOWN THE OLD CRAFT DIVISIONS AND MISUNDERSTANDINGS, TO AMALGAMATE THEMSELVES INTO A MIGHTY INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION TO INCLUDE ALL RAILROAD WORKERS, TO LAUNCH A GREAT CAMPAIGN TO ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED, TO FIGHT FOR HIGHER WAGES AND SHORTER HOURS, AND THE RIGHT TO ORGANIZE AND STRIKE.

National Committee,
Trade Union Educational League.

ZANKOV TROOPS MURDERED 4,000 WITHOUT TRIAL

British M. Ps' Report Exposes Murder Rule

LONDON, England, May 15.—The report of the three labor party representatives who were visiting Bulgaria at the time of the Sofia outrage takes occasion to repudiate the ridiculous and malicious suggestion that they went out on "some advance tip" from the Soviet minister in this country. And they point out that the sources of their information—apart from personal observation—were almost entirely of an anti-Communist character.

Serbia's Part.

It was—they further note—generally stated by officials and by the social-democrats that the outrage was instigated by Serbia. This view was also expressed by General Rousseff, the minister of the interior, in the sobranje, on April 21.

The chief conclusions which they reached are as follows:

"The recent outbreaks of violence are not an isolated happening. A government which came to power thru a series of murders beginning with the assassination of Stambulisky, the prime minister, in 1923, and against which there is overwhelming evidence that continuously for the last two years it has been guilty of ruthless tyranny—murdering its political opponents, having them strangled and pounded to death and making use of torture—in all causing to be done to death many thousands of presons—such a government will surely ultimately arouse a volcanic upheaval.

"The government is a military junta, which uses as a cloak the politicians, who have no real power. We had proof of this. M. Kalfov told us that we could go anywhere and see anything or anybody, including the prisons.

"Subsequently the military authorities stepped in, overruled him, and refused to premit us to see the prisons. Thruout the country power is in the hands of the Koubrat or Military Officers' League.

Killed Without Trial.

"We regret that it is perfectly clear that widespread reprisals are taking place. Whilst figures are difficult to estimate, from what we learned from many reliable sources already at least 4,000 persons have been in prison and many hundreds killed without any trial.

"Mackinder and Malone went to the bureau of public safety and witnessed a continual stream of prisoners, including women, being brought in, on foot, in cars, and by motor-lorry loads. Other prisoners were being taken away from the bureau to what destination we could only imagine.

"It was commonly reported that the prisoners are taken to this bureau to be tortured and examined, and subsequently taken to a secluded place just outside the town where they are done away with. The looks on the faces of those we saw leaving the bureau would be enough to melt a heart of stone.

Call for Protest.

"Public opinion in England and America can exert a great influence on what is taking place in Bulgaria. We urge that lovers of humanity of all parties should use their influence:

"1. To protest against the execution or imprisonment of any man or woman without a just and fair trial.

"2. To obtain a visitation of the prisons by some responsible persons deputed by the British and American ministers in Sofia.

"3. That the increase in the armed forces, whose enrollment have been permitted up to May 31 by the allies should not remain under arms after that date, and that steps should be taken to see that any such troops are not recruited by conscription among the unarmed peasants without legal enactment.

"4. That the allies should urge the holding of the freest possible general election at an early date with the view to the establishment of the civil power in democratic form."

"PLEASE, MISTER ROCKEFELLER!" IS TIMID PLEA OF HIS COMPANY UNION REPRESENTATIVES IN N. J.

(By The Federated Press)

NEWARK, N. J., May 14.—Three speakers chosen by employes' representatives from Bayonne, Eagle Works and Bayway refineries of the Standard Oil of New Jersey dared to criticize—politically—the management-employe conference plan of the company. All three asked for an extra week's vacation for ten-year service employes of the refineries. Such workers have been getting one week off per year.

Wants a Regular Boss.

Thomas O'Brien, employe representative from Bayway, agreed that the company's original plan was not so bad, but that the management has been drifting away from it to the disadvantage of the workers. He mentioned the disturbance caused by the turnover in the personnel manager's office: that official position has been held by four different people in five years.

Frank Spears of Bayonne cautiously urged the longer vacation but took pains to add that everyone should "understand that out deliberations are based upon mutual consideration of the rights of all concerned" and that the management-employe conferences were "not to be regarded as a signal for calling out opposing forces in battle array." Robert Haggas of Eagle Works questioned the efficiency of a 65-year old boilermaker who had spent 40 years at his trade and suggested that the age limit for pensions was a little too high!

Dinner With the Manager, Ah, Boy!

The occasion of the employes' remarks was the eighth annual dinner preceding the joint conference of representative of the three New Jersey refineries. Company officials bragged about the conference plan, the amount of money spent in sick, accident and death benefits, etc. C. J. Hicks reported for the company that the 1924 labor turnover was less than 25 per cent, using that as an argument for the success of the company union plan. He stated that from 94 per cent to 98 per cent of the employes participate in elections of representatives for these conferences.

SAYS GOVERNOR SOLD PARDONS, ACCEPTED BRIBE

Kansas Politician Is Caught with Goods

TOPEKA, Kans., May 15.— When court resumed today it found A. L. Oswald, attorney of Hutchinson, the man who filed the complaint against former Governor Jonathan M. Davis, again on the stand for cross-examination by Davis' attorneys.

The former governor is charged with conspiracy and soliciting a bribe and selling pardons to convicts. The cry of a political frame-up edged into the case when defense counsel succeeded in having introduced in evidence a telegram sent by Oswald to Hutchinson December 18, the day he professes to have been solicited for a bribe for a pardon.

The telegram read:

"The plot thickens."

It was sent before the time Oswald says the alleged solicitation of a bribe was made. Oswald testified that he originally was for Davis, but that after he began to hear stories of pardon sales and scandals, he decided to help clean up the democratic party.

Give 28 of Mob That Mutilated Man from Two to Thirty Years

WILLIAMSON, N. C., May 15—Sentencing of the twenty-eight convicted and confessed members of the mob that removed Joseph A. Needleman, tobacco salesman, from the Martin county jail on March 29, and mutilating him, by Judge N. A. Sinclair, marked the first time in the history of North Carolina that a mob had been indicted, tried and convicted en masse. Prison sentences, ranging from thirty years down to two years, and total approximately sixty-three years, were imposed on the five principals in the case.

Amalgamated Metal Workers Continue Old Affiliation

NEW YORK CITY, May 15.—The secretary of the United Labor Council has received a letter from J. Geraghty, secretary of District Council No. 1 of the Amalgamated Metal Workers of America, stating that District No. 1 voted to continue their affiliation to the United Labor Council of Greater New York and authorizes each of their locals to elect two delegates each who will be sent to the council thru District No. 1.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL ADVISE SUPPORT OF WORLD COURT

Convention Winds Up Midst Usual Discord

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.—Support of the world court was the keynote of five speeches at the closing session of the quinquennial convention of the International Council of Women. Resolutions were passed among which was one for "equal pay for equal work" urging "wages be established on the basis of occupation and not on the basis of sex."

Another was on suffrage proposed by Frau Betsy Kjelsberg of Norway and passed. This resolution calls upon women when they are enfranchise to join political parties and form groups within their own parties for discussion of the women's point of view. It also advocates a united front of women from all parties on matters of common concern.

Resolutions on morality and on the drug question were passed.

Thruout the ten day session a continual attack was directed against the International Council of Women by patriotic ladies of Washington who charged the convention was a propaganda party for pacifists. While the council was holding its last meeting a meeting by these patriotic ladies was staged just across the street in the auditorium of the department of the interior. The chairman, Mrs. Nobel Newport Potts of Washington declared the "red flag of Russia ought to be flying over the auditorium on the opposite side" where the International Council of Women was in session.

However, the honor of Communistic tendencies bestowed upon the council by the patriotic women was entirely undeserved. Thruout its entire ten day sessions not one measure was passed by these bourgeois women showing the slightest indication of a desire to consider the conditions of the woman of the working class. The resolution for equal pay for equal work applies to professional women only and it does not in one single instance say how it shall be achieved.

New Jersey Board O. K's Use of Poison Gas Despite Deaths

NEW YORK, May 15.—Despite the fact that tetraethyl lead gasoline—"looney gas"—has been declared a menace to the life of those coming in contact with it, the New Jersey state labor commission has given the E. I. du Pont de Nemours company permission to produce the poison gas. Five employes of the Elizabeth plant of the Standard Oil company were killed as the result of working with the gas, and fatalities have occurred at the du Pont plant at Deepwater.

A conference of health officers and scientists has been called by the government at Washington to discuss the effects of the gasoline.

French Defeated In Morocco

TETUAN, Morocco, May 15.—The French have suffered severe reverses to their 30,000 men, and further reinforcements are being rushed from southern France, a dispatch from Rabat states to engage in a counter attack on the Riffian tribesmen who have entered French Morocco.

WEST VIRGINIA MINERS FIGHT UNDER HANDICAP

Van Bittner Careless and Inefficient

WHEELING, W. Va., May 15.—The strike at Warwood, West Virginia is not going in good shape, because, although we came out on strike on April 1, the union officials did not admit us to the union until April 18th. That was too long.

When we came out, we were out 90 per cent, and about 30 per cent are Negro miners, so we asked for a Negro organizer. But the international organizer, Van Bittner, said the union had no Negro organizer. Joseph Angelo is our organizer in Warwood. But after the Negroes went back to work they got a Negro organizer.

Too Late

But it was too late, and the men went back because they saw no work going on from the union officers. Now the ones who are still out are given relief only grudgingly and insufficiently. They give single men from $1 to $2 a week, and married men from $2.50 to $4 a week.

It appears that the U. M. W. officials do not care much about organizing the West Virginia miners, because the officials are co-operating with the police and we have to kiss their hands to get organized.

No Bittner on Picket Line

Van Bittner is chief international organizer, but we have not seen him on the job. He only came to Wheeling for trial in the federal court, not to talk to the miners or share the hardships of starvation and the danger of slugging on the picket line. However, the strike is reported to be better in other parts of the panhandle.

Chicago Federation in Initiatory Effort

WASHINGTON, May 15—Organized labor may undertake to broadcast its own version of industrial disputes and developments, from its own station, to the millions of radio receiving sets in the United States.

The Chicago Federation of Labor and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor have been inquiring into costs of a sending station. Secretary E. N. Nockles of the Chicago central body has been in Washington on that errand.

Estimates of the cost of installation of a broadcasting station at the A. F. of L. building in the capital have ranged upward from $25,000 to $100,000. Cost of operation is figured at about $45,000 a year.

Advantages of direct talking by labor officials to the general public over the radio are evident, especially in time of strike, if a large majority of the workers are radio patrons. Disadvantages are inherent in the cost of the equipment, and in the inconvenience of making sure that a message spoken at a given time has been received by the largest possible audience.

U. S. Is Watchdog for Wall Street, Not for World

GENEVA, May 15. — The United States is not willing to act as an "international watch dog" at the Panama Canal and violate the flags of other nations to search for arms, Congressman Theodore Burton, chairman of the American delegation to the Geneva arms traffic association, told the committee on arms today.

Burton declared the United States was willing to inspect domestic and foreign shipping only for the purpose of preventing liquor smuggling but believed that mutual confidence should govern internationals arms commerce, making the searching of ships unnecessary.

Two Die In Wreck.

SUNBURY, Pa., May 15.—Two men were killed and two others seriously injured here today when, according to authorities, the car in which they were traveling at a high speed, struck the others beneath the wreckage. The dead are Homer Amy, 39, Uniontown, Pa.; Benjamin Ditchfield, Shamokin, Pa.

Hammer Drill at T. U. E. L. Picnic

AMONG other attractions arranged for the T. U. E. L. picnic to be held on Decoration Day, May 30, at Affenheim Grove, is a hammer drill by the Finnish Athletic Club and a wrestling match between J. Paivinen, central states welterweight amateur champain and P. Kolko of Waukegan, Wis. The committee on arrangements claim that this picnic will be so full of big doings that it will be long remembered as the best one day open air affair ever given by the T. U. E. PHOTO WORKERS' ORGANIZATION JOINS A. F. OF L. AND STARTS DRIVE TO REMEDY CONDITIONS

By ESTHER LOWELL

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 15.—The Photographic Workers' Union of America is completing its affiliation with the American Federation of Labor after having added the Amateur Photo Finishers' Union to its own organization. The amalgamated unions are conducting a vigorous organization campaign under the direction of Louis A. Baum, secretary and organizer for the union. At present the union is local to New York but efforts to make it nationally effective will be made later. A mass meeting is scheduled for May 22 in Bryant Hall to boost the organization of amateur photo finishers.

Hours of Labor Extremely Long.

The summer season is the busiest work period for amateur photo finishers while the work of professional photographic workers goes on all the year round. Some of the amateur finishers, the men who make the prints of our snapshots, say that they are forced to work continuously for up to 36 hours, during these busy months.

The union is demanding a 44-hour week for all photographic workers with a $45 minimum wage for skilled workers and $30 weekly for assistants. Ten holidays including May 1, are sought and time and a half pay for overtime; double time for work on days off.

Insanitary Dark-Rooms Breed T. B.

In addition the union is demanding improvement of sanitary conditions in photographic laboratories. Many of the dark-room where developing and finishing are done are needlessly in basements and are damp and poorly drained. Few of them have adequate ventilation and they are seldom properly aired between work periods. Electric fans are needed, the union says, especially for work in summer.

Because of the bad conditions photographic workers tend to develop consumption. Eye strain, particularly among retouchers, is common. These workers seldom are able to work more than 10 year at the trade. Metol poisoning is another serious hazard of the industry. Handling deadly chemicals is part of the work.

Child Labor a Real Menace.

The abolition of all child labor in photographic laboratories is demanded by the union. In the busy summer the larger studios hire high school boys and girls for as little as $1 a day to do the simpler operations.

Child workers are used to replace older skilled men and to beat down wages to $20 or even $15, as advertisements in New York classified ad columns testify.

Boss Wanted Pay!

Since most photographic studios are still independently owned, no photographic trust—outside of Eastman's in the manufacturing end—yet existing, the introduction of improved machines is not rapid. Machines that carry the film thru the whole process from development to print are used in large studios and laboratories, however.

In these shops such a close check is kept upon the workers' productivity that when one of the men recently asked for a raise in wages his employer counted up from charts the amount of time the worker was supposed to have lost on the job and announced that the worker owed the firm money!

Various Bad Work Rules.

Hiring and firing at the whim of the employer is another evil which the union is endeavoring to overcome. Ending of piece work for retouchers is sought in order to give the workers a decent wage instead of having them employed by the week and then given too little work to enable them to make wages. Louis Baum, organizer, claims that there are comparatively few retouchers and most of them have come from Europe.

He is making a special effort to get them into the union because of their strategic importance in the industry. Over 200 members are already in the union, which is only a few months old, and thru meetings of all kinds, including educational demonstrations pertaining to the industry, more and more members are being attracted. They are of all nationalities.

Zaritsky Again Heads the Capmakers' Union

NEW YORK, May 15.—(FP).—Max Zaritsky is still president of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union. The 15th biennial convention of the organization reelected Zaritsky. Max Zuckerman remains general secretary-treasurer.

Attempts to make the jobbers responsible for the industry were approved by the convention and action during negotiations next year for a new agreement is expected. A budget plan and increased per capita tax of 6 cents were adopted by the convention before final conclusion.

New York Registers Quake.

NEW YORK, May 15.— An earthquake of moderate intensity traced its zig-zag record on the seismograph of Fordham university today. The first tremor was noted at 8:07 a. m., Eastern daylight time. The greatest intensity was reached at 8:15 and the entire quake lasted forty minutes.

The distance from New York was approximately 4,600 miles. The Aleutian Islands in the northern Pacific, a territory subject to shocks, are this distance from New York.

FIFTY "gold star mothers" have sailed for France to visit the graves of their sons who died for Morgan's gold dollar during the world war. Not very many mothers of dead heroes can afford to visit the battlefields of France and the graves of their loved ones. Only very few can have this satisfaction. Thousands of mothers whose sons are pushing up French lilies have not enough money to pay their fare to the nearest poor house.

THERE is nothing an American babbit will not attempt except think and act intelligently. A glove manufacturer of Des Moines, Iowa, secured world fame by walking up to the king of England at the Wembley exposition and grabbing the royal mitt shook it warmly saying, "How do you do, king; shake hands with America." No doubt the poor king was as helpless confronted with this sudden crisis as Harry Thaw when out of the range of his lawyers for a few minutes. Perhaps George thot Morgan was hanging to the end of his paw and not a Des Moines babbit. So George wriggled his royal fin as best he could and drew back his face into the caricature of a smile.

THE glove manufacturers name is Cownie. He stands a good chance of being candidate for president—at least of the Des Moines Rotary Club. His glove business should take a decided upward swing. When Cownie's son shook hands with the king and both posed for the camera the elder declared: "Now we've shaken hands with the king of England and Jack Dempsey and we're happy." There was a life's ambition realized in one fell swoop.

GENERAL BORIS SAVINKOFF, anti-Soviet plotter who confessed to his crimes in August of 1924, committed suicide by throwing himself from the window of his cell in a Moscow prison a few days ago. Savinkoff told of his relations with the governments of France, Checho-Slovakia and England, during the early days of the Soviet regime; how those government financed revolutions against the workers' republic and instigated plots to murder Soviet leaders. The conspirator was first sentenced to death, but the sentence was afterwards commuted to life imprisonment, which is in harmony with the policy of the Soviet government of not inflicting capital punishment unless the extreme penalty is essential to the interests of the workers' and peasants' power.

EDMOND VANCE COOKE, the jingle mongering poet, has been poisoning the minds of the school children of Chicago for the last two weeks with recitations of his own composition. His tour was conducted by the Chicago Daily News. Another afternoon newspaper, a competitor of the News, protested on the ground that Cooke's poems were not patriotic. So the Daily News came back with a headline: "Cooke's patriotic poems are cheered," and published a rhyme called "All For America" which makes the German "Deutchland Uber Alles" look like the "Red Flag." It's tough on the kids.

CHICAGO YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE PLAN ACTIVITY

Numerous Campaigns in City Program

At the meeting of the city central committee of the Young Workers' League, local Chicago, held on Wednesday, May 13, the following matters were taken up with special interest and emphasis:

Division of league branches into factory committees, assigning each group a factory in which the committee is to take charge of a campaign until a nucleus is established there.

To assist in the most advantageous division of the branch into such committees, the city organization committee is to meet with the B. E. C.'s of Branches Nos. 1, 3, 4 and 6 during the coming week.

Membership Drive.

In connection with the membership drive, the need for increased outside activity was stressed and the Workers Party branches also will be visited by our comrades in an effort to get their co-operation in our membership drive.

The organization of a working area branch in Pullman, Ill., and in Cicero, Ill.

The organization of a campaign in the heavier industries to begin early in June.

League Picnic June 14.

Election of a committee to begin immediate organization of the league picnic to take place in the Beyer's Grove, on June 14. Committee consists of Al. Meltz, Weintraub, Melamed, Katilus, E. Bern, Letchinger, Berisov, Gomez and V. Meltz, with executive committee consisting of A. Meltz, N. Gomez and V. Meltz.

Election of comrades to assist the party in arranging their big picnics in the summer.

Support of the Champion, the official organ of the American Negro Labor Congress.

Participation in the campaign to establish a party book store in Chicago.

Participating to the fullest extent in the mass demonstration arranged by the party city central committee protesting against the white terror in the Balkans. Meeting to be held on Sunday, May 17, 1925, 2:30 p. m. at Hod Carriers' Hall, 814 W. Harrison St.

Attending the party branch industrial organizers' meeting on Friday, May 15, at 19 S. Lincoln St., 8 p. m., by all league branch organizers.

A date of July 19 is reserved for an outing and picnic together with the Waukegan comrades.

Intensive Training Class.

The organization of an intensive training class for a score of leading comrades in the league who are needed to immediately take care and full responsibility for the various nuclei and potential nuclei. Class to begin on May 25, Monday, at 2613 Hirsch Blvd. and to continue for six weeks.

On finances, a thoro discussion took place and a meeting of all financial secretaries is called on Saturday, May 23, at 3 p. m. to work out a uniform system of handling finances.

The Junior director had a report of good work.

The branches reported on their activity and their problems, with an excellent report of activities coming from Branch No. 5.

On the Negro activities, the committee has been functioning well, leaflet is gotten out and factories at which campaigns are to start assigned to branches.

Biting the Friendly Paw

Among the sins placed by tradition on the verboten list of bourgeois ethics is ingratitude. True, it does not bring a prison sentence; neither does the catechism say that one shall go to hell provided he dies unrepentant after repaying good with indifference.

A mild criticism of William Green, president of the American Federation of labor, in the Milwaukee Leader, prompts those thoughts. Green has been slamming the Communists mercilessly for the past few years, just as his predecessor slammed the socialists before the Communists became a factor in the American revolutionary movement. While Green was attacking the Communists, the Milwaukee Leader, like all the other socialist papers, sat back, after the fashion of the southern planters during the war, whose slaves were away battling against the federals and said: "Ain't we giving them hell!"

The socialists gave all the aid and comfort they could muster to the labor fakers in fighting the Communists. Wherever the reactionary per capita sharks were trying to oust the Communists from the unions, there in the front lines were the yellow socialist renegades. But the fakers have no more use for the socialists after they have outlived their usefulness, than the employers have for a played-out stoolpigeon.

In the current issue of the American Federationist, Wililam Green devotes a good deal of his time to whacking the socilaists. Not content with hiding them in his own paper, he wrote a special article for the Magazine of Wall Street, in which he reprimands the plutes for their lack of appreciation of the non-existence of socialism in the trade uinon movement of this country. In view of this blessing, suggests Green, why don't you capitalists get together with us and talk things over so that together we can keep socialism on the outside, where it is now?

This is a dirty trick on the poor socialists, after their valuable services in helping Green in his attempt to oust the Communists from the unions. Where are the positions of influence and lucre that the socialists expected as the price of their betrayal? Gone, as the LaFollette "socialist" vote of yesteryear.

The Leader sobs: "It is a pity that American labor should have so many shortsighted leaders. Mr. Green is undoubtedly sincere. He just hasn't mentally traveled far enough, that's all."

No doubt Green is sincere, and so is Gary and so is William J. Burns and so is Victor Berger.

Outheroding Herod

The savage sentences originally imposed upon Privates Crouch and Trumbull stationed in the Hawaiian Islands for their feeble efforts at spreading Communist propaganda, evoked gasps of astonishment from even hardened capitalist editors. Many of those editors suggested that such punishment would serve no useful purpose, but on the contrary would create the impression that the American military forces were honeycombed with Communists and that the sentences meted out to Crouch and Trumbull were indications of the dread that hung over the army authorities.

The editor of the fake labor sheet, The Vermilion County Star, published in Danville, Ill., was neither bothered with sympathy for the rebel soldiers, nor was his empty head able to conjure up a vision of the demoralizing effect of heavy punishment would have on recruiting for the military and naval forces of his beloved capitalists. This slimy bonehead, F. A. Leven by name, who was originally, and not very long ago a booster for a farmer-labor party, went to great pains in his illiterate way to prove that the sentences of 40 and 26 years, respectively, imposed on Crouch and Trumbull were not excessive.

The history of any conquered nation will show that no satrap of the conquering power displays more ingenious cruelty in persecuting the defeated people than those traitors who deserted to the conqueror in return for material considerations. It is so with the prostituted and purchased labor faker. And so it does not take much to buy a cheapskate like Leven. Only a few weeks ago he sold a page of his rag to the local businessmen in the form of an advertisement carrying the picture of Sam Gompers and some of the trite absurdities that notorious capitalist flunkey was in the habit of turning out with an air of profound solemnity. Leven is having a hard time trying to sell himself. Perhaps if he went to some normal school and studied the rudiments of grammer he might be able to peddle himself to better advantage.

The way to stop crime, declared State's Attorney Crowe, is to hang everybody, or almost. We know a good place to start. Don't all speak at once.

Color-Blind "Justice"

Yesterday morning the state of Illinois snuffed out the life of one Lawrence Washington, colored, for the killing of a confectioner in Evanston, last September.

Washington was not able to hire brilliant lawyers to impress the jury with tears and the snapping of suspenders or high priced alienists to prove that his pineal gland was not in good working condition. In this extremity he threw himself on the mercy of the court. But the court had no mercy for a poor colored man and Washington's neck was broken yesterday morning on the gallows in Cook county jail.

Governor Small did not grant the doomed man a reprieve, tho the governor is quite handy with the pen when condemned murderers have powerful friends on the outside of the death cells.

There is one kind of justice for a poor black man and another for a white man, particularly if the white man is blessed with a goodly share of this world's wealth, whether he inherited that wealth from his parents or secured it by robbery with or without a gun.

Money talks and the life of a black man is held cheaper under our christian capitalist government, than the life a white man, even tho our hypocritical preachers tell us that their god is the father of all men and women, black, white and yellow.

The War in Morocco

The French are conducting a vigorous campaign to subjugate the natives of Morocco who succeeded in driving the Spanish army of occupation into the sea. The French are more efficient at the business of mass slaughter than the Spaniards, tho the latter are none the less willing.

The slaughtering of Moroccans has more than one advantage to the French imperialists. Not only does it provide an excuse to rob the natives of more territory, but it also enables the French to test out their new war tricks. This is what the capitalist press tells us.

Scores of British military observers are watching the French operations against the Riffians. If Britain finds anything worth copying in the methods of the French, she will be glad to use them against the latter at a future date.

While France is making war on the Moroccans, the other robber powers look on, hoping that she does not acquire too much territory, tho whether one Riff or ten thousand are killed does not disturb the bloody handed christians who are so much concerned over Communist propaganda putting christianity and religion in general thru an intellectual delousing process.

The only political organization that has raised a voice against the slaughter and robbery of the Riffians is the Communist International. While the French socialists have openly collaborated with the government in crushing those people, the Communists have protested and urged the French soldiers to refuse being tools of their masters in murdering other people and robbing them of their territory.

Britain Is Scared

There was a time when anybody with an idea on his chest could shoot it off in Hyde Park, London, with the assurance that a bobby would be handy to save him from the uninvited and unwelcome attentions of practical jokers and people who are not constitutionally capable of listening to new ideas. Soap box orators might even speak disparagingly about royalty and still be immune from the prison cell or the insane asylum. Britain secured a reputation of easy going tolerance that showed up well in contrast with the repressive policy of other capitalist countries.

But those days are no more. There is a reason. In the period of British imperial expansion, when the workers were reasonably contented and shot full of imperialist hop, the ruling class saw no cause for alarm in the oratorical outbursts of more or less confused radicals. As long as the workers had confidence in the ability of the empire to provide them with three square meals a day and a bed at night, the British capitalists slept on an easy pillow. Whatever dangers confronted them did not come from inside but from the outside.

But approximately 2,000,000 British workers are unemployed today. They have been in that condition ever since the end of the war. It is a permanent evil that cannot be remedied this side of the social revolution. British industry has suffered. Her steel output and her coal production have two powerful competitors in the American and European combinations. The British working class are fast losing faith in the ability of the pirate empire to guarantee them a satisfied stomach. They are becoming more and more rebellious.

This is the condition that forces the British government to make raids in true Palmer fashion on the radical organizations, confiscating literature, arresting revolutionary propagandists and seeking to suppress the Communist Party which offers a plan whereby the workers of Britain can free themselves from the bonds of slavery. The Communists not only show up the capitalist system but they also show the workers the way out. The ruling class, which once boasted of its tolerance, now frantically tries to ward off the fatal blow at its existence by doing just what every ruling class all thru the course of human history has done in similar crises, i. e. by resorting to violence. This is a lesson for those pseudo-revolutionists who claim that the new order of society will be ushered in in Britain as peacefully as the dawn of a summer day.

FOOD WORKERS MUST UNITE TO SMASH THE BOSS

Company Union Works for Hotel Owners

By PASQUALE RUSSO.

Many are the sad stories written and published in the capitalist newspapers concerning the barbaric conditions existing in the steel mills. They are stories such as will bring tears to the eyes of the reader. From them we learn that thousands of men toil in the midst of a suffocating heat from morn to night, day after day, week after week.

To workers such as these we should extend the hand of comradeship, and support them in the struggle against the steel magnates. This we should do, but the men in the steel industry are not the only workers suffering from the diabolic system of capitalism. Other workers suffer atrocious torments, toiling in real hells. Chief among these are to be included those working in hotel and restaurant kitchens. In Chicago, for instance, they work from morning to night in what we many call mines. They are so dark or far below the street that sunshine never enters them.

Most of the kitchens are in basements; the smell is terrible; the air foul; the heat unbearable. In these unsanitary and noisome places thousands of workers are employed. They are overworked in order that millions of dollars may be produced to satisfy the food barons of Chicago. Nor are these conditions new or recent, in Chicago they have been in existence for years.

The Struggles.

During past years many battles have been fought by the hotel employes to better their conditions, but in very nearly every instance the masters have succeeded in crushing all their valiant efforts. A decade ago the union of hotel employes was very strong and formidable. The hotel proprietors regarding the union as a menace, solicited the co-operation of the chefs and organized the Progressive Culinary Association for the purpose of thwarting the employes in their efforts to better their conditions.

From the very beginning the officials of the Progressive Culinary Association have ranged themselves on the side of the hotel owners. Among the numerous officers, past and present of this association we find the following names: Charles F. Leinhardt, president, P. C. A.; A. C. Negri, manager Parkway and Webster Hotels; Theo. Rooms, chef Blackstone Hotel; Louis Domergue, chef, Edgewater Beach Hotel; A. Stalle, superintendent stewart, Hotel Sherman; Ferdinand Karcher, chef, Hotel La Salle; H. Mauer, employment manager, Progressive Culinary Association; Rob. Muller, former chef, North American Restaurant.

Must Oust Bosses' Lackeys.

Officials such as the above have endeavored in every way possible to keep the workers in subjection. Now it seems that their efforts have been in vain. Just now there is a widespread agitation going on among the membership. They are insisting on better working conditions and general clean up. The members of the Progressive Culinary Association should take advantage of this opportunity for some decisive action against their masters. They should also demand a clean up. In the past, Mr. Maurer, the employment manager has insisted on "Waking up and going to work," and now an opportunity presents itself where Mr. Maurer can be told to "Wake up and go to work with the rest of the officials."

However, there should be no building of castles in the air. It must be remembered that it is useless to oust one set of officials and then permit another group of agents of the Hotel Keepers' Association to dominate the organization. If a thoro cleaning is to be had the present constitution, written by the hotel owners, should be torn up and thrown in the wastebasket. Also, affiliation must be sought with other unions in the food industry. It is the bosses advantage to have several unions. If all the little factions are organized into one industrial union of food workers you will then be dangerous and the hotel owners will begin to make concessions.

Must Solidify Ranks.

In the past you have quarreled among yourselves about your work or differences in the color of skin, or owing to the fact that you were born in various countries; in short you have been divided and owing to this stupidity have fought one another in place of the enemy. The time has now come when all this should be laid aside and unite into one organization. When you go to work tomorrow, join hands one with another, colored and white employes, Italian and Greek, French and Polish, and present a united front to the food barons. Stand shoulder to shoulder and in doing this you will attain solidarity and the bosses will be compelled to surrender.

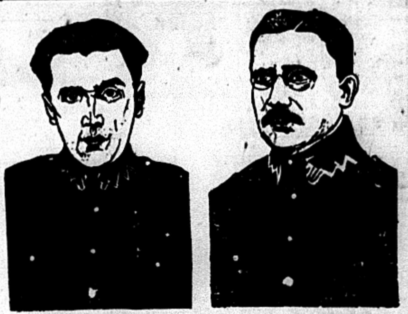
Communist Victims of Polish Terror



WALERY BAGINSKI. | ANTONI WIECZORKIEWICZ.

WALERY BAGINSKI and Antoni Wieczorkiewicz, Polish Communists, who were sentenced to death by the Polish white terror because of their activity in the Polish army on behalf of Soviet Russia, were brutally murdered by their police guard.

The two Polish workingclass leaders were to have been exchanged for the priest Usask, and the Polish spy Laszkewitch, held prisoners by Soviet Russia for counter-revolutionary activity, but were shot down by police sergeant Muraszko, a half hour before they were to have been delivered at the Soviet Russian frontier.

It was freely reported that the murder was carried out on orders from the fascist government.

The two Polish Communists were sentenced last year on framedup charges, being accused of taking part in the destruction of the Warsaw fort in October 1923. The charges were so obviously a frameup that the sentences were commuted to life imprisonment, and later to fifteen years.

The brutal murders caused intense feeling among the workers of Poland and Russia. Soviet Russia sent a sharp note of protest to the Polish government.

WOMEN RENEW FIGHT FOR NATL. CHILD LABOR LAW

Three National Bodies Pledge Their Support

WASHINGTON, May 15—Continued effort for ratification of the child labor amendment was pledged by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers at their convention held April 27 to May 2 at Dallas, Texas.

Similar action was taken by the National League of Women Voters at its convention in Richmond, Virginia, April 16-22.

Similar action was taken by the American Association of University Women at its convention held in Indianapolis, Ind., April 6-14.

The action taken by these organizations followed discussion and convention resolutions stressing the importance of correcting the misrepresentations that have been widely circulated concerning the amendment, its purpose, and its meaning.

With these three national organizations of women, whose combined membership runs into the millions, pledging renewed support to the child labor amendment, it is predictde that considerable change in public sentiment concerning the amendment will take place before the legislatures meet again. The women leaders insist that it is only necessray to make clear to the public the actual facts as to the conditions of child labor in the states to secure the necessary co-operation for remedying the evils.

No Legal Bar to Ultimate Ratification.

Statements to the effect that adverse action of state legislatures constituted no legal bar to ultimate ratification of the amendment have been confirmed during the past week by an official investigation conducted at the request of Senator William J. Harris of Georgia, by the legislative reference service of congress. In a detailed report on the subject the congressional legislative experts say:

1. That a constitutional amendment once submitted by congress to the states for ratification is not subject to withdrawal or repeal, but remains before the states until ratified.
2. States which have ratified cannot reverse that action.
3. States which have rejected the proposal can at any time vote to ratify it.

LABOR TO TAKE PART IN LOONEY GAS INQUIRY

Investigation Conference in Washington May 30

NEW YORK, May 15.—Organized labor has been invited to send delegates to the special conference to investigate tetra ethyl lead gasoline which will be held in Washington May 20, under the auspices of the United States Public Health Service. Representatives will be sent by the American Federation of Labor and by the Workers' Health Bureau.

The conference was called by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings following protests against the bureau of mines report which declared that tetra-ethyl lead in the exhaust gases of automobiles is harmless. The bureau of mines' investigation has been criticised by scientists thruout the country on the grounds that it was not thoro and that its conclusions are unsound.

Efforts to stop the sale of tetra-ethyl lead gasoline and to protect workers engaged in its manufacture were made by labor last October following the death of five men employed at the Standard Oil plant in Bayway, N. J. from the effects of "loony" gas. At that time the Workers' Health Bureau issued a call to organized labor to demand an investigation of the new gasoline by a competent body on which labor should be represented.

The conference on May 20 will be attended by scientists, medical experts, labor delegates, aand producers of tetra-ethyl lead gasoline. A criticism of the bureau of mines report by Dr. Alice Hamilton of Harvard, Dr. Paul Reznikoff and Grace M. Burnham, director of the Workers' Health Bureau will be made public before the conference.

Bryan Calls Scientists "Dishonest Scoundrels"

PHIADELPHIA, Pa., May 15.—William Jennings Bryan in an address at Westchester at the third annual interdenominational conference on fundamentals said the scientists of America are "dishonest scoundrels." He then announced that he was on a crusade to rid the schools of scientists. His starting point is Dayton, Tennessee.

Bryan has been chosen to represent the christian fundamental association in a fight against the teaching of evolution in the public schools of Tennessee.

In Tennessee there is a law prohibiting the teaching of evolution. J. T. Schopes, a school teacher in Dayton, Tenn., is charged with violating this law. Bryan will take the role of championing the holy bible against the scientists.

44 BABIES DIE AT BABY FARM IN 16 MONTHS

Autopsies Ordered on Bodies of 2 Infants

NEW YORK, May 15.—Forty-four infant boys and girls have died in 16 months at a baby farm conducted by Mrs. Helen Auguste Giesen-Volk at 235 East 86th street. Mrs. Giesen-Volk is under arrest on charges of baby substitution and violation of the health code. She is held on $25,000 bail on the specific charge that when a father called for his son she attempted to give him a strange baby.

Autopsies on the bodies of two infants were expected to give a clue to the truth or falsity of the more serious allegations against Mres. Geisen-Volk. The first was held on the body of Agnes Tooney, 18 months old, the charges being that she was held by the heels and dashed against a wall. The attack occurred a day before the child died according to the uncorroborated statement of a nurse. No signs of physical injury were found on the body.

Another autopsy was performed on the body of William Winter, 6 month old, who also died at the baby home.

Dr. Otto M. Schultze, medical expert after completing his autopsy on the William Winters' baby, 6 months old who died in the baby home, reported that the infant's skull was "cracked in half." The fracture, he said, extended from the back of the head to the front and "its suggested cause was violent contact with a flat, hard surface."

In discussing the number of deaths at the infantorium, Commissioner Monaghan said that the children kept there had been undernourished, prematurely born or neuresthenic when received. He said that other institutions having children of the same type had higher death percentages than the Geisen-Volk place.

Italian Parliament Legalizes Violence of Fascist Regime

ROME, Italy, May 15.—The Italian parliament reopened, with the fascisti controlling the body by a vote of nine to one, to discuss two bills backed by Mussolini. The first, a bill against secret societies, is a further move of the fascisti to crush out all opposition by means of legalized violence.

The second bill merely increases the fascist votes, for it grants suffrage to a limited class of women, those who are wealthy, or belong to fascist organizations being the only ones given the vote.

The present parliament was handpicked by the fascisti, whose troops controlled the election at the point of the bayonet.

Alexander Chramov Will Speak on Savinkov Next Tuesday Night

A news cable in the press states that Boris Savinkov, formerly of the socialist-revolutionary party and lately of the counter-revolutionary white guard armies of the world imperialists had committed suicide in his prison at Moscow. Who was Savinkov? Why was he tried by the workers' and peasants' government?

Comrade Chramov, national organizer of the Russian section of the Workers Party will speak in Chicago on this interesting subject Tuesday, May 19, at 1902 W. Division St. Admission is free. All who understand the Russian language are welcome.

34 Per Cent Country's Children Fear Victims

The national kindergarten and elementary college of Chicago in a public report stated that the peace of 34 per cent of all the children in the country is menaced by frightening them in fun or in order to obtain obedience. Apparitions of the bogey men, cannibals, the phantom gypsy and the great hobgoblins that eat up bad little boys and girls instill fear that lasts thruout life limiting mental, moral, physical and social development.

Must Follow Soviet Lead.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—(FP)—That the United States, Britain and France will soon be obliged, in self-protection, to follow the lead of the Soviet Union and Japan in raising their legations at Pekin to the rank of embasies, was forecast by Minister Schurman, just retired from the China post. He said he had agreed that the Soviet envoy be dean of the diplomatic body in Pekin.

STRUGGLETOWN

There's a line of squalid houses with an outlook drab and grey.
There's a dirty narrow roadway where the carts go up and down.
There's a narrow filthy alley, where the gutter children play.
And there ought to be a notice just to say it's Struggletown.

There's a lot of dirty kiddies strolling up and down the street,
And the foodshop windows mock them as they wander up and down.
There's a hunted look of trouble on the faces that we meet
Going to and from their labor thru the streets of Struggletown.

Three Hundred Mines Idle in Illinois

By ALEX REID.

OUT of 374 shipping coal mines in Illinois 300 or more are at a standstill, and the large majority of those for over a year, and many of them two years. This condition in Illinois is duplicated proportionately thruout America, and the conditions of the miners, their wives and families, as a result, beggars description.

The writer has seen many miners grown old in the industry, after a life spent in the bowels of the earth, contributing to the wealth of the nation, gray and feeble, pass into the county poor farm to spend their few remaining years. I attended a funeral of a miner a short time ago who died as a result of undernourishment and whose family is on the verge of physical collapse.

Scores of miners thruout the state who deprived themselves even of certain mere necessities to be able to buy their own home, have been forced to abandon same and seek employment elsewhere, and their shacks have gone to wreck, "a total loss," and thruout Illinois today in the mining camps black despair is met on every hand and some villages are completely deserted.

AND this in America, the wealthiest nation in the world, with its unlimited natural resources and perfected machinery of production. Sixty-five thousand miners in Illinois alone idle thru no fault of their own, willing and wanting to work and none to be had.

A surplus of coal has been produced in Illinois as in other states, and this coupled with the decline of industrial activity in other lines for the past two years, coupled with the increased use of oil as fuel, and water power, has produced this appalling situation, and with it the fact that the workers have not been paid in wages enough to buy back their production now face starvation and unemployment.

The present annual productive capacity of the coal mining industry is 1,000,000,000 tons and the annual consumptive capacity is 500,000,000 tons, or 50 per cent less. The productive capacity includes many uneconomical mines that probably will never again be opened up and which is calculated to reach 25 per cent of the mines in existence, which reduces the productive capacity to 80,000,000 tons annually.

During the war 1,000,000 men were in the industry, but since that time they have been rapidly thinned out. The industry today is employing approximately 70 per cent of that figure. The industry is 50 per cent overdeveloped. Fifty per cent of the miners working full time or 100 per cent of the men working 50 per cent of the time will produce the average consumptive capacity.

THE miners not only of Illinois, but thruout the organized field, are demanding of the union leaders that steps be taken immediately to remedy the unemployment situation and alleviate the suffering among the miners and their families, and well do the miners know that the only possible relief under this economic system that can be given them must come in the form of work, and therefore they are demanding of their leaders that a division of the available work be given them, and they are demanding now to know why a three-year contract was signed without a fight for a division of work being made, and in this respect they don't forget their former demands, and the statements of their leaders that it was the only remedy for unemployment.

Why did the miners' leaders refuse at the scale conference to fight for a shorter workday, and why did they repudiate their former position on this question? Let us see the miners' position all the way thru since 1919.

AT the Cleveland convention Frank Farrington, chairman of the scale committee, in his report, and in compliance with the demands of hundreds of resolutions for a shorter workday and week, to divide the available work among the miners, demanded a six-hour day from bank to bank, "which was in reality a four-and-a-half-hour day at the face of the coal." (Vol. 2, p. 952, 1919 convention.)

At that same convention John L. Lewis, acting president, in speaking on that scale report, said: "I may say there is embraced in this instrument the most progressive policies that have ever been enunciated by our organization." (Vol. 2, p. 962, 1919 convention report.) At that same convention nationalization of coal mines was indorsed.

Since that time at the convention of the Illinois miners in Peoria in 1924, William Green, the international secretary-treasurer of the U. M. W. of A., said, among other things: "I have always felt that our proposal for a shorter workday in the coal mines of the country offered at least a partial solution of the unemployment problem." (Page 128 of speeches to the convention, 1924.)

IN spite of the demands of the miners, they were misled and betrayed in the Indianapolis convention, and the leaders repudiated their former positions. Frank Farrington brought forward a proposed contract, authorizing the scale committee to get as good a contract as it was possible to get on the basis of no reduction in wages, and it was understood by the most

By HARRISON GEORGE.

ALTHO Herbert Hoover, like ex-Secretary Hughes, has long been insisting that Soviet Russia is an "economic vacuum," Hoover's own government department, the department of commerce, has been forced to acknowledge that such a statement is a lie.

The above illustration, as shown, is issued by the U. S. department of commerce at Washington, D. C., and shows at the top the imports into Soviet Russia from the United States, England, Germany and other countries; and at the foot, the balance of trade between exports from and imports into Soviet Russia during 1924.

A Credit Balance for Soviet Russia.

It will be noted that the balance is favorable to Soviet Russia by 129,257,000 gold rubles (a gold ruble is equivalent to 50 cents American money). Taken in conjunction with the fact that the Soviet budget for 1924 was not only balanced, but that a "respectable surplus" was accumulated, the economic security of the Soviet Union is proved beyond question, and out of the mouths of its enemies.

How this affects the lives of the workers may be shown by the following short quotation from the speech of Zinoviev before the enlarged executive committee of the Communist International on March 25, when he said:

"Furthermore, the wages of the workers in Moscow, Leningrad and other towns, during the last three months, in a number of branches of industry, have exceeded pre-war wages."

Hiding the Truth.

It is notable that the department of commerce statement shown above, was printed in the capitalist press on the financial page, the DAILY WORKER taking it from the Chicago Daily News of May 9, where it was hidden away between market story headlines about "Wheat Price Smash," "Hog Values" and "News and Gossip of the Pits." Yet on the editorial and news pages, the Chicago Daily News still follows the exploded myth that "Soviet Russia is an economic vacuum."

It goes without saying that if the Soviet imports are one-fifth from America with all the handicaps of trading without recognition and treaty facilities, the recognition of Russia would increase the proportion to at least double or treble the figure and give work to many unemployed.

The Fight for World Trade Union Unity

By A. LOZOVSKY.

Speech of the Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions to the Enlarged Executive Committee Meeting of the Communist International.

THE line laid down on the trade union question by the fifth world congress of the Communist International has been strikingly confirmed by the course of events. The unity of the trade union movement has become the most popular and the most vital fighting slogan, which appeals to all the masses.

Since the fifth world congress, rather important changes have taken place in the political picture of the world trade union movement, which must be taken into consideration if the future line of our work is to be laid down correctly. The new events in the course of this period have been: (1) The trip of the British delegation to the Soviet Union; (2) the sixth trade union congress of the Soviet Union and the conclusion of a fundamental agreement between the British trade unions and the Soviet unions; (3) the action of the Second International and of the right wing of the Amsterdam International (Brussels, Jan. 1-6, 1925) against the British delegation and the new tendencies in the world trade union movement; (4) the coming to a head of the differences of opinion in the executive bureau of the Amsterdam International on the question of the attitude towards the Russian trade unions (Session of the executive bureau on Feb. 6-9); (5) the endorsement by a large number of reformist trade unions and trades councils in France, Germany, Belgium and other countries of unity and of the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee; (6) the decision of the general council of the British trade unions to call a conference of representatives of the All-Russian Central Trade Union Council and of the British General Council of Trade Unions for the discussion of the difficulties which have arisen in consequence of the session of the executive bureau of the Amsterdam International; (7) the conference of representatives of the Soviet trade unions and the British trade unions which begins in London on April 2; (8) the publication of the report of the British delegation upon its trip thru the Soviet Union; (9) the campaign for unity which has been developed in all countries, and into which millions of workers have been drawn; and (10) the evidence of the relations of German and international social-democracy with the profiteers, thru which our often expressed opinion that the enemies of trade union unity are direct agents of the bourgeoisie, is confirmed.

THE most interesting aspects of these events are as follows: (1) That the ideological differneces of opinion within the Amsterdam International have come to such a head that they not only paralyze the activity—or putting it better, the inactivity—of this organization, but also compel the individual sections of the Amsterdam International to come in the open against one another;

(2) That the slogan of unity and of the united front are beginning to take on practical organizational forms despite the obstinate sabotage of international social-democracy.

The fight within the Amsterdam International has been going on for a long time already; up to recently, this struggle has been going on horizontally, between the upper strata and the lower strata. The opposition in the Amsterdam International conists of two groups, a crystallized one and and amorphous (loosely knit) one. The former has been organized by the Communist Parties upon the platform of the R. I. L. U. and bears the name: Minority Movement, Opposition Bloc, Fraction, etc. The other section reflects the discontent of the masses, but it does not touch the fundamental kernel of the tactics and politics of the Amsterdam International. The dissatisfaction of the masses grew more intense after the occupation of the Ruhr as a result of the inactivity of the Amsterdam International. It rose during the whole of 1923 and was most clearly expressed in 1924, when the British trade union movement, as a result of the continuing economic crisis and the lessons of the MacDonald period, went over to the left wing of the Amsterdam International. The entire trade union movement of Great Britain entered the opposition to the traditional policy on a very essential and extremely important question of the world labor movement: whether the united front with the Soviet trade unions should be established, or the hostile acts against the revolutionary trade unions in general and the Soviet Union in particular should be continued.

THE action of the British delegation displeased the reformists to such a degree that the entire international social-democracy and the reformist trade union bureaucracy attacked the British delegation and requested assistance from their colleagues in the labor party and in the right wing of the trade union movement in Great Britain itself, in order to divert the British trade union movement from its "pernicious role." This entire campaign came to an end at the last session of the executive bureau of the Amsterdam International (Feb. 6-8) with the acceptance of the allegedly "compromise resolution" of Steenhuis, against which the British delegation voted. Even the most lenient critics had to admit that this revolution was nothing but a very stupid and clumsy maneuver. Politically, this resolution signifies the victory of the right wing over the left, which was well understood by the general council of the British trade unions, when it decided to hold a conference with the Russian trade unions for a discussion "of the difficulties, which have arisen in consequence of the session of the executive bureau of the Amsterdam International." The state of excitement of the social-democrats over the British trade unions is demonstrated by the unashamed attacks of the Russian mensheviki (in "Sozialistitchesky Vestnik" of March 19) upon the report of the British delegation. The mensheviki write in an article headed A Dishonest Book, that this report "is a deliberate concealment of the truth and a leading astray of the reader," etc., etc. That is the tone employed by the Russian mensheviki in speaking of their colleagues of the Second International.

THE leaders of the British trade union movement could not let such attacks go unanswered. In the first number of the monthly International Trade Union Unity, which is published by the labor research department, Purcell writes as follows: "The so-called socialist press of the continental countries cannot serve as a reliable source of information at present . . . it does not give an unprejudiced account of the facts." And later on "Oudegeest, as well as Jouhaux (not to mention the Vorwarts) have shown beyond all doubt that they consider the so-called 'compromise motion' a cunning step which is intended to thwart our 9 months of effort for the establishment of international unity." He calls the methods of the right Amsterdamers "trickery."

In the official organ of the Amsterdam International Oudegeest (the secretary) ridicules the statements of the president and states that the bureau of the Amsterdam International gave no instructions for the writing of such an article. This entire polemic shows that the differences of opinion in the Amsterdam International are mch more serious than many people believe.

THE world trade movement was never entirely united, neither ideologically, nor from the point of view of organization. At present the trade unions are differentiated along political, national, religious and racial lines. The largest numbers of workers are organized in the reformist and revolutionary trade unions. But, the problem of unity posed by the fifth congress of the C. I., set the Communists before the question of uniting, not only the revolutionary and reformist unions, but of drawing into the united trade union movement the unorganized workers as well as the members of the catholic, protestant and similar trade union organizations.

The most serious obstacle on this road is the line of tactics of the right wing of the Amsterdam International, which want to choke off the initiative campaign for unity at any price; the methods of sabotage employed to this end are extremely varied. The organisational and political focus of the campaigns against unity is however, the Second International, and this for a very simple reason: Whoever advocates the united front of the bourgeosie must be against the united front of the workers.

The complexity of the situation, the difficulty of the struggle, old habits and traditions, insufficent flexibility, and the inability to make the necessary organizational changes have also given rise to several deviations in our own ranks. The more openly we speak of those deviations, the sooner will we succeed in overcoming them.

THESE deviations are as follows: (a) Organizational conservatism; (b) the interpretation of the slogan of unity as a maneuver; (c) unity at any price; (d) the blunting of the struggle against the social-democracy in trade unions; (e) tendencies for the dissolution of the revolutionary trade unions, and even of the R. I. L. U.

The fight against organizational conservatism must be carried on by us in the most decisive manner. If the dissolution of any independent union may be of service in the conquering of a mass organization, this dissolution must take place, for organization is not an end in itself but a means towards an end. Everything depends upon the situation and the ratio of the strength of the Communists and the reformists in the labor movement.

On the other hand comrades are of the opinion that our slogan is only a maneuver. This entirely incorrect point of view must be combatted most energetically. We demand a serious, self sacrificing and sincere struggle for the unity of the trade union movement. Every Communist, every party member, must take note of this once and for all.

THE obstinate resistance of the social-democrats to unity has led several adherents of unity to the following considerations: Since social-democracy bitterly opposes any endeavor for unity because of fear of Communist propaganda and agitation, it may happen that the Communist struggle against reformism will be blunted for the sake of the unity of the trade union movement. This is the most dangerous tendency in our campaign for unity. If it should chance to happen that in our struggle for unity the intensity of our Communist criticism against reformism should be blunted, then the unity which we might have attained would be turned against us. We must fight any such tendencies in a most decisive manner.

Further, we should notice that the desire for unity with some comrades takes on the form of stormy impatience. This impatience serves as an explanation also for those tendencies which consider the liquidation of the entire trade union movement as the only right solution. The Communist International was and remains decidedly against any such tendencies. The struggle for unity does not signify liquidation. The liquidation of the R. I. L. U. is proposed as liquidation in order to bring about a united international, it presupposes the liquidation of the Amsterdam International. The situation is similar in the various countries (France, Czecho-Slovakia), where we have a serious mass movement of revolutionary trade unionists.

HEGEL says that truth is concrete. Therefore, there is no such thing as a unity schablone in accordance with which every country is to carry on its struggle for unity. The methods and forms of the struggle change according to the situation, time and place. Therefore, in this connection it is possible to group together a number of countries.

(1) Countries with a united revolutionary trade union movement (the Soviet Union), (2) Countries with a unified trade union movement, containing strong revolutionary minorities and where there exist small parallel revolutionary or reactionary trade union organizations (Germany, Great Britain, Italy). (3) Countries where the trade union movement is split, where the reformists are in the majority (Czecho-Slovakia, Holland, etc.) (4) Countries where the trade union movement is split and where the reformists have a majority due to the police terror of the bourgeois state (Jugo-Slavia, Roumania). (5) Countries where the trade union movement is unified, but where because of the political and police conditions the trade unions are affiliated to no international (Norway, Finland). (6) Countries where in addition to the central organizations independent, reactionary and revolutionary trade unions exist, thus causing the trade unions to be without any international affiliation (United States). (7) Countries where the trade union movement is split and the revolutionary workers have the majority (France). (8) Countries where in addition to the big organizations small syndicalist and anarcho-syndicalist organizations exist. In accordance with this we can formulate our tactics for the struggle for unity on broad outlines.

(1) In England the struggle for unity must be conducted on the following lines: (a) further consolidation of the Minority Movement, (b) struggle against groups and guild tendencies, (c) struggle to bring about the affiliation of all trade unions to the Trade Union Council, (d) struggle for the creation of industrial unions on the basis of factory council, (e) transformation of the general council into leading organ, (f) participation of the Trade Council in the national union congresses and development of its role in local organizations, (g) definite support of the left wing in all its endeavors to attain unity, (h) decisive struggle against the right wing, (i) struggle against the influence of imperialism on the working class, (j) struggle against the labor aristocracy in the labor party which is intent on stemming the onward march of the workers.

(2) In Germany the struggle for unity must be on the following lines: the creation and organization of an oppositional of revolutionary minority, intense struggle against the policy of expulsion and an endeavor to reunite the independent unions with the reformist unions. The party's chief endeavor should be in the direction of organizing the revolutionary opposition and the crystallization of a real left wing in the trade unions. The center of the struggle for unity must be in the factories and factory councils. The struggle for the factory councils signifies the struggle for unity.

(3) In Czecho-Slovakia. The struggle in the factories must be our chief aim where unity organs must be created and mixed committees must be established for the conduct of the common struggle. Following on these unity conferences must be convened of the factory councils and the trade unions according to districts and finally the national congress of trade unions must be initiated, to which social-democrats, national socialists and revolutionaries in the trade unions should be invited, including both Czechs and Germans; there exists no danger that at this congress we will be in a minority. What is necessary for an actual and not merely pretended fight for unity is the establishment of fractions in all trade unions in this country as well as in all others, as well as the formation and consolidation of groups sympathizing with us in the reformist and national socialist trade unions.

IN France: (a) The establishment of committees or commissions for unity in the factories and workshops;

Soviet Diplomacy Fights for Workers

Note to Poland on Murder of Exchange Prisoners

The following is the complete text of the note of protest addressed to the Polish envoy at Moscow by Georg Chitcherin, people's commissar for foreign affairs of the Soviet Union, on April 2, 1925, with regard to the murder of two Communist prisoners by a Polish police sergeant while they were being taken to the border to be exchanged for two Polish prisoners held by the Soviet government:

"AT the instruction of the Soviet government I have the honor to bring the following to your knowledge:

"On March 26 of the current year the Polish government gave its assent to the exchange of Messrs. Welczorkiewicz and Baginski, convicted in November, 1923, during the trial of a political organization, for Mr. Ussas, an expert attached to the Polish delegation on the mixed Russo-Polish re-evacuation commission, charged with crimes provided against in Articles 10, 157, part 2, 168 and 169a of the criminal code of the R. S. F. S. R., covering acts of sexual perversion and cruelty committed upon subordinates, and Mr. Laszkiewicz, sometime secretary of the former Polish consulate general at Tifiis, indicted under Article 66 of the criminal code.

"As was decided by both parties, the actual exchange was to take place on the 29th of March at the border station of Kolosovo, whither Messrs. Usas and Laszkiewicz, the individuals subject to exchange, were transferred in the custody of a representative of the people's commissariat for foreign affairs.

"At four o'clock on March 29, Mr. Kulikowski, the head of the Polish repatriation delegation, having up to that moment delayed carrying out the exchange for reasons not understood, announced to Mr. Plicha, the agent of the people's commissariat for foreign affairs of the Union of S. S. R., that the exchange could not be effected due to causes beyond his control.

"According to advices subsequently received from eye-witnesses, the details of which were confirmed by the Polish press, and likewise according to the oral report of Mr. Zelezinski, counselor on the Polish mission, Messrs. Baginski and Wieczorkiewicz were, in a situation precluding the possibility of supposing it a case of chance concurrence of circumstances or of individual criminal impulses, brutally murdered in the presence of representatives of the local and central Polish authorities and while in the custody of their convoy on the journey from Stolbtzy station to the place appointed for the exchange—Kolosovo station.

"In the name of the Soviet government I lodge the most vigorous protest against this crime committed by Polish authorities, a crime unheard of among civilized countries—the murder of Baginski and Wieczorkiewicz by an individual employed in the government's service almost at the moment of their exchange and under the eyes of Polish officials specially assigned in connection with this exchange.

"The indignation aroused among the broad masses of the Soviet Union's population by the above-mentioned crime, is further intensified by the fact that an analogous murder occurred in Poland on January 2, 1919, when a Russian Red Cross delegation, headed by Mr. Veselovsky and including M. Altman, Aivazova and the physician, Dr. Klotzman, was massacred while being deported across the frontier of Poland by the Polish authorities.

"The Soviet government therefore had grounds to expect that on this occasion the Polish government would adopt all the necessary measures to prevent the repetition of a similar occurrence and to deliver the persons to be exchanged, Messrs. Baginski and Wieczorkiewicz, to the exchange point unharmed.

"In conclusion, expressing the confidence that the Polish government will arrange for a strict and thoro investigation of the murder of the exchange prisoners, Messrs. Baginski and Wieczorkiewics, and that the guilty will suffer penalties in proportion to the gravity of the crime committed by them, I have the honor to notify you, Mr. Envoy, that the nonfulfillment of the conditions accepted by the Polish government for the personal exchange gives the Soviet government, with respect to the individuals at present designated for extradition to Poland under an exchange arrangement, complete freedom of action within the bounds of the laws in force in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

Note to Poland Regarding Abuse of Immunity by Polish Consul at Minsk.

ON April 1, 1925, the people's commissariat for foreign affairs of the Soviet Union addressed a note to Poland concerning the unjustifiable action of the Polish consul at Minsk, who from March 30 to April 1, took the liberty of sheltering in the consular premises and refused to surrender an individual summoned to appear as a defendant before a criminal court.

The note points out that it is contrary to international law for the consul or diplomatic representatives of any nation to engage in active opposition to the legal measures of organs functioning in the country which has received them. "Such a situation," it goes on to state, "would threaten the entire institution of diplomatic and consular representation." Far from giving him the right to conceal a refugee in his official premises, the priviileges of diplomatic immunity accorded to Mr. Karczewski, the Polish consul at Minsk, required him to refuse such shelter.

Stress is laid upon the fact that the passport of Mr. Ussas, the refugee in question, did not exempt him from prosecution under the Union's criminal code for his offense and, furthermore, that the accused had previously offered himself up voluntarialy for trial by the courts of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republics. Under the circumstances Mr. Karczewski's refusal to surrender Mr. Ussas upon his taking refuge in the consulate constituted "an abuse of his official privileges which renders his further presence in the post of consul or in any other capacity in the Soviet Union impossible."

The note concludes with a notice that Mr. Karczewski's exequatur is considered to have lapsed and requests the Polish diplomatic mission to instruct him to quit the territory of the Soviet Union without delay.

Soviet Government Withdraws Troops from Outer Mongolia.

ON March 6, Mr. Karakhan, Soviet ambassador to Pekin, delivered the following note to the Chinese minister of foreign affairs for transmission to his government:

In the beginning of the year 1921 part of the white guard armies routed by the Red Army, retreated to Mongolian territory, where, having united with elements hostile to the Soviet government, they created a base for new attacks upon the territory of the Soviet Republics with the aim of overthrowing the authority of the workers and peasants. Repeated requests addressed to the Chinese government for the liquidation of the white guard bands of Seminov, Ungern and others freely operating and organizing on the territory of Mongolia, led to no positive results, as the Chinese government was indifferent to these urgent appeals by the Soviet government. In view of this in the interests of the safety of its frontiers the Soviet government was constrained to conduct part of the Red Army into Mongolian territory and liquidate all the white guard bands and organizations which, organized and supported by foreign imperialism, were preparing to invade the Soviet Republics once more from Mongolia.

After the liquidation of the white guard armies part of the Red Army remained in Mongolia in the interest of the preservation of order and for the purpose of preventing the organization of white bands as a new menace to the safety of U. S. S. R.

With the establishment of order and the organization of proper authority the Soviet government gradually decreased the Red Army forces in Mongolia. However, the absence of relations between the Soviet government and China and the latter's participation in a coalition hostile to the Union of S. S. R. blocked the settlement of the question of the Red Army's presence on Mongolian territory, and only the agreement signed between the Union of S. S. R. and China on May 31, 1924, paved the way for the settlement of this question. According to the treaty signed on May 31, 1924, it was stipulated that after the question of the withdrawal of the forces from Outer Mongolia, namely, the question of the term of the withdrawal of these forces and the measures to be taken in the interest of the safety of the frontiers, had been decided at a conference, the Soviet government would remove its forces from outer Mongolia.

However, despite the fact that the conference was to be opened within a month from the signing of the treaty, internal circumstances prevented the Chinese government from doing so in due time. Meanwhile the Soviet government, altho in virtue of the agreement with China it might not have removed its forces until the period of their evacuation had been fixed at the conference and the requisite guarantees for the safety of the frontiers had been given by the Chinese government, decided, nevertheless, to withdraw its forces immediately without awaiting the conference.

I herewith have the honor to inform the Chinese government that the Soviet government has proceeded with the withdrawal of its forces from Outer Mongolia with the assent of the Mongolian government, and that at the present time the evacuation of the Red Army detachments from the territory of Mongolia is finished.

In bringing this to the government's knowledge I hope that the Chinese government will suitably appreciate this friendly step by the government of the Union of S. S. R. The government of the Union of S. S. R. also trusts that the circumstances which formerly constrained it to send the Red Army into Mongolian territory will not, in conjunction with altered conditions, recur in the future.

At the same time I earnestly express the confidence that the Chinese government will not neglect the happy occasion for settling the problem of the interrelations between two brother peoples by a peace-promoting arrangement with the Mongolian people.

The government of the Union of S. S. R., while regarding the interrelations in question as the exclusive affair of the Chinese and Mongolian peoples, will, nevertheless, be happy to witness the restoration of brotherly association between the Chinese and Mongolian peoples according to principles of justice and on the basis of their national aspirations, which will assure the further economic progress both of Outer Mongolia and of the northwestern region, and will likewise promote the development of economic and other relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Do You Cover Union Meetings?

Live Locals Do This.

In those units of the party where they have learned to "go to the masses"—going to union metings with literature, has been a systematically organized procedure.

In Chicago and other cities, this method is being developed to a high stage of efficiency with increasing results. The regular trade union meetings are apportioned off to branches in the district where they are held. The branch agents in turn arrange to have a squad organized (preferably of girls!) to cover regularly a certain union meeting with the DAILY WORKER, Workers Monthly and occasionally other literature. (The Little Red Library is well suited for this purpose.)

This kind of systematic sale of literature is important work that plants the seed for future Communist growth.

Is your local doing this? If not, then this matter should be taken up at the next meeting of the C. C. C. or your branch. In the field of organized labor is the material for future increase in the ranks of our party—why not work here?

MASTERS AND SLAVES (A Story of the Working Class)

By John Lassen

(Translated by Simon Felshin)

III.

JOE was already there waiting for him. His face was beaming.

"It ain't hard to find work here," he reported.

And Nickles told the story about Propapapadakis.

Then about his "things." What could he take along to Broadmoor? The excuse that the things were lost looked kind of fishy to them, it was old stuff.

"Come on, let's take a look around, maybe we'll get some kind of handbag from cardboard for twenty-nine cents."

"But then, you won't have a cent left"—Nickles objected feebly.

"I got a dollar. We can even have a meal. Come on . . . ."

They didn't get anything for twenty-nine, but they got a handbag for thirty-nine cents. And it was a pretty big one. The second-hand dealer gave them back the rags, and now the handbag was even filled with "things."

With satisfaction they hunted up a lunch room. And Nickles didn't even have to walk home, for his friend gave him the fourteen cents for carfare.

While they were eating Joe chatted about the new job.

"But what do you say about that, there ain't no union men here?"

This fact did not upset Nickles. To tell the truth he didn't have any high regard for union men. His principle was, not so much to fight against the boss, as to deceive him.

On this point Nickles and Joe had their first argument. But in spite of that they separated very good friends.

THE city.

Colorado Springs.

The air here is clean. There are no factories. Mountains are marked off against the blue sky far off. broad streets. Small houses, sanitariums, hospitals. The little houses have small projecting balconies. The sick lie there. Nine o'clock the city is already asleep. The electric lights go out.

Silence . . . Deep silence . . .

The sick love silence. After nine o'clock the city belongs to them entirely.

The lifeless city.

The city of the sick.

• • • •

THIS sickness is contagious.

However, it is not the bacilli which are infectious, but rather the spirit of the sick people. It is communicated to the workers.

There are no factories here, but there are workers. In hospitals and in business places, in automobile traffic and in barber shops . . . And streets are being built too . . . And many, many new houses.

But the spirit of the sick is communicated to the workers.

Silence. . . silence . . . silence. . . .

The bosses pay wages. As much as they please. The workers don't get much. They don't live well. Their days are passed in poverty.

And the bourgeois have big paunches.

IV.

THE white palace.

It lies directly at the foot of the mountains.

A terrace, and on the other side of the terrace an immense park. Shrubs and trees well kept. But here and there the park was allowed to grow wild. And among the big trees a glittering lake. Versailles in minature. Mrs. Broidin loves Versailles. In the music room there is a picture of it. This picture was made by a very bad artist; but it is dedicated to Mrs. Broidin: "In memory of a wonderful experience."

Mrs. Broidin loves Versailles . . .

For Versailles reminds one of splendor and sovereignty. She looks with great and deep respect upon royalty, which one might expect of an American woman. And she had picked Mr. Broidin as a husband only because he came from a highly distinguished family. Aristocratic English blood flows in his veins. That means a great deal, and what is more, it is blood of a family still prominent today. A pillar of the present.

The family of a leading statesman.

Oh, how deeply that affects Mrs. Broidin, altho she does not know this political leader. And the English statesman probably does not dream that he has any relatives in Colorado Springs—but that is of no consequence.

Not that he cares. But still Mr. Broidin subscribes to the New York Herald, just to keep himself well informed on the life and activity of his namesake.

That is his duty.

His social duty.

And anyway, the Broidin family feels very deeply on this question; it must discharge all social duties of every kind.

Birth carries obligations. In America too. And surely no one could possibly believe that English descent is in contradiction to Americanism. On the contrary. If anything, Mr. Broidin is more than one hundred per cent American.

In the city they always said about him: "He is our real hundred percenter."

And he certainly is that.

One hundred per cent.

He detests Catholics, Jews.

He has a burning hatred for radicals.

Together with Weeks and General Pershing he is of the opinion that the pacifists were just as destructive as the Bolshevists.

The measures taken by the government for getting rid of the red menace he considered as nothing less than right.

His grandfather left him a big library which he does not permit himself to neglect. The servant's first duty is to dust the books carefully; and furthermore he has arranged with a Parisian Russian publisher to receive every new royalist publication.

But Mr. Broidin does not get his views from these books, for he does not read. The only thing he reads are the headlines in the local papers and the New York Herald. This was sufficient for giving him his political bearings.

And yet he loves his library very much. The big mountains glitter in the distance. And there are such gorgeous leather arm-chairs. It is fine to muse in the cool, comfortable stillness within the depths of an arm-chair. He thinks of a good-looking, healthy girl, and after his meal it is a relief to be rocked from his clamorous, unsatisfied craving into sweet dreams.

How healthy it is to doze in the library.

MR. BROIDIN feels himself rather young. It was as tho around him stretched an empty space. His condition could best be described in the following words: a love had died in his heart, and he is now hankering for a new one. His wife had never satisfied him entirely, but now he finds her dry, boring, and withered.

Once in a while he would saunter into the parlor. At one end, there stood, in marble, the former Mrs. Broidin. Graceful, fragrant, full of fresh youth. That's how he would have liked her to be.

But today she seemed to him much like—an animated broom-stick.

And he was hankering after youth.

Flesh.

The whole forenoon he walked in the park.

Fresh fragrance.

He looked on as the workers leveled the paths. The machines mowed the grass. The watering pots covered the turf with water.

Five dogs followed his steps.

He played with the dogs.

And yet the terrible, tormenting desire did not leave him.

The desire for young, fresh woman's flesh.

THE work was not so simple as Nickles had imagined.

He had to be on his feet at 6 o'clock in the morning and to light the fire in the kitchen.

"These people use up more dishes than they eat food," he decided.

He stood in close relation to the dishes. He was, so to speak, an interested party—for he had to wash all those dishes together with Marguerite.

And then there were the knives.

Every one of them was Nickles' sworn enemy. The point is that silver knives have a peculiarity of having two parts. And each of the two parts must be polished separately.

Oh, those knives ! . . .

Mrs. and Mr. Broidin did not seem to care for the latest inventions. Mr. Broidin's great grandfather must have brot along the knife-polisher from England; it consisted of a board and sandpaper. One of Nickles' hardest problems was the correct and even application of the sandpaper.

And we must add, that only rarely did this problem find a successful solution.

The knives had to shine all in the same degree. On the knives that Nickles polished there were always traces of grains of sand to be seen.

Fortunately John was a good chap, and initiated him into the art of polishing knives. But he needed ten minutes for every single knife. Ten minutes!

"Isn't that too much?"—Nickles asked.

"No"—John answered him—"because the knives must be sharp and bright."

But sharpening the knives required a great exertion of muscular power. One got real muscle-fever from it. And he had no chance at all to sabotage at this work for the knives underwent a careful scrutiny before every meal.

"At Protopapadaki, we did this with a machine"—Nickles remarked.

. . . And then the carpet-cleaner . . .

"Why is there no electric vacuum-cleaner"—grumbled Nickles, in the meantime turning all his attention to the task of picking up every little grain of dust from the carpet.

Nickles had a host of such enemies. Among others the white doors with their tiny ornaments that he had to wash. But noticing that his predecessors had not attended to this work with such extraordinary care, he also tried to simplify it as much as possible. He took the tub. He dipped a rag and a piece of soap, got down by the door, passed over the parts that were especially dirty, but hardly got up from his sitting posture: that is how he rested from the hardship of polishing knives.

There was no chance however, of simplifying in the same way the work of cleaning the floors. For this work they commandeered even the gardners, and that's where the heavy drudgery came in, for the thick carpets had to be rolled up and had to be carried out together with the massive furniture.

"And how often!"—Nickles stormed. There was one big room for almost every day. And then he had to turn and turn! And hop around with the wax thru the whole room so that the floor would shine properly! No, this work was no pleasure.

When it was about time to go to eat Nickles was dead tired.

He thot again and again of how, outwardly, the liveried lackeys and servants in dress coats looked like idlers, but in reality they have to drudge just as bitterly.

Nickles asked John, when was his day off? He really wanted to put the question this way: "When is my day off?"—but then he thot that the other form was much finer.

"A day off?—there's no such thing really—only when the master and mistress are invited anywhere we have to go to the city too."

They spoke about this matter while they were eating.

Mary, the chambermaid, gave vent to her disgust at not being able to go to church Sundays.

"I never heard of such a thing"—Marguerite said.

Mary was of a warlike nature anyway. At lunch-time she used to tell of her experiences with Mrs. Broidin. Today there was a quarrel over the shoes. Yesterday the Mrs. had said that she would like to have the shoes shined only once in a long while, because the white "slippers" (slippers!—boats, regular boats!—Mary jeered) were very delicate. And today she already got a calling down for not shining the slippers.

"That's how crazy she is!"

They were unanimously of the opinion that Mrs. Broidin was absolutely crazy. And Marguerite who stood in awe of Mary was especially convinced of this. Ah, she despised the Mrs., but was entirely submissive to her. Her tyrannical bearing. Her sharp, commanding, imperious tone. Her cutting voice which tolerated no contradiction. Her constant demands. The three shrill rings of the bell. All of this filled her with fright. Made her powerless before the woman.

She blushed again and again.

She even felt at times that her knees trembled. And she did everything that she was ordered to do! Immediately. Without contradiction. She did not forget for a moment the idea that she was servant, and the other mistress. And that she was here to be ordered about.

• • • •

LUNCH was always a pleasant half hour. Lillian the cook looked on with kindly eyes, taking care that everyone ate heartily. She did not spare Mrs. Broidin's provision room in the least. The enjoyment was spoiled only because of the great hurry, for the master and mistress began to eat at one o'clock. The table had to be set. The table-service had to be scrutinized. Then there were the dishes.

The master and mistress never dined alone. If they didn't have any persons for guests, the dogs were present. The five dogs. The woman and man could not stand each other, they had to have something to distract them.

The beasts afforded a good deal of amusement. They leaped about. They played.

It is true of course that they blocked the way when the meal was being served, this was most unpleasant to Nickles and John. The Mr. and Mrs. were very much amused when one dog snapped at Nickles' leg as he served up the roast. In such cases it is the servant's duty to be silent. And Nickles felt in secret an overwhelming desire to give that dog a hard kick in the side, and he resolved to do it that very evening.

Ordinarily however there was almost always guests, which was something Nickles did not like at all. For guests meant still more dishes, more dinner service.

Marguerite was also of the same opinion.

• • • •

MARGUERITE was a very good girl.

She always helped Nickles at dish-washing, and he in turn would perform knightly services for her. For instance, leaves had to be laid under the cantaloupes. Nickles went down to the park willingly and plucked uniform-shaped fresh leaves from the lime-trees. (This was one of the basic requirements.) And he also helped her to cut up pumpkins. He took the long, thin, sharp, knife in his hand, lifted it up in the air and like an executioner he struck down with it upon the pumpkin.

"See! Sh, sh. . . that's how they cut off Propapapadakis' head."

"Oh, oh, oh"—Marguerite cried with horror—"that must have been frightful."

The repeated the performance several times, then he picked out a very big and fine-looking cantaloupe.

"This here is Gunaris!"

Marguerite felt real pity for Cantaloupe-Gunaris, which met a wretched death under Nickles' executioner's axe.

• • • •

"BUT now I'm goin' to get even on that dog"—thot Nickles, looking out at the animals thru the window.

"If I only knew which one took a bite at me . . . Maybe I can recognize him . . ."—he thot.

But . . .

One dog came crawling to him. Gently. And put its head under his hand. He would like to stroke the dog. It was Dolly. And the others also leaped about him, wagged their tails.

Poor dogs . . . You too are servants.

And he stroked Dolly.

The Latest Wave of Terror in Poland

By T. DOMBAL.

Prison—this is the word which under the present conditions in Poland does not only mean for all revolutionary fighters in Poland the loss of their freedom for many, many years, but above all a time of physical tortures and inhuman, degarding treatment by the bourgeois hangmen.

The prisons of "democratic" Poland with regard to the barbarian treatment of the prisoners, have by far exceeded the sad fame of the czarist dungeons and can today only compete with the prisons of the colonial countries.

Centers of Disease.

To the unheard of sanitary conditions in the wet and dirty cells with masses of vermine, making the prisons a center of serious diseases and ruining the prisoners for life, to the disgusting and insufficient food, of which every prisoner, who does not receive additional food from the outside, will gradually starve after a period of one to one and a half years, to the systematic maltreatment of the prisoners, are added the degrading tortures which are intended to hurt the human dignity of the prisoners. Everyone, from the lowest prison guard to the director, uses all possible means to torture and degrade the prisoners.

Contain 7,000 Reds.

At present the Polish prisons contain about 6,000 to 7,000 political prisoners, a number which does not decrease, but on the contrary, grows from day to day.

The Polish political prisoners are divided by the authorities in a number of different cathegories according to the character of their offense: State treason, revolt, resistance against the authorities, desertion from the army, offenses against the laws of public order and even falsification of documents constitute, particularly with regard to the illegal existence of the Communist Party and the trade unions, a big number of "crimes."

According to the officials' statements contained in the "Statistical Vestnik of Retch Pospolitika" (chapter XXII, Administration, Justice, page 172-186) in the year of 1923 there are in Poland 749 courts (apart from the military courts) 340 prisons and 34 jails. There are 5,386 judges, prosecutors and their assistants. The number of police officials in Poland was 75,989 in 1923, and together with the frontier guards 95,377. It must be stressed that there are 32,760 ordinary policemen and 953 commissars and sub-commissars and 2,289 secret police agents, quite apart from the many persons who are paid specially for every service.

As a sign of the growth of white terror we must mention that there were in 1922 only 1,854 secret agents. One spy usually has to supervise 10 to 20 persons. This conveys a general idea of the appartus which has as its purpose the destruction of the labor movement and of the liberation movement of the peasantry.

Apart from desertion from the army of which there were alone in 1921, 15,897 cases registered by the authorities, we must consider the "crimes" which are considered as political crimes. In 1922 the police had registered the following numbers of these: State treason and other political crimes, 2,920 cases; revolt and resistance against the authorities, 24,219 cases; disturbance of public order (strikes, etc.), 24,203 cases, thus a total of 61,342 cases.

If we even suppose that 75 per cent of these cases are not in direct connection with the class conscious political movement, there remain still 15,000 cases. Supposing even that 20 per cent of these prisoners have been released after some days from the police jails, that 30 to 40 per cent have been released after the examination thru the judge, there still remain 6,000-7,000 persons who have to pass thru the imprisonment on remand which usually lasts in Poland up to two years.

Extend White Terror.

There are still other official statements—also published in the Statistical Westnik, which prove the extension of white terror. In 1921, 2,873 persons were tried for "crimes against the state" and in the year 1922, 4,142 persons were tried for the same "crime." Similar figures for 1923 and 1924 are not available, but we know that white terror continuously increased during these years. It must furthermore be added that in 1922, 478 accused were sentenced to death and that 56.4 per cent of all death sentences have been carried out.

How can we explain this extension of white terror in Poland?

Above all we must not forget that in those countries where the intensification of class antagonism reaches its culmination point, the ruling class throws away the mask of democracy and increases its terror to the utmost. The growth of white terror proves the increase of the revolutionary struggle and the approach of the decisive battle.

An International Struggle.

Above all we must remember the historic mission which Poland has to carry out for international capital, i. e., to play the role of a bulwark, a barrier of international counter-revolution. For this reason the feudal-bourgeois Poland must be on the one hand a war camp and on the other a country of prisons.

Lenin realized and appreciated this circumstance and the importance of the conquest of Warsaw by Communism for the international revolution. For this reason the working class and the revolutionary peasantry of Poland, who are fighting on this extremely difficult post at the revolutionary front and try to overthrow this center of international counter-revolution, must receive the unanimous support of the workers of the whole world.

The Convict Ship Comes to Chicago

By JAN WIT.

IN the 18th century England's economic and toil system was such that the people were forced at times to snitch a fowl or so from the large estates of the lords. For this they were given when caught the death sentence and often banishment to Australia, then the convict isle of Great Britain. Numerous convict ships were used and each captain vied with the other to excell in creating instruments of torture.

The pride of this fleet, "The Success," is now on exhibition in Chicago at State St., and the river, Captain John Price, son of Sir Rose Price, was held most responsible for the inhuman cruelties practiced on the hulks. He certainly invented some of its more exquisite tortures. Venturing too close to a chain gang of thirty-two "Success" convicts, who had been taken ashore to build a prison, some one bounced a stone hammer on his head so emphatically that he never smiled again.

Seven Were Hanged.

All the convicts in the gang were tried for the murder, fifteen of them convicted, and seven hanged. Some one put in a plea for one of them, a youth, named Burke, on account of his age, 16. But it was found he had been a convict for five years so must necessarily be a desperate character, so he was hanged, too.

But the murder brot about an investigation, and Australia was shocked. Orders were given to pull all the seacocks and sink every hulk forthwith—and it was done. The "Success" lay at the bottom of the ocean for five years. Due to some legal hocus-pocus she had not been condemned properly with the others. So some enterprising American got permission, presumably for a pecuniary consideration, to raise her; which they did. She was scarcely damaged by her five years' immersion, due perhaps to her Burmese teak, and tremendously strong construction.

She proceeded under her own sail to England, and from there to the United States. At present she is waiting your inspection for the "nominal charge" of fifty cents. It is estimated that over 20 million people paid admission, which would make around ten million in profits. Surely that is going the English one better, exploiting ancient torture devices.

Capitalists do not care about some one showing old devices of torture, as democracy has more subtle weapons existing today. When some one begins exposing these—beware.

Stole $15—Gets Life.

One of the five hulks was devoted to the use of women convicts. There was no material difference in the treatment or accommodations. Elizabeth Stott and her child (small children were forced to accompany their parents and undergo the same penalties) made the mistake of forging a check for fifteen dollars, for which, at the age of 28, she was sent up for life.

Captain Melville, whose crime consisted of stealing a potato pie, value two pence, from a baker's cart, was also given a long term. Donovan was a case of mistaken identity. He served 16 years and died from the consequences two months too late to learn that some one else confessed to the crime he was sentenced for.

Harry Powers, he was Irish too, was transported for shooting the squire's game.

Of course, the men mentioned are not, perhaps, the worst cases of persecution of the "rank and file" as the bourgeoise of 1790 would say, as it would take a large "Who's-Who" to include them all.

Let us look at some of the "Convict Jewelry" aboard the "Success." There are the following—the airless dungeons and condemned cells, the whipping posts, manacles, branding irons, leaden tipped cat-o-nine tails, the coffin bath, the iron lady and implements of torture that would make the Spanish inquisition pale into insignicance and all because the offenders were workingmen who were forced to steal in order to live.

How They Used Convict Jewelry.

Upon arrival the convict was fitted by a convict smith with a pair of ankle irons weighing thirty-five pounds, and he was placed in a cell in the lower deck, being allowed one hour out of every twenty-four on the upper deck for air and exercise. The cells were supposed to house not more than three people, but due to demand for more space than was available, they sometimes contained five or six.

At the end of two years, if the convict's conduct had been good, the thirty-five pound ankle chains were smitten off, and a seven-pound ankle chain substituted. Those who attempted to commit suicide, either by jumping overboard or in any other way, had an iron ball of fifty pounds attached to them.

For very determined attempts a device invented by Captain Price was used. It consisted of an iron neck band and an iron waist band connected by so short a chain that the wearer was bent almost double; this in turn was attached to the ankle chains. A man wearing this device, if he fell down, would have to wait until some one picked him up and put him on his feet again.

As the convicts, crippled with chains, could neither walk up or down the companion ladders, a sort of elevator arrangement, worked by a windlass, was used for bringing them up and lowering them into the holds.

Are We Much Better Off Today?

If you get a chance to walk her decks, you may still see the ruts and grooves worn in the wood by the dragging chains. This is not a medieval tale of capitalists' treatment of workers. It happened yesterday.

Look thru the penal institutions of today—the police stations with the third degree, the bureau, the rubber hose, the goldfish, machine guns, poison gas, state police strikebreakers and what not.

Substantially we are better off than the workers of 1790—but, considering the strides of science—the highly centralized form of production—relatively how much better off are the average workers—with a standing army of two million unemployed—deaths, starvation and suicide resulting therefrom?

Material for the Revolutionary Museum

NEW YORK.—There is a revolutionary museum in Moscow, in which there is gathered all the material pertaining to the revolutionary movement of Russia. One section of this museum, which was established by the "society of former political prisoners and exiles," is devoted to the life, sufferings and activities of former political prisoners and exiles, this section being called the "museum of prisons and exile."

This society is collecting material consisting of correspondence from prisons and from exile, letters and articles about prisoners and the prisons, programs of affairs to aid the prisoners, pictures and post cards, photographs of the prisoners and the jails, etc.

The society has representatives in all countries to collect the material. The representative in this country is Comrade Rose Baron, who has been authorized to collect all possible material for the society in America. Comrade Baron asks all sympathizers and interested persons to assist her in collecting the material. Comrade Baron was very active in the "relief society for political prisoners and exiles in Siberia," before the Russian revolution and has already sent to Moscow the archives which were in her possession. This, however, is not sufficient.

There are hundreds of Russians in this country who were in Russian prisons and in exile under the czars, and who have very valuable material. This material should be sent to Rose Baron, 108 East 14th St., New York City.

C'mon Over!

If you have a day, an hour, or a minute to spare—why, c'mon over. There is so much work piled up on the small force in our office that we need your help so very badly, to insert letters, address, seal and stamp envelopes and ever so many other little jobs that have us swamped. If you volunteer your services that's a fine way to help the DAILY WORKER. We'll be glad to see you—so just for fun, c'mon over!

(b) the establishment of committees based on equal representation for the fight against the high cost of living, against fascism, etc.; (c) the convocation of district and industrial conferences under the banner of unity; (d) the convening of a congress of the revolutionary trade unions parallel to the reformist trade union congress and a proposal for the fusion of both congresses on the basis of proportional representation according to the number of members represented; (e) no individual fusions with the reformist trade unions, isolated in districts or trades; (f) a fight against the autonomist aims of the anarcho-syndicalists; (g) the fight for the unity of the trade union movement is to be carried on by the G. G. T. U.; and the party is to offer the latter its fullest assistance. The demagogic slogan of the reformists—entrance of the revolutionary unions into the reformist unions—must be replied to with the slogan of unity from below.

IN the United States the fight must be carried on for the consolidation and strengthening of the Trade Union Eeducational League, and for the creation of the necessary press and the fusion of the independent union with the main trade unions. What is necessary here is an especially vigorous fight against the corrupt bureaucracy furthermore, the establishment of fractions and revolutionary minorities, and active participation in all elections to the local and central organs, to the conferences and congresses. When the bureaucrats expel entire local organisations care must be taken that the organizations do not disintegrate; they must be maintained intact and must fight for the re-admission of all unionists without exception.

Special attention to be paid to the unity of the different races, and where the unions of the whites admit no Negroes, special Negro unions must be established. Since the workers in American never participated in the international trade union movement, the international character of the class struggle should be particularly emphasized, as well as the necessity for the entry of all independent unions into the American Federation of Labor and for the creation of a unified trade union international, etc.

The sabotage of unity organized by the Second International and the right wing of the Amsterdam International can only be broken if we succeed in drawing the masses of workers into the struggle. The focal point of the fight for unity must be the factories. To this end the factory councils should be conquered where they exist and committees or commissions for unity created where non-existant. At the same time mixed commissions can be established for the joint struggle, composed of workers belonging to different unions. On the other hand it is important to establish contact between the factory councils and committees for unity according to district and industry. We must let no conflict, no strike pass without creating a unity organ selected by the working masses. The fight for unity from below in the factories not only does not exclude the simultaneously fight for unity from above, but presupposes it—in the forms corresponding to the specific peculiarities of the country in question.

In Moscow a basic understanding was arrived at between the British and Soviet Russian comrades to create a bloc in the fight for the unity of the international trade union movement. In the negotiations for joint action neither party was blind to the existing differences of opinion, but both realized that if the All-Russian Trade Union Council, affiliated to the R. I. L. U. and the general council of the British trade unions, which is affiliated to the Amsterdam Trade Union Federation, form a bloc, nobody in the world will be able to prevent unity. The representatives of the British trade unions endeavored to induce the Amsterdam International to enter into negotiations, but in vain. This made necessary a conference of the Russian and British trade unions. This conference, which begins on April 2, must be energetically supported by all Communist parties no matter what its practical results may be. We must realize that the rapprochement of the Soviet and British trade unions is a circumstance of extraordinary historical importance. The move of the British proletariat to the left changes the ratio of forces in the struggle between imperialism and Communism.

OF course, in order to unite the trade union movement, which is now divided along innumerable lines, into a homogenous fighting battalion the slogan: "Convocation of an international unity congress and dissolution of the Amsterdam International and the R. I. L. U. into a unified international" remains in force. The idea of the international unity congress must be spread amongst the masses. The left elements in Amsterdam, who are already beginning to realize that there is no other way out of this condition of split, must be won for this struggle and for the fusion of both internationals at this congress.

The trade union movement in the Near, Middle and Far East has made enormous progress in the last few years. One only need mention the trade union movement in Japan, China, the East Indies, India and Egypt to understand the entire significance of a union of the trade union movements of the East and West. The trade union movements in the Near, Middle and Far East are to a considerable extent linked up with the R. I. L. U. But there is a number of trade union organizations which belong to no international. It is necessary to bring the trade unions of Japan as well as of the colonial and semi-colonial countries into the united proletarian trade union family. In order to obtain the active participation of the trade unions in these countries in the united international, the Communist parties and the trade unions of the mother countries maintain close contact with those in the colonies. In the course of the past year something has been done in this direction. This task must be followed as before, and we must set ourselves the practical daily task of drawing the labor movement of the Near Middle and Far East into the fight for the united international. The unity of the trade movement is directed against the bourgeoisie and their social-democratic lackeys. The fight for the united front and for trade union unity will bring the revolutionary workers closer to the workers still in the reformist and other organizations and will transfer our struggle against social-democracy to the very depths of the laboring masses. The fight for unity will only then be successful, if the Communist parties in every country become a mass force to be reckoned with. To this end it is necessary that more and more nuclei and fractions be built up in all existing trade union organizations, that the entire opposition within these organizations be united, that we gain every foot of ground from the reformists and that our fight against international reformism be increased to the utmost.

The organizational unity of the trade union movement does not signify an ideological rapprochement or an armistice with the reformists; it signifies the hundredfold intensification of the fight against reformism.

AT present the international labor movement is going thru a peculiar period of quiet and of the consolidation of its forces. Of course this is only a conditional quiet, for the intensified class struggles are continuing, but an immediate struggle for power is not going on. This present stage of the class struggle requires new, more perfect and more modern forms and methods of trade union tactics. The "Leninist link," which must now be grasped with all our strength "in order to hold the entire chain." is the slogan of unity, ofgenuine, sin- the slogan of unity, of genuine, sin- necessary that the slogan of unity from below be made our battle cry in the factories and workshops, that committees for proletarian unity be created, that factory councils be fought for, that fractions and nuclei be established in all trade union organizations, that a sincere coalition be entered into with the left elements in the reformist trade unions, that an opposition of the revolutionary minority be created and organized, that the Anglo-Russian trade union bloc be supported to our utmost, that the fight against the Second International and the right wing of the Amsterdam trade union international be intensified, that a fight be carried on for the convocation of an international unity congress, that the trade unions of the Near, Middle and Far East be drawn into the fight for unity, and that the Red International of Labor Unions be supported and consolidated. If we do all this the masses will be with us.

The more successful our fight for unity will be, the shorter will the period be still separating us from the immediate struggle for power. The fight for unity brings us near to the social revolution. That is the historical significance and the importance of the slogan of the fight for the unity of the international trade union movement.

Russian Meetings in Chicago District

Comrade Alexander Chramov, national organizer of the Russian section of the Workers Party who is touring the United States will be in the Chicago district from May 12 to May 26. He will speak in the cities of this district the following dates:

A John Reed Junior

This is a member of the John Reed Pioneer group of Soviet Russia. The youngster is proudly exhibiting the name of the group, John Reed, which they wear on their caps.

In the United States, in the city of Chicago, there is also a John Reed Junior group functioning quite successfully. To celebrate the first anniversary of their organization the group is giving a surprise party and dance, Saturday eve., May 23, at the Workers' Home, 1902 W. Division St. There will be an interesting program for children and for adults. They promise something new in entertainments. Besides that, there is a surprise. Admission for children will be 10 cents and for adults 20 cents.

Max Shachtman, editor of the Young Worker, will bring greetings from the Pioneers of Soviet Russia.

Don't forget the date and place, Saturday, May 23, at 1902 W. Division street.

300 Mines Idle in Illinois

of the delegation that that included the demand for the six-hour day and five-day week.

Hardly one of the thousands of locals but had a resolution in the convention demanding such, but they were spurned and never incorporated in our demands. The contract was accepted after the fiasco at Jacksonville because the miners did not know what else to do, and after the capitalist press had propagandized the country and the labor fakers had indulged in a red baiting orgy. It is safe to say that if the miners had been permitted to vote on the contract before it was signed, if they had been asked, "Are you satisfied to accept this as a contract?" they would have sent it down to defeat amidst their contempt and scorn. The miners will continue to fight for a six-hour day and five-day week.

It is interesting to note the reasons given by the labor bureaucracy why they did not fight for a shorter-hour week was because of the competition of the unorganized field. J. L. Lewis said it was impossible to organize them, therefore, according to that, it will be impossible to ever get a shorter workday.

The present gesture at organizing is camouflage designed to fool the militant miners and attempt to have them believe a serious attempt at organizing is being made.

If John L. Lewis wanted to organize the West Virginia field and the other fields at this time, John, with his vice president, Murray, would lead an army into West Virginia that would organize it in six months or less. With concentration on the one district, Lewis at the head, assisted by Murray, the international executive board and field workers, auditors, organizers, district presidents, vice presidents, district board members and field workers, sub-district presidents and vice presidents, and add to that the aid of class conscious workers with the many union men who are only waiting a chance to organize, and the battle would be won in a short period of time.

IN view of the fact that we have no contract now, since the operators have violated it on every hand, shut down the mines in violation of it to create a condition among the miners that will make them glad to accept a reduction in wages when they feel like offering them the proposition—in view of that fact we will not be violating our "sacred" signature if we throw every mine in America idle at this time. Do that and we will not have to go any further than West Virginia. The few remaining fields would jump at the chance to follow such a lead.

The whole of the nation's coal industry at a standstill would make it easy for John L. Lewis to sign up a six-hour day and five-day week for the American mining industry, and not for a part of it only. That is the kind of policy worthy of the president of the fighting miners, and John L. Lewis, I say to you now, be not afraid of support; we guarantee we would go thru hell with you on an organizing campaign of that kind, if necessary.

At the present time of writing, the miners' officials are indicted for violation of an ancient injunction secured by the West Virginia Coal Company during the reign of Moses, and the energy of the officials, their time and the miners' money will be spent with high-priced lawyers, and irrespective of the outcome of the lawsuit, more injunctions will be issued, and so on, ad infinitum.

The only way to kill the injunction evil is to let the lawyers stay at home, and with our leaders at our head, the miners of West Virginia, coupled with a few thousand miners that would gladly follow Lewis into West Virginia, violate injunctions en masse, and all the injunctions from here to hell would avail them naught.

THE foregoing will not be done, because they don't want the miners organized. Instead they are going to aid us by weeding us out of the industry, "putting us on the bum," to look for work in some other industry. Two hundred and fifty thousand of us have to go—miners with their sons, and workers perhaps from other industries who have been forced out because of depression therein.

Every industry in the land is in a similar condition with unemployment. The workers have not been paid enough to buy back their products. They have produced too much, so they will have to starve—capitalism's cure for unemployment.

Weed us out; where will we go? Many of us have been as long in the industry as any of our officials. Does the weeding out policy apply to the officialdom also? If so, why don't they put it into effect? We don't notice any of them have resigned yet, and what is more, they won't as long as there is any mazuma in the treasury.

The weeding out only applies to the workers, and a certain kind of worker, the militant miners who are exposing the reactionary officialdom. We have to work to live, and refuse to be weeded out. Rather we will fight on for an equal share of the available work in the mines, and still demand that our officials fight for an equal division of all work in all mines for all miners.

CONDITIONS in Illinois have reached a crisis. Our officials from the president down thru the vice president, the district executive board, the sub-district machine and field workers, are in panic. They see the awakened miners arising en masse to politically bury them. Their bloody clutches on the miners' treasury are about to be pried loose. They see the votes of 100,000 miners in the last election about to engulf them, and they turn in their agony to their natural friends and allies, deception and lying, constitution busting, red baiting, expulsions, election stealing, and betrayals to the coal operators.

Right and left the workers are losing their conditions, lost thru the traitorous decisions by our officials, and in their haste to show the common enemy their utter subserviency to their interests, they even discard their usual caution and veneer of common decency in return for promised bossing jobs with the coal operators when the miners kick them out.

In preparation for the wholesale delivery many sub-district and district officials have been supplied with first-class mine manager papers, even in spite of the fact that some of them are totally ignorant and can hardly read their own names in print, far less work out problems in mine ventilation and cubic measurements. And these are the future mine managers whom thousands of miners' lives will depend on.

IS it any wonder the miners of Illinois are feverishly organizing and so much bitterness is shown in the mass meetings taking place thruout the state? The miners know what they want and intend to have it. They are demanding a special district convention to take up the question of unemployment and financial relief, and also the irregularities of the last elections, and out of this many believe and expect to see the downfall of the Illinois bureaucracy.

Aside from this immediate situation a campaign for nationalization of the mines with workers' control, six-hour day, five-day week, with unemployment benefits from the industry and minimum weekly wage, etc. No one knows better than the labor fakers their treason to the workers is at an end. Proof of that is found in the fact that they have received their bossing papers.

By T. J. O'FLA

WILLIAM LEE of the trainmen's union has announced his intention to call a conference of representatives of "capital and labor" engaged in the railroading industry with the object in view of settling all differences arising between the wage slaves and their masters, without resorting to the use of the strike weapon. In practice, the strike, or any form of struggle against the employing class has been repudiated long ago by the official leadership of the trade union movement. Even men like Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers declaring that the strike is out of date.

WHAT Lee has done does not differ in principle from the policy followed by other brotherhood labor leaders during recent years. Stone, who is Lee's rival, has blossomed out as a banker, investment broker and scab coal operator. Every one of the other railroad union chiefs is equally willing to join with the capitalists in running industry, the benefits going to the capitalists and to the labor leaders. Company unionism, in its original form,, has not been a decided success. But the trade unions are rapidly becoming company unions, in reality with the consent and assistance of the labor leaders.

NO doubt "Bill" Lee had a hunch that Warren S. Stone was planning to call a united front conference of rail workers and employers in the near future and beat him to it. By doing this, Lee gets the jump on Stone, but it is very doubtful if a conference will be held. Lee knows what he is about and so does Stone. They are both equally obnoxious to honest trade unionists, but Lee does not even try to maintain the camouflage of being a trade unionist.

THAT the president of a large labor organisation should be able to plan such a scabby conference and get away with it shows what a mountain of obstacles the militants in the unions have to overcome. With labor leaders drawing salaries of from $10,000 to $25,000 a year and heavy investors in industry, it is obvious that they cannot be expected to fight for the interests of the poor slaves who work eight, nine and ten hours a day for a wage of four or five dollars.

JOHN BULL is looking at the French operations in Morocco with an anxious eye. France already controls a tremendous stretch of territory in northern Africa. With the Spanish forces practically eliminated if France succeeds in defeating the Riffians there is nothing to stop her pushing into the interior as far as she pleases. Britain does not like this in the least. It would not be surprising to see a group of British pacifists organize a publicity campaign in the near future against French atrocities in Morocco.

THE hypocrisy of the professional pacifists is shown to good advantage in colonial wars of independence. Not a yelp is raised by them when the British are ravaging Egypt, India and other countries with fire and sword or when France, or Spain are committing their barbarities on the natives of Morocco. The pacifists do not like to see the big capitalist powers slaughter each other. Neither do the international bankers. Cutting the throats of natives seems to be good sport. Destroying the wealth of the capitalist powers is another and entirely different matter.

MANY DEAD, 225 MISSING IN 2ND RUHR DISASTER

Morgan Steal Blamed for Mine Blast

BERLIN, Germany, May 17.— Two hundred and twenty-five coal miners are missing, with eight known dead, in the second terrific mine disaster which has occurred in the Ruhr in the last four months.

The explosion imprisoned 235 miners in a shaft at Dortsfeld, near Dortmund. Following a dynamite explosion in a dummy shaft on the lower level, numerous cave-ins occurred in the poorly repaired workings, trapping the men. Poisonous gases quickly spread thru the workings.

The Ruhr miners have felt the brunt of the Dawes plan for enslaving the German workers. The allies, under the leadership of the Morgan-Wall Street banking syndicate, have demanded plunder from the German government aand the government, controlled by the industrialists, and with the co-operation of the socialists, has transferred this overwhelming burden to the German workers.

Miners Pay The Price.

The Ruhr miners were severely taxed by the occupation of the Ruhr by the allies. In the boycott which followed the occupation, the miners were unemployed for many weeks. The government later compensated the mine owners, by donating to them the profits which they declared they would have made by keeping the mines running, but the miners never received compensation.

The industrialists made this occupation, and the Dawes plan the excuse for increasing the hours and reducing the pay of the Ruhr miners. They were forced to work an extra hour a day, with no pay, and were told this was in the interest of "patriotism."

On February 12, an explosion in the Stein mine, killed 135 miners. The Ruhr miners knew that this explosion was due to the criminal negligence of the mine owners, who accepted the Dawes plan conditions, and made the miners pay the price.

Fear Many Dead.

A wave of resentment has swept over the Ruhr following this second disaster. The miners declare they have been betrayed by the social-democrats and the monarchists alike, both of whom have raised their taxes, increased living costs, and approved the move of the industrialists lowering their living standard and increasing their hours of pay. The miners declare they have become the colonial slaves of the international bankers, and their government has become merely an appendage to the rule of foreign bankers.

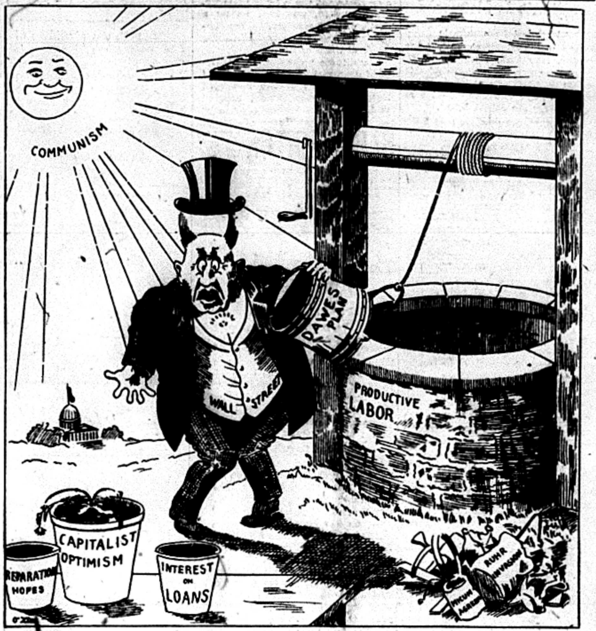
More than 500 miners were in the shaft at the time of the explosion. At last reports, less than 300 had been brought to the surface, eight bodies were found, and it is feared 225 more have perished.

The French troops are still in the Cologne territory, maintained at German expense, which also is paid for by the German workers.

Military Dictatorship in Spain Engenders a Guerilla War Reprisal

LONDON, May 17.—Col. Ferreira Amarii, chief of the military dictatorship state police at Lisbon, was wounded by four bullets fired by members of a supposed "red legion," according to Central News dispatches from Lisbon yesterday afternoon. A squad of police rescuers were ambushed by the same group and one wounded. The assailants escaped.

WANTED: A Plan to Enforce the Dawes Plan



EXPEL KAPLAN, COMMUNIST, IN C. L. U. AT 'LOS'

Reactionary War on the Militants Is Renewed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., (By Mail)—The Central Labor Council of Los Angeles at its last meeting again demonstrated its reactionary colors. It renewed the war against Communists by expelling Fred W. Kaplan, delegate from the Office Employes' Union No. 15,251.

Kaplan had for some months, along with other members of the council been conducting a campaign in his union and in the Central Labor Council, for the unionization of the so-called "labor bank" employees. The bank, which had been opened on Apr. 26, 1924, has thru its vice-president and manager, threatened to discharge the employees if they joined the Office Employes' Union. Various efforts of the union to have the officials of the Central Labor Council, who actually control the bank, to assist the union in getting these employees in, have been unsuccessful. The excuse has always been given by these officials that circumstances and the time were not opportune. The last fight on this question occurred about six weeks ago, and occupied the entire evening. The officials of the council were compelled to force it into executive session, lest facts detrimental to the drawing of their dividends might be divulged in the Council. As these officials control almost one hundred per cent the delegates of the council, the administration had no difficulty, at the end of the discussion, to secure a sufficient vote for the postponement of action on this question for another 120 days.

Talk on Recent Election

Kaplan had also been active on the floor of the council in urging the delegates to stop the time-worn practice of indorsing politicians for political office, and to work for the election of labor men only, thru a labor or workers' party. At the last meeting, Kaplan rose during the "Good and Welfare" order of business, and delivered the following remarks:

"Brother Chairman, Sisters, and Brothers:—We have spoken tonight somewhat on the question of the civic

SEATTLE UNIONISTS RALLY TO DEFENSE OF MEMBERS ILLEGALLY UNSEATED FROM LABOR COUNCIL

SEATTLE, Wash., May 17.—That organized labor in Seattle will resist the attempts of the reactionary elements in the Central Labor Council to expel militant workers, is shown by the fact that scores of petitions protesting against these expulsions, circulated by union members, are being rapidly filled with signatures of thousands of bona fide union men.

In the first union meeting where members were asked to sign the petition every member present signed except two and in the second union only five

NEW YORK COOKS AND WAITERS OPEN WAR ON THE EVILS OF TIPPING

NEW YORK, May 17.—Cooks and waiters who are employed in the leading restaurants, hotels and cabarets are opposed to the tipping evil and have started a campaign against it. At a general meeting held at Bryant Hall, they went on record as being in favor of abolishing that system.

Jules Chastonay, secretary of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, said, "We have opened the campaign to take in all cooks and waiters who want to join a movement to abolish the tipping system. The tipping system is the greatest evil of the culinary industry and can be abolished when 100 per cent union conditions prevail."

LABOR HATING SOUTH ON TRIAL IN SCOPES CASE

Contest Legality of Anti-Evolution Law

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 17.—The labor hating traditions of the reactionary south, with its child labor, lynchings, beggars' wages, and anti-union history, will be on trial during the first week in August, when John Thomas Scope faces the court in Dayton, Tenn., for teaching evolution in the public schools.

Scopes was arrested charged with violating the recently passed state law prohibiting the teaching of scientific truths which contradict the stories stories told in the bible. Well known lawyers, ever hungry for publicity, have volunteered to enter the case.

For the prosecution, William Jennings Bryan, who was recently employed for the purpose at a good salary by the World Christian Fundamentalist Association, backed by the manufacturers, will fight to convict Scope of telling the truth.

Clarence Darrow, who gained much notoriety last year for saving the necks of the two young millionaire perverts, Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, has volunteered to aid the defense, which is contesting the constitutionality of the law. Dudley Field Malone has also agreed to act on the defense.

RUSSIAN WORKERS STAGE MONSTER DEMONSTRATIONS AGAINST DEATH SENTENCES GIVEN BULGARIAN REDS

MOSCOW, Russia, May 17.—The workers' and peasants' thruout Soviet Russia have staged great public demonstrations in which hundreds of thousands took part, against the carrying out of the death sentences against Bulgarian Communists who have been framed-up by the fascist Zankov government.

King Boris has commuted the death sentence of 24 Communists who were arrested by the fascists after the bombing of the Sveti Kral cathedral, to life imprisonment. But there are 69 other Communists and militant workers who have been sentenced to be executed.

The Zankov government made the cathedral bombing the pretext for murdering hundreds of anti-fascist workers. Many Communists have been shot down in the streets.

For Bulgarian Communists, a prison term is equivalent to a death sentence, as Communists are tortured

WIN STRIKE AT BRIDGEPORT OF 700 A. C. W. AGAINST OPEN SHOP

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 17.—Strikebreakers are discharged and the union shop is recognized in the settlement of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union strike against Wolf & Abrams at Bridgeport, Conn. Seven hundred workers were involved.

"BOYCOTT DANISH SHIPS!" CRY MARINE TRANSPORT WORKERS OF ALL EUROPE IN UNITED FRONT

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 17.—A general strike of transport workers looms in all west European ports against all Danish shipping as the Norwegian transport workers yesterday began a strike boycott of all Danish shipping to prevent it from being diverted to Norwegian ports, thus making a united front with the Danish transport workers.

The Danish transport workers have been promised the support of the Swedish, Finnish, German and Dutch transport workers in their battle against the Danish shipping combine, and the strike boycott laid down on Danish shipping may spread to all these countries and perhaps to other ports thruout the world.

BRITISH LABOR LEADERS WILL VISIT AMERICA; CONSERVATIVES COME TO SABOTAGE UNITY MOVE

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The contest in the European labor movement between the left wing which, in the Amsterdam International stands for world trade union unity and is fighting for it thru the medium of the Anglo-Russian unity committee, and the right wing which is trying to sabotage and prevent unity with the 6,500,000 revolutionary Russian unionists, is to be carried to America by the visit of representatives of both wings of the British unions to the United States.

A. A. Purcell of the British Trade Union Congress, president of the Amsterdam International and one of the leading advocates of international trade union unity in the Anglo-Russian unity committee, is to be the official fraternal delegate of the British unions to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The right wing of the British unions in an endeavor to offset any constructive work that Purcell may do for international unity while in America in winning the American unions to world unity, is naming a group also to visit America at the time of Purcell's visit and prevent unity on the basis of revolutionary struggle if possible.

Ramsay to Talk Against Revolution.

This conservative group is composed of Arthur Henderson and J. Ramsay MacDonald, ex-premier of the labor party regime; also, as a sop to the left wing in the British labor party, the group includes John Wheatley, the Scotchman from the Clyde, who is known as a more radical leader than MacDonald, but who was minister of health in MacDonald's cabinet.

Henderson, exponent of the labor party, will deliver a series of speeches in Canada and in the northern cities of the United States. MacDonald's plans are not disclosed, nor Wheatley's trip outlined.

May Visit A. F. of L. Convention.

How significant is this visit of the foremost spokesmen of the British labor party cannot yet be estimated. Much will depend upon William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Green will face his first convention, at Atlantic City, in October. He will open its sessions at about the time the British leaders sail for America.

He may possibly induce the executive council to invite frank discussion of world trade union unity at Atlantic City. If so, he will be atoning in part for the slight put upon A. B. Swales, chairman of the British Trade Union Conference, at El Paso last November, when Swales' speech as fraternal delegate was denounced by one of the publicity staff of the federation.

Labor Fakers Insult British Delegation.

Lack of tolerance by the executive of the A. F. of L. in past years for the economic and political views expressed by British fraternal delegates has been noted in the writings of some of the most able men who have been sent to this country to speak for British labor. Robert Smillie, in his book My Life for Labor, tells of having been rebuked from the platform, immediately after his

SWITCHMEN'S CHIEF FLAYS 'BILL' LEE

Used Finks to Disrupt Yardmen's Union

CLEVELAND, May 17.—"Scabby" Bill Lee, president of the Trainmen's Union, is sitting back today watching the effect on the other rail labor organizations of his scheme to bring the 2,000,000 organized workers in the industry, thru their representatives, into conference with the employers for the purpose of preventing disagreements of a serious character in the future.

Among the organizations invited is the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of which Warren S. Stone, hated enemy of Lee, is president. Stone has made no public announcement yet on his attitude towards the proposed conference, but it is the general opinion here that he will ignore it. The chiefs of the other rail organizations are expected to adopt a similar attitude towards Lee's plan.

Trade Union Pole Cat.

The bad odor in which Lee finds himself in, among other divisions of rail labor is emphasized in the April issue of the Journal of the Switchmen's Union of North America, of which T. C. Cashen, international president of that organization, is editor.

Among the charges made against Lee by Cashen is that he employed a detective of the 'Frisco railroad, by name Roy C. Smith, to disrupt the Switchmen's Union.

Hiring Scabs.

Cashen also accuses Lee of hiring strikebreakers to scab on members of the Switchmen's Union during a strike. In a book written by one of Lee's hirelings, the following paragraph appears: "The charge against Bill Lee that he is too close to the railways, too friendly with the labor board, and too mindful of American public opinion, is not denied, either specifically or generally, but is admitted both wholly and in part and the writer closes this book with this more important statement: Is this condition an asset to Bill Lee and his organization, or is it a liability?"

Cashen makes the following com-

CAL RAISES CHINESE LEGATION TO EMBASSY IN FEAR OF SOVIETS

WASHINGTON, May 17.— Action raising the status of the American legation at Pekin to an embassy and the promotion of John V. A. MacMurray, to ambassador will be asked of the next congress, it was learned today.

This move will be made as a result of the conferences which Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the retiring minister to China, has held with President Coolidge, Secretary of State Kellogg and other officials.

Raising the legation to an embassy directly results from Soviet Russia sending an ambassador instead of a minister to China, his assumption of the rank of doyen of the diplomatic body in Pekin, and the fact that Japan will also raise its legation to an embassy within a short time.

Bankruptcy of $700,000,000 R. R. Emits Foul Smell

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17.—The interstate commerce commission has been forced to announce a complete investigation of the facts surrounding the voluntary receivership of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, because of criticism of the receivership as unnecessary.

The receivership was declared by the directors who claimed they were unable to refinance or refund a $40,000,000 bond issue which comes due in June. The valuation of the road is placed at close to $700,000,000 and it is declared strange that one of the largest roads in the country could not be financed.

TRY TO HOLD MEN IN STEEL MILLS DURING HOT SUMMER DAYS AHEAD

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 17.—Sheet and tin workers' wages will remain unchanged in the May-June period as the result of the bi-monthly wage settlement held today between Secretary J. H. Nutt of the Manufacturers' Association who has always attended national conventions of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers as an "honor" guest, and Mike Tighe, president of the union.

The puddlers who have received several large reductions during the past year were given a 10 per cent increase a short time ago. The hot weather is coming on and the small increase is intended to discourage desertions from the puddle furnaces while the hot weather is here.

Trade unionists who have recently visited England believe that the British labor leaders look upon the beginning of a new administration in the A. F. of L. as the most appropriate time for the offering of better understanding between the two labor organizations. They do not expect to accomplish more than the removal of misconceptions as to why labor in Europe, and especially in Britain, is driving toward the conquest of political power along with industrial power.

ing to prove that there was an alliance between the Communists and the monarchists against the republicans. This was a deliberate lie. In fact, the Communists expressed their willingness to withdraw their candidate in the final runoff, provided the socialists put their standard bearer in the field. The socialists, however, united behind the reactionary catholic, Marx, so there was nothing left for the Communists to do but to raise the working class banner with Thaelmann.

HINDENBURG was elected, tho the capitalist class would be equally well pleased with Marx. Hindenburg however, fills the bill nicely. Now what happens? Hindenburg was excoriated by the socialist press as a monarchist and kaiserite. But a few days ago the premiers of the various states in the German confederation met to pay their respects to Von Hindenburg, and who was the spokesman? None other than the socialist Otto Braun, premier of Prussia! And Braun delivered a pretty speech pledging the loyalty of all Germany to the notorious military butcher.

primary elections, which took place Tuesday, May 12th. I would like to express one particular phase of this election campaign, and that phase concerns a man who was defeated as candidate for the school board.

"It is sometimes possible that a defeat may be actually a victory, if one consider the facts in the case, just as it is possible for an apparent victory, to be in reality a defeat. Such a defeated victory was in my opinion, the defeat of Emanuel Levine, Communist candidate for school board. Despite the limited means at the command of his committee, and his blacklisting by the 'official' labor movement, Mr. Levine received over 26,000 votes; the votes of workers.

"Mr. Levine made a fight both against nationalism and against religion, he opposed the teaching of these in the public schools. His program was one of Communism: the industries for the workers. His immediate demands were: The school for education and not for profit, to be run by the teachers and not by those behind the school board.

Tells of Levine's Expulsion

"This same Emanuel Levine was some months ago expelled from the Office Employes' Union, at the behest of the officers of this council, because of his Communist affiliations. It has been clearly demonstrated in this election, that the workers are for Levine, that they are radical where this council is ultra-conservative. I am personally elated and happy at the success—for a success it is—of Emanuel Levine. The Workers (Communist) Party seems to be making wonderful progress, even tho this labor body balks it at every step."

Directly Kaplan had finished the fight started. Anna Peterson, one of Horn's cogs in the machine, rose and piped forth:

"Mr. Chairman, are we here to listen to Communism? or are we here to talk on trade unionism? I protest against this delegate speaking continually on Communism."

President Buzzel, another henchman of Horn, immediately suggested that the chair is open to receive a motion dealing with the delegate. The great Brother Horn himself then addressed the life and death question to Kaplan:

"Are you a member of the Communist or Worker's Party?"

Proud of His Communism

Kaplan, without hesitation replied, "Yes I am a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, and very proud of it too. It is the only party I would ever be a member of."

From then on everything ran to order. There was no skidding whatever. Brother Horn himself then addressed diately supported that Brother Kaplan's credentials be sent back to his union, and altho the debate lasted for over an hour, it was apparent from the first what the vote would be. Brother Kaplan was practically given no opportunity to defend himself, as the chairman regarded the question a closed one, insofar as the sitting of Communists in the council was concerned.

One delegate, a building trades worker, stated that he had been a member of the union for 33 years, was not a Communist, but was opposed to expelling Kaplan because of his affiliation.

The arguments for expulsion, led by Brother Horn, were all the old gags used against Communism, coupled with an attack on Kaplan's attitude towards the Peoples Bank. It was made to appear as tho Kaplan wanted to destroy the bank, and as practically all the delegates of the council own stock in the bank, they were intimidated to vote for expulsion. Ex-president Hassal was almost comical when he delivered himself of the following:

"Go back to Russia, to your Moscow Soviets, we don't want you here, and leave our country to us. We are satisfied with our constitution and with our government, and we never want to change it."

It is apparent, judging by previous cases, that Brother Kaplan will be expelled at the forthcoming meeting of the Office Employes' Union from his local, and trade unionism in Los Angeles, will against be saved from the Moscow Reds.

The vote for expulsion was 53 to 6. Many delegates who were actually against expulsion were afraid to vote in favor of Kaplan, and remained seated. The council is infested and controlled by officials of all the unions, and with jobs being very scarce now, delegates were afraid to take side with the Communist, against the reactionaries.

Martial Law Continues in Lisbon.

LISBON, Portugal, May 17.— Maj. Ferreira Amaral, commander of the "safety state police," was severely wounded in a street fight here. Martial law still prevails.

THE LORD'S OPEN SHOP DRIVE LASTED JUST AN HOUR; THIS IS UNITY!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 17.—For an hour Friday afternoon work at Carmelite House, where Lord Rothermere's newspapers, the Daily Mail, the Evening News and the Weekly Dispatch, are published, was held up by a strike of 1,500 workers, all the clerical, mechanical and publishing staffs of the organization.

The dispute arose over the threatened dismissal of a news clerk and the employment of two non-union clerks. The management acceded to the employes' demands.

SLIMY EDITOR BLUFFS FAKERS INTO SILENCE

Threatens Exposure of Shady Deals

By STEPHEN, Worker Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—At several instances during the last few weeks the honest trade unionists of Pittsburgh thought they were going to be treated to an exposure of the activities of some of their corrupt officials. But no sooner had the fire started when some of those involved turned on the water hose with the result that the flames were subdued.

Defended Beattie the Spy

On several occasions Arthur Ireland, editor of the Labor Free Press, a fake labor sheet, came in for severe lacing by the delegates of the Pittsburgh Central Labor Union. The criticism was directed first at certain articles that he printed during the Beattie trial, not one of which exposed Beattie as a spy.

But the climax was reached when Ireland attacked the Building Trades Council for the manner in which they were gathering advertising for their year book. He was called before the Central Labor Union to explain and at the time it looked as if the body would withdraw its endorsement from the Labor Free Press.

Arthur Ireland appeared before the council like a strutting cock defying the whole gang. He declared arrogantly that if he would be asked to retract any statements he would publish all that was said, which would do more damage than the stories so far appearing.

Fakers Have a Change of Heart.

Then the cry went up that such exposure was not good for the labor movement. The movement they referred to, is its officialdom, because no rank and filer was even mentioned. Finally a motion was made to take the endorsement away from the Free Press, but by a clever parliamentitary move the motion was declared out of order.

Altho he admitted that his paper was indebted to Lew McGrew, labor buzzard and publisher of the notorious Labor World, and that the Free Press is being printed in Lew McGrew's plant, all Arthur has to do now in order to keep the endorsement of the C. L. U. is to see the executive board before he writes up any of the fakers.

Cal Takes Part in League of Nations But Not Formally

GENEVA, May 17.— Theodore E. Burton, American representative to the league of nations conference on the control of arms traffic, is endeavoring to maintain the position that altho the Coolidge government is anxious to sign the convention, entrance to the league of nations will not be tolerated.

Burton is trying to have the convention amended so that Coolidge's "friendly collaboration" with the league will not be formally accepted as his formal participation in the league.

As it stands, the agreement provides that the league council shall enact the arms parley convention. The league of nations is controlled by the world powers, who use it as an instrument to keep the weaker nations in subjection.

Red-baiting Sleuth Burns, to Protect Bankers' Property

A contract has been signed between the American Bankers' Association and the Burns national detective agency, renewing for three years the services which Burns gave the bankers in "protecting" them against forgery.

William J. Burns, who was involved in the Teapot Dome, and other government scandals, was forced out of his office as head of the department of justice, when disclosures were made of graft in the attorney general's office under the regime of Harry Daugherty. Burns took an active part in raids on radical organizations during the war hysteria.

Soviet Transport and Railway Workers Give Aid to the Red Airfleet

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the air fleets of the Union of Soviet Republics are re-enforced by the addition of the "Djerjinsky Escadrille" of 31 airplanes, bought with the popular subscriptions of the railway and transport workers of the workers' republics. Nowhere alse in the world do workers present the government under which they live with airplanes. This could only take place in the Soviet Union, where the workers have a prime interest in the defense of their victory over czarism.

• • • •

Felix E. Djerjinsky, after whom this new air squadron is named, is now the head of the supreme economic council of the workers' republics, one of Russia's oldest revolutionaries, veteran of many struggles of Russia's working class, before and since the czardom fell.

More recently he has been among those leading the mighty drive for the reconstruction of industry thruout the Soviet Union, and the fact that the workers in the transportation industry have betowed this high honor upon him, shows in what high esteem he is held by the Russian masses.

• • • •

The "Djerjinsky Escadrille" will be heard from again; just as the Russian railway and transport workers are being heard from regularly as they build and run what in time will become the most effective and efficient transportation system in the world. Altho the Soviet Union lost a considerable stretch of railway line, by the separation of the border states, nevertheless, today's railway mileage is greater than it was in the czarist days before the war. The ships of the Soviet Union now carry the red flag of the workers' republics into every port of the world. It is the workers who are making this development possible, that realize they must defend the progress they are making against world capitalism. Therefore they provide for the red army, the red fleet and the red airfleets.

The workers of Russia are not pacifists. They expect nothing from capitalism except war to the hilt. They fought for and won their victory over their own industrial overlords, high financiers and great landlords. They have established a strong rear guard for the world social revolution. They expect the workers of other lands to join them in the struggle for world victory.

One of the striking evidences of the world outlook of those railway and transport workers, who made the "Djerjinsky Escadrille" possible, is the fact that two of those 31 red airplanes were named "Baginski" and "Wierzorkiewicz," in memory of the two Communists murdered by the emissaries of the Polish white guard government, on the day they were to be exchanged for a Polish priest held prisoner in Soviet Russia. Thus this crime committed against workers' rule will rise to torment western European capitalism, as the Russian workers intend it should.

It is only when the workers have won and consolidated their world victory that they will be able to say that the war to end all wars has ended; that all nations may now live in peace.

American jingoes cry for great air fleets to support American imperialism plant its dollar standards over the world; to bring the world under its profiteers' oppression.

Russian workers provide an airfleet for their proletarian dictatorship to help liberate world labor from this capitalist oppression.

Let America's workers get that difference.

OPEN SHOP DRIVE LOCKS OUT 2,000 UNION PAINTERS

Boston Bosses to Try Open War on Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 17.—Acting on a decision reached at a meeting yesterday, the Painting and Decorating Employers' Association of this city Friday formally withdrew all the offers made to the painters' district council and started work on an open shop basis.

Twenty-two firms announced that they were preparing to man their jobs with new help, giving union and non-union men the same treatment. A maximum wage of $1.10 an hour was offered for experienced painters.

Negotiations between the union and the association were in progress for six weeks, the men demanding a wage of $1.25 an hour. About 2,200 painters declared a strike some time ago to enforce their demands.

Bittner Wins in the Capitalist Court But Union Loses a Local

WHEELING, W. Va., May 17.—United Mine Workers, in the federal district court here, won their second fight today, in their court fight to unionize the coal fields of the Panhandle district.

Judge W. E. Baker handed down an opinion in the case brot by the West Virginia-Pittsburgh Coal company, in which a score of officials and members of the miners' organization were cited for contempt, finding for the miners.

However, the spiritless leadership of Van Bittner in depending upon cooperation with the state police and relying upon court decisions to build the union, is seen by many miners as a source of weakness and not of strength—and is cited as a cause for the break in the union at Shinnstop.

OPEN SHOPPER PASSES ALONG BUT THE UNION IS STILL ON THE JOB

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 17.—Thomas D. Perry, superintendent of the Item composing room, one of the men who helped to put New Orleans on the open shop map as far as the printing business is concerned is dead. Perry was born in Philadelphia, learned his trade on the open shop papers in that city; later a staunch supporter of the Los Angeles Times, he voluntarily came to this city to break the strike of Typographical Union No. 17. He succeeded; today he lies in a lonely grave, while the union is still on earth, badly battered, but still alive.

Switchmen's Chief Flays "Bill" Lee, Class-Collaborator

ment on the preceding quotation: "To the foregoing statement I make this observation: That the fact that 'Bill' Lee is too close to the railways is admitted specifically and generally, and both wholly and part, may be an asset to 'Bill' Lee. It is, however, a peculiar statement to use in support of a leader representing labor. And as to it being an asset to the B. of R. T. organization, the members of that organization are best able to be the judge."

A Scab Herder.

Evidently Lee thinks it is his heaven-sent duty to drag the rest of the railroad workers into the road owners' corral. He has competitors. The only difference between Lee and his foes is one of degree. The fakers are quarrelling among each other for the spoils. None of them care a straw for the interests of the membership of their organizations.

Lee's publicity agent is Robert E. Ward of the Hearst syndicate. Ward was formerly employed by the Chicago Journal of Commarce.

WAR LORD LEADS GERMANY INTO DISINTEGRATION

Internal Dissension Over Dawes Plan

BERLIN, Germany, May 17—The monarchist leadership of Field Marshal von Hindenburg is already faced with vexing problems, both internally and in relation to the foreign countries, which might at any time bring about a crisis.

The monarchists, who claim the exclusive right to exploit the German working class, demand that the French troops evacuate the Cologne birdgehead. In his latest speech, made at Cologne, Chancellor Luther declared the occupation by the French is a violation of the Versailles treaty, and lamented the fact that France has given no reasons for continuing the occupation.

Luther, who said he spoke for Hindenburg, also expressed impatience at the delay of France and England in agreeing as to action on the proposal of a "security pact," by means of which the monarchists hope to extend the eastern frontier of Germany at Poland's expense.

Dawes Plan Swallows R. R.'s.

The German railway owners have already protested to Hindenburg against the Dawes plan. Dr. Stieler, and general director, Oeser, of the German railway system, have pointed out to Hindenburg that the Wall Street Dawes plan imposes well nigh impossible payments on the German railroads, the only alternative being control of the railways directly by the international bankers. Hindenburg replied he didn't know what he could do about it.

Hindenburg's pay has been raised by the reichstag to $45,000 a year, a boost of $15,000. He gets his lodging free in the presidential mansion.

Socialists Friendly to War Lord.

Internally Hindenburg also has his vexations. He has had little trouble with the socialists, however. Otto Braun, candidate of the socialists in the first presidential election, now premier of Prussia, warmly congratulated Hindenburg on his election. Hindenburg was a great friend of the dead socialist president, Ebert, who on his part, greatly admired the war lord. The extreme monarchists have criticised Hindenburg, in their press, for his praise of the socialist, Ebert. They point out that even the they know that his statements are hypocritical, that his seeming acceptance of the republic may be misunderstood by some of his supporters.

Communists Gain Support.

Prominent German liberals, including parlimentarians, scholars, professors and others, have issued a signed protest against the sentences passed recently on sixteen Communists sentenced in the German "cheka trial" frameup by the Leipsic supreme court. The protest declares that Ludendorff, Hitler and other "revolutionists" are still at large, and prejudiced judgement has been displayed against the Communists.

The Communist Party remains the only group in Germany which consistently fights against the Dawes plan, for the raising of the standard of living of the German workers and the overthrow of the exploiting system by the workers.

Russian Workers Demand Release of Bulgarian Reds

and starved in the Bulgarian prisons.

Delegations of peasants' and workers' organizations called at the British, French and Italian missions and urged that these countries protest against the proposed public murder of the Bulgarian workers.

An editorial in the Pravda, according to news dispatches, states "Bourgeois Europe, with a smile on its face indorses this horrible sight. While these executions are occurring, we ask the workers and peasants to listen to what we have to tell them. We tell them in the class war there can be no mercy. The time will come when the white terrorists and the representatives of the bourgeois will be in the hands of the workers. Therefore, remember today's lesson from Sofia—no mercy.

"We know that these Communists in Bulgaria will perish with the belief that from their bones will rise a victorious revolutionary army. We swear we shall avenge them. The workers will settle accounts with their hangmen.

Conference for Child Welfare Advised to Go Deeper Into Problem

NEW YORK, May 17.—Speeches on the need of a home for every child and the way to get conservation of child life in this country were made at the opening meeting of the national welfare convention with more than 100 delegates representing every state present.

SOUTH FLAUNTS SHAME OF CHILD SLAVES AT N. Y.

Boast of "Open Shop" and Low Wages

By ESTHER LOWELL,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 17.—(FP)—That foreign city New York is having a remarkable demonstration of the pure Anglo-Saxon ku klux klan spirit of the industrial south in the Southern Exposition held in Grand Central Palace. In exhibit after exhibit the manufacturers, railroad, real estate and other boosters of the south brag about the nearly 100 per cent American population, docile labor, lack of labor laws, and low wages.

In the Georgia Railway & Power Co.'s booklet, for instance, there is the brazen brag that "Georgia laws permit 60 hours work per week in cotton mills. Women as well as men, and youths of 16 or over, may work at night." And later: "One authority states that within his recollection no proposed measure, aimed against manufacture, ever has been given even serious consideration in the state"—referring to labor laws.

South Pays Low Wages.

The low wages paid are advertised to induce northern capitalists southward: "Machinists, $24.60; electricians, $35; engineers, $18; firemen, $10; spinners, $12.18; boarders, $12.80; carders, $12.80; examiners, $9.50; dyers, $12.25; finishers, $9.75; sewers, $9.20; knitters, $12.60; loopers, $15; laborers, $9" average weekly.

Lowest wages in cotton mills are quoted from the Georgia commerce and labor department and show that males under 14½ get $3 weekly; from 14½ to 16, $3 to $6; over 16, $5 to $10. Females under 14½, $3; 14½ to 16, $4 to $14; over 16, $5 to $10. The railroad also advertises that in north Georgia the mill labor comes from the Blue Ridge mountains where the people were "hardened to much rougher work" and as a consequence "have regarded the life of an operative as one of comparative ease at an interesting task."

Boasts of Docile Slaves.

Alabama in a state booklet boasts of its native born labor of predominantly Anglo-Saxon descent. Negro labor is used in the iron and steel industry, the Alabama booklet states, and "is charactetrised by its tractibility and is rarely susceptible to those disturbing influences common in sections where the foreign element dominates the industrial field."

Governor Thomas G. McLeod of South Carolina on his state's day at the exposition took pains to tell the world about the "ruddy glow" in the faces of mill operatives' children and what fine living conditions they have and how happy they are instead of living in hovels and working in the mills long hours. Greenville, S. C., has an extensive exhibit to prove that it is the "textile center of the south," but conditions of labor in the city are not advertised at all! There are 132 of South Carolina's 164 cotton mills in the vicinity of Greenville and many of the mills has displays of their products but no pictures of the mill villages.

The industrial bureau of the Atlanta, Ga., chamber of commerce posts a sign in its booth: "Atlanta is an open shop town." Brimingham brags that its steel mills increased their work during the 1919 steel strike. The Manufacturers' Record, a Baltimore, Md., organization of reactionary publishers, announces at the entrance to the exposition that it "stands for rigid enforcement of the law as the only salvation of the nation from socialistic, Bolshevistic, anarchistic spirit" rising in this country and filling Europe! If the ku klux klan itself had a booth at the exposition, no one could be surprised, so well have southern capitalists taken up its spirit for their profit!

In Bad Company.

There is one Negro exhibit, however, that of Dr. George W. Carver of Tuskegee who has on display his discoveries of paint from Macon county clay, sweet potato products and peanut products.

Use Dynamite on Wreck.

Memphis, Tenn., May 15.—Dynamite was recorted to this afternoon in an effort to break u pthe wreck of the steam boat Norman, submerged in the Mississippi, 16 miles below Memphis. The explosive was expected finally to disclose whether any of the 18 bodies sought are still confined in the hull.

OUTPUT OF FARM MACHINERY BY SOVIET RUSSIA STEADILY MOUNTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, May 17.—The following table will reveal the continuous growth of output of agricultural machinery in Soviet Russia. This is due among other reasons, to the extension of long term credits to the peasantry, to the specialization in certain industries on this type of machinery, and to the reduction of prices. It will be seen that the production of ploughs was trebled during the year and that there was great progress thruout in the output of the various agricultural machines:

Output of Agricultural Machinery (in number of units)

	Oct. 1923	Sept. 1924	Oct. 1924
Ploughs	9,412	23,321	27,839
Harrows	8,965	10,424	12,707
Drill Machines	504	1,147	1,253
Reaping Machines	868	1,291	1,571
Horse windlasses	463	2,351	2,663
Winnowing Machines	1,420	1,721	2,244
Sorting Machines	594	1,092	1,093
Scythes	70,639	34,925	89,229

Books for Villages

The state publishing bureau has issued 100,000 libraries, consisting of 100 books each for the use in villages, charging 6 gold rubles per library, the cost price. The books are largely of an agricultural and scientific nature.

Special radio programs are also being arranged of interest to the peasants in the villages. In addition to instrumental and vocal programs, lectures on agriculture cattle rasing and other subjects pertaining to the development of the farms are broadcast.

Agriculture in Ukrainia

The Ukrainian Economic Council has completed its plan for the development of agriculture in Ukrainia. The plan provides for melioration, redistribution of the land, and various other measures necessary for the desired development. To carry out this plan 190,127,000 gold rubles are necessary. It is hoped that the plan will be carried out in its entirety by 1931.

Exhibition of Machinery

A Trans-Caucasian exhibition of agricultural machinery will be opened in October in Tiflis. Soviet and foreign manufacturers will participate. Machinery suitable to the demands of this region will be particularly well represented.

Dirigibles Vs. Aeroplanes

It has been found that dirigibles are much more effective in fighting agricultural pests than aeroplanes. The reasons for, this are that the dirigibles can carry more freight, and are more easily managed for low flying.

Reserve Supplies of Grain

The department of domestic commerce have investigated the grain markets of Ukrainia. It was found that Ukrainia has plenty of grain one 5th of which is wheat. It is in the possession of wealthy peasants and it is expected that it will appear on the market during the early days of May. According to the reports of this department, also, the conditions of the winter crop is excellent.

A considerable activity has been noticed on the Siberian market. This is due to the fact that the purchasing power of the Siberian peasants has increased about 100 per cent.

Widow Gets $20,000 from Railroad Which Killed Her Husband

ST. LOUIS, May 17.—Mrs. Florence McAllister, whose husband was killed in course of his employment as a switchman for the Merchants' Terminal railway, has been awarded $20,000 by a circuit court jury here. The railroad pleaded contributory negligence on the part of McAllister, but the plaintiff convinced the jury that the accident was due to defective coupling devices.

Milwaukee Repeats "Beauty and Bolshevik"

So that everyone who was unable to see the Russian feature films, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls" will have another chance, they will be run over again under the auspices of the Slovak Sick and Death Benefit Society at the Slovenian Home, Milwaukee, on May 30. These films recently had a very successful showing in Pabst Theater.

The working class movement in this stronghold of labor reformism is intensely interested in these movies, every film ever issued by the International Workers' Aid having been shown here despite the covert opposition of the socialist crowd who refused even the news reports usually printed by the capitalist press. The picture on the first of May program, in the opinion of the audience, was butchered by a hostile operator, and this Slovenian Hall was used two days later to give the fighting film a fair showing before a large and enthusiastic crowd.

Workers of all nationalities will cooperate to make this second showing fully as successful as the first.

Trade War On in Argentina.

BUENOS AIRES, May 17.—The bitter trade war now going on in South America between Great Britain and the United States has broken out here in cutthroat competition between English and American packing companies. The Anglo-Dutch company has bowed to the packing trust of the United States, deciding to withdraw from the field on account of continued losses.

Swift and company announces that they were losing money in Argentine, but will not close. Some quarters reported that the two trusts had entered into an agreement by which one would close during a depression period, the profits or losses being split later.

Judge To Rule on Injunction.

WHEELING, W. Va., May 17.—Ending argument over a petition for an injunction and a motion to quash by counsel for United Mine Workers of America, announcement was made by Judge W. E. Baker in federal court, that a ruling would be made Saturday morning in the case of West Virginia-Pittsburgh Coal company versus John L. Lewis, international president of the miners, and nine officials of that organization.

Mexico Sends Labor Envoy to Russia

MEXICO CITY, May 15.—The Mexican government has appointed additional labor delegates to Russia, Germany, France and Argentina, who will leave this month to study the labor situation in those countries.

CHAIN GROCERIES USING BOYS AT LOW PAY TO BREAK CLERKS' UNIONS

By CARL HAESSLER
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Boys and youths are being used to drive the experienced men out of the work of grocery clerking in Chicago, says business representative Fred O'Brock of Grocery Clerks Local 694, International Protective Association of Retail Clerks. The grocery proprietor who used to leave at least one reliable and mature assistant in charge while he went to commission row to do his buying now hires two boys instead.

Boys are started for almost nothing while an experienced clerk draws $40 a week. In the end the store which formerly maintained the owner and his family, the clerk and his family and helped start a couple of other assistants, shuts up shop and the chain stores hang another scalp on their belts.

Of the 16,000 grocery clerks in Chicago less than 5 per cent are now organized. The A. & P. chain stores will immediately discharge a man suspected of union affiliation. The National Tea is not much better. The Royal Blue chain stores alone are friendly toward labor organization. The union scale is $20, $35 and $40 a week, depending on length of service. Union dues are $1.50 a month with the $16.50 initiation fee recently raised to $25.

Unemployment a Factor

The Chicago west side is the union's best territory. But even there proprietors that once cordially greeted the union business representatives are surly and hostile while the general unemployment makes clerks always in danger of losing their jobs.

For this the chain stores are also to blame. Their competition makes the individual owners frantic with fears of bankruptcy and their anti-union policy tends to be contagious. A good groceryman will be tempted to abandon his precarious living and take the first offer by the chains to make him a store manager with a fixed salary and no private business worries. First rate clerks in chain stores are promoted but as a rule do not get very far before being transferred or docked for alleged shortages. The chains prefer to put another individual rival out of business by making him a store manager.

NEGRO DIPLOMAT QUICKLY MOVED

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(FP)—Clifton R. Wharton, a Massachusetts Negro, law clerk at the state department, has arrived at Monrovia, Liberia, as diplomatic secretary to Solomon Porter Hood, American minister to the black republic. Wharton was one of the 19 applicants for training in the diplomatic and foreign service school, out of 100 candidates, who passed the entrance examinations. Before the school was opened by the department on April 20, however, he was given an appointment and shipped off. That left 18 young white men as the student body, ready for social invitations at the hands of local matrons. Wharton is declared by the department to have welcomed his immediate graduation. There are three other Negroes in the service—consuls in French territory.

LABOR TEMPLE OF MPLS. HIRES SCAB "STENOG"

Reactionaries of C. L. U. Defend Non-union Help

By DAN W. STEVENS
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 17.—Stenographers' Union No. 17661 temporarily injected a spark of life into that morgue misnamed the Minneapolis Central Labor Union when a communication was read from the above organization requesting that the Minneapolis Labor Temple Association be placed on the "unfair list" because the stenographer employed in the office of the Labor Tempre Association for the past 14 months refused to join the Stenographers' Union.

Some time ago the executive board of the C. L. U. sent a letter to the Daily Star the Brotherhoods' National Bank the Franklin Co-operative Creamery and the Labor Temple Association reminding these concerns that their office workers were not members of the union and requesting that they insist upon them joining. The only answer received was from the Franklin Creamery and their office workers are now organized.

Wm. Maley, business agent of Steamfitters' Union No. 539 attempted to justify the position of the Labor Temple Association in employing scab help by stating that there was an ulterior motive behind the request of Stenographers' Union No. 17661, and asked how much stock of the Labor Temple Association had been bought by members of the stenographers. Miss Jewell Flaherty brought much applause from the delegates when she answered Maley by saying that the stenographers would have bought stock in the L. T. association long ago if a union stenographer had been employed.

Take No Action

John Sincoe is the president and paid agent of the Labor Temple Association and maintains an elaborate suite of offices in the Andrus Building. The stenographer in question was formerly employed by the chamber of commerce. Sincoe is president of Fire Fighters' Union No. 82 and with Maley is a staunch supporter of the reactionary red-baiting gang in the C. L. U. The whole trouble hinges around the fact that several Communists and sympathizers make-up the active membership of Stenographers' Union, No. 17661 and of course the fakers in control of the Labor Temple Association don't want their chamber of commerce stenographer to became contaminated with Communism.

Indorse American Fascists

The communication was referred to the grievance committee and a report will be submitted at the next meeting. The C. L. U. also endorsed the "poppy day" of the American Legion to raise money for this fascista gang.

Baldwin Locomotive Sues Roumania.

BUKHAREST, May 17.—The trial of the Baldwin Locomotive company's suit against the Roumanian government to recover an outstanding balance of approximately $2,000,000 for locomotives delivered in 1919 and 1920 was begun here.

The Baldwin company is very wary about dealing with Soviet Russia for fear payments will not be made, altho Russia has never failed to live up to contracts.

"Open Shop" Mayor Hits Poor

ST. LOUIS, May 17.—The "open shop" mayor of St. Louis, whose seat is being contested for alleged vote stealing, has helped kill appropriations for the municipal lodging house and the legal aid bureau which furnished counsel to defendants unable to pay.

New K. K. K. Mystery.

5,000 or More Signatures Expected.

If this record is kept up, the six expelled delegates to the central labor council who are circulating the petition state that from five to ten thousaand signatures will be received within the next few weeks. Simultaneously with the circulation of the petition the six defendants have published the third of a series of leaflets showing the great danger to the labor movement of such arbitrary and autocratic actions.

This third leaflet deals with the history of the case to date and will be quickly followed by a fourth, setting forth the basic reasons why the expulsions take place and revealing the sinister influences within the ranks of organized labor which are behind these expulsions.

Of Interest to All Labor.

Union men thruout America as well as in Seattle should be alive to the imminent dangers lurking in the labor movement are to the fact that the policies of the enemies of the workers are being insidously introduced in the labor organization by the agent of organized capital.

Co-operation with the bosses and betrayal of the real interest of the workers is now the avowed policy of many outstaanding leaders in the American labor movement, notably Johnston of the machinists, Hutcheson of the carpenters and Major General Berry of the printing pressmen.

Undermines Strength of Unions.

This program of class collaboration (instead of a militant program based upon the class interest of the workers) threatens the workers of America today with lower wages, longer hours and worse conditions than heretofore. In order to put such plans in operation effectively the first essential is to rid the unions of the militant class conscious workers.

Hence the attack upon these militant Seattle workers whose statement and appeal we are printing as a warning to workers everywhere, as to the methods that will be employed by reactionary forces within the ranks of labor in order to lay the basis for a retreat of labor before the onslaught of the bosses by first ridding the unions of their real red blooded fighters:

To the Membership of Organized Labor in Seattle:

"Greeting—At the regular meeting of the Seattle Central Labor Council, held on Wednesday, January 28, 1925, a representive of the Labor Defense Council asked the privilege of the floor to speak on the Michigan criminal syndicalist cases. After considerable debate the request was granted by 45 votes to 36. When the speaker took the floor about 18 delegates who had voted against the motion walked out in a body. A motion protesting against the Michigan syndicalist law was laid over when the hour for adjournment came.

"At the next meeting, Wednesday, February 5, after a week of feverish activity on the part of certain elements in the council, a large number of new delegates were seated, some of whom represented unions which had not been affiliated with the council for many years, and it was freely stated by some of the new delegates, in the ante room of the council, that they had come there to expel the Communists.

Motion Railroaded.

"A resolution presented by the building trades council requesting that all Communists be unseated from the Central Labor Council, carried by a vote of 93 to 33. During the debate that lasted to a late hour, only one delegate opposed to the motion was able to obtain the floor. In fact the motion was railroaded thru the council.

"On Wednesday, February 18, charges were filed against the undersigned by W. B. Bailey, J. N. Belanger, D. G. Williams, Chas. Hughes and G. W. Roberge, charging us with being members of the Workers Party, a workers' political organization. The charges were referred to the strike and grievance committee, of which David Levine is chairman, and of which Severt Johnson is also a member, both of whom had actively sponsored the building trades resolution and were chiefly responsible for its adoption by the Seattle Central Labor Council.

Disregard Council's Rules.

"At the meeting of Wednesday, March 18, the committee presented its report recommending that Havel, Jones and Price be unseated, and that Mohr, Carlson and Hansen be exonerated for lack of evidence. The council adjourned before a vote was taken, and discussion of the matter was resumed on Wednesday, March 26, when an amendment was moved to the committee's report that all six defendants be expelled. After long discussion the motion to adopt the committee report as amended was carried by 78 votes to 71.

"The chair then ruled that the six defendants expelled, despite the fact that under Robert's Rules of Order, which govern the council in this respect, a two-thirds vote is necessary for expulsion. In this connection, President Jepson stated that the two-thirds vote ncessary for expulsion had been obtained on February 5.

"This decision means that the six delegates were convicted before they had been tried and two weeks before charges were preferred against them on February 19. In the report giving the findings of the strike and grievance committee to the council, not a piece of evidence of any kind was submitted to show that any one of the defendants had ever in any way, said or done anything to disrupt or discredit the labor movement. Neither was the committee able to prove that the defendants were members of a political party, except that the names of three of them appeared on the ballot as presidential electors in the general election of November, 1924.

Thruout the various debates and discussion the chair showed itself biased against the defendants by arbitrary rulings on numerous occasions. The expulsion of these six delegates is contrary to all the traditions and principles of organized labor, and denies the right of all members within the ranks of organized labor to hold whatever political opinions they see fit. The action also violates the pledge given to the candidate on joining the various local unions, which pledges guarantee that the obligation will not conflict with political or religious beliefs.

"Since the unseating of the six delegates each one of them has received a vote of confidence from his local union, and has been returned to the Central Labor Council with new credentials. Here again the constitution provisions of the American Federation of Labor have been flouted by the president of the Central Labor Council, who has refused to accept the credentials submitted by affiliated organizations, in violation of the rules of the A. F. of L., which plainly state that credentials submitted by local unions shall be accepted.

Locals Protest.

"A great number of affiliated organizations have protested vigorously against these autocratic and arbitrary expulsions, among them being the following Metal Trades Council, Bakers' No. 9., Machinists No. 79, Painters No. 300, Building Laborers No. 242, Shipwrights No. 1184, Longshoremen No. 1312, Millmen No. 338.

"We present a brief statement herewith as to our connections with organized labor, and we appeal to you to protest against these vicious tactics, and appeal to you to do everything in your power to assist us in our fight to regain our rights within the ranks of labor, knowing as you do that 'an injury to one is an injury to all,' and that the injustice which we suffer from today may tomorrow be inflicted upon other members (who may also hold opinions contrary to those held by some members in the council) if this incident is allowed to pass unchallenged.

"Signed): Paul K. Mohr, Bakers No. 9, M. Hansen, Painters No. 300, J. C. Carlson, Shipwrights No. 1184, J. Havel, Bookkeepers and Stenographers No. 16304, H. G. Price, Machinists No. 79, W. H. Jones, Painters No. 300, Committee of Six Defendants, April 30, 1925."

Records of Unseated Delegates.

P. K. Mohr helped to organize the first Bakers' Union in Seattle in 1889, was its first president at the time when the union won its first strike. After leaving Seattle and living on a farm for several years, Mohr returned to Seattle and again took up active work in his union, being elected to three state conventions and being sent as a fraternal delegate from the Washinton State Federation of Labor to the Oregon State Federation of Labor. Attended the national convention of the Bakers' Union at Cincinnati, was president of the Seattle Central Labor Council for a term of years, and has been assistant secretary of the Bakers' Union for five years.

M. Hansen has been an active member of the Painters' Union, is a member of the executive board of that union and has served several terms as delegate to the Painters' District Council and to the Central Labor Council.

J. C. Carlson joined the Carpenters' Union in 1916, has been a member in good standing ever since, has been a delegate to the Seattle Central Labor Council for three years, and at the present time he is vice-president of his local union.

J. Havel joined the Office Employes' Union No. 16304 six and one-half years ago, shortly thereafter he was elected a delegate to the Seattle Central Labor Council, and with the exception of two terms has been a delegate representing the same organization continually, is at present and has been for three years recording secretary for his local union.

H. G. Price has been a member of organized labor for twenty years. First joined B. of F. & E., later on joined the B. of L. E., has been a member of the I. A. M. seven years, holding office on executive board Metal Trades Council, Council Delegate to Central Labor Council, delegate to the board of trustees of the Labor Temple Association.

W. H. Jones is a member of the Painters' Union since 1912 and has been in good standing ever since. Helped to organize Local 565, Minot, N. D., was charter member of this local union, and was treasurer for three years of Local 784; has been for two years a member of the executive board of Local 300, and also two years a delegate to the Central Labor Council ,and was elected business representative of District Council No. 31, which office he still holds.

STANDARD OIL PEDDLES LOONEY GAS IN EUROPE

Government Ready to Give Trust Whitewash

NEW YORK, May 17.—(FP)—Representatives from the American Federation of Labor and from the Workers' Health Bureau will attend the special conference called by Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cummings to investigate tetra-ethyl lead gasoline, "looney gas." Organized labor was invited by the United States Public Health Service in charge of the meet, which was called following protests against the bureau of mines report declaring that tetra-ethyl lead in exhaust gases of autos is harmless.

A criticism of the bureau of mines report by Dr. Alice Hamilton of Harvard, Dr. Paul Reznikoff and Grace M. Burnham, director of Workers' Health Bureau will be made public at the conference. Delegates will be scientists, medical experts, labor representatives and producers of tetra-ethyl lead gasoline. Since the death of five workers at the Bayway Standard Oil plant, New Jersey, from tetra-ethyl lead poisoning, the "looney gas" has been a public concern. The Workers' Health Bureau urged organized labor to protest against the sale of the treated gasoline and succeeded. The bureau asked labor to demand investigation of the new gasoline by a competent body.

Altho the Ethyl Gasoline corporation claims that it has stopped producing the "looney gas" pending the outcome of the Washington conference, a New York newspaper reports that a vigorous campaign for the use of the gasoline is being carried on in Europe, particularly in France. Switzerland banned the use of the tetra-ethyl lead gasoline when Dr. H. Zangger, professor of forensic medicine, Zurich University, showed the danger of the product to the public as well as to manufacturing workers and garage employes.

Philly Unions Call for Boycott on Big League Ball Club

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Because the owners of the Philadelphia baseball club, in the American league, violated their written agreement with the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, and employed non-union iron erectors and hoisting engineers, thru a contractor, in constructing new grandstands this season, organized labor is at war with them.

Philadelphia's Central Labor Council and Building Trades Council have declared a boycott on the ball park. Secretary Tracy of the building trades department is about to issue circular letters to building trades councils thruout the country, calling attention to the state of war, and suggesting that nobody can compel a union man to attend a game in which the Athletics take part.

So flagrant is the violation of contract in this affair that Ban Johnson, president of the league, who signed the original agreement, made a gesture of protest to the owners. This empty plea made no impression on the owneks, who entrusted the job to a contracting firm which employed carpenters and other craftsmen belonging to unions, but who refused to employ union steel erectors and hoisting engineers.

Birth Control Fight in Boston.

NEW YORK, May 17.—(FP)—The fight is on against Mayor James M. Curley's ban on Boston discussions of birth control in publicly-licensed halls. Curley, watching his Irish-catholic constituency, allows opponents of birth control free speech in public, but will not allow any hall-owner to rent his place to birth control advocates on penalty of revocation of his license.

Earthquake Recorded.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The Georgetown university seismograph recorded an earthquake of moderate intensity at 7:07 o'clock this morning. It continued seven minutes. Father Torndorf, seismographer of the university, estimated the seat of the quake to be approximately 4,500 miles from here.

Number of Painters Decreases.

NEW YORK, May 17.—(FP)—There are 25,000 fewer painters now than 10 years ago, H. G. Sidebottom, secretary New York Paint, Oil and Varnish Club, says. He claims that the United States uses 70 per cent more paint, but that the old house painters are getting fewer.

LABOR EDITOR WHO HIT REDS FORCED TO QUIT

Article Against Crouch Angered Ex-Soldiers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARREN, Ohio, May 17—Delegates to the United Labor Congress in Youngstown were notified by the editor of the Labor Record, official organ of the labor unions in Mahoning and Trumbull counties that he has resigned as editor and his resignation was in the hands of the board of directors.

A "Financial Failure."

The editor, Harry Dechend, said that the paper was now a financial failure and that unless immediate assistance was given by the unions it would eventually have to suspend.

A special session of the labor congress will be held on May 25, when the delegates from the unions will decide whether to support further publication, to suspend, or to elect a new manager and editor.

On April 30, the Labor Record published a leading editorial applauding the enemies of labor for jailing soldiers Crouch and Trumbull of the Hawaiian Communist League and further invited the arrest of reds in general.

Must Change Policy.

The ex-servicemen in the unions and steel mills have bitterly condemned the unfairness of such an attack, coming as it did from an alleged labor paper. If the Labor Record is to continue publication it must not only have a new editor but also carry on a constructive policy of labor journalism seeking to educate and organize the steel workers.

French Debt Talk is Smoke.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—State department advices from Paris show that thus far the French have not offered to put up any French security for payment of the war debt to the American treasury, either now or in the future. Caillaux seems to have created a lot of smoke without fuel of a substantial kind. Conversations have amounted to a suggestion by the French that they are willing that Germany pay America the four billions that the French owe.

"IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS" AND "UNFAIR HEARING" IN DEPORTATION CASES, DEFENSE COUNCIL SHOWS

The Labor Defense Council wishes to call to the attention of all workers and all others concerning a decision of the circuit court of appeals in the case of Nicholas Unger and Herman Husman of Minneapolis, against whom deportation proceedings for membership in the Communist Party were started a few years ago.

The department of labor, immigration bureau, has ordered these two workers deported and the United States district court, to which the case was appealed, upheld the decision. The higher court—the circuit court of appeals—reversed the decision recently.

This court states that these two resident aliens were entitled to due process of law and fair hearing, which the court claimed they had not had at the previous hearings. The circuit court pointed out that there had been unauthorized and illegal introduction of "confidential" reports, that the proceedings had been irregular and the hearing unfair, and that these were a violation of the principles of due process of law and a fair hearing.

The government seems to be no longer deporting workers for membership in the Communist Party, altho such militant and radical workers are constantly and deliberately deported whenever the "powers that be" can find some sort of a technical offense to charge them with, such as, likely to become a public charge, improper visas, "illegal entry" and so on.

It now remains to be seen whether the immigration officials will proceed in a new attempt to deport the two Minneapolis trade unionists, Unger is a member of the Milk Drivers' Union and Husman is a member of the Machinists' Union and a union official in the Twin City labor movement.

The Labor Defense Council calls upon all workers and workers' organization to report the cases of deportation or about which they can find out The Defense Council is now engaged in a fight against the deportation menace. For this campaign funds are needed. The new address of the Labor Defense Council is 19 South Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

SPECIAL EDUCATIONAL CENTERS FOR BLIND ARE ORGANIZED IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, May 15.— The All-Union Congress of the Blind, the first of its kind, took place in Moscow. Nearly all the autonomous regimes and republics, with the exception of Georgia were represented.

The congress has worked out a number of measures for labor among the blind in towns and villages is to be undertaken by means of the peasants' mutual aid committees, and an izba (cottage) for the blind will be erected in every district. Special instructors will teach the blind to read and to do the kind of productive work in which the particular district is interested, and when the work of instruction has been accomplished the izba will become an economic and cultural centre for the blind of the district. The cost of putting up basket making and weaving apparatus in each district will be about 25 and 300 rubles respectively. The government will make a grant of money for the purpose.

In addition, kindergartens, elementary and secondary schools, and technical schools for the blind will be organized in the largest centers of the Soviet Union.

T. U. E. L. Picnic May 30.

The first workers' picnic of the year, given by the Trade Union Educational League of Chicago, will be held on May 30, Decoration Day, in Altenheim Grove, to be reached by direct route on the Forest Park elevated line, and by transfer from the Madison streetcar to a suburban car.

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By G. ZINOVIEV.

I.

Fundamental Tasks of Communist Tactics.

The Tactical Problems of Our Times Are Practically a Question of Dates and Ways and Means in Connection With World Revolution.

COMRADES, we know that Marxism and especially Leninism, which is the Marxism of our times, has given us the theory of world revolution. This theory has been sufficiently elaborated and can serve as a guide for the entire work of the Communist International. But there are two problems, the solution of which is not contained in the theory itself, for by their very nature these problems can only be solved on the basis of historical experience.

These problems at present form the center of all Communist work. Firstly, it is a question of the tempo of the proletarian revolution, of the rapidity of its development generally, of its date. Secondly, it is a question of line of march, of its political geography.

Comrades, it seems to me that these two decisive questions sum up the tactical problems of the recent past, of the present day and probably of the near future.

AS to the tempo, the terms of the development of the proletarian revolution, the experience not only of the Comintern, but also of the First International and of the entire work of such people as Marx and Lenin show us how difficult it was not to make any mistakes in this respect. On the strength of the experience which we already possess we have realized how cautious we must deal with the question of the exact dates of the world revolution, and how frequently and easily revolutionists can make mistakes, because of their but too natural impatience when they fix dates. It is no wonder therefore it in this respect not only Lenin but also Marx made mistakes.

And now as to the question of the line of march of the world proletarian revolution. I think that in this respect it is only now that we realize for the first time the peculiar difficulties of this problem. Let us take for instance, the socialist revolution in Russia: it was a great "surprise" even to many Marxists that a social revolution had taken place just in Russia. There were very few people who believed in such a possibility even among the supporters of the left wing of the international labor movement. After the victory of the Russian revolution we all agreed that Germany would be the next country to which revolution will spread from Russia, and that after that it will spread thruout Europe.

ONLY now, ten years after the outbreak of the imperialist war, six years after its conclusion and almost eight years after the revolutionary outbreak in Russia, after all the struggles which took place during these years in Europe, that the question is raised and raised very insistently whether this view was correct of the further line of march of the proletarian revolution, whether it is the only possible way, the only possible geographical extension of the world revolution. Is it absolutely necessary for the revolution to spread to Europe thru Germany? Is it not possible that here too we can make mistakes in foreseeing the route? Comrades, it seems to me that with respect to this question we must not cling too closely to our former views for fear of respecting on a larger scale what Brandler did on a small scale when he wanted to begin the German revolution in Saxony at any price. It can happen that the future route will not necessarily be thru Germany—in the first instance. We must consider the other possibilities.

Lenin on the Connection Between the Russian and the International Revolution

AT the Third Congress of the Comintern, Comrade Lenin expressed the following views on the international situation and the connection between the Russian and international resolution:

"When we, (that is, the Russian-G. Z.) began the international revolution, we did not do it because we were convinced that we could accelerate its development, but because a whole series of circumstances induced us to begin this revolution. We thot: either the international revolution will come to our aid, and then all our victories will be safeguarded, or we will do our own modest revolutionary work with the conviction that in the event of defeat we would after all do a good service to the revolutionary cause, and that other revolutions will profit by our experience. We fully realized that without the support of the international world revolution, a victory of the proletarian revolution is impossible. Already previous to the revolution in the other countries, in the capitalist and more developed countries will break out immediately, or at least very soon, otherwise we must perish.

But in reality the movement did not take the straight course which we supposed it would . . . For our Russian republic we must use this short breathing time to adopt our tactics to this zig-zag line of history." (Lenin's works, vol. XIII, page 320-322 Russian edition.)

THIS means firstly, that as far back as 1921 Lenin said that a certain equilibrium was being established in Europe and that the historical process proceeds on zig-zag lines and does not take the straight course which we at first believed it would take because we were naive or rather because, we lacked historical experience. And secondly, "the breathing space" would appear to be more prolonged than one could have expected.

Thus comrades, we must always bear in mind that the questions of the dates and route of the revolution are always much more complicated than we formerly imagined. Marxism and Leninism give us a great deal, but even they cannot give us what can only be achieved by the historical experience of the revolution itself.

The Policy Adopted by the Fifth Congress has Been Vindicated

ONLY nine months have passed since our Fifth Congress. In such a short period the general state of affairs has not radically changed. However, many things are much clearer to us now than they were before and I therefore think that the task before the enlarged executive of the E. C. C. I. consists in summing up the lessions of the events which have already become more lucid.

In the first instance it is essential for us to review the present political and economic world situation, even if we do it on general lines. We must do this in order to test the correctness of the decisions of the Fifth Congress and to decide: if the policy adpoted by the congress was correct, we will continue to follow it, but if it was found to be erroneous, we should alter it or revise it completely. I want to say most emphatically that the course laid down by the Fifth Congress has been, in my opinion brilliantly vindicated. I want to remind you here of a few of the most important points of the Fifth Congress: the trend and the issue of the "era" of democratic pacifism have borne out, everything we said at the Fifth Congress.

THEN let us take the sizing up of social-democracy as the "third" bourgeois party, the question of the international unity of the trade unions, the peasant question, the judgment about fascism. Has not experience shown that the conclusions of the Fifth Congress were correct?

Events which took place in connection with all those questions after the Fifth Congress are a brilliant vindication of the Comintern view point. Those of our "critics" who have the courage to be impartial would have to admit that it is they who were mistaken, and not the Fifth Congress.

Philadelphia to Enjoy Open Air at May 30th Picnic

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. May 16 — Philadelphia Communists and sympathizers will have their first opportunity to enjoy the open air and the woods and the spacious grounds of the Burholm Park at the first Workers Party picnic held by the City Central Committee on Saturday, May 30, from 10 a. m. until midnight.

After six months of intensive indoor party activity this picnic will be a great treat to the active party members and it goes without saying that the Young Workers League will be there in full force to share the fun as they always share the work and the responsibility of the party.

Games and sports of all kinds are being arranged by the committee who assure everybody a good time as well as good refreshments. The committee wishes to solemnly assure the membership that no discrimination of any kind will be used at the picnic and that free admission is assured to all comrades and sympathizers provided they partake liberally of the refreshments that can be had at the lunch counter.

It will not be necessary to bring any lunch along. The committee will bring fresh refreshments every hour. The directions are very simple Take car No. 50 on 5th St. and you will find that it will be filled with members of the party and the Y.W.L., and they will tell you where to get off, but in case you are busy reading the DAILY WORKER or the Workers Monthly just tell the conductor to let you off at Cottler street and follow the crowd three blocks west, everybody will be there to greet you with a smile. All arguments will be stored at home on May 30, between 10 in the morning and midnight. We are sure that you will not miss a good time with the Communists at a picnic if you ever attended one.

You can get more inside information if you stop at the party headquarters at 521 York Ave. At this time we may state that the Freiheit Chorus will be there in full force and you know that this means some real good singing. Better clip this article so that you don't forget the date and place.

"Negro World" Prints Communist Statement on Garvey's Arrest

NEW YORK, May 17.—The great interest taken by the Negro workers in the struggles of the Workers (Communist) Party in their behalf is again reflected in the articles devoted to the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party in the Negro World, official organ of the Universal Negro Improvement Association, mouthpiece of the Garvey "back to Africa" movement.

The Negro World prints in full the manifesto of the central executive committee of the Workers Party which calls for a united front of all Negro and white workers to fight for the right of Negro workers to organize. The statement points out that Garvey at the New York convention of his association, truckled to the ku klux klan, that the "Back to Africa" movement is a policy of retreat and will not emancipate the American Negroes who have made the United States their home.

The statement, however, demands the release from Atlanta penitentiary of Garvey, who, the statement declares was imprisoned by the government in an attack on Negro working class organizations which must be protected.

Alexander Chramov Will Speak on Savinkov Next Tuesday Night

A news cable in the press states that Boris Savinkov, formerly of the socialist-revolutionary party and lately of the counter-revolutionary white guard armies of the world imperialists had committed suicide in his prison at Moscow. Who was Savinkov? Why was he tried by the workers' and peasants' government?

Comrade Chramov, national organizer of the Russian section of the Workers Party will speak in Chicago on this interesting subject Tuesday, May 19, at 1902 W. Division St. Admission is free. All who understand the Russian language are welcome.

Painters Accept Compromise.

WASHINGTON, May 17—By a vote of 330 to 293, the members of the local painters and paperhangers' union voted to accept a two-year contract for a daily wage of $9.50 at the hands of the master painters' association. This compromise of the demand that their $9 wage be raised to $10 was urged by John B. Colpoys, federal mediator, and E. J. Gallagher, international organizer, after five and a half weeks of strike affecting 600 men. The operative builders' association, which organized a "diehard" opposition to any increase in building wages in the District of Colombia for this year, asserts that it still controls half of the building jobs in the District, and that none of these will give employment to men at the compromise scale

DUTCH BRANCH OF WORKERS PARTY CALLS ON HOLLANDERS TO JOIN

DETROIT, Mich., May 17.—The Dutch-Flemish branch of the Workers (Communist) Party, Detroit section, has issued the following appeal to the Dutch workers of the United States:—

"It is a deplorable fact that the class conscious elements amongst the Dutch immigrant workers of America possess no form of organization, no form of literate expression whatsoever.

"No semblance of class-organization or affiliation exists amongs the tens of thousands of Hollanders in Chicago, nor in the various Dutch centers in the state of Michigan, nor any other big city of America, with the sole exception of Detroit.

World War Threatens.

"And this in spite of the fact that many of us were active and sincere fighters in the class war in the old land. How many of us were enthused and inspired by the sacrificing and tireless efforts in behalf of the working class by such men and women as Domela Nieuwenhuis, Roland Holst and others.

"And yet upon our arrival in these United States we seemed to have forgotten all about our past; we, too, became mesmerized with the fata morgana of comparative security of existence, while at this very moment the economic problem has become so acute that capitalism the world over is again pondering the necessity of deciding the issue with the sword—with terrible war.

Class Lines Tighten.

"Many of us have hidden ourselves behind the formula that the American workers were too ignorant, that the American masses were politically too backward, that it would be a waste of time to engage in the work of organization. Yet the world is on the eve of the most titanic class struggle in its history, with the land of our present domicile holding the strongest positions in the checker game of world imperialism, as against the interest of labor the world over.

Foreign-Born Roused.

"All over the United States the foreign-born workers are aroused. They have started upon a campaign of education and agitation amongst their nationals not only against the gag laws that are being enforced against the foreign-born workers, but also against the imminent danger of another world war—a war that has as its chief object the crushing of proletarian Russia.

"Only the Dutch workers, to their eternal disgrace, are practically nonexistant in America as far as effective organization work and propaganda against these impending disasters are concerned.

Rebels of Holland!

"Remember that the period of storm and stress upon which we are about to embark, will leave its mark not only on our own countrymen but upon the native-born worker as well.

"The time to start propaganda work amongst our nationals is now. Let the Dutch members of the Workers Party in the centers mentioned above take the initiative.

"American capitalism itself by its open shop drives, etc., is rapidly dispelling the illusions that yet befog the minds of American workers.

"Let us follow the example of the Hollanders in Detroit and organize a branch of the Workers Party. Let us break with the depressing maxim, that 'America is the grave yard of the Holland rebels.'

"Down with the spirit of sectarianism. Long live world unity of revolutionary labor!

"Long live the deadly enemy of world capitalism—the Communist International!

"Dutch-Flemish Branch of the Workers Party, Detroit, Mich.

Illinois Miners Run Russian Art Film

Even tho the miners of Livingston, Ill., are tightly squeezed in their fight against unemployment and the attacks of the union bureaucracy, they find time for the enjoyment of the best of proletarian art in entertainment that they can get. So a picture that a labor paper called "the 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' of Russia," together with a roaring comedy and two newsreel features, will be shown at the Eagle Theatre on May 26.

The picture is "Polikushka," made by the Moscow Art Theater in Russia during the famine period; the comedy "Soldier Ivan's Miracle" is full of laughs and chuckles, while the news reels show the Paterson strike and Lanzutsky demonstration in front of the Polish consulate in Chicago.

Workers' Aid Meets in N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The next conference of the International Workers' Aid will take place on Monday, May 18, at 8 p. m., at 108 East 14th St., Room 32.

All branches should see to it that their delegates are present. This is very important, since there are several very important matters to take up.

STUDENTS HISS BRYAN WHEN HE TALKS NONSENSE

Refuses to Answer Any Questions; Is Booed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PROVIDENCE R. I., May 17.—William Jennings Bryan, who thru the years has filled his purse to overflowing by espousing lost causes—for a consideration—was booed and hissed off the stage at Brown University after preaching a sermon against science. Bryan had raised the standard of faith in a better life after death. He had advocated making it compulsory for public school children to read the bible every day, and delivered a tirade against the theory of evolution.

Bryan, to his misfortune, signified sade by a group of wealthy manufacturers, who are anxious to make the working class forget its low pay and miserable living conditions by doping the workers minds with gush about heaven and hell.

Bryan, to his misfortune, signified his willingness to answer questions when he had concluded his tirade. Bryan had premised his remarks with the statement that the bible was true, "from cover to cover," including the pillar of salt tale, and the story of the fishes and the loaves. Then a student, William G. Chase, asked an embarrassing question, which showed decided skepticism with regard to a man walking on the sea, even if said man had flat feet.

Bryan stammered, and could not answer. "What, you do not believe in the bible?" Bryan asked, holding his hands above his head, palms outward, fingers spread wide apart, in apparent astonishment.

"No, I don't," answered Chase, unabashed.

"My boy," said Bryan, "I am sorry for you and ashamed of you." But Chase's question remained unanswered.

The second question laid Bryan low and completed his rout.

George L. Cassidy, another student, took a long breath and asked, "Isn't it possible that there may be a philosophy gained by evolutionary thinking, which presents a worship and reverence for future generations as an ideal and looks toward the development of heaven upon earth thru the use of science, and is not this ideal a fine and worthy one, capable of producing a not less noble staandard of morality?"

Bryan's answer was as illogical as the rest of his speech. "Ladies and gentlemen," he answered, "I've come a long way to address you students of Brown University, but I shall certainly have to retire before this magnificent bubbling fountain of wisdom on my right."

He then left the stage, amid the hisses and boos of almost the entire audience. There was no applause.

CANADIAN COAL MINERS SPEEDED UP; PAY SLASHED

Nordegg Coal Camp Faces Another Cut

NORDEGG ALBERTA, Can., May 17.—In the daily master press the public is told that the miners are making big money. Mr. Shanks, president of the Western Coal Operators' Association, has told this fake story so ofter that he gradually is beginning to believe it himself. Let's see who is making the money, is it the miner or the coal concern?

It is common knowledge that in Nordegg in No. 3 mine many pair of miners load as high as 26 to 28 cars of coal in 8 hours' shift. This coal weights 30 and more tons.

Company Gets Wages

For loading 30 tons of coal in 8 hours' shift the miners receive 85 cents per ton (2,240 lbs.), which gives to the miners a total sum of $25.50. The miner earns on this occasion $12.75. It looks big money, especially when men work only two days in a week.

When the miner pays up from his wages the blacksmith, the checkweighman, the doctor, union dues, sick benefit dues, his bills in coal company' store and butcher shop, rent, light, water, club, school tax, war tax, collections, practically 90 per cent of his day's earnings goes back to the owners of his coal company.

Men Speeded Up

For 30 tons of coal produced by 2 miners, whose ton is 2240 lbs. gross, which the coal company sells at real ton weight of 2000 lbs., each ton for $4.25, which brings a total of $127.50 to the coal company when sold. The two miners received $25.50, which leaves a surplus of $102.00 for the company to work upon.

Are there any honest men in Nordegg that can dispute the above nasty figures?

At present there are 400 men employed in Nordegg. These 400 men produce as much coal per work-day as was produced in 1924 by 600 men, and this after a reduction of $1.17 per day.

IRISH GOVERNMENT CONCERNED WITH CONQUEST WHILE THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS ARE FACING STARVATION

By JOHN P. McCARTHY

While the capitalist press of this country thru the influence of the Free State government officials is carrying on a campaign of silence and in some cases attacking the Irish famine relief work here, workers and peasants in the west of Ireland are still suffering for the lack of food and fuel.

The only organization so far to come to the rescue is the Workers International Relief. The main source of relief so far has come to a large extend from the English workers thru their labor unions and co-operatives societies.

The workers, peasants and fishermen in the west of Ireland have endured one of the worst Irish winters under the most trying circumstances due to the failure of the potato crop last harvest. While I lived in the west of Ireland for the past five months I came in contact with scores of families particularly in Kerry, who told me of their hardships. They informed me that they had lived on one meager meal a day, for nearly a year.

Up until the middle of April this year, the distress in the west received wide publicity in the local papers in that section of the country. Appeals from all sections in the famine area were made thru the papers to the government to start work on repairing the roads making embankments, etc. This the government did, tho to a very limited extent, and gave the workers the miserable wage of 4 shillings a day, to those who were fortunate to get it. I know of several instances in the congested districts where there were about 500 unemployed workers, in a state bordering on starvation.

The Free State provided some work but on condition that those employed were or would become members of the Cuman-na-Gael, the Free State party. In addition to this the Free State government has succeeded in getting workers discharged on the railroads and other places of employment, if these workers happened to be of a different political opinion to the government. It so happens that in the west among the peasants there is much dissatisfaction with the present government. As a matter of fact the west is still a stronghold of republicanism.

One day last April while talking with an editor of one of the local papers on the famine situation, he informed me that he had just received instructions to lay off the famine stuff. In other words the papers in Ireland which up to that time were giving much space to the distress of the peasants and workers in the west got orders from the Free State officials to ignore the conditions, while at the same time the Free State government itself was giving relief by means of giving 2 cwt. of coal to each family in the surrounding districts in Kerry and giving lunches consisting of bread and margarine to the children in the schools.

This was done for about a month prior to the elections which the government contended in nine constituence. On the success of the Free State party, in the bye-elections, the relief work by the government came to an end and immediately afterwards when the actual conditions in the west got some publicity in the press of England and America, the Free State officials issued statements to the effect that there was no distress or anything like a famine. On the other hand gave the impression that the conditions in the west this year were better than normal.

At the end of 1924 the Free State government was in debt to the English bankers to the extent of approximately 140,000,000 dollars and at the present time the Free State government is negotiating another loan with foreign bankers. It is therefore to their interest to shield the actual conditions that exist, particularly in the west of Ireland. They are also interested in getting those who have other political opinions out of the country and are using the famine situation in the west to that end.

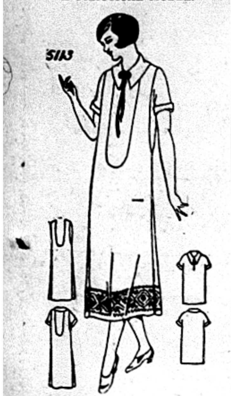
With the scarcity of food during the winter, the vast majority of those peasants found themselves without seed potatoes for spring planting this year. At the present time with very little relief coming from the outside the conditions are much worse than they have been all winter. The unfortunate families who found themselves without potatoes, which is the stable diet, managed, by getting help from their more fortunate neighbors, but now after the spring planting, there is no longer any help to be expected, because all the supplies were used for seed. Due to the scarcity of seed and the continuous rains for the past 18 months the peasants expect that the situation next year will be even forse.

The Workers' International Relief Committee in Dublin is receiving appeals daily from these famine victims. In its relief work the Workers International Relief has been much handicapped by the campaign of silence carried on by the capitalist press.

So far the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee has succeded in sending the sum of $1000.00 to the aid of these unfortunate famine victims in Ireland. This money was raised thru the efforts of the workers in this country and it is hoped that in spite of the attacks in the capitalist press the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee will be in a position to send more money to the relief of the sufferers in the west of Ireland, in the near future.

OUR DAILY PATTERNS

A PRACTICAL MODEL.



5113. This is one of the leading styles of the season—and is certainly an ideal warm weather dress. Linen, bordered with embroidery, was used for the dress and blouse.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 ears. An 18 year size requires 3⅛ yards of 40 inch material for the dress, and 1⅝ yards for the blouse. The width fo the dress at the foot is 1⅝ yards.

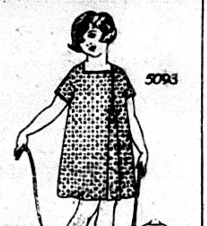
NOTICE TO PATTERN BUYERS—The patterns being sold thru the DAILY WORKER pattern department are furnished by a New York firm of pattern manufacturers. Orders are forwarded by the DAILY WORKER every day as received, and they are mailed by the manufacturer direct to the customer. The DAILY WORKER does not keep a stock of patterns on hand. Delivery of patterns ordinarily will take at least 10 days from the date of mailing the order. Do not become impatient if your pattern is delayed.

A SIMPLE DAINTY FROCK



5093. Brown or green chambrey, linen or rep would be good for this model, the facings could be white or of some contrasting color.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. A 4-year size requires 1½ yard of 36-inch material.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

PHILADELPHIA BARBERS OUT AGAINST CUT

Bosses Try to Refuse Even Present Scale

By LENA ROSENBERG

PHILADELPHIA. — The Barbers Local Union No. 825 is out on strike after failing to reach agreement with Journeymen Barbers' Association in two weeks of conference.

The agreement expired May 1st when the bosses refused to sign a new agreement unless the union forces all independent bosses to join the association and they also demand a reduction in wages of $5.00 per week which will cut their wages to $35.00 a week. They also refuse to recognise the following legal holidays: May 1st, Decoration Day, Fourth of July and Armistice Day.

The strike involves 150 workers who are determined to fight to a finish seventy-five workers are back under a new agreement among those shops that settled, there are six association shops that broke away from the association.

They also succeeded in organising one new shop and are planning to start an organization campaign to organize those shops which they did not succeed in organizing as yet.

At present the agreement calls for 10-hours a day and 55-hours a week with the above holidays which the bosses are trying to take away from them.

Red Ray Commune to Send More Members to Soviet Russia

The fifth group of the agricultural commune Red Ray left these shores on May 12, from New York.

The next group of the commune will leave in August. Comrades who are interested in this kind of economic aid to Soviet Russia are invited to communicate with the Central Bureau of the Society for Technical Aid, 799 Broadway, Room 402, New York, or with the secretary of the Red Ray commune, S. "Wins" Compensation That Benefits Little

ST. LOUIS, May 17.—Unless a threatened referendum holds up the measure, Missouri will have a workman compensation law in July, after a fight covering nearly 15 years, waged by the Missouri State Federation of Labor. The federation withdrew its opposition to the bill when bad provisions were removed before it was sent to the governor.

The building trades councils of St. Louis and Kansas City are sponsoring petitions for a referendum on the ground that benefits are too low. Injured workmen would receive two-thirds of their average weekly earnings, benefits starting three days after injury.

Call H. G. Wells to Debate Bryan.

DAYTON, Tenn., May 17.—H. G. Wells will be called upon to act as witness for the defense of J. T. Scopes, school teacher of this town, charged with teaching evolution in the public schools in violation of the recently passed state anti-evolution law. Wells will be asked to act as an antidote to the testimony of William Jennings Bryan, specialist on monkeys, who has offered his services to the prosecution.

A long list of professors and college presidents will also be called by the defense to air their views on evolution.

A Strain on the Family Tie

To the DAILY WORKER: I paid for a three months sub for my brother Walter Laks, Holland, N. Y., about three weeks ago. I just received a letter from him and he's mad enough to eat me up for sending him a Bolshevik paper. You see he's a kluxer. BOSTON, May 14—Eugene E. O'Neil, former confidential secretary to Joseph Leiter, Chicago wheat king, and indicted with Leiter for smuggling, transporting and possessing intoxicating liquors was fined $500 on the possession charge in Uunited States district court today.

O'Neil pleaded guilty. Other counts of smuggling and transporting liquor were quashed.

Grain Co. Would Sell Stock.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 14.—Attorney General Gilliom was expected to hand down an opinion today on the legal phases involved in the request of the grain marketing company for permission to sell stock in Indiana. Vigorous opposition to the request has arisen from the Indiana farm bureau federation.

Powder Workers Killed.

FAVERSHAM, Eng., May 15.—At least three workers were killed and many injured when two teriffic explosions shook the local powder works today.

BUILDERS AT WORK

THIS IS PROPAGANDA SEASON

ARE YOU HOLDING STREET MEETINGS?

No time of the year is better suited for Communist propaganda than the present. In every city, both Communist and other street meetings are being held and here is the field of operation for every propagandist.

For city and branch agents this is the time to organize comrades for the sale of the DAILY WORKER, Workers Monthly and all Communist literature and especially the Little Red Library which is so admirably suited for such sales.

At Communist open-air meetings the distribution and sale of our literature should be carefully attended to and at other meetings the sale should also be made and the propagandist must make every effort to "get the stump" for at least a few minutes to announce the publications on hand.

We can reach the ear of many workers and give them further food for thought to take home with them to read and think over at leisure.

Summer is a splendid time to "make another Communist." Be sure to arrange for bundle orders of the DAILY WORKER, Workers' Monthly and literature (especially the Little Red Library) for the meetings.

PROSPERITY IN CARLOADING SAY RAILWAY BOSSES

At Least Prosperity for Stockholders

Accrding to reports submitted here today at the spring meeting of the car service division of the American Railway Association, the total loading of revenue freight for the year 1925, based on figures thus far tabulated, will approximate 50,494,570 cars, an increase of 682,450 cars or 1.4 per cent. over 1923, when more cars were loaded than ever before in a similar period, the reports showed.

Moving, loaded freight cars, according to R. H. Aishton, president of the association, is the best criterion of national business conditions.

The reports also revealed that since January 1, 1923, railroads have placed 398,442 new freight cars in service, 44,153 of them since January 1, 1925. The average capacity of cars in this period also has been increased from 43.1 to 44.5 tons. The number of surplus cars immediately available has been raised to 337,181, an increase of 323,625 since 1923.

All car loading figures, except coal, show an increase over the two previous years, and an increase also is shown in the carload lot loading, indicating smaller and more frequent shipments.

Picking Jury Foremen an Art in Washington

WASHINGTON.—(FP)—When the Coolidge administration drew up its second indictment of Senator Wheeler it came to the District of Columbia and got Secretary Skinner of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce as foreman of the grand jury to handle the job.

Then it adjourned the jury's session for a month after the evidence had been heard. By that time congress had gone home, and nobody could tell the country, effectively, how the game had been played.

Now the special grand jury which is to consider indictment of Fall and Doheny and Sinclair for conspiracy to steal the naval oil lands at Teapot Dome and in California has been called. This time it is Harry C. Stewart, cashier of the National Capital Bank, who has been selected by the court as foreman of the grand jury.

Lassen's Drama to Be Presented by the Workers' Aid

NEW YORK, May 17.—The International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council are arranging an outing on August 23. The main feature of this outing will be an outdoor pageant, "From Slavery to Freedom," written by John Lassen and directed by the Workers' Drama League.

The success of the pageant given in Madison Square Garden has inspired the Workers' Drama League to give this new pageant. This will be the first time also that the workers of this city have given an outdoor production on a large scale.

Every worker interested in the two organizations arranging the outing and in the work of proletarian drama should reserve the date: Sunday, August 23.

From the company union known as the "B. and O. plan" on one railroad system, established after the railway strike in 1922, when the morale of the the workers was at a low point, the class peace policy of the trade union officialdom has extended to Canadian government railways and a number of roads on this side of the line.

Now comes William Lee, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, with the proposal to hold a conference of railway managers and railway union officials to launch a "no strike" movement in the entire industry. With characteristic energy the imperialists are evidently insisting upon results from their agents in the trade unions.

This movement is planned on a stupendous scale. If successful it would include 2,000,000 workers in the most important key industry and introduce the company union system on a national basis. The ability to organize and strike is the test of a labor union. To surrender the right to strike and substitute class co-operation for the class struggle, no matter how vague its conception may be, is to take the heart, blood and bowel out of the labor unions. This is the purpose of the plan.

It would be only a half explanation to say that the railroad capitalists are behind this scheme because they are concerned only over demands for higher wages and the power of the unions to enforce them. American capitalism can afford to and does pay proportionately higher wages to the railway brotherhoods than to other groups of workers. Its quarrels with them are of a minor nature and, with their reactionary leadership, quite easily adjusted.

But railway transport systems are of vital importance in war and war comes closer as the rivalry between America, Japan and Great Britain becomes more intense. If the railway unions can be hamstrung by company unions a great burden will have been lifted from the minds of the war mongers.

Upon the whole labor movement the plan would have a demoralizing effect.

It is doubtful if Lee will have much luck in securing the endorsement of other labor officials. Not but that they are in accord with the general tenor of the scheme, but this manner of putting over on the union membership is a little too raw. The fakers are conservative even in their conservatism.

The trend of thought of labor officialdom is in the direction of class peace and acceptance of subsidies from imperialism, but the "B. and O. plan" seems to them to offer a better method of betraying the masses for the time being.

There is this much to be said for Lee, however. He has shown the logical conclusion of a class peace policy and given the left wing in the labor movement a concrete illustration on which to base their arguments against all attempts to lead the unions into the camp of the enemy for surrender instead of struggle.

Elihu Root says that the prohibition law is a setback to temperance and that control of the mind by law is dangerous. The liquor drought such as it is, seems to have created a great demand for freedom from legal interference on the part of the thirsty portion of our ruling class, but we have not heard of any move on their part to repeal the criminal syndicalism laws.

Another Job for the Strikebreaking President

One strike made Calvin Coolidge so famous that he rode into the White House on the crest of a popularity wave. There is a possibility that another opportunity to show his efficiency as a strikebreaker will be presented to him, if the anthracite miners are forced to strike when their agreement with the operators terminates on August 30.

News dispatches from Washington advise us that the president is keeping a watchful eye on the anthracite region. We are informed that Coolidge will take active measures to break the miners' strike, should a stoppage take place and that he will take steps to "insure a continuation of work" in the hard coal fields.

This is not surprising. The bosses did not elect him president for his ability to make nice after-dinner speeches or to turn out neatly polished phrases. They needed a good efficient and willing strikebreaker and they got their man.

In the meantime the operators are speeding up coal production in the anthracite region, so that they will have a sufficient supply ahead to tide them over until Coolidge succeeds in breaking the strike if it takes place.

Lessons of the Danish General Strike

The mighty role that the transport workers can fill in the world-wide struggle between exploiters and workers is shown clearly in the aid promised the Danish workers, now engaged in a general strike, by the Norwegian transport workers and which may be followed by similar action in Sweden, Germany, Holland and Finland.

According to dispatches, the Norwegian sailors and dockworkers have agreed to handle no Danish shipping until the demands of the Danish workers are met and there are good prospects of the boycott extending to all the ports in the countries mentioned above.

Transport is to capitalism what the heart, veins and arteries are to the human body. It cannot live if the circulation system is clogged. Just as the average human being abuses this vital part of the anatomy, so are the transport workers abused by the bosses and among the lowest paid hardest worked and consequently most militant sections of the working class.

Their weakness lies in the division of their forces by national and sectional lines—a weakness that the transport workers of the Red International of Labor Unions realized long ago and which they set out to overcome. The first step was an effort to unify all transport unions around a common program of minimum demands, the second was their active support of the drive for world trade union unity.

With the example of the need for international solidarity furnished by the Danish strike, and the evidence of a real belief in its necessity shown by the Norwegian, Swedish, Finnish, German and Dutch transport workers, the Marine Transport Workers of the I.W.W., as the most militant group in the American industry, should now take the lead in the United States among transport workers in support of the movement for world trade union unity, in which the British and Russian unions have taken the lead internationally.

The Riffian War

All the glamor with which imperialism covers, or tries to cover, its wars on colonial peoples is to be seen in the inspired dispatches relating the exploits of the French armies in northern Africa.

Not much is said about the conscript troops, but plenty of space is given to the officers—a slight scratch is enough to make one of them a hero. The sister of Nicholas Longworth, husband of Alice Roosevelt, is the wife of General Chabrun, whose headquarters are in Fez, and this gives the slaughter of the Riffians a domestic flavor for the dollar aristocracy that it would otherwise lack.

But the Riffians, who drove the Spanish oppressors out of their country, are not submitting, with the humility that barbarians are supposed to evince in the presence of apostles of christian civilization, to the demand that they live within boundaries defined by the European imperialists. They are putting up a sturdy struggle and all thru the colonial regions held in bondage by the French—and British possessions as well—there is evidence of strong support for their efforts toward liberation. 100,000 French troops, equipped with the most modern instruments of warfare, have not been able even to rescue all the beleaguered outposts of French imperialism.

France cannot afford to be driven out of northern Africa. She needs a military base opposite the Gibraltar coast and a line of similar bases along the southern coast of the Mediterranean to offset British control of the sea route to French colonies in the Far East and to bulwark her control of western African colonies.

Northern Africa is another Balkan section. Here also the imperialist rivals clash and it is no wonder that, as in 1911-12, when France and England double-crossed Germany in the Moroccan affair, the eyes of every foreign office are on the developments in the bloody struggle taking place there now.

War cannot be isolated these days. There is the factor of the growing discontent of the colonial peoples coupled with the sympathy and support for their liberation movements manifested by the working class of the imperialist nations which makes these adventerous conquests by the ruling class a weakness rather than a strength to their control.

What better evidence that imperialism drives its devotees to suicide than the fact that confronted with a financial crisis at home the French rulers are forced, by their colonial policy to engage in an expensive and unpopular war which strains their badly damaged credit and encourages revolt at home?

The French Communist Party has not been slow in bringing these matters to the attention of the masses and the proof of the disastrous consequences to the stability of French capitalism will not be long forthcoming in the form of new oppressions visited upon the most advanced section of the French working class.

William Jennings Bryan should qualify for admittance into the monkey section of the nearest zoo after his brush with the students at Brown University, Rhode Island. The students made the old fraud look like a chimpanzee.

The ancient Hebrew who walked on the Black Sea may not have flat feet but lots of people are beginning to think William Jennings Bryan has a flat head.

"Scabby" Bill Lee may not get a united front conference between the railworkers and their masters, but he will get a lot of publicity.

Zinoviev Reports to the Russian Communist Party

MOSCOW, April 29—(By Mail).—At today's evening session Comrade Zinoviev delivered a report on the results of the enlarged executive session of the Communist International. Pointing out that the plenum had the character of a congress, Zinoviev declared that the resolutions adopted by the plenum were extremely important for the Russian Communist Party, not only as a section of the Comintern, but as a party that rules a great country.

The plenum established the relation of the Comintern to the retarded development of the revolution, and the partial stabilization of capitalism. This fact has been caught up by the Second International, and was misinterpreted to mean that the executive of the Comintern had announced the complete stabilization of capitalism. Certain events that have taken place since the enlarged executive session, show the real character of the stabilization. Bulgaria and Germany are examples of economic stabilization. The French ministerial crisis was no ordinary crisis; it arose out of the financial crisis.

THE impending danger of an inflation in France suddenly threatened a repetition of the social crisis experienced by Germany in 1923. The crisis was overcome by a banking scheme which covered the deficit of four milliards.

However, there remains a deficit of 20 milliards. These characteristics of the French stabilization are particularly significant, because France is a victor country. The situation in Bulgaria is characteristic of the political stabilization.

THE unparalelled lies which the Bulgarian government spread against Soviet Russia, immediately after the Sofia outrage, have already been disproved. It remains a fact however, that no country can be ruled against the will of the workers and peasants, and that the class struggle in Bulgaria is permeated with civil war.

THE German elections furnished another example of political stabilization. Comrade Zinoviev relates in detail that the executive had proposed to the German delegation to enter into an election compromise with the German social-democrats, whereby the Communist Party was to refrain from putting up a candidate of its own in the second election, voting under certain conditions, for Braun, the social-democratic candidate.

The majority of the German delegation agreed with this proposal, but the executive had only formulated the general policy, leaving its practical execution to the German Communist Party.

In the meantime the social-democrats had withdrawn their candidate, supporting the capitalist candidate Marx,—in return for which, Braun was to become prime minister in Prussia.

In Saxony, many thousands of social-democratic workers voted for Thaellman, refusing to vote for the capitalist candidate,—which goes to show that there was no psychological basis for casting the votes for Marx.

THE election of Hindenburg is the first historical illustration of stabilizasion. Stabilization will last a certain period of time, but the above facts illustrate the character of this stabilization. Many votes cast for Hindenburg represent a protest of hatred against the Versailles peace treaty. The direct result of the election will be the growth of revolutionary sentiment in Germany.

THE social-democrats will soon make their peace with Hindenburg; not the proletariat however. This election may be expected to have some serious international results. Germany's relations with France and Poland will not be improved, but eventually sharpened. The situation is wrought with troubles and dangers. There is also the danger of a change in German policy towards the Soviet Union. Stabiliation is there, but many symptoms show that this stabilization is insecure. Reaction is on the upgrade in Europe.

DUE to stabilization, there are in our movement a number of right tendencies and ultra-left dangers. The somewhat unclear formulation of the enlarged executive must be made clear to the effect that a general revolutionary situation must be differented form an immediate revolutionary situation. The charlatans of the Second International declare that the plenum had not registered any revolutionary situation at all. This is a falsehood. The plenum had merely established the fact that there was no immediately revolutionry situation. Since the bourgeoisie is unable to solve its conflicts from above, the situation remains revolutionary.

WE are only at the beginning of an era of wars and revolutions, and the contradictions of capitalism are today greater than before the war. It is necessary to differentiate between the stabilization of capitalism and the stabilization of the Soviet Union.

Speaking of the rapprochement between the British and Russian trade unions, Comrade Zinoviev stated that there is in England, for the first time, a general revolutionary situation. The rapprochement between the trade unions follows the line of historical development; hence the great significance of the united front tactics. The speaker then declares that the view entertained by some that the fact of stabilization means that Trotsky was correct in his analysis, to be false. The differences did not turn about this question, but on the question of the tactics to be adopted by a proletarian party in such a situation.

IN connection with the Czecho-Slovakian party, the speaker states that the crisis has been overcome, and that the resignations in Brunn only contribute to the healthy development of the party.

THE plenum had dealt with the agrarian question and with the policy of the Comintern. Events have shown the policy pursued by the Russian Communist Party in the Comintern to be correct. The immediate task of the Russian Communist Party is to adapt its daily work with the international movement. At the present moment the Comintern needs especially the moral support of the Russian Communist Party, which is and remains the party of international proletarian revolution. (Applause).

JOB SELLERS IN NEW YORK ROB THE UNEMPLOYED

Worker Travels All Night, Gets No Work

NEW YORK, May 17.—The following letter has been received from a worker, who has to depend on the capitalist exploiters:

"Dear Comrades:—

"I am a laborer doing work on automobile highway construction. I saw an ad in the New York World of an employment agency at 91 East 4th St. The ad called for Scandinavians and Germans for automobile highway repairers. The offer was $105 a month, free board. At the agency they told me to take the Pennsylvania railroad to Chenango Bridge, one station from Binghampton, N. Y. I was told to be there at 6 a. m. and the boss would come to get me. I took the train at 9 o'clock in the evening and travelled all night. When I arrived at the given place there was nobody in sight.

Boss Turns Him Down.

"I went to the camp, but was told that I could not see the boss that day but would have to come back the next day. When I returned the next day, the boss told me that there was no work for me. He offered to send me to another camp sixty miles away, but he did not keep his word. I stayed there 5 days. The trip cost me, together with by board, $20.

"The boss at the camp declared that he knows nothing about the agency. Another fellow at the camp told me that he earned $35 in three weeks, and not the $105 and board that was promised."

These facts speak for themselves. First, the worker is skinned by the "employment" agency, then, if he does succeed in getting work, he is skinned by the boss—$35 for three weeks instead of $105 a month.

Workers Must Fight.

This is the "land of opportunity," where every worker can rise if he only works hard and industriously. There is only one rising that will help the working class—and that is the rising of the workers as an organized body to put an end to this skinning and the skinners, and to install a system and a government where they, the workers, are the bosses. The time is coming—the workers should learn from their own individual experiences and from the experiences of the workers of all countries.

"ZINOVIEV LETTER" A FAKE, SAYS OFFICIAL TRADE UNION REPORT

LONDON, May 17.—The report of the trade union congress delegation, which has been investigating the authenticity of the famous "Zinoviev letter," publication of which by the British foreign office had much to do with the defeat of Ramsay MacDonald's labor government last election, now is complete and is declared to pronounce the letter a forgery, says the labor organ, the Daily Herald.

General council considers there should be investigation of how and why the foreign office came to issue the letter just a few days before the general election, and will urge that a committee of the labor party, together with officials of the foreign office and home office, be given facilities for carrying out such an inquiry.

800 COAL MINERS FLEE FOR LIVES AS BLACK DAMP OVERCOMES 40

WILKES BARRE, Pa., May 17.—Forty miners were overcome by black damp when fire, breaking out 300 feet beneath the surface in the number 3 mine of the Kingston Coal company, sent 800 miners scurrying to the surface for their lives.

Eight of the victims were brought to a hospital where it was said they probably would recover. Two other workers were sent to their homes in a serious condition.

The fire was believed to have started during timbering operations. Three acres of coal land had been burned this afternoon and the fire was still raging.

Many mules perished when mine workers were forced to abandon rescue work because of the great danger to themselves.

Confusion reigned at the mouth of the mine for two hours, wives and children hurrying to the scene on hearing reports that the men were trapped.

LOSE HOPE OF RESCUE FOR MINER ENTOMBED WEEK IN BUTTE MINE

BUTTE, Mont., May 17.—All hope of rescuing alive Gus Bolden, Butte miner, entombed by a fall of ground in the 200 foot level of the West Colusa mine last Monday, was abandoned today by rescue workers. Work will be continued, however, until the body is located, mine officials said.

Boost Wages of Local Labor Head Against Protest

The Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday passed a motion to raise the salary of President John Fitzpatrick, from $75 to $100 a week. An amendment was added that the stenographer employed by the federation should be raised $5 a week.

Delegate J. P. McCarthy, from the Carpenters' Union' inquired as to the scale of the Blacksmith's Union of Chicago, of which Fitzpatrick is a member. He stated that as a general rule the officials of the American labor movement were paid too highly, that Fitzpatrick should get no more than the regular union scale of his trade.

McCarthy declared that the exhorbitant salaries of labor leaders were a corrupting influence which gave them a different class viewpoint than the members of the unions and seperated them from the rank and file. The unskilled workers in the building trades, he pointed out, were working under the scab Landis award, and it was much more needful to use all available funds for organizing the unorganized than in increased salary for labor leaders in a time when the working class was suffering wage cuts right and left.

Among the many labor fakers who spoke in favor of the increase in salary of President Fitzpatrick, was Carl Berreitter of the Typographical Union and prominent member of the proletarian patry.

RUSSIA DEMANDS THE RETURN OF JEWELS STOLEN BY WRANGEL

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 17.—Maxim Litvinoff, assistant commissar of foreign affairs, has demanded, on behalf of the Soviet government, the return by the government of Jugo-Slavia of jewels seized by Peter Wrangel, who delivered them to the fascist Jugo-Slav government. Wrangel stole the jewels from a safe deposit vault. Litvinoff said Russia will hold Jugo-Slovia responsible for any losses.

SKULL FRACTURE BROT QUICK DEATH TO 'FARM' BABY

NEW YORK, May 17.—Latest reports by Dr. Otto H. Schultz on the autopsy of the six-months-old infant, William Winters, who died in Mrs. Helen Geisen-Volk's "baby farm" last February 3 of a fractured skull, says indications are that the fracture caused quick death to the infant. Dr. Schultz also reports finding a large hard curd of milk in the baby's stomach which, he says, would undoubtedly have made him cross and irritable. Indictments for homicide for other cases came a step near thru the result of this investigation.

New Board to Face School Problems at Meeting Next Friday

Next Friday, the new school board on entering into its duties will be confronted with the two serious problems now facing the board of education. One is the deficit in the treasury which now comes to $20,000,000 in the educational fund; the other is the acute housing shortage estimated at 100,000 pupils being without satisfactory accommodations.

The new board has before it the old board's decision to ask for a $1 increase in the tax rate for educational purposes and to carry out the new salary schedule proposed by Superintendent McAndrew. Trustee J. Lewis Coath has announced his intention to demand reconsideration of these two matters.

The members on the new finance committee selected by Edward B. Ellicott, the new president of the board, are Julius F. Swietanka, chairman, Charles T. Byrne, Theophilus Schmid and Dr. Victor Schiller. All of them are business men.

CHICAGO WORKERS PROTEST BALKAN WHITE TERROR

Thousands Slain; More Thousands in Prison

At a mass meeting of several hundred Chicago workers yesterday held at Bricklayers' Union hall, a determined protest was vo'ced against the horrors of the white terror raging in the Balkan countries.

In Bulgaria especially, and also in Jugo-Slavia and Greece, many thousands of workers and peasants have been murdered, being shot down and hung without trial, while many more thousands have been brutally thrown in jail and vile prisons to rot for year after year, until death would seem a release from suffering.

The meeting was presided over by Thurber Lewis, and the speakers were Earl Browder, in English; Comrade Michalachky, in South Slavic; Comrade Koteff in Bulgarian, and Comrade Kostis in Greek.

A spirited resolution of protest demanding a cessation to the barbarities of the Balkan bourgeoisie was adopted, and is to be sent to the labor press thruout the world and mailed direct to the embassies of the Balkan nations at Washington.

Especial emphasis was laid upon the part of the imperialist powers in concealing the real perpetrators of the Sveti Kral explosion and using the occasion as an excuse for intensified white terror murders.

COMMUNISTS TO ATTACK FRENCH SLAUGHTER IN AFRICA, BEFORE CHAMBER

PARIS, France, May 17.—The Riffian troops fighting the French invaders for possession of their native land have captured large stores of provisions and war material in the Benzi Zeural country.

Official statements from Morocco do not disclose the number of French troops which have been killed in the sever fighting, which extends over a front of 250 miles.

The Communists are expected to attack the French military operations in North Africa when the chamber of deputies assembles on May 25.

BOSS PLUMBERS APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC WITH ATTACK ON WORKERS

THE Connecticut Master Plumbers' Association met recently in New Haven and went on record condemning "loafing on the job" and the practice of "forgetting" tools. The convention adopted a resolution "banning inefficient workmen and favoring a reduction in prices in order to create more friendly relations between the plumbers and the public."

The same day's papers reported that the New Jersey Standard Oil Co., reported earnings of $81,00,000 in 1924. The Standard Oil Co. does not "loaf on the job." It does not "forget its tools." The Standard Oil Co. of John D. Rockefeller is not "inefficient." On the contrary, the Standard Oil Co. is thoroly efficient in bleeding the "people," in bleeding the workers. It knows what its power is—the power of the United States government.

"Loafers" the plumbers are called, because they refuse to give up their last ounce of energy to fill the pockets of their bosses. "Reduction in prices" is what the bosses intend to introduce, which means a reduction of the wage scale for the workers.

What are the workers going to do about it?

THERE are 10,000 politic in Hungarian jails under the rule of Horthy, the pet of the American capitalist class. Our rulers like Horthy so well that the innocuous Karolyi, who is no more radical than Morris Hillquit, was gagged while on a visit to this country recently. An American citizen with the Gaelic cognomen of Jerry Smith, is running Hungary's financial affairs. Our American pacifists have not organized a committee for the release of political prisoners in Hungary tho the fate of a few stoolpigeons and counter revolutionaries in Soviet Russia is causing them a great deal of uneasiness.

THERE are approximately 8,000 political prisoners in Germany's jails. They are all workers and mostly Communists or Communist sympathizers. Not so long ago the papers were giving considerable space to the "Barmat scandal." The Barmat brothers with the aid of the socialist officials made a lot of money illegally during the war and after. They robbed the state banks in co-operation with the socialists. "Everybody was doing it," was the only defense the socialists made. The leader of the Barmats was arrested and jailed but he was released a few days ago. None of the socialist burglars are in confinement.

THE unforgivable crime in the eyes of the capitalists is a desire to abolish the present slave system, if this desire is actively demonstrated. The capitalists rob each other. The fellow who gets the worst of it is in no pleasant mood and if he has any influence in the government he gets the robber arrested. But those incidents are only family affairs and blow over. But it is a different matter to attempt the overthrow of the system on which those robbers thrive. This is the crime of the Communists. Because they have refused to compromise with sin, the heavy hand of the capitalist government comes down on them. They fill the jails while the socialist leaders are taken into the bourgeois parlor.

WE learn that one of the framers of French foreign policy is Paul Boncour, leading member of the socialist party. It is only necessary to look at the news made by France to [illegible] kind of policy Boncour is framing. French troops are slaughtering the people of Morocco, so that French capital can exploit their country without let or hindrance. Boncour, the socialist and his co-workers are behind the generals who are directing the fight on the Riffian tribesmen. Nice brand of socialism!

THE value of clergymen to the capitalist class is stated quite plainly by Roger Babson, capitalist statistician, in a letter dated January 27, 1920. It is worth reprinting. Here goes:

"The value of our investments depends upon the strength of our churches. The underpaid preachers of the nation are the men upon whom we really are depending rather than the well-paid bankers, lawyers, and brokers. The religion of the community is really the bulwark of our investments.

AUSTRALIAN COAL MINERS STRIKE WHEN COMRADES ARE JAILED

SYDNEY, Australia, May 18.—Twenty wheelers were fined at the Wollongong police court for absenting themselves from work. Thirteen of the number paid the fines, but seven others—lads whose ages ranged from 15 to 21 years—refused to pay. They were arrested and sent to jail for a month.

Immediately after they were arrested the miners employed at the South Bulli Colliery (where the two wheelers had been employed) ceased work, and announced that they would not resume until the two wheelers were released from jail.

RUHR IN UPROAR AS 44 DIE IN A MINE EXPLOSION

Luther Cancels Trip as Miners Protest

DORTMUND, Germany, May 18.—With forty-four known dead, twenty-seven seriously injured, and several more coal miners missing, as a result of the explosion in the Dorstfeld mine here Saturday, the entire district has broken out against the government.

Protest mass meetings called by the coal miners thruout the Rhenish district to protest against the lack of safety measures and the part the government is playing in allowing the coal operators to ruthlessly exploit the miners, were forbidden by the police. Communists were among the speakers scheduled to address the mass meetings.

Luther Afraid of Miners' Wrath.

Widespread unrest thruout the district continues. Chancellor Luther, who announced he would visit Dortmund "as a gesture of official condolence," has cancelled his trip in fear of the wrath of the miners against the government.

Two tons of dynamite exploded Saturday, entombing 250 men. An explosion of coal dust in a room 3,000 feet from the dynamite blast and a fire which resulted, burned and asphyxiated more miners than did the actual explosion.

The miners point to the large number of accidents which have occurred in the Ruhr due to negligence of the mine owners to install safety devices. The mine operators have been paid huge sums by the government to "compensate" them for the shut down during the allied occupation, but the miners have received nothing.

The miners resent the fact that the government is bowing and scraping before the allies, promising to uphold the Dawes plan, which adds to their wretched condition an intolerable burden.

Kansas Ex-Governor on Stand in Trial for Pardon Sales

TOPEKA, Kans., May 18.—Possibility that former Governor Jonathan M. Davis might be prepared to spring a surprise when he resumed the stand on direct examination was seen as court opened this morning. The former governor, on trial for selling convicts pardons, spent several hours yesterday searching his former office in the state house after long conferences with his attorneys Saturday.

With the defense virtually closed when this direct examination of Davis is over—probably before the noon recess—the high light of the trial was looked for this afternoon when the defendant's cross examination begins.

It is expected that the case will reach the jury by tomorrow night or Wednesday morning. Judge McClure intimated his charge will be brief and attorneys and the court have virtually agreed to limit arguments to three hours.

Cal Promotes Poison Gas.

WASHINGTON, May 18.— Poison gas should not be sold, and the White House wants to have it barred from international trade. On the other hand, chemicals that are used to make poison gas are used for other things, and commerce in them must not be interfered with in any way. This clear view of the problem permits the administration to promote war preparation and protest at the same time, and to prove that any limitation is a difficult matter.

Would Sell All Ships.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—President Coolidge permits it to be known that he favors operating the government's merchant ships only "until they can be sold." This is his answer to a question as to whether he proposes to hand them all over at any price he can get.

CAPITALIST PRESS IS BILLBOARD FOR ADVERTISERS TO TANTALIZE CONSUMER INTO SPENDING MONEY

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Advertising is the whip of the modern taskmaster keeping workers enslaved to the power machine. The associated advertising clubs of the world at their convention in Houston, Tex., did not hear Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, mention wage slavery but he enlarged on the two functions of advertising, creation of the torment of desires and subsidizing of the press, which help produce it.

"Modern advertising," say Hoover, "is the handmaiden of mass production. The general knowledge and rapid distribution of an article which

NEGOTIATIONS WITH RUSSIA PROCEEDING SMOOTHLY, SAY FRENCH

PARIS, May 18.—Negotiations between France and Soviet Russia are proceeding satisfactorily according to an official statement issued by the French foreign office. It is reported that the British and American governments are placing every possible obstacle in the way of the success of the negotiations. The British, in particular are circulating rumors of violent disagreements and of alleged Soviet trickery.

The French are not particular whether or not Russia recognizes certain debts. All they are concerned with is saving something out of the wreckage. The French express themselves as confident that the matters at issue between themselves and Russia will be amicably adjusted.

HINDENBURG NOW FAWNS BEFORE FOREIGN BANKS

German Monarchists to Obey Dawes Plan Steal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, May 18.— That the monarchist government of President von Hindenberg will bow before the international bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan, was shown in a speech made by foreign minister Stresemann before the reichstag today. Stresemann declared that the government will have as its "guiding line" the carrying out of the Dawes plan, which makes Germany a virtual colony ruled by the foreign bankers, and which burdens the workers of Germany with the "reparations" payments.

Stresemann pledged "to continue to fulfill, under all circumstances, Germany's obligations as provided by the Dawes plan."

Workers Shoulder Burden.

"We shall fulfill the Dawes plan in the future as we have in the past," Stresemann said. "Parliamentary majorities, reichstags and the composition of the government may change, but I can imagine no constellation which would deviate from this guiding line of our policy."

That the workers would be forced by the new government to shoulder the entire burden of the Dawes plan was shown in the recent report of the minister of finance to the reichstag which advocated "lifting the burden from the industrialists and placing a high tax upon the workers."

Relations with Soviet Russia.

The Dawes plan imposes heavy payments upon Germany, and provides that if the payments are not made, the international banking syndicate shall directly take over the industries. It is already predicted that it will be impossible for the impoverished workers to give enough money to supply these heavy payments.

Foreign Minister Stresemann in his speech today, also emphasized the necessity of maintaining friendly relations with the Soviet Union. He urged that the French evacuate the

Moonshine Smugglers Agitate Strike on Coast Guard Boats

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 18.—A group of bootleggers, using bribery and strike propaganda to further their efforts, are endeavoring to break down the morale of the enlisted men on the coast guard boats blockading rum row, it was stated today by Captain W. E. V. Jacobs, commandant of the New York area.

Captain Jacobs, in admitting 16 coast guardsmen were under arrest for liquor smuggling, extortion and desertion, said:

"When a man getting $125 or less a month from the government is offered $250 a week by rum runners, the temptation is very great."

HONOLULU TRADE UNIONS SUPPORT RED SOLDIERS

Central Labor Council Head Visits Crouch

HONOLULU, Hawaii, May 18.— G. W. Wright, president of the Honolulu Central Labor Council, made a personal visit to the 27th Infantry Guard House at Schoffield barracks and had a long talk with Paul Crouch and Walter Trumbull, the two soldiers who were given long terms by a military court martial last month for organizing the "Hawaiian Communist League."

Wright says of Paul Crouch, "He is a clean-cut, blue-eyed, level-headed idealist of a purely intellectual type. There is nothing furtive or sinister about him. He smiles a little as he talks. His voice is low and pleasant and he speaks rapidly and with perfect assurance, telling a straight-forward story. There was not a word of self pity or regret and not even any bitterness against his accusers or the military authorities. He appeared to regard everything from an impartial and impersonal point of view."

Maximum Penalty 3 Months.

Brother Wright has taken a genuine interest in the case. He took the case up personally in several interviews with John Albert Matthewman, former attorney general of the territory and for a number of years a judge in the local courts. This was after he had gone into every detail of the case with Crouch. Crouch had particularly pointed out that the specific statute he is accused of violating carries a maximum penalty of three months imprisonment.

Matthewman is a man of independent thought and a fearless advocate of free speech. He was quite recently forced out of office by the senate because of his stand against the policy of the governor and the big interests that control the territory.

To Defend Crouch and Trumbull.

Matthewman is of the opinion that there is a good chance to get the boys out of the hands of the military authorities by a proper analysis and presentation of the case. Matthewman declared his intention of undertaking the defense of Crouch and Trumbull.

The recent reductions in the sentences of Crouch and Trumbull from forty and twenty-six years to three and one, in no way alters the status of the case. There is no question but what it is only the great indignation in the army itself and the storm of international protest raised in the labor movement thruout the world that caused the authorities to think twice about the extreme severity of the sentence imposed originally.

While the central labor council will probably not officially undertake the cause of the two soldiers, G. W. Wright expressed the sentiment that he personally will do all he can and that he is assured of support by practically all the local labor leaders.

CHINESE FAMINE UNSEEN BY WALL STREET'S ENVOY

Lets Millions Starve, Offers No Relief

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Famines kill the poor first. Ten million Chinese farmers and wage workers and their dependents are reported suffering from famine in a dozen provinces, because Chinese rivers became flooded last year and swept away crops, orchards, houses and even the soil on which new crops could be grown.

Minister Schurman, returning to Washington from Peking, replies to questions about this famine by saying that the wisdom of American aid for the sufferers is doubtful. China is prosperous, as a whole. If many are dying of hunger in one district, there is prosperity in other regions. You have no certainty that Chinese officials will honestly handle relief funds. And he distinctly leaves the impression that he has never worried if a few millions of Chinese poor were dying; his business as the American diplomatic spokesman at Peking was to see that American financial interests were not hurt.

Schurman now goes to Berlin as ambassador. He may be counted upon to observe no more in Germany than in China—or than Ambassador Francis observed from his tea-table while the Russian revolution flamed about the streets of Petrograd.

POWDER BUSINESS GOOD SO BIG TRUST BOOSTS ITS CAPITAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 18.—Directors of the E. I. Dupont Denemours, at their meeting today, approved an increase in the capital stock of the company from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. A special stockholders' meeting has been called for June 15, to vote on the increase, which is made necessary by the proposed expansion of the activities of the company.

Directors declared the regular dividend of $2.50 a share on the common stock and $1.50 a share on the debentures, payable to stockholders of record June 5, and July 10, respectively.

CAL SQUEEZES NATIONS TO GET FOREIGN TRADE

Debt Settlement Talk to Help Wall Street

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 18.—President Coolidge has called upon Great Britain, France, Italy, and six other nations to take immediate steps toward settlement of their debts to the United States because he is anxious "to increase business and commerce as a result of such settlement," it was announced at the White House.

Nineteen foreign nations are indebted to the United States government to the extent of over twelve billion dollars, and this club is now to be used by the Wall Street bankers and big business to secure juicy contracts abroad.

Coolidge admitted that the move to collect the debts is an attempt to increase foreign trade for America's capitalists. The United States is the banker of the world, and the American trusts who "follow the flag" are chasing dollars to foreign lands.

France is under the heaviest obligations to the United States government and to the Morgan banking syndicate. France has paid $221,386,302.82 on interest alone, but still owes the United States $4,210,556,938.27, in addition to the hundreds of millions of dollars directly borrowed from J. P. Morgan.

Great Britain's total indebtedness to the United States is 800 million dollars more than that of France, when the unpaid interest is included.

Nations Indebted to U. S.

The nine nations which have been called on to settle their debts with the United States are France, Italy, Belgium, Greece, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugo-Slavia, Esthonia, and Latvia. The settlements are to be arranged with the world war foreign debt commission, altho the French government has been asked to send a debt commission to Washington to deal directly with Coolidge.

Great Britain, Hungary, Finland, Lithuania and Poland have already made gestures toward settlement.

Other countries owing large debts to the United States government include Austria, Cuba, Latvia, Liberia, and Nicaragua.

Already on Job for the Next War, These "Advisory" Experts

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 18.—Millionaires of finance, transportation, industry and a group of educators and army officers were scheduled to enjoy a free joyride in the naval dirigible Los Angeles.

The wealthy passengers include E. T. Stotesbury, Morgan partner; W. W. Atterbury, vice-president Pennsylvania R. R.; Samuel Vauclain, president Baldwin Locomotive Works; Irenee du Pont, president E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co.; and Eugene G. Grace, president Bethlehem Steel.

All are Eastern ordnance advisory board and are assisting the U. S. in preparing plans for immediate industrial mobilization upon the outbreak of the next war.

Ten Scabs Scared by Supposed "Bomb"

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., May 18.—A nitro-glycerine bomb wrecked a bunkhouse inhabited by miners employed by the Ben Franklin Coal company near here, today. Ten miners narrowly escaped death.

The miners, who had refused to join the West Virginia Coal strike, were thrown from their bunks, but none were injured.

TOM PARRY EXPELLED WITHOUT TRIAL BY FARRINGTON MACHINE AND KLUXER ILLEGALLY PUT IN

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 18.—The latest turn in Frank Farrington's illegal attack on membership rule of the Illinois Miners' Union is the removal by expulsion of Tom Parry from the presidency of Sub-District 4 of District 12 and the installation of a Farrington-Ku Klux Klan tool, Charlton Peacock, as president.

This was followed by the re-instatement of Anthony Shymansky as sub-district secretary-treasurer, whom Farrington's previous "white hope," known as "Jackey" Walker, had illegally installed in place of the progressive John Watt.

The Rise and Fall of "Jackey" Walker.

These are the present developments of the disruptive action begun by Farrington when he removed, without constitutional authority, the regularly elected sub-district president, Freeman Thompson, and appointed "Jackey" Walker, a Farrington henchman, in his place.

Walker, a poor louse who had neglected to pay dues for a year or so, was promptly declared by his local union to be wholly ineligible as he was not even a member of the U. M. W. of A. under its rules.

Farrington blustered at first, but finally was crafty enuf to observe the formal rules of the union and ordered Walker to get out. But he by no means intended the miners to get control of their own union.

The Frame-Up Proceeds.

When Tom Parry, the regularly elected vice-president of the sub-district, took over the presidency with the vacancy left by Walker, and—as president—ousted Shymansky from the sub-district secretary-treasurer's office, Farrington proceeded with the rest of the frame-up to make the Miners' Union an auxiliary to the operators' association.

Farrington's tools persuaded some ku kluxer members of Divernon Local 146 to prefer charges against Tom Parry under section 3, article 20 of the international constitution because Parry had, in his local meeting called Farrington a "crook."

Parry Proves Assertion.

There isn't any doubt but that Farrington is a crook, and Parry had proceeded to prove it by citing instances where Farrington had padded his expense account. But if there could be any doubt as to Farrington's crookedness, his frame-up against Parry would remove it.

Instead of giving Tom Parry a trial, which of course would have afforded him a chance to prove again his statement about Farrington, a farce was pulled off whereby he was shut out from making any defense.

A Rank Frame-Up.

Parry was out at one of the mines fighting a "discharge case" on the morning of May 11, when at 9:30 a telegram was delivered to his house in Divernon, telling him that he must

Temperatures ranging from freezing and below in the more northerly states to the low forties and upper thirties in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and parts of Missouri prevailed yesterday, withering early crops and leaving a thick frost in their wake.

ASK UNITY FOR OPEN SHOP IN CLEVELAND, OHIO

To Attack the Building Unions First

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 18.—Following the victorious attack upon the Cleveland street car men's union and the decision for the open shop rendered in that case by the capitalist supreme court of the state of Ohio, Cleveland capitalists are following up with a drive against the building trades unions as a preliminary to attacking and if possible, breaking up every union of all trades in the city of Cleveland.

Building Trades First Attacked.

The scab "American plan association has issued a statement to its members urging the setting up of a city-wide committee to open war on the building trades unions somewhat like the fight that has been carried on in Detroit.

In Detroit the unification of all capitalist interests included the Employers' Association, the Board of Commerce, Real Estate Board, Associated Building Employers, Engineering Society, Retail Merchants, and the Rotary, the Exchange, Kiwanis, Lions and Mercator clubs, and this unification of bosses took place in concurrence with an attempt by reactionary labor leaders to expelt left wingers from the carpenters' union.

A United Front Against Unions.

In the statement of the "American Plan Association," it says:

"A great deal of interest was aroused when it was realized that the decision of the supreme court in the street railway case was sufficiently broad to justify the belief that it would be applied to other closed shop labor monopolies, such as that existing in the building industry of this city.

"Complete Co-operation" Demanded.

"No one organization will be able to establish open shop conditions in our building industry. It freedom of employment is to be secured in the building trades, there must be complete co-operation between all the civic organizations. Unless all the elements in the community are united back of whatever plan may be finally adopted that monopoly will resist every attack.

"Success will not crown our efforts in that direction unless the community backs us up morally and financially."

Woman's Claim is Challenged.

LONDON, May 18.— Prof. Julian Huxley, Oxford scientist, has written to Mrs. Monteith, it was learned today, challenging the contention in her book that a woman can decide the sex of her child.

BOOZY POLICE CHIEFS AT NEW YORK CONFAB ACT AGAINST FOREIGN-BORN

NEW YORK, May 18.—Laws are made for the police not police for the law it would papear from the accusations which Police Chief Braden of Louisville, Ky., has leveled against his colleagues attending the sessions of the international police conference at the Waldorf-Astoria. Braden's verbal bomb at the conference was that delegates were boozing in defiance of the prohibition law and he feared their conduct would cast asperisions on the profession of law enforcement.

Chief Enright of New York City, president of the conference, didn't like this talk at all and neglected to follow the usual custom at the international police sessions and ask the delegates what they thought of the speech.

The police from all over the world assembled declared their faith in the fingerprint system of identification (recently shaken by the Wehde discovery that fingerprints can be easily forged) and a resolution urged by Secretary of Labor Davis favoring the registration and fingerprinting of all aliens was passed.

KLAN TEACHES MEMBERS HOW TO EVADE THE LAW

Kluxers Instructed to Lie to Courts

NEW YORK, May 18—A representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports that he attended initiation ceremonies of the ku klux klan in a neighboring state and that the klansmen present were given instructions for evading inquiries of judges, juries and officers of the law, when asked if they are members of the klan.

According to the investigator klansmen are instructed that when asked if they are "members" of the ku klux klan they are to reply in the negative, even under oath, since no klansman is a member of the klan but all "citizens of the invisible empire."

The ku kluxy utterances of the Rockaway Argus, published at Rockaway Beach, New York City, has led the national association to ask Postmaster General Harry S. New to take action against the editor. The Argus, commenting on unproved charges of unmannerly conduct of colored men towards white women says: "There is only one effective remedy for this and that is for the men of the community to take the matter into their own hands and mete out condign punishment on the spot. It is not a matter for the police or the courts. A creature who will insult a woman on the public streets puts himself outside the pale, and laws and courts were not made for him."

RIFFIAN TROOPS REINFORCE LINE AGAINST FRENCH

RABAT, French Morocco, May 18.—The offensive of the French troops against the native Riffian army has been temporarily halted. The French here declare they are awaiting the results of the mission of Louis Malvy former minister of the interior to Madrid. Malvy has been sent by the Painleve government to attempt to induce the Spanish dictators to unite with the French imperialists in the invasion of Spanish as well as French Morocco.

The French imperialists wish to obtain the consent of the de Rivera dictatorship to cross the line dividing Spanish and French Morocco, and attack the Riffian army there.

Abd-ele-Krim, the leader of the native North African forces, is bringing up reinforcements and the French are afraid he will attack before their negotiations with Spain are completed. The French airplanes are attempting to blockade the Riffians by preventing merchant ships from entering the port of Ajdir, a Mediterranean port, where the Riffians have secured some of their supplies.

British Postal Union Officials Give in to Tories

WASHINGTON, May 18. — C. G. Ammon, organizing secretary of the Union of Post Office Workers of Great Britain, has notified President Gainor of the National Association of Letter Carriers, in Washington, that attacks on the position of his union by the tory postmaster general may prevent his promised trip to the United States in September. Ammon was to have addressed the three conventions of American postoffice employes.

It appears that Sir William Mitchell-Thompson, the tory cabinet minister in question, has given partial recognition to a reactionary secessionist organization in the British postal service, after the legitimate national union had removed from its constitution a clause permitting strikes.

SOUTHERN COURT BARS CHINESE FROM SCHOOLS

Ruling Puts Orientals on "Jim Crow" List

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JACKSON, Miss., May 18.—Chinese have been placed on the "Jim Crow" list of the south, according to a ruling handed down by the Mississippi state supreme court which bars all Chinese children from white schools. The court decision stated that Chinese children are not a part of the white race, but are "colored," and therefore must attend the Negro schools.

The opinion of the court pointed out that as education in Mississippi is compulsory, Chinese residents must either attend the private schools or the institutions provided by the state for Negroes.

Several months ago G. P. Rice of Bolivar county brought suit against Martha Lum in the circuit court asking that the court oust her children from the white school. The case was watched with much interest, representatives of the Chinese government stationed in Washington requesting full rights for their countrymen, expressed the opinion that they would carry the fight to the U. S. supreme court.

More Discrimination Predicted

Placing the Chinese on the "Jim Crow list" in the south is something new. Heretofore they have been permitted to enter theaters, public restaurants and exclusive hotels without molestation.

On the intermarriage question the south has permitted them a free course, allowing them to wed white women, but restricting them to use Negro women only as concubines. It is expected that a law annuling all marriages between whites and Chinese will follow.

Parry Expelled Without Trial

"appear for trial" at 8 a. m. that same morning—an hour and a half before the telegram was even delivered and several hours before he came back from the mine and received it.

No Chance to Defend Himself.

The Farrington district machine held a mock trial in his absence and declared Tom Parry expelled from the U. M. W. of A. without allowing him the slightest chance for a defense.

In the afternoon the capitalist papers had already received and published the news of Parry's expulsion and the appointment by Farrington of Charlton Peacock as sub-district president. In place of notifying the miners, Farrington notified first the capitalist papers and his friend, H. C. Adams, president of the Central Coal Operators' association.

The Klan-Operator-Farrington Combine.

Peacock was known as the "klan kandidate" in the recent sub-district election, and ran against Tom Parry, but Parry beat him by 700 votes. There is a united front of the coal operators, Faker Farrington and the ku klux klan in the disruption of the United Mine Workers' of Ilinois and the prevention of membership rule.

"Masters and Slaves" by John Lassen, Plumbs Depths of the Workers' Struggle Against Bosses

"MASTERS AND SLAVES," by John Lassen, a story of the working class, the second instalment of which appeared in last Saturday's magazine section fo the DAILY WORKER, is a story of the struggles and problems of working men and working women.

John Lassen, the editor of the Communist newspaper "Uj Elöre," knows the workingclass about which he writes. Comrade Lassen is now threatened with deportation because of his writings on behalf of the workingclass.

"Masters and Slaves" tells of the struggles of the workers who while jobless and without money, ride the rods from town to town seeking work. It tells of the slavish toil, the deadening routine which is the lot of the worker after he finds a job.

"Masters and Slaves" exposes the clash of interests between the workers and their employers. Furthermore it is real literature, written with the absorbing style of a true artist. The story was translated by Simon Felshin.

Watch for the third instalment in next Saturday's magazine section.

TEACHERS' UNION FIGHTS COERCION OF N. Y. BOARD

Effort Seen to Force More Overtime Work

NEW YORK, May 18—The possibility of assignments not only to after school hours' playground work but also to summer school work on the same yearly salary now paid them, lurks in the latest imposition of the New York board of education upon city elementary teachers.

Acting on the emotional appeal of Mayor John, Hylan that school playgrounds be opened for after-school recreation to children under 14, the board of education announced that 60 such grounds would be kept open and asked teachers, janitors and the police to volunteer their supervision.

Edging Up on Conditions.

The New York Teachers' Union immediately sent a protest to the board of education and warned teachers that they could easily be led into a trap by the volunteer proposition if they accepted it. The union pointed out that if the principle of extra work for the same pay were admitted by teachers in volunteering for playground work, members of the board who are always mindful of good political arguments would again suggest that teachers, since they are paid by the year, should do summer school teaching without extra pay and thus save the city so much money.

The union says that teachers are already tired after a day's school work and it is unfair to ask them to volunteer for playground work for which they are not trained.

Using Moral Coercion.

There is a playground director receiving $7,000 a year who has not yet spoken. He is part of the political system with the board of education. The Teachers' Union is not opposed to playgrounds but argues that overworked teachers are not the ones to supervise playgrounds. Specially trained workers should do this work.

Already in many of the schools meetings have been held for teachers to volunteer their services for the extra work and an indirect form of compulsion is used to influence them. In some cases the principal volunteers and the teachers think they must follow.

In others the teachers are asked to volunteer for work at other than their own schools which would be a greater hardship because the grounds are open before and after school as well as on Saturdays and teachers would have to run from the playground school to their own to teach and back again.

Hindenburg Now Fawning Before Foreign Bankers

Cologne area, where their troops are stationed at Germany's expense.

The extent to which the Hindenburg government has sold out the workers is shown in Stresemann's eulogy of the Coolidge government. "It is gratifying to be able to state that our relations with the United States are satisfactory in every respect," said Stresemann. "Our reparations policy bears the name of the vice-president of the United States.

"The extensive American credits to German industry have been of the greatest help."

Stresemann sharply attacked the allies' disarmament policy.

Stresemann pointed out that as yet no nation has answered Germany's note regarding a "security pact."

"Germany, completely disarmed, is all around faced by heavily armed nations linked to each other by alliance," he said.

REDS ARE MURDERED, REDUCE ARMY, ENGLAND TELLS ZANKOV REGIME

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Eng., May 18.—The British foreign office will not agree, it said today, to an extension to Bulgaria of the allies permission for Bulgaria to maintain an increased army. The foreign office viewed Balkan reports of trouble as exaggerated in order to back up the Bulgarian request.

The other Balkan fascist governments make no protest against the murder of Communists by the Bulgarian troops but see a danger to their own governments in Bulgarian's increased army.

AMERICA BOTH IN AND OUT OF NATIONS' LEAGUE

Nothing Accomplished by Arms Parley

GENEVA, May 18.— The United States' refusal to co-operate with a league of nations bureau resulted in abandonment today of the proposed central bureau for arms traffic control.

The special committee of the arms conference created to find some compromise suitable to Congressman Theodore Burton of Ohio, head of the American delegation, decided to alter completely the arms traffic control plan, eliminating the projected central bureau. Its members would have been appointed by the league council.

The sub-committee's solution, which meets the approval of Burton and delegates from league member nations, provides that each nation signing the arms control agreement will periodically publish uniform statistics of its arms exports and imports, making these figures available to all other nations.

Each nation will pass its own laws, it was agreed, providing for the licensing or arms manufacturers and insuring the accuracy of the statistics. Thus the conference accomplished nothing.

Congressman Burton suggested that the statistics should be available every three months. He withdrew his amendment, providing for publicity, as no longer necessary and thanked the subcommittee for its efforts.

No Results Achieved.

By this decision, the effect will be that the league of nations shall control the gathering of the statistics published by each nation separately, and the results are the same as if a central bureau had been created by the league.

However, the agreement as finally reached means that the parley has ended without steps being taken for the control of arms, for which the conference was called.

Cal's Trade Board Ceases to Function, Protecting Trusts

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Dismissal of nearly 100 persons constituting the economics staff of the federal trade commission is the next move which the Coolidge majority in the commission is expected to take, to prevent further investigation of knockdown-and-drag out methods on the part of big business concerns. Commissioners Van Fleet, Hunt and Humphrey are reported to be preparing to wipe out the personnel on which the work of investigation of business scandals depends, in order to save the trusts from unfavorable publicity.

These economists and assistants have been employed, under civil service rules, for years in the special field assigned them by the federal trade act—the gathering of evidence of frauds and other means of "unfair competition" and the presenting of this evidence to the commission.

The investigation of the lawlessness banditry and wholesale crushings—out of small competitors by the big five meat packing companies of Chicago illustrates the work which they have been performing and which Coolidge now proposes to prevent them from further performing.

Red Baiter Aided by Court.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Trial of Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, on charges of forgery today was postponed until May 25, delay was asked by defense counsel.

Means was indicted for forging the name of Senator Brookhart, republican, of Iowa, chairman of the committee, which investigated the department of justice, to a letter. Means was one of Harry Daugherty's chief aids in persecuting radicals when Daugherty was attorney general.

New York Times Tries to Push Away the War Clouds Over Europe

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, nearly 11 years after the beginning of the last world war, the capitalist nations stand closer to a new international blood bath, than they did on the eve of the Sarajevo incident, in 1914, that started the last imperialist massacre of millions.

Paul Painleve, minister of war for France during the early stages of the last conflict, and now the successor of Herriot as French premier, frankly tells the world:

> "I cannot say that militarism is no longer a menace to Europe. And I must add that France, thru her geographical situation, is exposed to militarist undertakings more than any other country in Europe."

In other words, the present French premier, instead of arguing for a continued capitalist truce, points out why France must be better prepared than ever for the next war.

• • • •

It is none other than the New York Times, organ of the international bankers, that has taken up the task of spreading peace propaganda in this country. It assures its readers that Europe craves peace. Which is true. But it fails, even thru such an adept writer as Herman Bernstein, to make out even the semblance of a case for a possible peace of any duration, with even Lord Balfour, of Great Britain, declaring:

> "I am not naive enough to believe that this was the last war."

The workers and peasants of Europe want peace but the contradictions within the capitalist system itself spell, "War!" without any cross-word puzzle complications. Rakovsky, the Soviet ambassador in Great Britain, clearly states that the workers and peasants of Europe will put the blame for the next war on the capitalist system under which they live, when he said:

> "I do not know whether the statesmen of the capitalist countries realize the great risk involved in another war. It is likely that such a war would develop into civil war, because the horrors of the world war and its consequences are felt everywhere. The working masses do not want to suffer again the unspeakable hardships and privations, and they will not make the sacrifices they made during the recent war."

There is no capitalist diplomat in Europe that dares make such a direct confession of the present situation. Then there is Krassin, the Soviet ambassador in Paris, who declares:

> "Soviet Russia is the most stable country in Europe. We have already done what no other government has dared to do. We have reduced our army from 5,000,000 which was its strength when we defended ourselves against General Wrangel and other invaders, to about 400,000 men. No other country has decreased its armaments to such an extent as this."

• • • •

Not only Western European but world capitalism therefore stands before the menace of civil war at home and the rising power of workers' rule under the Soviet Union. This is bad enough in "peace" times, but becomes of greatest danger in case of another war.

• • • •

The New York Times would have its readers believe that Europe opposes war. It will not tell them that another war is inevitable. In this the Times is doing the bidding of its masters, the Wall Street bankers, who are floating a stream of loans to decrepit European capitalism. Not many dollars would go abroad if American investors believed another war would wipe out all possibility of payment. But the more dollars that are invested in Europe the greater the demand for American participation in the next war. The bankers play safe either way. The workers lose both ways, unless the above declaration of the Soviet statesman, Rakovsky, can be made to apply to the United States as well as to Western Europe.

BRANDS 'LABOR' BANK OF PHILLY COMPLETE FRAUD

Airtight Trustee Rule Shut Out Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, May 18—The Producers' and Consumers' Bank of Philadelphia, backed by the central labor union, was not a co-operative bank in any respect, the co-operative league declares in reference to the failure of this so-called labor bank.

Two self-constituted trustees organised the institution and then picked ten other trustees to run it with them, the league says, in spite of the league's protests to the Central Labor Union that co-operative experts' opinions were misquoted on the proposition.'

The rank and file of stockholders, the league says, had no opportunity to elect trustees until two years after the bank's organisation.

The Central Labor Union has reaffirmed its support of the bank and expects to aid in the reorganisation with greater labor control. This fond expectation is not shared by the 7,500 depositors, however.

Trial of Alleged Millionaire Germ Killer Is Begun

Three jurors to hear the evidence against William D. Shepherd, charged with murder of the death of his ward, William Nelson McClintock, had been accepted by the state when court recessed for lunch today.

A score had been rejected for varying reasons, predominant among which were aversion to the death penalty, preconceived prejudices in the case as a result of the widespread publicity given it and unwillingness to convict on circumstantial evidence. Miss Isabelle Pope, the dead boy's fiance arived to act as witness for the state.

Professor Thinks War Will "End Thinking"

NEW YORK, May 18.— "The real value of freedom of speech is not to the minority that wants to talk, but to the majority that does not want to listen," says Professor Zechariah Chafee of Harvard University law school.

Gag rule is harmful after war more than during war, Chafee asserts, because "intolerance produces an uncritical public opinion and intense satisfaction with one's views." On the basis of national hysteria in the last war, the professor believes that critical thinking, after the next war will be impossible in this country.

Decision of the Communist International on the American Question

Unanimously Adopted by the Enlarged Executive Committee of the C. I.

The decision of the Communist International on the American Question, unanimously adopted by the Enlarged Executive Committee, is as follows:

• • • •

1. GENERAL SITUATION. American capitalism has temporarily overcome its crisis. Masses of workers, who in the last few years took up the struggle against the arbitrary reduction of their standard of living, have been defeated in the tremendous labor struggles and have been subjected to the heaviest yoke. Masses of small farmers, who were in a state of ferment because of the agricultural crisis, have been expropriated. At last the wide open price "scissors" was able to be closed in conformity with all the laws of capital: only in so doing the scissors cut these farmers off from their property. The requirements for the expansion of industrial export could, it is true, not be complied with in an adequate degree, but instead of this, new paths for the export of capital to impoverished Europe were opened. American finance capital has thus not only reached its profit and its power at home, but has won the position of the biggest shareholders among the world capitalist powers. It now appears more powerful than ever before.

These victories of American capitalism have not been won without paying a big price. Even the Dawes plan, which from the standpoint of Wall Street, appears as a ladder to world monopoly is likely to draw American capitalism into a policy in which it stands to lose much more than merely its interest in German gold marks. It will involve it more and more deeply in the contradictions and crises of European capitalism and also in the imperialist world arena in conflicts and struggles for markets, for interest, for oil, colonies and power.

Furthermore, class relations in America are developing in a direction menacing to capitalism. The increased pressure of exploitation has forced large masses of workers to the point where class consciousness inevitably awakens even amongst the most politically backward wage slaves. The equality of exploitation which has been greatly extended, is changing more and more the former heterogeneity of the American working class. It is true that capitalism is still able to bribe millions of skilled American workers by positions of privilege, but the circle of this privileged class is growing smaller and smaller. Mass unemployment as a permanent social institution and the mass proletarianisation of the small farmers, form a fruitful ground for the revolutionizing process germinating in the depths. On the whole, the situation of the American working class is at present far from pregnant with revolution; it is different, however, from what it was ten years ago.

The strengthening of the centralized government power, which interferes in the most brutal fashion in the everyday struggles of the working class is an important factor in the increasing acuteness of the class struggles and in the acceleration of the crystallization of the class consciousness of the working class. The cessation of immigration from Europe, the influx of hundreds of thousands of ruined proletarianized farmers (farmers of American origin who speak English, possess political rights and who will offer an energetic resistance to the exploitation and oppression of the trusts) as unskilled, badly paid workers, into the large towns and industrial centers, represent an important change in the structure of the American proletariat.

It is true that the majority of the American workers does not yet feel any fundamental change in its position. But the DEVELOPING TREND OF THIS POSITION has undergone a FUNDAMENTAL CHANGE. This change is only being very slowly and with difficulty understood by the masses.

2. THE PROCESS OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE OF AMERICAN WORKERS, which commenced after the imperialist war and has continued under varying forms from year to year, is the political expression of the changed tendency of development of the class situation of the working class. This process is, however, still moving forward slowly, and hesitatingly. This may be explained by various specific American causes and also partly because the American workers have a privileged position in comparison with that of workers in other countries. In no other capitalist country have the workers to overcome such internal and external obstacles in the beginning on their way to political independence. It is true that the time is already past when the reactionary leadership of the A. F. of L. could sell the entire vote of the organized workers just as it pleased to the highest bidder of the two capitalist parties. The political position of leadership of the agents of capital at the head of the A. F. of L. is in part undermined; in part paralyzed by the anti-capitalist sentiments of the masses, but it is far from eliminated.

The opposition of masses of organized workers to the continuance of their political bondage to the capitalists originally became apparent in various indefinite forms (for instance in a section of the organizations affiliated to the C. P. P. A., here and there in the labor unions etc.). However, it was clearer and more definite in the farmer-labor movement, which led in 1923 to the foundation of farmer-labor parties in many states, and rallies considerable masses around its standard. The Workers (Communist) Party played, as we know, an effective part in this movement and for a certain period even set the pace in it.

Prior to the last presidential election, however, the petty bourgeois liberal opposition movement led by LaFollette came to the forefront and irresistibly captured the mass sentiment of the semi-conscious, anti-capitalistically inclined workers and farmers.

3. THE LAFOLLETTE MOVEMENT as a genuine petty bourgeois phenomenon was of a double nature; on the one hand, it was an objective symptom of the disorganization in the camp of the bourgeoisie. On the other hand, in the prevailing crisis of American capitalism its objective purpose was the support of capital: to divert as a political safety valve the awakening class consciousness of the proletariat from consolidation of its independent class movement. Gompers understood this and allied himself with LaFollette. The semi-conscious laboring masses, however, saw in LaFollette a standard bearer against big business and followed him blindly, for the farmer-labor movement still lacked political independence to a certain degree. The majority of the workers in this movement desired the formation of a labor party, but they did not yet demand an independent proletarian class policy; they rather preferred to accept the guardianship of an opposition party of the petty bourgeoisie. The path of the proletariat can even lead thru such false roads in its first steps towards its constitution as a class.

4. THE FIGHT OF THE WORKERS PARTY AGAINST LAFOLLETTE FOR THE LABOR PARTY MOVEMENT. As was to have been expected at the beginning, LaFollette determinedly rejected any community of interest with a farmer-labor party to be organized with the collaboration of the Workers Party, and he succeeded in isolating the Communists from the masses in the election campaign. For its part, the Workers Party opposed LaFollette just as unflinchingly even tho without the prospects of much success. It must be recognized that in the elections LaFollette gained an important victory. That does not mean that the tactics of the Workers Party were not correct. They were correct. Our party only met with a defeat which was not to be avoided under the given circumstances.

After this defeat a certain confusion became apparent in the ranks of the Workers Party. It seemed to the majority of the C. E. C. and many comrades that the LaFollette movement had paralyzed any mass movement for a labor party for a long time to come. For a time after the elections it really appeared that even the masses which had previously supported the formation of an independent national farmer-labor party wanted no other party besides that of LaFollette. In this situation, the majority of the party leadership of the Workers Party drew the conclusion that the former chief slogan of the party, "For the Formation of a Farmer-Labor Party" had to be abandoned as useless, and the party for the time had to concentrate its attention on united front struggles for immediate, concrete demands and upon the immediate strengthening of its own ranks.

Important and very symptomatic phenomena in the LaFollette movement have already proved that this conclusion was incorrect. At the first opportunity in which a decision upon the formation of a LaFollette party was to be arrived at, at the conference of the C. P. P. A. (the most important organization in this movement) the adherents of the new party split on the question of the form of organization. Whether the party should be built up on an individual membership—as LaFollette demanded—or on a basis of collective affiliation. LaFollette feels a very comprehensive fear of the preponderance of powerful labor organizations in his party but these latter are not inclined to make a renunciation of their influence thru the by-laws. This struggle as to the form of the organization is of course an expression of the class differences and antagonisms in the LaFollette movement. Immediately after this split of the conference of the C. P. P. A., the executive of the socialist party came out into the open with the slogan "for the formation of a labor party" with collective affiliation. The socialist party was also up to now one of the pillars of the LaFollette movement, and since now it is against the LaFollette party on this question, this is of much more significance than the former platonic play of the socialist party with the labor party slogan. Numerically this reformist party is now very small, but it has considerable ideological influence amongst the trade union officials.

In view of these facts there can scarcely be any doubt that in the near future the problem of the labor party will even more than before be an actual, even the most important political question on the agenda of many trade unions and other labor organizations. The minority of the central executive committee of the Workers Party was right in having confidence in the vitality and future of the labor party movement. The Workers Party must now do its utmost to further this movement.

5. TACTICS IN THE FIGHT FOR A LABOR PARTY. Not the rejection of a struggle for the labor party, but an adjustment and further development of our tactics in this struggle are called for, by the present situation in America. Our slogan itself should now be revised insofar that we no longer agitate for a "farmer-labor party" but only for a "labor party," since in the changed conditions the premises for the formation of a joint party of workers and small farmers are lacking.

The Communists need not demand nor even expect that the labor party will immediately be a revolutionary, radical party of workers, in which the Communists will have to take the lead. In this respect the slogan has been put somewhat too narrowly by the minority of the C. E. C. The Communists should clearly realize that the formation of a labor party signifies for the affiliated workers only the BEGINNING of their political emancipation and of the development of their class consciousness. It is very possible that in America, at first there will be for a time at the head of the labor party similar reformist labor traitors to those in England, or even worse. Nevertheless, the formation of such a party may for a time represent a definite step forward in the American labor movement, and the Communist Party is obliged to participate in this party, if only the latter permit in a sufficient degree freedom of criticism and agitation by the affiliated organizations.

Why must the Communists act thus? Because it is their task to remain in closest contact with the masses in order to influence the latter continually in a revolutionary sense. However, mere agitation and propaganda, even the best, is not sufficient for the revolutionary influence of the masses. For this purpose the masses require their own revolutionary EXPERIENCE. They can obtain essential elements of this experience in the labor party, even tho the latter be directed by reformists. In that case the masses, after their disappointments will learn to know the treasonable role of the petty-bourgeois reformists, and that is very important. Furthermore, they will gain valuable experience in the independent political organizations of the working class.

The ideas of CLASS and CLASS CONSCIOUSNESS are to be inculcated as deeply as possible in the masses of the American working class by the preparatory campaign of the Communists for the formation of a labor party. This is not to be done abstractly, for it would not succeed in this manner, but in immediate connection with the most urgent everyday demands of the workers. The Communists are to induce the working masses to present these demands to the reformists and to the leaders of the LaFollette organizations and to call upon them for joint action with the Workers Party. Should they accept or reject such proposals—sooner or later the traitors will expose themselves. After every such instance, the masses of workers will, however, more and more clearly realize the necessity of an independent class party of their own. And if they do not yet recognize the Communist Party as this class party they will still feel that the slogan of a labor party is the consequence of all their everyday demands, and thus this slogan gains vital mass power.

This fight will require persevering energy and much patience. It would be a mistake for us to begin too prematurely with the ORGANIZATIONAL MEASURES for the formation of the labor party. This could only give the LaFollette crowd a trump card in their fight against the labor party movement and aid them to reconsolidate their own ranks. We, however, should on the contrary drive an ever deeper wedge into the LaFollette movement. Of course, the entire organized mass of workers will not join upon the formation of such a party, but at best only a section.

But the conditions for the successful formation are not ripe as long as there is not a firm mass basis of trade union support. The majority of the central committee was absolutely right in emphasizing this point. If the Workers Party were merely to be combined with the organizations sympathizing with it, no labor party could be formed from this combination.

It may be that the mass support for the idea of the labor party will reveal itself so strongly in some cities and even in some states, that organizational measures can be taken without further hesitation. The formation of the national labor party should be advised against until at least 500,000 organized workers are definitely won over to it.

After the formation of the labor party, what the executive emphasized a year ago should be kept in mind, that it is not advisable to endeavor to split off a left wing from the L. P. as soon as possible in order to transform this split off section into a mass Communist Party. We must rather endeavor to win increasing masses in the labor party for the revolutionary point of view and to let this left wing grow within the labor party and at the same time to take the most advanced and revolutionary elements into the Workers Party. This policy is to be observed both prior to the formation of the labor party and subsequently.

6. STRENGTHENING AND CONSOLIDATION OF THE WORKERS PARTY. The fight for the formation of the labor party in no way excludes propaganda and recruiting activity for the winning and training of new members for the Workers Party. On the [illegible]ary, this work should be carried out sim[illegible]usly with the utmost intensity. The rol[illegible] Workers Party as the Communist Part[illegible]he country should neither be obscured nor minimized.

As the Workers Party is at present constituted, it is still altogether too weak to collaborate with sufficient effectiveness in the proletarian mass movement of this great country. This natural weakness was particularly evident in its election campaign. As long as the Workers Party does not at least double its membership, it cannot be said that it fulfills the requirements of an American Communist Party. Under no circumstances should it underestimate in any way the importance of such "minor" tasks, as the circulation of the DAILY WORKER and the establishment of new organs, the development of the Workers Monthly, the publication and distribution of good propaganda literature, the organization of Party schools, recruiting weeks, etc.

The organizational structure of the Party still lacks to a considerable extent the necessary cohesion. This is to be improved primarily by systematic, thorough concentration of the Party members of all the different nationalities in centralized organizations. The formation of international branches and factory nuclei is therefore on this account the most urgent organizational task of the Party.

7. COMMUNIST TRADE UNION WORK. In America the regular work of Party members in the trade unions must be considered now, as the fundamental work on which depends the success of the Party in most of the other fields, and especially the struggle for a Labor Party. Therefore, any tendency to neglect or minimize the importance of this work must be energetically combatted. In every single trade union organization Party members must be organized into the Communist fraction and must act unitedly on every question. These fractions get their instructions from the Party and work under its control. Communist fractions must take an active and energetic part in all mass economic struggles.

The Party must give energetic support to the Trade Union Educational League and do its utmost to develop and extend it. Efforts must be made to convert the T. U. E. L. into a great opposition movement of the Left bloc. All attempts of the reactionary trade union bureaucracy to isolate the T. U. E. L., to undermine its influence in the trade unions and to limit the membership to Communists and their most ardent sympathizers must be energetically resisted.

8. PARTY WORK ON THE OTHER FIELDS. Although the Party is at this time not to propagate the formation of a common party for workers and farmers, it must not only work among the agricultural laborers, but must at the same time do its utmost to get into contact with and exercise control over the poorest tenant farmers and farmers who are in debt; for they are destined to play a very important role in the American revolution as future allies of the proletariat. Neither does this modification of the main political slogan of the Party mean that the Party is not to work in the already existing Farmer-Labor Parties. The task of the Communists in the existing Farmer-Labor Parties is as follows: they must organize the industrial elements as a special wing, which should be drawn at an opportune moment into a Labor Party and form a bloc with the organizations of the poor farmers.

The Party must pay more attention and give more support to the work of the Communist Youth. It is moreover, of the utmost importance for the Party to make at last in good earnest a beginning with the work among working women. The women members of the Party and non-Party working women are to be drawn into revolutionary work which the Party must organize. The existing non-Party proletarian women organizations are not to be done away with, but should be made use of for revolutionary work.

9. STRUGGLE AGAINST LORE'S OPPORTUNISM. Lore represents a non-Communist tendency in the Workers Party. Already the decision of the E. C. C. I. in May, 1924, pointed out that Comrade Lore's ideology was the ideology of the Two and a Half International. Lore supported Levi against the C. I. He misinterpreted the policy of the C. I. in almost every question. He declared that the main task of the Communist Party of Germany in the revolutionary situation of 1923 should have been—to prevent the revolution by every possible means. Lore spread the most ridiculous illusions concerning the "mission to establish world peace" of Ramsay MacDonald. He warned the French Communists against the overthrow of Herriot. He fought against the necessary centralism of the Party in the name of the autonomy of the German Federation. The ideological struggle against Comrade Lore's tendency is essential for the Party.

The Executive proposes to the Workers Party to come to a definite decision on the Lore question at its next congress. In any case, the Executive is of the opinion that the Central Committee of the Party is not the place for such an opportunist.

• • • •

10. THE FIRM CONSOLIDATION OF COMMUNIST FORCES. The above platform is adopted by the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International and has also been approved by the representatives of both groups in the Workers Party.

The Executive Committee of the C. I. discovered errors in the attitudes of both groups which must be rectified.

The Executive Committee is of the definite opinion that fractional conflicts between the two groups must now absolutely cease. Although it may be true that this fractional conflict arose out of real differences, it has, nevertheless, been of too acute a character on both sides and at times assumed impermissible forms. The Executive Committee does not object to a concrete and calm discussion being carried on until the Party Congress, but, in the interests of Party unity, it demands the unconditional cessation of Party warfare.

In particular, the Executive Committee must point out that it regards a campaign conducted against Comrade Pepper as absolutely uncalled for, all the more since, firstly, Comrade Pepper himself has no intention of returning to work in the Workers Party, and secondly, the Executive Committee desires to use his energies for other important tasks. The Executive Committee knows that Comrade Pepper during his brief stay in America performed services for the Workers Party for which he deserves praise. The Executive Committee demands that all personal polemics between the two sides should cease.

The Executive Committee regards it as absolutely essential that the representatives of the Party majority and minority should henceforward conclude a fraternal peace and work in Communist co-operation. The leading comrades are primarily responsible for setting a good example to the other Party members in this respect.

The Party Congress will be held at an early date. All disputed questions which may arise between the two groups in the Party Central Committee in the interval, and which cannot be agreed upon, are to be settled in a parity commission under the chairmanship of a neutral comrade. This commission shall also control the actual conduct of the Party discussion.

The Executive Committee is of the opinion that the Party Congress, in a calm atmosphere, free from all fractional passions, should elect the Party Central Committee from among the comrades of both groups. The group which will be in the minority at the Party Congress must in any case be assured a large representation in the Central Committee.

Naturally, both the groups, having adopted this platform, must at the Party Congress actively resist any of the followers of Lore being elected to the Central Committee.

NOTE.—Statements of the Central Executive Committee and the C. E. C. minority on next page.

Statement of the C. E. C. on Resolution of the E. C. C. I.

Proposed by ABERN, BROWDER, BURMAN BITTELMAN, CANNON, DUNNE AND FOSTER.

1. The Central Executive Committee accepts and approves the resolution of the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on the American Question. It approves the declaration of the majority delegation made in the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International when the resolution was presented there by the American commission, and associates itself completely with this declaration.

2. The Central Executive Committee is of the opinion that the resolution of the Executive Committee of the Communist International correctly decides the disputes over theory and tactics on the question of the labor party which have been the subject of a continuous factional controversy in the party for the past two years, and that it lays down the correct line for future work.

3. The resolution states that "the Executive of the Communist International discovered errors in the attitudes of both groups which must be rectified." In order that the whole issue may be clarified so that the party as a whole may be enabled to carry out the resolution consciously and sincerely it is necessary for the party to examine and discuss these errors in the light of the resolution and to eliminate them from our future work. This is all the more necessary since the minority, which had a false conception of the nature and role of the labor party, and consequently committed a number of serious and fundamental mistakes, did not acknowledge these mistakes, before the Executive Committee of the Communist International and has not given the party any assurance of its willingness and ability to correct them.

4. The resolution establishes the fact that the original conception of the party, prior to the formation of the abortive Federated Farmer Labor Party and the adoption of the "August Thesis", was substantially correct. It fully substantiates the fundamental conception which animated the present majority of the Central Executive Committee in the controversy over the Federated Farmer Labor Party and the August thesis and corrects the error which developed in the position of the majority after the national elections of 1924. At that time the majority of the Central Executive Committee, influenced in part by the tremendous sweep of the La Follette movement and in part by its determined opposition to further opportunistic adventures with "fake" labor parties, reacted to an extreme position which led it to underestimate the vitality of the labor party movement. The proposal to discontinue for the immediate future the agitation for a labor party was an error which was acknowledged before the Executive Committee of the Communist International and has been corrected.

5. The resolution substantiates all the main contentions of the present majority of the Central Executive Committee in the two years fight against the predominance and hegemony of the farmers, against the organization of caricature labor parties (the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, etc.) and against the false theories which were formulated by the present minority to justify them (the "August Thesis"). The resolution of the Communist International completely refutes all the principal theories of the August thesis (the theory of competing labor parties, the theory of "transforming" the labor party into a mass Communist Party, and the theory of caricature labor parties led and controlled by the Communists.) A sincere acceptance of the Communist International resolution is impossible without the open acknowledgement that the past attempts to prematurely organize labor parties when the mass support of the trade unions was yet lacking were serious mistakes which greatly tended to isolate the party. The whole party must be so educated and the party leadership must take so clear and unambiguous a position on this point that a repetition of these errors will be impossible.

6. The resolution of the Communist International sustains the position of the present majority of the Central Executive Committee on all the following disputed points which have arisen in the two-years' controversy:

1. The conception that the Labor Party must be a mass organization based on the trade unions and not a mere combination of the Workers Party and its sympathetic organizations.
2. The opinion that the formation of such a mass labor party on a national scale was not possible in the immediate future after the 1924 elections.
3. The refusal to accept the existing farmer labor parties of the Northwestern states, dominated numerically and ideologically by farmers, as the basis for a national labor party.
4. The insistence that the organized industrial workers in the industrial centers must be the basis of the labor party.
5. The discarding of the fictitious "National Farmer Labor Party" formed at St. Paul and the entry of presidential candidates in the last elections under the banner of the Workers Party.
6. The conclusion that the LaFollette movement had captured the mass sentiment of the semi-conscious workers during the last election campaign.
7. Its determined opposition to any new attempts to organize a labor party merely on the basis of the Workers Party and its circle of sympathizing organizations.

On all these points of fundamental importance the Central Executive Committee minority, following the theories of the August thesis, took the wrong position. These questions are indissolubly bound up with the problem of our future campaign for the labor party. Therefore it is absolutely necessary that the party, as a safeguard for the future, must repudiate these errors which have not been eliminated from the platform of the minority.

7 The task of the party, in carrying out the resolution of the Communist International is to develop a sincere and energetic campaign of agitation in the trade unions for the labor party, to be followed by organizational measures for the formation of the labor party when the necessary mass support in the trade unions is secured, which would give the labor party the possibility to live and function. Such a campaign can be successful only if it is conducted in direct connection with the campaign of the party for United Front struggles over concrete demands. The conception of an abstract campaign for the labor party, on the theory that the masses would be broken away from the LaFollette movement by the slogan of "the labor party versus the LaFollette party" without connecting this slogan with concrete demands, as well as the conception that the labor party is the only form of the United Front, are fundamentally erroneous and must be rejected. The party must proceed along the line already started to agitate for United Front struggles for concrete demands and bring forward the demand for the labor party in direct connection with them and as a consequence of them.

8. The Central Executive Committee greets the section of the Communist International resolution on trade union work. The whole party must be brought into line with this section of the thesis and made to realize that trade union work is fundamental Communist work and that a deeper penetration of the Communists into the trade unions and a better organization of their influence there are necessary pre-requisites for any serious campaigns of the party, especially the campaign for the labor party. The effectiveness of the party has been, and still is greatly weakened by the tendency to neglect and minimize the trade union work; by the supercilious and superficial attitude toward it; and, in some cases, opposition to trade union work which has been carried out under the cloak of a struggle against "syndicalism". A resolute campaign for the liquidation of these tendencies and a manifold development and broadening of our trade union activity is a necessity for the party.

9. The Central Executive Committee agrees with the resolution of the Communist International on the question of Lore and Loreism and will lead the ideological fight, suplemented by organizational measures, for the complete liquidation of this non-Communist tendency. The Central Executive Committee regards this question as a political question relating to a tendency and a group, and not merely as a personal question affecting Comrade Lore. The attempts of the minority in the New York district to distort the question into a struggle merely against Comrade Lore personally, while shielding and defending Loreism and the Lore tendency in the needle trades, and making an alliance against the Central Executive Committee with such militant and characteristic representatives of the Lore tendency and ideology as Comrade Poyntz, must be condemned as a violation of the Communist International resolution and an act of disloyalty to the C. I. Comrade Lore must be called to order, and the Central Executive Committee is proposing definite motions to this effect. But proceedings against Comrade Lore alone cannot by any means be regarded as a settlement of the question. The Lore-Poyntz-Zimmerman group and tendency must be liquidated.

10. The Central Executive Committee will energetically resist any attempt to construe the campaign for the labor party as a return to the policy of adventurous "high politics", bluff and exaggeration, coupled with the neglect of fundamental daily work. The work of increasing the party membership, supporting and strengthening the DAILY WORKER, distributing propaganda literature, systematically developing and extending party educational work, etc., must not be neglected under any circumstances. Work amongst tenant and mortgaged farmers must be energetically developed in the sense of the C. I. resolution.

11. In particular, the question of improving and strengthening the party organizational structure must be brought to the foreground. The present organizational form of the party is incompatible with Bolshevist organizational principles, and, consequently, with the proper execution of Bolshevist policies. The party membership must be educated and prepared, by an energetic campaign of enlightenment, based on the organizatory principles laid down by the Communist International, to the necessity of the complete reorganization of the party on the basis of Shop Nuclei and international branches. The language Federation branches, however, must not be disrupted, but maintained as propaganda and recruiting centers. A complete thesis on the organization question prepared by the Organization Department of the Communist International, in collaboration with the American delegation, will soon be published.

IN connection with the question of Shop Nuclei, the Central Executive Committee wishes to draw attention to the false position adopted by the District Executive Committee of the Boston district. The contention of the resolution of the District Executive Committee that the reorganization of the party on the Shop Nuclei basis must wait for a large increase of English speaking membership and the implication that the members of the language federations are exempted is absolutely incorrect and must be resolutely combatted. Party members of all nationalities who work in the same shop must be organized into Shop Nuclei.

12. The Central Executive Committee, basing its platform on the resolution of the Communist International, will make it its aim to lead the party to a conscious and sincere support of the resolution and to unite the party ranks on the basis of the resolution. The liquidation of the factional fight and the unification of the party is an absolute necessity. Further attempts to continue the factional fight, to undermine discipline, and to discredit the proletarian leadership which is striving to lead the party according to the political line laid down by the Communist International, must and will be resisted and rejected by the party.

The fraternal unity of the party membership on the basis of the resolution of the Comintern! This is the slogan of the Central Executive Committee and must become the slogan of the entire party.

Statement of Minority of Central Executive Committee

Submitted by C. E. RUTHENBERG, JAY LOVESTONE, MAX BEDACHT, J. LOUIS ENGDAHL AND BENJAMIN GITLOW

• • • •

THE delegates of the minority of the Central Executive Committee who participated in the enlarged executive committee of the Communist International declared their hearty acceptance on the decision of the Communist International. This decision upheld the viewpoint of the minority on both the major questions, the issue of the labor party and the question of Loreism. We endorse the action of the representatives of the minority, and state our full agreement with the decision of the Communist International.

In June, 1922, the Central Executive Committee of our party adopted its first declaration in favor of the organization of a labor party and during the fall of that year launched its first great campaign for the formation of a labor party. This policy was approved by the 1922 national convention of our party and by the Communist International in its letter to the 1923 national convention. During 1923, under the pressure of the objective conditions the slogan of the party was changed to include the farmers and the party advocated the formation of a farmer labor party. The farmer labor party slogan was approved by the national convention held at the end of 1923 and by the Communist International in its decision on the American question in May, 1924.

AFTER the election of November, 1924, the majority of the Central Executive Committee of our party issued a statement of the results of the election, in which it declared:

> "The demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement, as compared to the pre-election estimates of all sides, not only seriously retards the development of the so-called 'third party' but also completely eliminates the immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer labor party of industrial workers and poor farmers, distinct from the Workers Party. A general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan for 'a mass farmer labor party' would not be profitable nor successful . . ."

IN its thesis on the immediate tasks of the party the majority of the Central Executive Committee went even further. In the section of the thesis attacking the minority of the Central Executive Committee because it demanded the continuance of the campaign for a labor party, it denounced the views of the minority as a "right deviation" and declared:

> "Their theory is that the Workers Party can at present appeal only to a small section of the theoretically convinced Communists and that in order to approach with Communist propaganda larger masses of workers, our party must form new special political organizations such as women's councils, and a farmer labor party. This non-Communist conception of the rule of the role of our party manifests itself particularly in the tendency to resort to all kinds of new political organizations, substitutes for the Workers Party, whenever opportunity presents itself to appeal to larger masses of workers on concrete issues of every-day life."

In this quotation the idea that it was no longer "profitable" to carry on a campaign under the slogan for "A Mass Farmer Labor Party" was extended by the Central Executive Committee majority to a declaration that it was wrong in principle for our party to advocate the organization of other political organizations holding an intermediate position between it and the masses.

IN its thesis, the majority states further as to the immediate possibility of carrying on a campaign for a labor party, the following:

> "The formation of a labor party becomes inevitable and possible only inasmuch as the economic mass organizations of labor are compelled to join hands for independent political action but when the leaders of these organizations enter into a permanent alliance with the petty bourgeoisie, and when such an alliance with the LaFollette movement receives the recognition and support of almost the entire organized labor movement, then the question of forming a labor party loses its basic foundation and ceases to be a fighting issue for the immediate practical use."

It is this conclusion of the majority of the Central Executive Committee which has been definitely repudiated in the decision of the Communist International. Both as to the permanency of the alliance with the petty bourgeoisie and as to the statement that the Workers Party in place of being the leader in the development of a labor party can only support such a proposal when "The economic mass organizations of labor are compelled to join hands for independent political action."

THE attitude of the majority of the Central Executive Committee towards that section of the LaFollette movement organized as the Committee for Progressive Political Action has also been repudiated by the Communist International. The majority of the Central Executive Committee called upon the workers to boycott the Committee for Progressive Political Action convention. The minority on the other hand urged that we must send delegates into the Committee for Progressive Political Action, penetrate this organization and organize a left wing for the formation of a labor party. The position of the minority is the position of the Communist International.

Against the sectarianism manifested in the thesis of the majority the minority maintains that the class-consciousness of the working masses of the United States could not be awakened by abstract propaganda of the Communists but that we must lead the workers into immediate struggles on the political as well as the economic field and that it would be thru their own immediate struggles against the capitalist government that these workers would learn the need of a party of their own. The majority branded this view as rank opportunism and accused the minority of lack of faith in the Workers Party. On this question the Communist International declares: "Mere agitation and propaganda, even the best, is not sufficient for the revolutionary influencing of the masses. For this purpose the masses require their own revolutionary experience. They can obtain essential elements of this experience in the labor party even tho the latter be directed by reformists."

The majority maintains that the past activities of the Workers Party in the field of the labor party campaign was a tactic of splitting, inflation and self-deception. The Communist International has the following to say in regard to these past activities: "The Communist Workers Party played an effective part in this (labor party) movement, and for a certain period even set the pace in it."

THE POLICY OF THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MINORITY.

THE minority of the Central Executive Committee, whose names are appended to this statement, energetically resisted the abandonment of the campaign for a labor party. It declared, that the movement toward independent political action by the workers was not a chance phenomena but sprang from new developments in the life of the working class since the end of the war; that this movement would go further; that it expressed the developing class consciousness of the American workers; and that our party can only become a mass party by maintaining contact with this movement, struggling for leadership in it and driving the workers forward.

The minority of the Central Executive Committee considered the abandonment of the campaign for a labor party by the majority of the Central Executive Committee such a fundamental error and so dangerous to the future of our party that it was compelled to resist this wrong policy with all its strength. It proposed at the beginning of the discussion of the issue that the question be referred to the Communist International for decision. The majority of the Central Executive Committee opposed this course until the Communist International itself intervened and postponed the party convention until the question could be considered and decided.

The Communist International has established the fact that the minority represented the correct Leninist policy and thus repudiated the claim of the majority in this respect. The Communist International has declared as correct Communist premises those very arguments of the minority which the Central Executive Committee majority attacked and upon which is based its systematic campaign of calling the minority members as "Farmer Labor Communists," "Reformists," "Opportunists," and "Brandlerites" and ""Liquidators." In calling the attention of the membership to these facts we do not only point out with Communist pride that the minority, even under the most unprecedented attacks against its revolutionary integrity stood fast in defense of a Marxian Leninist analysis of the existing situation and a Communist orientation but also, and most important of all, we point to these facts in order to help that part of the membership of our party which was swayed by the incorrect analysis and conclusions of the majority to reorientate itself on the basis of the decision of the Communist International.

THE DECISION OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL.

THIS decision is now before the membership of our party. On the main question which was the issue between the majority and the minority of the Central Executive Committee, whether the Workers Party should continue to advocate the formation of "special political organizations such as women's councils and a farmer labor party," which the majority called a "Non-Communist Conception," the decision is a sweeping victory for the party and the leadership of the minority of the Central Executive Committee.

We call attention to the following basic points in the decision of the Communist International in regard to this issue.

1. The Communist International does not base its decision on chance circumstances in relation to the development of a movement for independent political action but upon a fundamental Marxian analysis of the new conditions which have developed in the United States since the end of the war. The sharpened class conflict; the use of the centralized state power against the workers in their struggles; the levelling process between skilled and unskilled and the homogeneity resulting from cessation of immigration—these have created a fundamental change in the direction in which the working class is moving, that is, they have created a movement toward the development of class consciousness.

2. The movement for a labor party expresses this tendency of the American workers and the slogan "For a Labor Party," in appealing to the class pride and expressing a further stage in the development of class consciousness is a powerful weapon for the crystallization of class consciousness.

3. The conclusion of the majority of the Central Executive Committee that the labor party slogan had no further value was "incorrect" and "the minority of the Central Executive Committee was right." Objective conditions—the blow-up of the LaFollette convention on the issue of trade union affiliation, as against individual membership, expressing fundamental class conflict—had already proven this.

4. Therefore the Workers Party must not abandon the campaign for a labor party but carry forward this campaign more energetically than ever.

These were the arguments which we presented during the discussion in the party papers, arguments which the majority of the Central Executive Committee sneered at because of their lack of a fundamental Marxian viewpoint they could not understand them.

• • • •

CRITICISM OF THE MINORITY.

THE Communist International declares that it found errors in the position of both groups. The error of the majority of the Central Executive Committee was its throwing upon the junk pile, and abandoning, the campaign for a labor party. The criticism of the minority is that it formulated the slogan "For a Labor Party" "somewhat too narrowly" in its thesis. We admit the correctness of this criticism. In energetically defending the labor party slogan against the attack of the majority we formulated the slogan somewhat too narrowly. Also, it must be taken into consideration that the minority thesis was written in November, just after the LaFollette-Progressive group had polled nearly five million votes and that group was calling its convention to organize a party while the Communist International decision was written in April after the blow-up at the Chicago convention of the LaFollette Committee for Progressive Political Action alliance.

• • • •

LABOR PARTY VERSUS FARMER LABOR PARTY.

THE issue in our party was not labor party vs. farmer-labor party. Not a single line was written on the basis of such an issue during the party discussion. The majority of the Central Executive Committee was equally opposed to a campaign for a labor party as it was opposed to a campaign for a farmer labor party. Any attempt to throw sand into the eyes of the members of our party by attempting to substitute this as the issue which our party discussed would be political charlatanry of the worst type. Scores of articles in the party press give the lie to any such claim.

The Communist International declares that "At this time" it is advisable to change its previous decision and make our slogan "For a Labor Party," while sanctioning our continued work in existing farmer labor parties. In this respect the Communist International has revised the slogan but not the basic arguments upon which the demand of the minority for the continuance of the campaign of the party were based.

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE LABOR PARTY.

THE Communist International declares that we shall organize the labor party on the local and state scale immediately where sufficient mass support can be secured. On a national scale we are advised to proceed with the organization when the support of 500,000 organized workers has been secured. This is a very vital and important part of the decision of the Communist International which is decisive on an issue which existed between the minority and the majority of the Central Executive Committee.

Prior to the convention of July 3, 1923, when the Central Executive Committee of the party was considering its policy in that convention, the present minority, then the majority of the Central Executive Committee, adopted a resolution that we would proceed with the organization of a party in the July 3, 1923 convention only if we had the support of 500,000 organized workers. Primarily as a result of political development and also because of our failure to take the necessary organization step this mass support did not develop in reality.

The Communist International declares that it would be a mistake to organize the Workers Party and its close sympathizers into a labor party and that the present majority of the Central Executive Committee was right in emphasizing the need of mass support before forming a labor party. The issue between the majority and the minority was not whether we should have mass support but what was to be considered mass support. The Communist International in setting the figure of 500,000 adopted as the basis for the organization of a national labor party the same mass support which the present minority set in 1923. The Communist International further declares, "of course, the entire organized such a party but at best only a section."

We have now had three years of experience with the labor party policy. In our future labor party campaigns we must adopt such tactics as will avoid the organizational errors which were committed in the past. We must particularly be on guard against organizing labor parties prematurely or on a too narrow basis and insist on predominant trade union support. We are proposing a special program to guide our labor party campaign in harmony with the Communist International decision.

OUR TRADE UNION WORK.

IN sending a report to the Red International of Labor Unions, Comrade Foster stated in regard to our present position in the trade unions, "We are now very much isolated." The same sectarianism which was responsible for the abandonment of the labor party slogan and our isolation on the political field is responsible for our situation in the trade unions. In place of building up a broad left wing movement in the trade unions, the policies of the majority of the Central Executive Committee have resulted in reducing our strength in the unions to practically only the members of our party. While during the leadership of the party by the present minority of the Central Executive Committee our trade union work was being built up and our strength in the unions on the increase, the actions of the present majority in identifying this trade union work with our party has brot us to our present situation in the unions. The Communist International now directs that the concrete actions of the present majority which brot this detrimental result be reversed. It must be our policy to organize Communist fractions made up of party members and in addition thereto to support the organization of a broad left wing movement. The decision of the Communist International is in effect a declaration that the leadership of the present majority has not only been a failure on the political field but also on its chosen field of industrial work of the party.

• • • •

WORK AMONG WOMEN.

THE majority of the Central Executive Committee was found to be wrong on the question of the method of conducting our work among women. The Central Executive Committee majority passed a motion to abolish the United Council of Working Class Women organized in New York City as one of the "fake" organizations which it opposed. The Communist International endorsed the organization of united front organizations consisting of delegates from women's organizations in the form in which the United Council of Working Class Women was organized which was the position which the minority supported against the decision of the Central Executive Committee majority.

• • • •

THE TWO AND A HALF INTERNATIONAL TENDENCY.

THE decision of the Communist International supports the minority not only on the big political issue of the labor party question which confronted our party but also on the inner party situation. The minority demanded of the Central Executive Committee of the party an uncompromising campaign, both ideologically and organizationally against the Two and a Half International tendency represented by the Lore group in our party. In place of carrying on this campaign the majority of the Central Executive Committee maintained an alliance with the Lore group against the minority. The decision outlaws the Foster alliance with Lore. The Communist International supports the position of the minority in that it decided that there shall not only be an ideological campaign against the Lore tendency but that neither Lore nor any supporter of the Lore group can be elected a member of the next Central Executive Committee of the party.

One of the primary tasks of the party is to end the Foster-Lore alliance which has served to paralyze the development of the party. The Communist International has declared that an alliance with Lore by either group will be a betrayal of the Communist International. We hope that the Foster group will not violate the latest decision of the Communist International on Loreism as it has totally disregarded the decision against the Two and a Half International tendency led by Lore which was made by the Communist International last May.

For our part, we will continue the energetic fight ideologically and organizationally which we have been waging against the right wing group headed by Lore, and against opportunist sectarian tendencies no matter where they manifest themselves in the party. We will wholeheartedly and vigorously carry out the present Communist International decision against Lore tendency as we have carried out the first decision. We pledge ourselves to work unceasingly to liquidate the Lore opportunist group completely and to save the party from its dangerous influences. We call upon the Foster group to carry out the Communist International decision and unite with us in the struggle.

SHOP NUCLEI AND PARTY RE-ORGANIZATION.

WE strongly endorse the re-organization of the party and the basis of shop nuclei and international branches as recommended by the Communist International. This re-organization is a prerequisite to making our party a Communist organization. The transformation of the language sections into language fractions for conduct of their special work will preserve what is needed for our party to reach the millions of foreign-born workers of this country.

• • • •

THE ISSUE NOW BEFORE THE PARTY.

WE have made this analysis of the decision of the Communist International endorsing the position of the minority of the Central Executive Committee in order to clarify the issue now before our party. The question which the next convention of the party will have to decide is the revitalizing and adjustment of the party to carry out the Communist International decision—hence that of the character of leadership of the party.

The question of leadership is not a question of personality for our party. It is not merely a question of correctness in regard to theoretical problems. Every decision of the Central Executive Committee on major political questions can result either in the strengthening and up-building of our party or in its weakening and disintegration.

The results of the leadership of the present Central Executive Committee majority are now before the party. Thru its error on the labor party issue, which the minority was obliged to fight against for the preservation and future of our party, the party was thrown into a bitter factional struggle which has all but paralyzed the work of the party for the past six months. The majority of the Central Executive Committee must assume responsibility for this condition. It was its lack of fundamental Communist understanding, its inability to make a Marxian analysis and its consequent error in shaping the policy of the party which created this condition. The party cannot continue leadership which has made the fundamental errors on the labor party issue, the issue on work among women and the trade union work as established by the Communist International.

Our party has suffered not only organizationally because of the errors of the majority of the Central Executive Committee, but it has lost a great opportunity to establish its influence and leadership among the masses of the American workers. If our party had followed the correct policy as now laid down by the Communist International in relation to the C. P. P. A. convention on February 1 in Chicago, it would have had party members elected from trade unions in that convention to take the leadership in the fight for a labor party and thru such a maneuver we could have regained the position of leadership which we held in the labor party movement up to June 17 convention. The Central

Statement of the Minority of the Central Executive Committee.

Executive Committee must assume the responsibility for our failure to follow this policy and the consequent loss to our party in relation to the establishment of its influence and leadership among the masses.

The Central Executive Committee must assume the responsibility for isolation in the trade unions, which Comrade Foster admitted in his letter to the Profintern. The same fundamental lack of understanding of Communist policy which paralysed the party organizationally and resulted in the political failure is responsible for the situation in regard to our trade union work.

The continuance of the leadership responsible for these errors will seriously endanger the future of our party. We, who have formulated and fought for the correct policies, believe that the decisive influence in leadership of the party should and must be in the hands of those who succeeded in carrying on the work of the party on correct principles with the resulting strengthening and upbuilding of the party. We believe that a majority of the membership of the party will support this viewpoint.

The establishment of the decisive influence of the present minority in leadership in the party is not only demanded by the situation of the party in the United States but by the international situation. In this period of the temporary and partial stabilization of capitalism, as established by the enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International, the danger to the Communist International is in the development of a right wing opportunistic sectarianism which the policies of the Foster group expressed and which has also developed in Communist parties in other countries. The continued leadership of the present Central Executive Committee majority in our party will strengthen this right wing opportunist sectarianism in the Communist International, and we must fight against the situation in which our party lends aid and comfort to this group in the Communist International.

THE CONVENTION STRUGGLE.

THE Communist International has demanded of our party "that all personal polemics between the two sides should cease." It has particularly declared against a campaign against Comrade Pepper and established that Comrade Pepper rendered valuable service to the American movement.

We declare that during the discussion in our party until the convention, we will discuss only questions of policy in order to help to clarify the membership of our party in regard to the fundamental issues which are before the party. We declare that we will not permit personal attacks, whispering campaigns, and collateral issues to divert us from the main issue before the party. We, despite the provocation that may be used, will carry out the instructions of the Communist International in this respect. As Bolsheviks, we will be merciless in our criticism of wrong policies because such criticism is necessary for the strengthening of our party, but we will not permit the substitution of questions of personality and personal issues for the political questions which are before our party.

We declare further that our struggle for the leadership fo the party is not a struggle to annihilate or thrust out of the work of the party any individuals or group. We are of the opinion that the future growth and development of our party can best be served thru the co-operation of both the leading groups. Our effort will be to achieve the firm consolidation of the Communist elements in the party; the cessation of factional warfare; the abandonment of the policy of factional extermination so that the party may have an opportunity for a normal healthy internal development.

Our group has succeeded, with the aid of the Communist International in establishing a correct Communist program for our party. We ask the entire membership to re-establish a Communist leadership and thus create the condition for the unification of our party and a common, more energetic struggle against our enemy, the capitalist class and the capitalist government.

BAKERY BOSSES IN SURRENDER TO BAKERS' UNION

Employers Are Forced to Sign Agreement

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., May 18.—Fourteen bakery bosses have signed the new agreement demanded by the Italian Bakery Workers of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union. A strike is on against bosses refusing to sign. The new agreement forbids night and Sunday work, the work day to start at 4 a. m. Eighteen barrels of flour is fixed as the minimum for two men to work up, with $3.00 additional pay for every barrel.

Union Will Fight All Bad Conditions

NEW YORK CITY, May 18.— The Photographic Workers' Union of America, which has offices at 443 St. Anne's avenue in the Bronx, has issued the following organizing call over the signature of Louis A. Baum, its secretary organizer:

"Fellow Photographers:— Do you know that wages have been steadily going down towards the $20.00 a week mark? Do you know that the government turns out over 300 photographers yearly? Do you know that the photographic schools turn out hundreds more of us year in and year out? Do you know that from various other sources still hundreds more are constantly being added?

"What are you going to do about it?

"Are you just going to let things slide? If so, you are heading towards further lower wages, longer hours and intolerable working conditions; or are you willing to come together with your fellow craftsmen, and join in a mighty effort to gain material advancement?

"These are big questions that await your answer and upon their solution depends your future livelihood.

"A union of men and women engaged in the photographic trade can increase wages, shorten hours, better working conditions, increase our knowledge and efficiency—and add greatly to the fraternal spirit.

"A mass meeting of the Photographic Workers' Union of America has been called for Friday evening, May 22, 1925 o'clock at Bryant Hall, 723 6th Ave., near 42nd street.

"Bear in mind that 'In union there is strength.' Come, attend this meeting and join us."

Capitalist Press Advertising Billboard

can only be accomplished thru advertising creates large production and thus lowers costs and prices. The most serious purpose of advertising is the job of creating desire. In economics the torments of desire in turn create demand, and from demand you create production, and thence around the cycle we land with increased standards of living."

An Order Getter

Hoover gets the order of events wrong. Advertisinz is truly the handmaiden of mass production in the sense that it came into being produce consumers for the enormous surplus production potentially available thru power machinery. The machine issued orders that it be fed with millions of consumers and advertising proceeded to execute the orders.

Thus advertising has produced consumers for over 70,000,000,000 cigarets and for enough chewing gum to make Wrigley an outstanding multimillionaire. It can hardly be argued that the invention of machinery to satisfy such desires followed by the creation of the desires which produce a demand for the products necessarily represents an improved standard of living.

A Sort of Bait for Suckers

Advertising, by keeping the desires of the working class constantly in advance of their wages, renders them wage slaves, that is, slaves to the masters who can grant them slight increases in the amount of satisfaction.

Hoover also stresses "the impulse advertising has given to the distribution of news, information, good cheer and educational material to our people. Obviously," he says, "were it not for the vast extension of national advertising we should never have had the fine development of our periodical magazines; and were it not for the growth of local newspaper advertising our publishers would not be able to produce the great journals which are of such incalculable value."

Capitalist Press Only A Billboard

The press has become little more tha a vehicle for advertising while auditors and contributors have been prostituted to providing the bait for advertisers to hook the public. Carl C. Magee, who as editor of the Albuquerque State Tribune knows what he is talking about, told the advertising club of New York that freedom of the press was menaced by the threats of modern business to withhold advertising from papers which print news unfavorable to its interests. This hits nearer the truth than Hoover's eulogy.

PHILADELPHIA BARBERS WIN 5-DAY STRIKE

Beat Wage Cut and Open Shop Drive

By LENA ROSENBERG.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 18.—After a strike of five days, the strike of the Barbers' Union against the Master Barbers' Association was settled with all the demands of the barbers granted including a raise in wages of $2.50 a week.

The association also demanded that the union force all independent bosses to join the association. The workers refused to grant these demands and went out on strike. They were determined not to give up any of the conditions that they already have succeeded in getting and put up such a militant fight that the association was forced to settle and give into all conditions that the barbers demanded.

There are still a few independent shops that have not settled but they are small shops and the union officials expect an early settlement with them.

Branch No. 3 of the Y.W.L. Active in Work Among Negro Labor

With Comrade H. V. Phillips, the Negro organizer of the Young Workers' League elected also as the branch organizer, and with a complete program of work laid out by the branch executive committee, Branch 3 is setting out to establish its claim as the livest branch in the Chicago league.

A leaflet addressed to the young Negro workers is being issued and will be distributed in front of concerns employing young Negro workers. A special drive is being planned against a large hat company on the south side which employs hundreds of Negro girls. Every Negro member of the branch will be enlisted in this work. A check-up of places using young Negroes is being carried on, and will when completed, provide a basis for future campaigns.

The campaign at the Chicago Mail Order House, where the league has met determined opposition from the bosses, and is as a result a general topic of discussion among the young workers, also will be continued.

A full program of educational, street meeting, union and industrial activity has been laid out. Unquestionably, the branch has great opportunities for constructive work and the B. E. C. program is calculated to take full advantage of them. The branch holds an important meeting next Tuesday.

Speaks Tonight on Savinkov.

A news cable in the press states that Boris Savinkov, formerly of the socialist-revolutionary party and lately of the counter-revolutionary white guard armies of the world imperialists had committed suicide in his prison at Moscow. Who was Savinkov? Why was he tried by the workers' and peasants' government?

Comrade Chramov, national organizer of the Russian section of the Workers Party will speak in Chicago on the interesting subject tonight, May 19, at 1902 W. Division St. Admission is free. All who understand the Russian language are welcome.

PLAN TO CRUSH RADICALISM VIA EMPLOYES' WIVE

Railroads Organize Ne "Company Union"

MILES CITY, Montana, May 18. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Pa Railway company aims to use t wives, mothers and daughters of the employes to snuff out the life of a radical thot that manifests itse among the men on the job. Mrs. E. Byram, wife of the former pre dent of the Milwaukee railroad sy tem, and Mrs. Carpenter Kendal editor of the Milwaukee Magazin both from Chicago, have been e trusted with the job of organizin these women's clubs.

Traveling in a special private ca they arrived in Miles City for a mee ing to organize the 24th chapter o the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Pa Railway Women's club. All the of ficers chosen are the wives of officials with the exception of the two sec retaries who are stenographers in the employ of the company and of course controlled by the company.

This "company union" for the wives ostensibly aims to relieve poverty and distress among Milwaukee employes (caused by low wages) but in reality it is for the purpose of bringing social pressure in times of danger. The officials wives' duties will be to be sweet and patronizing to the wives of employes and occasionally throw them a crust so that they may be propagandized to use their influence with their husbands and keep them away from radicals.

In speaking of the aims of the Women's Club, Mrs. Byram said, "The work has brot together a great family of railroad women and the acquaintanceship resulting has not been only of personal benefit but of value to the railroad system itself."

Mrs. Byram and Mrs. Kendall immediately left for Lewistown where the twenty-fifth chapter of the club will be organized. The parent club is located in Chicago where general headquarters are maintained and where the next convention will be held in July of this year.

Flivver King to Grab Government Boats at Junk Price from U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 18—Chairman T. V. (Finger) O'Connor of the United States Shipping Board today went into a series of conferences with other members of the board on the subject of the disposition of surplus government ships.

O'Connor returned Sunday from Detroit, where he discussed the government's shipping problem with Henry Ford, and prevailed on the automobile manufacturer to put in a bid for at least 400 of the ships, most of which would have to be scrapped by the purchaser.

Commissioner Thompson is opposing the sale of the ships to private interests on the ground that the maintenance of the vessels is not costly and that they could be used by the government at some future time.

Of the 1,200 ships owned by the government, Chairman O'Connor wishes to sell 400 for scrapping, keep 400 in reserve and the remaining 400 in operation for freight and passenger service.

Our Readers' Views

Daily Every Day at Ford Plant.

To the DAILY WORKER: Another attempt was made yesterday to drive the DAILY WORKER newsie from the Ford Motor company plant. This despite the fact that the justice in Highland Park court ruled in our favor in the prosecution of our comrades for selling and distributing the Daily on May Day.

A policeman approached Comrade D. P. Babich and told him he must get off the street. After telling him politely to "go to hell" the newsie succeeded in cooling him off, for he finally went off muttering that the DAILY WORKER was no damn good. Our comrade's parting shot which pleased the crowd was, "maybe not for policemen but for workers very good."

Shop Nucleus No. 1 has pledged itself to raise funds to keep this comrade on the job selling our paper at the Ford plant. Up to the present results have been very encouraging and the paper is becoming known to the workers. We believe the sales will show a big jump. If the Ford company sends its puppets on our track again our nucleus will find other ways for reaching the Ford slaves.

Within the Law

The ruling class of this country is strong for law enforcement—against the working class. The capitalists make the laws, for others to obey. For the workers, like the soldier in battle: "Their's not to reason why; their's but to do and die."

Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, delivered a speech about one year ago in which he said that he would have no labor organizers interfere with his business. If any such organizer came around, he would have him thrown into jail regardless of law. This open expression of contempt for the law did not bring Vauclain into jail. No, because Vauclain is the law.

Our Vauclains do not take the law seriously. Just now the United States government is spending millions of dollars in the enforcement of the Volstead law. But not one capitalist in ten thousand obeys that law. Sometime ago Vauclain bet with some pals of his that prohibition was not a hardship on the people, as they could get along without liquor.

Vauclain entered into an agreement one year ago that he would forfeit $10,000 if he took a drink in the United States within one year. The year is up and the steel magnate claims that he will not have to give up the ten thousand dollars. Being a wealthy man, the newspapers are after Vauclain for interviews. The year was up. Vauclain was going to New York to celebrate the end of the self-enforced drought. "With a twinkle in his eye he commented on the fact that 'New York has good liquor, they say.' 'Are you going to get some?' he was asked. 'I might get it in the neck,' he replied."

This is one of the lords of creation talking, so prohibition agents keep quiet. While an admiral of the proud United States navy is chasing rum-runners off the coast, the president of a big corporation goes to New York where the liquor is good. Vauclain is within the law. The workers are outside of it. And by the way, how does it happen that Vauclain is wealthy even tho he does not hide the fact that he likes his booze? We are told that the workers are poor, not because they are exploited by the employers, but because they are thriftless, smoke tobacco, wear silk shirts and drink liquor. Vauclain is excellent proof to the contrary.

The Yellow Chorus

Ramsay MacDonald does not like the "Red Flag," that anthem of revolt that has been sung by millions of workers since it was composed by the Irish rebel, Jim Connell. It grates on the sensitive ears that have wagged pleasantly to the strains of "God Save the King" and "Britannia Rules the Waves." The mouth that so willingly osculated the royal anatomy did not open to chant the verses of revolt against royalty, the fading handmaiden of modern capitalism.

Ramsay MacDonald does not like the "Red Flag" because it is not yellow. Neither does the Milwaukee Leader. In the editorial column of that sheet, which is presided over by John M. Work, that senile dotard in an article entitled "Down With the Bunk," belabors all those who cherish the red flag and the song inspired by it. Work does not like the red. "Alienists say a man who writes letters in red ink is likely to show signs of insanity," says Berger's hired scribbler.

MacDonald says that labor ought to have a better song, "one more tuneful and soul-stirring." The Leader hastens to add, "one less calculated to arouse the brute passion for slaughter." And furthermore writes Work: "The use of the word 'revolution' and 'revolutionary' in socialist writings is also foolish. Tho they mean peaceful revolution, most non-socialists do not know it, except the few who lie about it. Why court misapprehension?"

To the yellow socialists everything that emphasizes the class struggle is foolish. Berger long ago dropped the word revolution from his scanty vocabulary. Now the "Red Flag" is verboten. Why not muzzle Eugene V. Debs? He uses the word revolution occasionally, tho we presume he means nothing wicked by it. He also talks about the red flag, but perhaps only in a figurative sense. Morris Hillquit is less blunt than Berger, so he will allow the socialist party's only visible means of support—Debs—babble the old jargon for another while.

The socialists may drop the "Red Flag"—indeed its use is sacrilege on their lips. But the workers will drop the socialist party and carry the red flag to victory under the leadership of the Communist International, which is heir to the struggle waged by the oppressed masses of all ages.

Two Presidents to Get Raise

It is not surprising that the greatness of two presidents should be recognized at one and the same time, even tho thousands of miles of land and water separate the twain.

While the ways and means committee of the Reichstag was passing a motion to increase the annual salary and expense account of President Hindenburg from $27,000 to $45,000, the grateful delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor were boosting the salary of President Fitzpatrick from $75.00 a week to an even hundred.

Undoubtedly both men are worth the money. Both are sturdy exponents of the strenuous life. Both are stout of frame and stern of visage. Both are early risers and the sun never sets on their labors!

We know that 'Hindy' worked hard during the war to bring home the bacon for the kaiser and the German capitalists. That he failed is no fault of his. He almost lost his neck, but fortune is a fickle dame and is now smilingly ensconced in the old war dog's arms.

President Fitzpatrick is local leader of the trade union movement. One of the duties is to see that the ranks of the unions are increased, not decreased. He is at least expected to make an attempt to organize the unorganized. But while von Hindenburg risked his neck to save the kaiser's bacon and his throne, about the only function Fitzpatrick performs that is worth a nickel to the labor movement is filling a capacious armchair in his office.

Von Hindenburg is worth every gold mark of the 180,000 he will receive for bluffing the German working class. He is on his toes for the bosses. If the servants of the capitalists wasted their time as the labor fakers do, they would soon find tin cans tied to their coat tails.

Not only are the highly paid labor officials wasting their time and the funds of the unions, but they are tacit allies of the capitalists in their refusal to render any real service to the labor movement. In fact most of them are open servants of the bosses, and glory in the fact.

Arrant Nonsense

It is arrant nonsense for the Washington correspondent of the Federated Press to write that the action of the White House in sending a warning to the delinquent debtor nations of Europe, to pay up what they owe to the United States or at least begin the process, was a victory for the policy of Senator Borah. It is true that Borah wields some influence at the White House, but not as much as the House of Morgan. If Wall Street does not have its way in Washington, what was the use of electing Calvin Coolidge president?

Borah makes the plea that European countries which owe money to the United States are hotbeds of militarism and that they are able to maintain their excessive military establishments thru the use of the money they owe the United States. In the interest of peace this money should be paid back. But what about the United States militarism?

Europe owes about ten billion dollars to the United States. England, France and Italy owe the greater part of this. Other small nations like Belgium, Greece, Esthonia, Latvia, Roumania, Checho-Solvakia and Jugo-Slavia owe lesser amounts.

Wall Street never had any intention of letting those European nations get away with the idea that the debts must not be paid. It was simply waiting for the right time. If those countries suddenly discovered ten billion dollars in some cave and shipped it to Wall Street, Morgan would throw a fit and might ask the navy department to bombard the vessel bearing the gold and sink her "spurlos versenkt." Money is alright unless you have too much of it. Like too much food, it raises cain with the circulation.

Our rulers are gradually getting a stranglehold on Europe. They do not need money. Europe does. This debt is a handy thing to have. It makes a first class club. Not to curb militarism. Oh, no. The European capitalists will be allowed enough armed forces to keep the working class in subjection, or as much as the capitalists think is sufficient. Wall Street does not like the idea of her debtors fighting each other. That's the kind of "militarism" Wall Street does not like.

The Federated Press correspondent declares that "it is the people of the United States who are supporting the armies of Europe." The "people" have no kick coming. They seem to like it. They might as well support the predatory armies of France in Morocco as the armies of Wall Street in Hawaii, Porto Rico, Cuba, or the Philippines. What's the difference?

Some naive labor correspondents see in Senator Borah an enemy of Wall Street. But Wall Street is not afraid of Borah and should the tinsel so laborously plastered on Coolidge during the past few years, wear off before the year 1928, it is quite possible Wall Street would be quite satisfied to see the famous wind-jammer from Idaho make the race for the White House, particularly if the workers showed any inclination to kick over the traces.

When the policies of Senator Borah win in Washington, they are sure to be the policies of Wall Street.

It is reported that Caillaux, French finance minister, made his peace with the pope before he returned to public life. The pope is an accommodating fellow, almost as accommodating as his American financial agent, J. P. Morgan

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By G. ZINOVIEV.

II.
Partial Stabilization of Capitalist Economy.

What is Needed is a Calm, Truly Bolshevik Objective Appreciation of the Situation

LET us now turn our attention to the world economic situation. It has not materially changed during the last eight or nine months. One meets frequently two types of view in Communist ranks and round about them: the representatives of one of these tendencies could be designated as it were, as the prophets of an immediate, "inevitable" catastrophe of capitalism. They are always seeing signs of an "immediate" collapse of capitalism, and when they have recognized their mistake, they go to the other extreme, to talk about the erroneousness of the whole line of conduct.

The representatives of the second "tendency" are people who believe with the certainty of fatalists in the 100 per cent stabilization of capitalism which is supposed to have already taken place. According to them, this stabilization is making strides forward almost at express speed, to such a degree are they blinded by some of the outward features of the stabilization which they find so welcome. The Communist International has no use for either of these extremes. Neither the prophets of imminent catastrophe, nor the fatalists of capitalist stabilization are right. It is the Fifth Congress which is right, its lines have remained unshaken.

YES, it is true that the bourgeoisie has been given breathing space. We can see now that this breathing space is proving longer than we expected, altho from the viewpoint of history, two or three years, or five or ten years are a mere trifle. It is true that the economic position of the bourgeoisie has improved in some European countries and elsewhere. In many countries the bourgeoisie has been able to stabalize its valuta. In Germany we do not witness now in this respect what we witnessed in 1923, at the time of inflation. And yet there are considerable exceptions to this rule. Let us take, for instance, France, Italy, Roumania and Japan, where the valuta question is still very acute. In other bourgeois countries it has been possible to reestablish valuta equilibrium. This is of course of the greatest importance for capitalism.

And what do we see? Our "stabilization fanatics" are beginning to say: look, the bourgeoisie has again hard cash in its hands, the valuta has been stabilized—consequently the policy of the Communist International was not correct, consequently capitalism has been more or less reestablished. But a real Communist will ask himself first of all by what means the bourgeoisie has been able to stabilize the valuta, and at the expense of what sections of the population has this stabilization taken place. A true Communist sees for instance that in Germany and France two-thirds of the burden of taxation have been cast entirely on the shoulders of the workers, and that consequently the valuta has been stabilized at the expense of the working class.

But nevertheless Marxists must take into account the fact of the stabilization of valuta and the temporary consolidation of the capitalist order.

Side by Side with Stabilization are Undoubted Signs of the Instability of the Situation

WE also witness a certain revival of international credit. There is a tendency to revive international credit to establish world prices and generally speaking, to restablish the so-called unity of the world capitalist economy. America has abandoned its position of financial self-isolation. In some countries there are signs of improvement in the industrial situation. All these are undoubted facts and due to no fault of Varga.[*] For several years Europe has not been in a state of war. In some countries capitalism has partly recovered. As Comrade Varga rightly said, in the autumn of 1924 there was, after many years, a decided and simultaneous change for the better in the conditions of the most important states, such as Great Britain, the U. S. A., France and Germany, whilst in other countries—Poland, Hungary and others the economic crisis continued.

But how little stability there is in the present conditions is shown by the events which happened quite recently, during the last few weeks when we saw again that the position of the bourgeoisie had become worse. In the U. S. A. there are already the first symptoms of a new depression. A slump is looming in some branches of industry. The British economic press is full of statements concerning the instability of stabilization in Central Europe and a short life is predicted. In France considerable unemployment is becoming noticeable for the first time in the past ten years. In the other countries there is also more unemployment than last year. In short, there are a number of symptoms which show that stabilization is going thru a series of serious fluctuations.

The Position of the Working Class Under Capitalist "Stabilization."

WE as the vanguard of the working class should be first of all interested to know what the economic position of the working class is in the period of this "providential" stabilization. Unemployment is growing. In Great Britain there are already almost two million unemployed, there is the same number in America, whilst in Germany there are nearly one million. Unemployment reigns supreme also in Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and other countries, and as I already said before it has made its appearance for the first time in France after many years. The decline of real wages has become an incontrovertable fact in almost all the European countries.

WE know that in almost every country, the war and its consequences have raised the price of all the necessaries of life. This effects workers more than anyone else, as workers wages do not keep pace with the rise in prices. In Great Britain the existence minimum in July 1924 amounted to 170 per cent of the pre-war minimum, and in December of the same year 181 per cent. At the same time all official sources, which in such cases are not inclined to minimize, indicate that the wages of British workers in the same period (July-November 1924) decreased.

In the January—June 1924 period the total weekly wages paid to workers in Great Britain amounted to 560,900 pounds sterling, whilst in the period July-November it amounted only to 518,350 pounds sterling. This shows that in addition to their former profits, the employers pocketed another 42,000 pounds sterling weekly. And we must remember that during this period prices of all products were rising.

In France, in Paris the cost of living minimum in July 1924 was 360 per cent over the pre-war level, in November—396 per cent, whilst the workers' wages remained the same.

THE same is happening in every European country. In the U. S. A., the country of "capitalist prosperity," the cost of living minimum was in June, 1924, 171 per cent, in November of the same year 180 per cent and in January 1925, according to latest statistics about 185 per cent over the pre-war level. There was no rise in wages during the last six months in the U. S. A., with the exception of an insignificant rise in railwaymen's wages. But in many cases (especially in the textile industry) wages decreased from 10 to 15 per cent. Thruout Europe and even in America, the real wage is decreasing. Russia is the only exception; there wages in some branches of industry are already beginning to exceed the pre-war level. This is how matters stand to-day.

Germany presents now a clearer picture than any other country of the so-called stabilization. The Dawes plan has up to now been showing only its favourable side. But there is no doubt whatever that differences will soon become more acute in Germany on a new basis. Class struggles will again break out.

WORLD credit is being revived, the valuta is becoming stabilised and trade is developing. But at the same time another process is beginning which is inevitable in the imperialist epoch of capitalism; the struggle for markets. This struggle is already raging. The time is not far distant when we will be able to see the growing acuteness of differences on a new basis. There is no occasion for us to ignore or to minimize the fact that a certain stabilization of capitalism has taken place. But nevertheless we are as before confronted by the question; has the world war and the first Bolshevik revolution dealt capitalism a death blow, a very heavy blow, or has it only injured it slightly? We are as before of opinion, that the first Bolshevik revolution and the world war have dealt a very severe blow to capitalism, and that its "recovery" is only temporary and fictitious. But we must nevertheless look the fact of the temporary "revival" of capitalist economy straight in the face.

[*] Comrade S. Varga studied the economic position in the capitalist countries and described in his works the temporary stabilization of capitalism in some of them.

Tools of American Imperialism in Hawaii

By PAUL CROUCH.

"THE Bolsheviks were our best friends."

This remark did not come from a foreign propagandist. It was the reply of a typical American soldier to my question about conflicts with the red army. He was sent to Siberia to make the world safe for Wall Street. But when he and other soldiers came in contact with free and thinking soldiers they understood the class nature of the government that forced them to murder fellow workers. The soldier-workers who were sent to Siberia discovered the character of capitalist imperialism and those who still remain in the service are prevented from telling the truth to their comrades only by fear of persecution.

With its usual stupidity, American militarism subjects its tools in Hawaii to such brutality and injustice that the rank and file of the army is on the verge of open revolt. Prison cells of transports returning to the mainland are filled with those who have tasted the bitterest kind of injustice and maliciousness. The primary reason for the unusually cruel treatment of soldiers in the Hawaiian department is that it is very difficult for them to desert. Officers realize that the worker-soldier is at their "mercy" and so satiate their desire for power. If soldiers on the mainland were subjected to the same injustices that their comrades in Hawaii are forced to endure, the army would not exist for a week.

Ignorance is the first line in the defenses of class rule, and America is following in the footsteps of the czar by endeavoring to keep her soldier tools ignorant of all vital problems. Nothing would be of greater value to the enlisted men than lectures and courses in geography, civics, economics, and other studies. There are a few educational courses but, as in civilian life, they are for the individual—not the masses. Few soldiers learn anything while in the service of value in civilian life. The government does nothing for the intellectual development of the average enlisted man. A company commander seeing a copy of the National Geographic Magazine in the possession of a soldier, gave order that it should be destroyed.

The fear that knowledge might reach the dormant minds of ignorant and abused tools of Wall Street who hold the masses of Hawaii in economic slavery, caused what amounts to life sentences for Walter M. Trumbull and the writer.

Our weapon was education. But in the eyes of the military autocracy, soldiers who try to persuade their comrades to think for themselves and question orthodox dogmas, are guilty of the greatest of all crimes. As one brutal agent of Wall Street put it, "The dirtiest job you've got is too good for them" (in reference to us).

The czar failed to save capitalism by fighting education. And America will not succeed in keeping her soldier tools and colonial slaves in everlasting ignorance. The dawn of truth and economic freedom will come despite the efforts of militarism, and free soldier workers will unite with their comrades of other lands and shout:

Long live the international brotherhood of workers!

Long live the world Communist Party!

Long live the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics!

MAY DAY IN DUBLIN

By ROBERT STEWART.

THE disunity in the Irish labor movement made a general holiday on May Day impossible, nevertheless the Dublin workers did not let the day pass without a demonstration.

On the evening of May Day the workers assembled in Parnell Square but altho invitations had been sent to every trade union branch there were few officially represented. The Workers' Union, the Irish Workers' League, the Grocers' Assistants, the Workers' International Relief, the unemployed, etc., made up the parade which led by the Workers' Union No. 1 band marched thru O'Connell street to Beresford Place where a meeting of five thousand workers gave a rousing welcome to the platform party, consisting of Mrs. Despard, Workers' Internation Relief, delegates from the Grocers' Assistants, Trade Council, Woodworkers', Councillor Lawlor presided, and the speakers were J. Farrelly, R. Stewart, and Jim Larkin. The meeting lasted for three hours, and the audience carried with acclamation this resolution viz:

That this meeting of Dublin workers deplores the lack of real unity and solidarity in the ranks of the Irish working class and pledges itself to work for national trade union unity.

It welcomes the efforts put forth to establish one trade union international for the whole world. And supports the Anglo-Russian trade union unity committee in their actions for such unity.

This meeting further declares its solidarity with, and loyalty to the workers' republics of the Soviet Union.

To all prisoners and captives of capitalism, it sends fraternal greetings.

It calls upon all the workers thru their trade unions, co-operative and political organizations, to unite for their common defense against capitalist attacks and to carry the war into the enemy's camp, by their demands for reduced hours, higher wages, decent housing conditions, and work, or full maintenance at trade union rates for all unemployed workers.

CHILDRENS COLUMN.
Religion and Its Ways.

By STANLEY BALCHAUAS, Age 14.

Did you ever stop to reason out about this God religion teaches us about. For instance, religion teaches us that there is hell. I asked a church going kid "Why is there hell?" His answer was that those who disobey God go there. Why does this so-called Almighty God create bad people? It seems that he himself does not "love his neighbors" as he would have others do.

There is more profit in religion than there is any other kind of business. A new church springs up every time a new minister or priest finishes college and he knows there are enuf "suckers" around to furnish the money for him and his church. The poor pay their hard earned money for the lies they are told.

When you start to reason out the God whom the church teaches about, you will find that he is not so good at all. If he really were good and almighty, then he would never have created hell and made people bad or given them weaknesses to commit sins so that he could send them to hell.

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

3 per cent hold enough to pay an income tax, the importance of the churches becomes even more evident."

For our own sakes, for our children's sakes, for the nation's sake, let us business men get behind the churches and their preachers!

"NEVER mind if they are not perfect! Never mind if their theology is out of date. This only means that if they were efficient they would do very much more. The safety of all we have is due to the churches, even in their present inefficient and inactive state. By all that we hold dear, let us from this very day give more time, money and thought to the churches of our city, for upon these the value of all we own ultimately depends."

JAMES M. LYNCH, president of the International Typographical Union, has a scheme for perpetual prosperity. It is, that everybody should spend everything they earn, provided it is not spent before it is earned. Workers who are accustomed to being suddenly thrown out of employment when the boss finds that he cannot make any more profit out of their labor will wonder how does Lynch get this way. It has been shown by no less an authority than a United States government commission, that 83 cents out of every dollar goes into the pockets of the employer, the workers getting the balance. Yes, let the plute wage slave spend his seventeen cents and keep the wheels of industry revolving!

YOU are probably aware that the capitalist powers are holding a conference in Geneva to regulate the sale and traffic in arms. Soviet Russia refused to have anything to do with this conference. This collection of capitalist robbers, are, as usual, trying to slip things over on each other. Nothing will come out of it but more arms. You might as well expect those fellows to do something in the interests of peace as to expect a gang of bootleggers to observe the Volstead act.

THE Chinese delegate, however, threw a bombshell into the conference as those peaceful Chinese are in the habit of doing. This is the way a newspaper reporter condenses the Chinaman's speech: "The Chinese delegate after praising the United States' proposal (that producing states publish statistics) said his country had a very long frontier with the nation which the other delegates did not wish to name. It appeared to him there was fear of a white bear; she regarded it pacifically. The Roumanian said there had been a mistake in the color!

THE long frontier to which the Chinese delegate referred is that of Soviet Russia. The Chinese people have no reason to fear Russia and they realize it. Their enemies are the capitalist powers who have helped to keep China disunited. It was against those robber powers that the great liberator, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, fought until the end. And it is those powers who today are trying to undo the life work of Dr. Sun by causing dissension inside his organization and setting rival military leaders against each other. The only power that favors Chinese national unity is Soviet Russia.

SOLDIERS MUST UNITE WITH THE WORKERS AND POOR FARMERS TO WIN OVER BOSSES, SAYS CROUCH

By PAUL CROUCH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

27TH INF. GUARD HOUSE, Schofield Barracks, Honolulu, May 19.—Walter Trumbull and I wish to express our appreciation for the support of the DAILY WORKER and the workers of the country in general, in our fight for the right of United States soldiers to be something more than slaves.

The army authorities have sentenced us because we defended the Soviet Union against the stupid attacks of the Honolulu capitalist press, and because we dared to have opinions of our own.

Today I received three copies of the DAILY WORKER, dated April 21, 22, and 23 respectively. It is encouraging to us to read of the world-wide progress of Communism—the march in the direction of the coming world revolution.

I have made an application for a new trial because of the numerous vital errors in the trial record. In the event that a new trial is held, I hope to have civilian defense counsel, with newspaper representatives present so that false statements cannot be given out by authorities. Action in the federal courts is now under consideration. If I am successful in obtaining a new trial, Comrade Trumbull will make application for a new hearing as part of the evidence as testimony given at my trial as read from my records.

Soldiers Must Have Freedom.

George W. Wright, head of the A. F. of L. in Hawaii, and who is also a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union, recently visited us, and promised to give us all possible assistance.

If possible we would like to obtain the co-operation and assistance of the International Red Aid in a legal fight for liberty of thought and speech in the army. Of course, we are anxious to obtain our release from prison but that alone will not end our fight. Our fellow soldiers must be given intellectual freedom.

Comrade Trumbull and I are working on a plan for a union of soldiers, sailors and marines. Practically all soldiers to whom we have mentioned the proposed union have expressed their approval and a desire to join such an organization. Of course, it would be met with open hostility by officers. But the day is near when soldiers will realize the unity of their interests with the aspirations of the workers and poor farmers, and enslaved colonials. The most difficult thing is to break down race prejudices.

Hawaii, Land of Oppression.

There are few places where the evils of capitalism are as apparent as in the Hawaiian Islands. Nature has provided well for every necessary

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

BIG corporations write their advertising today as if they were divinely ordained to serve the masses and not to make profit out of the production and sale of some commodity. The Chicago Surface Lines, the finest collection of junk in the country, explains that an attack on its properties is an attack on the "people" because the "people" own the lines. There are no "barons" among the owners of the street car lines, we are told in large, attractively placed advertisements.

WE are informed that the only revenue available to the street cars is from fares. But what about those who own the lines? Some of them also own public utilities that sell power to the car company. Take Samuel Insull for instance. Sam owns the elevated lines. He also owns the gas and electric companies. He supplies juice to the elevated at a large profit, that he could afford to run the elevated at a loss. It's easily worked. His books may show that his elevated is running at a loss while his electric company pays 12 per cent dividends and large bonuses besides. He peddles stock in his elevated lines to his employes, but he is not so generous with stock in his electric and gas companies.

THE Standard Oil company of Indiana writes very pretty advertisements. It does not bother about whether the flivver owner purchases its oil or not. What else can he do? It tells us how useful the big industrial organizations are. That their first and last consideration is service to the "people." Profit is the last thing they think about. Of course, wealth is the reward of virtue. There is never anything said about the thousands of slaves in the employ of the Standard Oil company, who help to make this efficiency possible.

THERE is not a tiger in the Lincoln Park zoo who will not envy State's Attorney Crowe for the next few weeks. The county prosecutor is never happier than when there is a prospect of some human being dangling at the end of a rope within his jurisdiction. Crowe is a Christian; in fact he of the most Christian of all Christian faiths, the Catholic faith. We can imagine that Crowe's morning prayer goes something like this:

"OH Lord! Give me this day my daily quaff of gore. In thy infinite mercy see that thy humble servant's prayer is acceeded to. I pray that some crazed moonshine victim slits his meek wife's throat so that my police can arrest him on a mur-

4,000 BUILDING TRADES WORKERS IN GARY FIGHT OPEN SHOP COMBINE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Building construction at Gary, Ind., was at a standstill to-day as a result of the stand of fifty members of the Gary Building Contractors' association in supporting the master plumbers in refusing an increase of $1 a day to plumbers. Between 3,000 and 4,000 members of the building trades are idle.

The building boom there apparently is doomed to remain at a standstill until the master plumbers surrender to the union.

KU KLUX KLAN TRIES TO DIVIDE WORKERS OF NORTH DAKOTA BY BOMBING AND RAIDING HOMES

By A. C. MILLER,

Communist Member of the North Dakota Legislature.

WILLISTON, N. D., May 19.—The American section fo the world fascisti, better known as the ku klux klan (organization of the businessmen of the world), has reached its arm out into the plains and badlands of western North Dakota.

A few days ago this organization set up their fiery cross and touched off a couple of bombs. In order to make believe that the stunt they pulled was a warning for the Catholics to be good they set the thing off in the vicinity of Father O'Neill's home in this town.

All of the blind piggers and bootleggers were chucked behind the bars. Likewise, the Moose club, a hangout for the highest paid workers, was taken into camp. Everything was cleaned out except the Elks' home. Only the "best" people now will get moonshine and home brew from the most exclusive bootleggers.

The workers, no matter whether their training has been Catholic or Protestant, must not let their ranks be divided over the fake klan organization. They have no quarrel with each other.

The real issue that all workingmen must consider is, "Shall there be a Workers' Republic with all machinery of production and distribution collectively owned, wherein the proceeds of labor will go to those who labor?"

Or shall we maintain the present system where nearly all of the proceeds produced by the laborer are taken from him by the few who individually own the machinery of production and distribution?

If the klan really stood for freedom of speech, sanctity of the home, law and order, as they claim they do, why are they afraid to debate with the Communists?

SHIPPING BOARD TO RECOMMEND SCRAPPING SHIPS WORTH MILLIONS

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Tentative decision to recommend that 200 of the 890 tied ships of the government mrchant fleet be sold for scrapping has been reached by the sub-committee of the shipping board in charge of scrapping, it was learned today.

Pending a report from the Emergency Fleet Corporation carrying a recommendation as to the specific ships thus to be disposed of, the sub-committee is withholding its report to the board.

It is understood that 150 of the lake boats and 50 other types will make up the 200 ships to be scrapped.

JENSEN LOSES FIRST ROUND IN ELECTION FIGHT

Swats Militant; Gets Swatted in Return

Harry Jensen, president of the carpenters' district council, returned to his corner last Monday night, a defeated contender for the honors in an impromptu bout with a progressive carpenter who was passing out campaign leaflets for the ticket opposing Jensen in the forthcoming election for district officers of the carpenters' district council.

This is how it happened. A carpenter was passing out election leaflets at a meeting of Local No. 1367, an inside local which meets downstairs at Wicker Park Hall. Local 181, to which Jensen belongs, meets upstairs. Jensen approached the man with the leaflets and tried to pull them out of his hands, saying he was a disrupter. This the progressive denied, adding that he did not sign a scab agreement, as did Jensen.

Lost His Morale.

This retort angered the sub-lieutenant of "Czar" Hutcheson. He struck the progressive with his fist. The progressive retaliated with a rught to the jaw which gave Harry as good a glimpse of the planetary system as you could get from one of those mammoth telescopes that can sometimes be seen on the street corners. In other and plainer terms, Jensen saw stars.

Then his hand went automatically to his hip pocket, but the automatic did not come out. Harry must have done a little thinking in the meantime, tho members of Local 181 deny this allegation indignantly, claiming that Harry is incapable of committing such an offense. Whether he did or not, he decided to throw up his hands. That was about the only use he could make of them.

Up Went the Fins.

Jensen was given credit in the Chicago Tribune for being a scrapper. He figured in a brawl a few weeks ago in the Federation building, and history has it that had not his enemies taken to their heels, Harry would have laid them low with his trusty paws. Yet, last Monday night those same mitts were pointed to the ceiling, while their owner squealed the piteous alibi, that he was sick.

Carpenters say that a man who can neither think, fight nor talk intelligently has no business being president of the district council. About all he can do is respond to the boss' whistle and play poker. Unless all signs fail when the votes are counted shortly, Jensen will whistle goodly to his job.

Martial Law Lifted In Spain

MADRID, Spain, May 19.—The state of martial law which has prevailed in Spain since Primo de Rivera took over the government by establishing a military dictatorship in September, 1923, was declared formally lifted by a decree of King Alfonso. This does not mean a change in the military dictatorship, as the country is still controlled by de Rivera and his followers.

England Active In League

GENEVA, May 19. — The British government is considering buying permanent headquarters for its league of nations officials, it is announced here. England figures its budget for league expense would be lessoned by housing its delegates in its own official residence. England uses the league to gain influence over the small and weak nations.

Earthquake Shakes Tokio.

TOKIO, May 19. — The heaviest earthquake of the year rocked the Tokio district this morning. The shock lasted nine minutes. No damage has been reported. The center of the disturbance was believed to be Sagami Bay, which was the center of the great shock of September, 1923.

FRENCH LOSSES IN AFRICA 1600 IN ONE BATTLE

Red Paper Discloses Severe Casualties

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, May 19. — The French losses in the attack on the Riffians holding the heights of Bibane were 1,600, the Communist newspaper Humanite discloses, while the Riffians total force holding the heights was only 3,500. The Communist newspaper has broken the silence of the capitalist press, which suppressed all news as to the extent of the casualties suffered by the French in their invasion of the Riffan's native land in French Morocco.

The Communist Party is conducting protest meetings thruout France, protesting against the invasion of North Africa by French imperialism.

Using field artillery and reinforcements which have just come up, the Riffian troops have made a counterattack on the eastern front, inflicting further severe losses against the French.

Dispatches from Madrid state that the discussions between M. Malvy, former minister of the interior, and the Spanish dictator, Primo de Rivera, have developed into a debate as to how the territory won from the native North Africans shall be divided. France is endeavoring to secure the aid of Spain, as well as permission to cross the Spanish Morocco line.

It has now been disclosed, however, that France demands the port of Melilla, after the Riffians are crushed, while Spain insists that the town remain in Spanish hands. Mussolini has put in his bid for a slice of territory and insists in his right to participate in the invasion.

TAFT DEDICATES SCAB TEMPLE AT BIG BIZ MEETING

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Opens Session

WASHINGTON, May 19. — More than 2,000 representatives of American industry began the thirteenth annual meeting of the United States chamber of commerce here today.

Big business was present in full force and powerful rail, oil, steel and automobile magnates hogged the spotlight from the small merchants in informal discussion of the financial, industrial and commercial interests of the nation.

Credit and Finance System Big Item.

The keynote of the meeting was expected to be the federal reserve banking system. A wide variety of papers, some urging revision of the law—and others its retention without change, were to be read during the four-day convention.

The meeting proper will not start until tomorrow morning, when the general sesion will be opened formally. Nomination of directors featured the meeting of the national councillors today. Approximately 15 of the total of thirty-three will be elected at the present session to guide the destinies of the organization for the next two years.

Bill Taft Dedicates Scab Building.

Chief Justice Wm. H. Taft of the supreme court will be the main speaker at exercises tomorrow night dedicating the $3,200,000 national chamber building, built by open shop labor.

More than 1,400 chambers of commerce, representing 759,000 different enterprises were officially listed with new arrivals hourly swelling the total. Richard F. Grant, president of the organization, was presiding officer.

AUTO SLAVES BOOST STOCK OF NASH MOTORS CO. TO HIGH FIGURE

NEW YORK, May 19.—Nash Motors common stock sold at $401 on the New York Stock Exchange today. This is an advance of 208 points over the January price and a gain of 304 points over the low price of last year.

The sensational advance is due to the phenomenal gain in earnings of the company in the last two years. Current earnings are said to be at the rate of $43 a share and current production is 40 per cent ahead of last year, according to an official statement by president C. W. Nash.

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL CALLS FOR UNITED FRONT TO SAVE A. V. SEVERINO FROM BOSSES "JUSTICE"

CLEVELAND, O., May 19.—An attempt is being made by the United States department of justice to secure the cancellation of the citizenship papers of A. V. Severino of Cleveland, member of Local No. 5, Bricklayers' Union; member of the Workers (Communist) Party; and a naturalized citizen of the United States, since 1915.

The government maintains, in the petition of United States District Attorney Bernstein, that when Severino stated in his application for citizenship, that he was "attached to the principle of the Constitution of the United States," he made a declaration that was "untrue, false, and fraudulent." The petition claims that Severino "has been, since the year 1907, and now is, a believer of violent revolution and armed insurrection directed against the government of the United States and all other governments founded upon the capitalist system of economy." The petition prays therefore, "that the certificate of naturalization and citizenship of the said Angelo Vincent Severino be set aside and cancelled."

Hearing May 27.

Action in this case began with the filing of the complaint by the government on October 10, 1923. It seems that Severino's beliefs, dangerous as they may sound, are not really held to seriously threaten the peace and safety of the nation, for the case has not been rushed to trial. The date for hearing has finally been set for May 27, 1925. It is under the juris-

200,000 DANISH WORKERS' STRIKE GRIPS COUNTRY

Agricultural Export, Chief Trade, Idle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

COPENHAGEN, May 19.— A general transport strike completes the tie-up of economic life in Denmark. Shipping, railways and street cars are included. The transport strike means that in addition to the stoppage of manufacture all agriculture export will cease.

The conflict began nearly two months ago when Danish employers offered a 10 per cent cut as answer to union requests for wage increases to match the increase in living costs.

Negotiations broke down and the metal trades employers locked out their workers. The general workers' union answered with a strike but at first the transport workers refrained from participation.

The entry of these workers brings the total involved to over 200,000. Norwegian transport workers have called a sympathetic strike to prevent Danish shipping from being transferred to Norwegian ports.

Damage Suit of Klan Raper Thrown Out of Ind. Court

INDIANAPOLIS, May 19. — The $125,000 damage suit brought by D. C. Stephenson, former K. K. K. leader in Indiana, against Hiram Evans, ex-imperial wizard of the klan, following the burning of Stephenson's yacht at Toledo, Ohio, last year, was dismissed by Judge Robert C. Baltzell in federal court here today.

No one appeared when the case was called for trial and Judge Baltzell ordered it stricken from the docket.

Stephenson, facing trial on June 2, on a murder charge growing out of the death last month of Madge Oberholtzer, 28, asserted in bringing the action that Evans had conspired to destroy the yacht by fire.

Witness Against Shepherd, Alleged Killer, Vanishes

Disappearance of an important state's witness came to light today as William D. Shepherd, entered Judge Thomas J. Lynch's courtroom for the second day of his trial for the alleged murder of William Nelson McClintock, his millionaire ward.

The witness is Robert White, formerly connected with "Dr." Charles C. Faiman's national university of sciences, the man who before Faiman's sensational confession is alleged to have pointed out Shepherd as a visitor at the school.

Shepherd issued a statement to the press declaring himself innocent.

Divorce Mill for Rich Uncovered.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 18—A divorce mill, with headquarters in New York, that "sold freedom" to the unhappily wealthy married and made Rhode Island "the little Reno" of the United States, was under investigation by a grand jury today.

More than 100 divorce cases, alleged to have been fraudulently obtained, some involving prominent persons, were included in the probe.

TEACHERS' UNION FIGHTS RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS

Dopesters Try to Get in Work After Hours

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, May 19.—"More than toleration is required of us, even the forbearance that induces majorities to forego, in the interest of unity, powers that they might legally seize under our form of government," says Henry R. Linville, president of the Teachers Union in a letter to the New York city board of education protesting against the proposal to link public schools with religious training after school hours.

"It is hardly conceivable," Linville writes, "that the injection of religious controversy into public school administration could further religion; it certainly would paralyze the trunk nerve of education."

The attenmpt to introduce official sanction of the school system to after-school religious teaching is being made by certain clergymen. Linville, speaking for the Teachers Union, declares that such an effort is undemocratic and violates the principle of separation of church and state on which the country was founded.

Religious instruction after school has been going on in Brooklyn for two years with protestant, catholic and Jewish church officials co-operating.

BOSTON FORMING LOCAL FOR IRISH FAMINE RELIEF

BOSTON, May 19.—Joseph Manley, member of the national excutive committee of the Irish Workers and Peasants Famine Relief Committee will be the principal speaker at a conference scheduled to meet here on Wednesday evening May 27, in Paine Memorrial Hall, 9 Appleton St., for the purpose of organizing a local branch of that organization.

A call has been sent to all trade unions and workingclass organizations in Boston to send delegates to this conference. The provisional secretary is Dr. H. A. Gibbs, 376 Boyslton Street and the other members of the committee are Dr. George W. Galvin, prominent physician and former candidate for mayor of Boston on the socialist ticket; Michael Moore, Mary Carpenter; James Lacey and Casey Blockland.

Ever Hopeful of G. O. P. Promises, Tries for Eight and a Half

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 19.— A bill regulating the working day for women to eight and a half hours, was introduced in the house today by Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, of Downer's Grove. The republican platform in the last election stood for an eight-hour day, but the republican legislature under Small's control has already killed an eight-hour bill.

The new measure is not so uncompromising as the eight-hour bill which was on roll call twice and each time failed to muster a constitutional majority. It exempts all canneries, mercantile establishments in municipalities of less than 7,000 population, and graduate and student nurses. Other hospital employes, however, come under provisions of the bill.

The measure was referred to the committee on industrial affairs.

FRANCE YOKED TO MORGAN BY U. S. DEBT DUNS

Cal Brings Pressure for Wall Street

PARIS, France, May 19.—The drive of the Coolidge government to collect the four billion dollar debt owed the United States by France, is an attempt to enforce a "Dawes plan of bondage for France," is the prevailing opinion here. Coolidge is applying the screws in the final drive for the submission of the French capitalists to the Wall Street bankers, and the French government is squirming.

However, just as the Dawes plan payments of Germany will be taken from the workers, so the French industrial magnates will see to it that what money paid the United States comes out of the toil of the already impoverished workers.

There is much hostility toward the Coolidge government here, which finds its way into the newspapers. "Borah, whose name ought to be Shylock, thinks we are prosperous because we have no unemployed," says the Liberte. "Does he think there should be unemployed in a country which has lost a million and a half workers in the war? France, bled white, must call on foreign labor."

"They are using war debts to force us to accept a guarantee pact without the reservations our interests dictates," says this paper, commenting on the fact that Coolidge's drive to collect the debt just at the time when France was beginning negotiations with Germany for a "security pact."

There is no doubt that the Coolidge government is exerting pressure, thru its debt collecting activity, to place a "Dawes plan" yoke upon France, and make the French nation as subservient to the Morgan banking syndicate as Germany. The debt gives the American bankers controlling the Coolidge government the power to make France bow to any "disarmament conference" when the time comes.

Proposals will be submitted to Great Britain and the United States on the debt settlement about June 1, it was announced following a conference between foreign Minister Briand and finance Minister Caillaux.

Cabinet Meets on Debts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 19—The cabinet meeting today discussed the attempt to secure foreign debt settlements. Three of the cabinet members, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, Secretary of State Kellogg and Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, are also members of the American debt commission. Despite the constant pressure being brought on foreign countries to collect 12 billion dollars owed the United States, this commission has not held a meeting for many months.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Charles S. Dewey, has departed for Europe, "on a vacation," it is announced. However, it is admitted that Dewey will hold conferences with officials of debtor nations.

I. L. G. W. AGREES TO MEDICAL EXAMINATION; BLACKLIST FORESEEN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TORONTO, Can., May 19.—Union workers employed by members of the Toronto Cloak and Suit Manufacturers' Protective Association must take a medical examination to show freedom from contagious diseases according to the agreement reached by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and the manufacturers.

Those who pass the examination will be given a health certificate; others cannot work in shops of the association. Workers are apprehensive lest the examination open up a method of blacklist identification as similar methods have done elsewhere.

Such examination is often a fake, and the militant workers are deprived of a chance to make a living by refusing them a "physically fit" certificate.

TRADE RELATIONS BETWEEN SOVIET UNION AND CANADA SHOW INCREASE

TORONTO, Ont., Canada, May 19.—Trade between Canada and the Soviet Union showed a big increase from December, 1924, to May 1, 1925, despite the handicaps of customs and other obstacles thrown in the way by the Canadian government. The supplies bought in Canada by the Soviet Union during this period totalled millions of dollars. Some of the principal

ANTI-FASCISTS MEET DESPITE ROUMANIAN ARMY

Opposition to White Terror Braves Troops

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUCHAREST, Roumania, May 19.—The gathering here of the opposition parties to the white guard government, brot a wave of terror as government troops invaded the city and prohibited parades of the opposition parties. The meetings marked the coalition of the anti-fascist parties.

The meetings were held in the wholesale market district. Opposition deputies talked to huge crowds, while double files of helmeted soldiers herded them into the streets and attempted to intimidate the speakers.

One opposition Bessarabian deputy, an old man, was beaten almost to death by a gendarmerie lieutenant, who later challenged another opposition deputy to a duel when he protested against the outrage.

The capital was filled with soldiers, who patrolled the streets and barred the workers from the business section of the town, which includes the royal palace.

This is the first gathering held by the opposition representatives.

Anti-Fascists Meet in New York.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Speaking before an audience of five hundred Italians, Vincenzo Vacirca, former member of the Italian parliament, denounced the fascisti. Vacirca declared that the king has constantly aided the fascisti. He pointed to the king's failure to prosecute the Matteotti murderers, and his declaration of amnesty in Dec. 1922, when only those of fascist tendency were released. "King Victor Emanuel is alone responsible for the outrageous way in which amnesty was carried out," Vacirca said. "The king has demonstrated his absolute subservience to Mussolini." Vacirca advocated the overthrow of the monarchy.

Steel Mills Reduce Production as Orders Fall in Steel Trade

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 19.—Both iron and steel production will be decreased in the Youngstown district next week, it was revealed today in an announcement of operating schedules.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company will blow out its Hubbard blast furnace tomorrow, leaving twenty-two active stacks out of forty-three. Open hearth steel production also will be curtailed. Mill executives said orders had been fewer, and operations are being kept in ratio to orders.

NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT BARELY HOLDING WHILE WAGE PAYMENTS FALL, SAYS U. S. LABOR REPORT

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The department of labor announces that employment in this country increased one-tenth of 1 per cent in April, as compared with March, while the aggregate earnings of employes decreased 1.7 per cent, and per capita earnings decreased 1.8 per cent.

That an improved employment status, altho slight, should be accompanied by these decreases in earnings was due largely to the closing for one or two days of a part of the establishments in various industries for th observance of certain religious celebrations, coupled, in a few cases, with the end of an industry's season, as indicated by a decrease in full-time work.

Thes preliminary figures, presented thru the bureau of labor statistics, are based on reports from 9,039 establishments in fifty-two industries, covering 2,835,491 employes whose total earnings during one week in April were $74,764,225. The same establishments in March reported 2,833,137 employes and payrolls, of $76,029,797.

The East, North Central States and the mountain states alone of the nine geographic divisions gained both in employment and earnings in April, although the Pacific states gained about 3 per cent, and the South Atlantic and East South Central states gained very slightly in employment alone.

The losses in employment were comparatively small, the largest being decreases of 1.2 per cent in both the New England and the West North Central divisions. The decreases in payroll totals, however, were of greater size in four divisions, headed by the Middle Atlantic states with 4.3 per cent, and the New England states with 3.9 per cent.

Hatband Textile Workers Get Raise by Fighting for It

PATERSON, N. J., May 19.—Hatband loomfixers, twisters and day workers are now enjoying wage advances averaging 12 per cent as result of their demands upon manufacturers. Loomfixers and twisters receive $45 a week, $5 gain; and day workers get $40 instead of $36.

Loomfixers are paid for holidays and are to get a week's vacation with pay. Thru the Associated Silk Workers Union almost all workers in the industry in Paterson have now gained wage increases and better working conditions.

The Theory and Practice of LENINISM

By I. STALIN.

A brilliant exposition of Communist theory and practice in the period of Capitalist Imperialism—during which our great teacher, Lenin, lived and led.

No book recently issued can be of more value or importance to the worker who would learn of Communism.

This book by the secretary of the Russian Communist Party, who has been a constant and intimate co-worker of Lenin, is not only an extremely timely work, but also one that is destined surely to become one of the classics of Communist literature.

INJUNCTION GALORE FOR MINERS' UNION IN WEST VIRGINIA

WHEELING, W. Va., May 19.—Judge William E. Baker, in United States court today denied motion of United Mine Workers of America for dismissal of contempt charges pending against a score of members of the organization for alleged violation of an injunction granted the West Virginia Pittsburgh Coal company.

At the same time it was announced a decree granting a temporary injunction, on a new application of the West Virginia Pittsburgh Coal company against international president of the miners, John L. Lewis and nine other officials would be signed during the day.

comfort in this "Paradise of the Pacific." If the available land was used for bananas and essential foods, a few hours a day of pleasant labor would provide for a population several times as great as at present and the remainder of the time could be used for study and recreation.

But under capitalist rule, the only people who have time to enjoy the beauties of the islands are American plutes and our local bourgeoisie. The natives and orientals are wage slaves used to fill the chests of military imperialism. But the day will come when Hawaii will be free from wage slavery and imperialism.

NOTE—The Labor Defense Council, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, is agitating for the release of Crouch and Trumbull. Petitions and resolutions demanding the release of the Communist soldiers, and contributions for their defense, should be forwarded to the Defense Council at the above address.

Chicago City Drivers May Strike at Firing of 26 Union Members

Twenty-six city electrical department truck drivers were suspended from the civil service yesterday afternoon in the climax of their clash with Commissioner of Gas and Electricity John T. Miller over claims of overtime wages.

Each of the men, as he reported to the city's garage was notified of his suspension and the preparation of charge to be filed against him with the merit board. Several weeks ago, the drivers notified Commissioner Miller that they would enforce their demands for over-time wages by striking.

Miller had a stool pigeon out on the job to watch the men, and it was reported that the men put in about eight minutes a day over-time.

If the charges are pressed against these drivers, the union may call out all drivers on strike.

Federal Judge Can't Find John L. Lewis in Suit of Co-operative

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 19.—Judge Robert C. Baltzell in federal court here today denied the application of William S. Howe, Chicago coal agent, for a permanent injunction against officers of the United Mine Workers and the East Side Coal Co., of Bicknell, Ind., to restrain them from interfering with the operations of co-operative mines in Knox county, Indiana.

The temporary injunction granted Howe last week was dissolved.

In denying the petition Judge Baltzell stated he did not have jurisdiction in the case since John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers is a citizen of Illinois.

Howe charged the miners' union had threatened to withdraw the charters of locals unless their members ceased working in co-operative mines.

SHEPPARD BIDS FOR CAPITALIST AID AGAINST REDS

Head of Conductors in Talk to Bankers

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 19.—L. E. Sheppard, grand president of the Order of Railway Conductors is against the Communists and militants in the unions, and he advertised the fact to the business men of Minneapolis the other day at the Saturday Lunch Club in the Unitarian church here.

"The conservative labor element of America is at the very front line in the fight to preserve the institutions and the traditions of the United States," Sheppard told his audience. "The red element is attempting to gain a foothold by boring from within the ranks of labor."

Ah, Ha! We're An "Impotent Force."

The conservative officials, like himself, Sheppard inferred, should have the support of American capitalists as they "and not forces far removed from the field of labor, are forcing the reds to remain comparatively an impotent force." An "impotent force" is not a curiosity to Sheppard.

"It is only fair," Sheppard pleaded to his audience of bankers and grain merchants, "that America should recognize the fight we are making against the invasion of Communists and their ilk."

Sheppard said he could "point with pride" to the friendship between the O. R. C. and the railroad companies. It is remarked that Sheppard's salary puts him nearer the living standard of railway managers than that of working members of his own craft.

More Starvation Cure to Force Wage Cut on Miners in District 5

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 19.—Forest Hill coal mine, the last of the union mines being closed for an indefinite period by the Pittsburgh Coal company, will cease operations in a few days, it is announced.

It will be the sixteenth operated by the company to suspend operations within a few weeks.

50 Per Cent of Babies Die in Infantoriums

NEW YORK, May 19.—More than 50 per cent of babies under a year old in the infantoriums and foundling homes of New York state die, Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, authority on diseases and care of children told delegates to the Child Welfare Conference of America. The reason for this condition he said, was the mass system of handling babies.

Plumbers Win Raise by Two-Week Strike

PASSAIC, N. J., May 19.—Passaic plumbers won their two weeks' strike with a new wage scale of $11 a day, bringing the weekly wage to $60.50, exclusive of overtime. About 125 plumbers were involved.

Fight For Sex Parity

SPRINGFIELD, Illinois, May 19.—Women's organizations that have been fighting thru successive legislatures to place women on a parity with men in selection for jury service, won a victory in the senate today when that body passed, among 12 other bills, the three Hamilton measurers embodying the dominant issues.

New Belgian Chamber Meets.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, May 19.—It is expected the new premier, Aloys de Vyvere, will ask for a vote of confidence of the new Belgium chamber of deputies which was elected April 5, and convened today. It seems doubtful whether he can secure it.

PANAMA CANAL EXEMPT FROM ARMS TRAFFIC CONTROL BY PARLEY

GENEVA May 19—By a vote of 8 to 1, the delegates to the Geneva arms control conference today absolved the United States from any responsibility for arms shipments passing thru the Panama Canal in foreign craft.

Article 5 of the proposed convention required nations to investigate "suspicious arms shipments" thru their territorial waters, but delegates rejected the article at the instance of the U. S. representative, who declared the Panama Canal traffic presented "international aspects."

GERMAN SAUSAGE, KIND FED TO WORKERS, KILLS BERLIN ELEPHANT

BERLIN, Germany, May 19.—German sausage, the kind that is sold to workers by the millions of pounds, caused the death of Mampe, an African elephant, which was given to the Berlin zoo a few months ago. Mampe died from stomach trouble after a week's illness, caused, the veterinarians said, by the meat given it by some child.

Bad Day For Capitalism When Women Are Put in Trenches of Next War

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, an admiring capitalist world lauds the energetic preparations for war being frantically urged by Mussolini, the fascist dictator over Italy. Even the sending of women into the trenches to die for the Italian "fatherland" draws enthusiastic applause.

• • • •

All military dictators have pursued the successful strategy of launching victorious wars abroad, if they could, in order to assuage discontent at home. Sometimes these wars are not successful. Then there is another story. The military junta in Spain has not met with much success against the Moors in Africa. These same Moors are now giving much trouble to the French. If their triumphs are continued Italy may also be faced with another war in northern Africa. Italy has also a big interest in the restless Balkans. It is easy to start a fight. Fascist Italy needs to get into a fight to keep alive a little longer.

For this purpose Mussolini has reorganized the Italian high command to secure a centralized control of both army and navy. His argument before the Italian senate was as follows:

> "The world situation renders it urgent that no time be lost and I do not wish to shoulder the responsibility before other nations for being unprepared should there be possible clashes."

The cabled reports state that thereupon, "The senate promptly passed the bill." Italy prepares for the next war.

• • • •

Mussolini gave the suffrage to women and at the same time prepared for calling women to the colors. Mussolini declares that giving the suffrage to women doesn't make any difference, either way. It only adds a new host of voters to the electorate. No doubt he thinks the same way about putting women into the trenches, believing that it is a good way to add to his available quantity of cannon fodder. Mussolini is wrong in both instances.

• • • •

Granting suffrage to women may even prove a temporary ally of reaction. Class instinct dictates the voting of women as well as of men. Where class-consciousness does not exist to any very great extent, where the great masses of men workers vote to continue capitalism, there it can be depended on that the women of the working class will also give their ballot support to capitalism.

But the drawing of women into the electoral struggle awakens their interest in public questions, draws them out of their natural conservatism, so that when they become conscious of their class interests, they will develop, like the men, into able proletarian fighters.

Similarly with the question of drawing women into the trenches. The New York Times says this will only happen when, "the nation's back is against the wall." But if Mussolini wants to try out his experiment successfully he had better put it over under cover of the first wave of jingoism that can be lashed into patriotic fury during the early days of "the next war." Women, no less than men, will prove poor soldiers for a capitalist nation in the hour of its crushing defeat. In fact, women may even become the most furious seekers of vengeance against the capitalist system that has thrown them into worse torture pits than were ever know to hell—the human slaughter house on earth. For the women who will be sent into the trenches will be the women of the working class.

Thus in the hour of revolution, whether in Italy or elsewhere, the capitalist rulers would be faced with an armed working class, not only of men, but also of women, both knowing how to use arms. They will use them on the side of their class. Placing ballots and guns in the hands of women may look innocent at first sight. But in time it will help lift the women of the working class to the side of their fathers, brothers and husbands in the struggle for the ending of capitalism.

THE British cabinet is worried over the advance of Communism in Great Britain. It is considering the advisability of refusing all Communists permission to enter the country. The Communist Party of Great Britain will hold its annual convention at the end of this month. The British ruling class believes it can stop the spread of Communism by repression. It cannot. Ideas can neither be imprisoned nor deported.

ALL those who have teeth prepare to shed them now. But in shedding your grinders don't make the mistake of leaving them in the possession of your dentist who may auction them off to the manufacturers of dice. A missing molar may stand between you and canonization. But for a molar held in trust by his housemaid, the late Pope Pius X, might have as little chance of getting canonized as Billy Sunday.

IT appears that there is a regular open season on canonizations in Rome just now. The vatican needs the money and any respectable country will willingly pay a couple of million lires for the publicity accruing to it from the canonization of one of its sons or daughters particularly if said son or daughter had previously been slaughtered on a charge of heresy. Only a few days ago a French nun was canonized. She died unhonored and unsung and accomplished nothing remarkable unless, it was that she passed away without a love affair, something miraculous in France even for a nun.

POPE PIUS is now about to be amalgamated with his tooth. It seems the boon of canonization cannot be conferred on an incomplete soul. Therefore, all the dead pope's affiliations will be gathered unto him even unto the last toe nail. A committee was appointed to look into the pope's past, particularly into his night life. This committee is particularly anxious to learn if the defendant saw visions, had dreams, worked miracles, or had divine inspiration. Mostly everybody who has eaten a smoked herring and drank coffee before retiring did those things. It should not be difficult to find an excuse for canonizing the deceased pope.

THE following irreverent headline hits the eyes: "'Faith' Failure as provider, Wife Sues." This is the story of a husband who refused to provide for his wife on the ground that God would take care of her creative needs. God didn't and the wife is now telling it to the judge. The husband may be a candidate for canonization. He certainly is not wanting in faith.

'SPEED-UP' FORD NOW FINANCIER ON WALL STREET

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

NEW YORK, May 19.—Thru the organisation of the Guardian Detroit company with offices at 120 Broadway, Henry Ford has taken his first step in the invasion of the banking field in Wall Street, and he eventually will compete on a large scale with existing Wall Street banking institutions.

This is the view of Wall Street leaders today, who are watching with interest the first evidences of the actual entry of the Fords into the New York banking field.

The announced purpose of the newly Guardian Detroit company is to sell bonds, but it is generally believed in Wall Street that the Fords have a much more ambitious program.

Ford has always been at variance with American bankers on one important point, which is, the rate of interest charged on loans to industrial concerns, particularly to his own concern. He has also plainly stated that bankers were too exacting in the nature of the security demanded.

Workers Face Death Going to Jobs in New York Subway

NEW YORK, May 19.—Scores of passengers suffered minor injuries and pandemonium reigned in the interborough subway during the rush hour today when a short circuit stalled a train rounding a curve approaching Lexington avenue and thirty-fourth street.

Lights went out, the crowded train became filled with acrid fumes, and a serious panic was narrowly averted as men and women broke windows and doors in frightened efforts to escape from the train.

The fumes were caused by burning insulation. Women screamed and collapsed and men broke glass windows and doors with their fists.

Despite the efforts of guards, many of the panic-stricken passengers clambered out thru the windows and made their way thru the smoke filled tunnel to the street. Many of them fainted after reaching the air, and the vicinity of the Vanderbilt Hotel resembled a miniature war zone. Clanging ambulances, police reserves and fire apparatus increased the confusion and appearance of disaster.

Doctors and internes summoned from nearby hospitals treated dozens for smoke suffocation and minor injuries.

A short circuit came at a time when downtown trains were filled with office workers. The accident tied up the entire line and thousands were late for work.

Chicago Park to Get Improvement

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 19.—The two Lincoln Park, Chicago, bond issues were officially authorised today when Governor Len Small allowed the bills providing for them to become laws without his signature.

One provides a bond issue of $8,000,000 to pay half the cost of constructing a bridge across the Chicago river and carries a referendum. The second provides for a bond issue of $4,000,000 for improvement and extensioon of Lincoln Park. Governor Small did not act on the bills within the limit of ten days and they automatically became laws.

The house killed the Thompson traction ordinance after 15 minutes of heated battling. The house committee on public utilities reported it without recommendations.

At the same time the committee favorably reported in O'Grady's joint resolution providing for a commission of 15 members to investigate the Chicago traction problem. O'Grady asked that a vote on the resolution be held over until Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, May 19—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur today ordered a court martial for the three ranking officers of the submarine S-19 which went aground Jan. 15 off Nauset, Mass., while enroute from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to New London, Conn.

They are to be tried for "negligence and inefficiency."

WASHINGTON, May 19—During the month of April, 90,000 acres of public land in Colorado and Utah were classified as areas valuable for power sites.

GREEN, A. F. OF L. HEAD, AND U. S. COMMERCE CHIEF CONFESS JOINTLY CONDITIONS IN COAL FIELDS "BAD!"

By LAURENCE TODD

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Conditions in the bituminous coal industry in this country are bad, and in the Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Central Pennsylvania fields, where the miners are organised, the situation is especially bad.

This is the report issued by C. P. White, chief of the coal division in the department of commerce. President Green of the American Federation of Labor, formerly secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, agrees that White has not over-stated the seriousness of the crisis.

Nonunion fields are not doing very well, but employment is better there than in union territory. Of course, White does not charge the owners of unionized mines with a conspiracy to break the union agreement by a starvation process. He merely recites coal facts.

Big Mines Close.

In the report for Illinois he says: "The developments of April in the Illinois coal industry have not only fallen substantially below the operators' hopes, but have likewise failed to meet carefully calculated expectations, even built up as they were on what was, by common consent, a very likely pessimistic attitude. . . . Among the mines closing are some whose normal daily output ranges from 3,000 to 5,000 tons. . . It is no secret that coal has been available from practically every producing field in the United States, at or below production cost. . . The labor situation is likewise unchanged except as affected by the increase in idle men from the additional mines closed and closing."

Indiana's report shows that with a productive capacity of about 2,500,000 tons a month, the state produced in April only 1,000,000 tons, of which 200,000 came from strip mines, mines using loading machines and mines working on the co-operative plan. Other mines were to be closed April 30.

Pittsburgh Contracts Not Renewed.

From Pittsburgh No. 8 district, Ohio, came the report that, "Many contracts expiring March 31 were not renewed," resulting in the closing of mines. Out of 140 mines in that field, only 50 are operating, and many of these only one or two days per week. In the central Ohio field, only five out of 30 mines were expected to operate this summer. In the southern Ohio field production was estimated at 13 to 15 per cent of normal.

"Production in the central Pennsylvania district continues to decline at an alarming rate," says White. On April 16 the mines of the Northwestern Mining & Exchange Co., a subsidiary of the Erie railroad, were closed down indefinitely. About 1,300 union miners were thrown out of employment, making a total of more than 25,000 union miners idle in the district. The Berwind-White Coal Mining Co. reduced wages of their employes approximately 20 per cent, effective April 8. This company operates mines at Windber and Houtzdale, and tho it has never recognized the Miners' Union it has always paid approximately the union scale. To insure steady employment the miners accepted the reduction in good grace and the mines have been operating regularly."

U. S. Has Big Mining Capacity.

In West Virginia, on the other hand, production is heavy. The Logan district, nonunion, reports "work plentiful." The northern West Virginia district, in which the U. M. W. A. called a strike at non-union mines on April 1, reports tonnage of 280,250 for nonunion mines for the week ending March 28, 221,350 for the week ending April 4, 231,300 the next week, 227,250 the third week and 264,800 tons the fourth week of the strike. The Kanawha district reports a "steady increase in production" in April, and denied rumors of a strike.

All of these statements point to the shifting of the soft coal industry to southern fields which as yet are largely nonunion. While unionized mines are closed down, nonunion mines farther south are developed, altho the total mining capacity of the United States is 30 per cent beyond its needs.

FAKER FAGAN TRIES NEW ONE IN DISTRICT 5

Charleroi Local 4546 Repudiates Bunk

CHARLERIO, Pa.—The miners of District 5, United Mine Workers of America, are having a continuous and bitter battle with their officials against the expulsions of sincere and militant members who fight the combine of fakers and operators and who have exposed the graft of the chief officers of the district.

At a recent meeting Local No. 4546 at Charleroi passed the following motion concerning the latest trick of the bureaucratic officials. It reads:

To the Officers and Members of all local unions of the United Mine Workers of America:

"WHEREAS, it has come to our notice by reading the United Mine Workers' Journal issue of April 15, 1925, wherein a resolution purporting to come from L. U. 2363, Mollenauer, Pa., and which in reality is Castle Shannon, Pa., and, by the way, is President P. T. Fagan's own local union, wherein said resolution praises the district officials for their untiring and splendid efforts in behalf of the U. M. W. of A. in District No. 5 and for the splendid service rendered our members who were involved in the Cliftonville march. And

"WHEREAS, there was also embodied in said resolution condemnation of W. A. Guiler and his associates for creating discord and dissatisfaction, and branded Brother Guiler and his associates as disruptionists in the ranks of our members. Therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, that Local Union No. 4546 U. M. W. of A. located at Charleroi, Pa., District No. 5 desire to place ourselves on record in branding statements printed in United Mine Workers' Journal issue of April 15, 1925 and said to have been adopted by Local Union 2363 as false and misleading. Brother Guiler and his associates are not members of Local Union No. 4546 but we have known them for many years and we know of the sacrifices they have made in behalf of organised labor and the tremendous obstacles that they have been confronted with, both from the coal operators and the miners' officials. We deem it a pleasure at this time to contradict the lying statements embodied in resolution from P. T. Fagan's local union and to give credit where it is due and we will not permit any members of our union to be crucified in such a dishonest manner. And be it further

"RESOLVED, that any further lying statement emanating from any official or from any of their reactionary following will be contradicted just as we have contradicted this attack on progressive miners of District No. 5. And that copies of this resolution be sent to Thos. Kennedy to be printed in Mine Workers' Journal and to Mon City Labor Journal and to all labor papers that publicity committee deem necessary."

CIRCULATE PETITIONS IN FIGHT FOR UNSEATED DELEGATES IN THE SEATTLE CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL

Seattle, Wash.—(By Mail)—The following is the form of petition circulated among the trade unionists of Seattle by the illegally unseated delegates to the Central Labor Council. Every one of these delegates have been re-elected to the council by their local unions, but are still denied their seats.

It is expected that between 5,000 and 10,000 members of the Seattle unions will sign the following pledge of support to these workers who were unjustly deprived of the right of political opinion, and the right of the locals to choose their council delegates.

To the membership of organized labor in the city of Seattle:

"Greetings:—On Wednesday, March 25, a report was made by the strike and grievance committee to the C. L. C. This report was made in connection with the charges that had been made against six delegates to the Seattle Central Labor Council, for holding membership in the Workers Party of America. On roll call the report of the strike and grievance committee was adopted by a vote of 78 to 71.

"According to Roberts rules of order, which is supposed to govern in the C. L. C., a two-thirds vote is necessary in order to expel a delegate from that body. In violation of this rule the president of the council held that these six delegates were expelled by a vote that was previously taken when a resolution by the Building Trades Council was concurred in by a vote of 93 to 33, when, in fact, this resolution was adopted for the purpose of giving the delegates a trial.

"If the ruling of the president of the council goes unchallenged, it means that six tried and true unionists were expelled by the vote which was intended to be a vote on whether the delegates should or should not be tried.

"If it be contended by the president of the council, that the trial took place on the night of March 25, it then follows that the vote taken on that night clearly does not expel these delegates. In order, therefore, to make no mistake in getting these delegates expelled, the president of the council was forced to rule that the vote taken on March 25 did not expel them, but the one taken previously did expel them.

"We ask, why were we taken thru the form of a trial on the night of March 25, if we were expelled by the vote previously taken in the resolution by the Building Trades Council, concurred in by the Seattle Labor Council?

Right of Free Political Opinion

"This discrimination against members on account of their political opinions is contrary to all the traditions of organized labor, and denies the right of every member to form his own political ideas. The pledge taken by delegates on joining their respective unions, one of which is directly chartered by the A. F. of L., specifically states that no discrimination shall be made against members because of their political or religious beliefs.

"We, the undersigned, expelled delegates, appeal to every trade unionist in the city of Seattle to sign this petition as a protest against such autocratic and disruptive procedure in the labor movement.

"Paul Mohr, Bakers Local No. 9; M. Hansen, Painters Local No. 300; William H. Jones, Painters Local No. 300; Joe Havel, Bookkeepers and Stenographers Local; H. G. Price, Machinist Hope Lodge No. 79; J. C. Carlson, Shipwright Local 1184."

"We, the undersigned members of organized labor, in good standing in the city of Seattle, hereby register our protest against the expulsion of the six delegates from the C. L. C., and we pledge them our full support in their effort to be reinstated; and the right of members to hold political opinions is vindicated."

JAP LABOR PARTY LEADER VISITING GREAT BRITAIN

Will Function Like German S. D.

LONDON, May 19.—Kagawa Toyohiko, a labor leader of Kobe, Japan, arrived in London recently to study the workings of the British labor party in Japan.

Toyohiko said the socialist and labor leaders of Japan had combined in efforts to further the movement, and that while the Japanese labor party would be modeled after the British system, it would function in some ways along the lines of the social-democratic party of Germany.

The new Japanese labor party will include, necessarily, members of the Japanese Federation of Labor and the socialist movement, the Japanese Fabian society, consisting of a small group of students and professors, and peasants' union

It is quite likely, in the opinion of Mr. Toyohiko, that the party will also include a certain number of liberal members belonging at present to the government and opposition parties.

LOS ANGELES UNION OFFICIALS BRAZENLY IGNORE CONSTITUTION IN EXPELLING LOCAL DELEGATE

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 19.—As was to have been expected after the expulsion of F. W. Kaplan from the Central Labor Council on the charge of being a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, a communication reached the Office Employes' Union of Los Angeles at its last meeting demanding his expulsion from his local.

The letter was sent by the Central Labor Council and signed by John S. Horn, its reactionary republican secretary. The communication, after stating the expulsion "charge," asked the local to send a delegate in place of Kaplan and specifically stipulated that if Brother Kaplan was not expelled immediately from the Office Employes Union, the charter of the local would be taken away.

Despite a bitter fight in the local against letting the matter slide smoothly thru and in favor of a resolution of protest against the unconstitutional expulsion, the request of the Central Labor Council was passed by a vote of thirteen to six.

Brazenly Illegal Expulsion

In his remarks against expulsion from the union, Brother Kaplan proved conclusively that he had not been expelled constitutionally from the council. He read the constitution of the council bearing on expulsion charges and the manner in which a delegate or a union may be expelled or suspended from the Central Labor Council.

This constitution, which has never been changed, provides that charges in writing be placed against the delegates and a special meeting of the council be called, the members notified and the defendant be given an opportunity with the aid of counsel to defend himself. A verdict must first be brought in by a committee investigating the charges before the general body can deal with the matter.

Will Carry Appeal to Rank and File

Contrary to these provisions of the constitution, the expulsion of Brother Kaplan was railroaded thru within a hour and he was given practically no opportunity to defend himself. The expulsion of Brother Kaplan from the Office Employes Union at their last meeting marks another milestone in the reactionary policies of the labor fakers of this city.

Brother Kaplan is now taking the matter up with the local unions thru communications and personal appeals and is demanding that he be given an opportunity to defend himself and he rightfully contends that the mere charge of being a member of the Communist Party is not sufficient for expulsion, he having done nothing which might be construed as being against the interest of the labor movement.

Sees Future Vindication

When requested to leave the room of the Office Employes Union after his expulsion, Brother Kaplan stated that he was glad that his activity in the labor movement had proven of such an unsatisfactory nature to the Central Labor Council officials, and contrary to the cowardly attitude of some delegates who maintained an attitude of silence, he would rather be expelled than sit and give silent consent to the actions of the labor fakers.

He further stated he feels the time is approaching when he and those who had been expelled before him, would return to the labor unions from which they had been expelled, and would be recognized and welcomed as the unions' most ardent supporters.

SAYS SHIPPING BOARD IS "FAIR"

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Private ownership of merchant ships means, in general, the open shop, while government ownership, administered by the U. S. shipping board, means collective bargaining, says the official journal of the marine engineers. It was the marine engineers who started the strike of 1921 against the board when it announced a 15 per cent reduction in wages.

"The labor relations of the private owners may be summed up in the statement of one of their managers—'We will recognize the unions when they are strong enough to compel us'"—says an official of the union in reviewing their present state. .."Open shop is the rule where it is feasible. The shipping board enters into agreements with the unions thru collective bargaining."

CAPITALIST COURT RULES IN UNION ROW

Carpenters and Metal Workers Both Lose

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 19.—The United States circuit court of appeals last Friday, in its decision affirming Federal Judge Westenhaver's ruling in the suit brought by the General Metal Products company of Canton, Ohio, against the Sheet Metal Workers Union in 1922, is claimed by the open shop campaign leaders to have outlawed all sympathetic strikes of the sheet metal workers and their affiliated organizations in the building trades.

From Jurisdictional War

The dispute arose between the Sheet Metal Workers Union and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners on the setting of metal trim, and has split the building trades group into two hostile camps. The horrible example of this jurisdictional war between unions, has been frequently and correctly pointed out as ruinous to labor unity by the Trade Union Educational League in its campaign for amalgamation of all building trades craft unions into an industrial union.

The present decision was rendered by Circuit Judges Dennison, Donahue and Mack. The case directly arose from the so-called "City Hospital case" and involved the question of the "open shop" manufacturers on one side and the Building Trades Union, the Association of General Contractors and the National Architects Association on the other.

But the ruin to the unions was far-reaching. The carpenters were expelled from the building trades department of the A. F. of L. and are still at war with the sheet metal workers.

Company First Wanted Scabs

The Central Metal Products company of Canton has a $300,000 contract to install doors in the city hospital. The metal workers demanded the right to hang the metal trim doors and to unionize the factory making them. The company declared it should use "open shop" labor on the metal trim. Then they receded from that, but still would not use sheet metal unionists.

Finally, the company hired union carpenters to hang the metal trim doors and the sheet metal workers struck against the whole building and tied up the work on heating and ventilating.

Same Open Shop Lawyer as Against Hatters

The injunction was fought thru by the same attorneys as fought the union in the Danbury Hatters case. In 1923 Judge Westenhaver declared that the strike by the Sheet Metal Workers Union was unlawful as interference by a third party and that the contractor should go ahead and hire either scabs of union carpenters as it saw fit. He also declared unlawful the strike against the sub-contractors.

Both Unions Loose—Open Shop Wins

The Sheet Metal Workers Union appealed the decision and the carpenters union is now sanctified by a capitalist court in its scabbing on the sheet metal workers. The both unions, however, have been weakened by the struggle, and the only victor is the open shop "American plan."

Master Painters Give in to Union After a Fight for Open Shop

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Now it is the master painters' association, falling into line with the master plumbers and master steamfitters, who have agreed to a raise of 50 cents a day in the wages of union workers in the capital city. Five weeks of strike have been enough for the painters' bosses. The painters' union has called a mass meeting to consider acceptance of this compromise of their demand that the wage be raised from $9 to $10 a day.

Because the master painters have abandoned their pledge to the real estate and building ring, that there would be no increase in building wages of any kind, the operative builders have cut off all communication with the master painters. The anti-union drive has thus broken down on two fronts, and is considered to be virtually ended.

"DEMAND TABULATED REPORT," SAYS APPEAL TO COAL MINERS; STATES VOYZEY WON ELECTI

By ALEX REID

The silence of the Egyptian Sphinx is deafening in comparison to of the house of John L. and his co-conspirator Farrington in the latest national constitution violation. A violation which proves greater than words the accepted belief of hundreds of thousands of miners that J L. Lewis was beaten by Voyzey for the international presidency in the election of the U. M. W. of America.

Proof that Voyzey Beat Lewis

Approximately 70,000 votes given to Voyzey out of 155,000 votes by the Lewis machine with the Lewis gang counting the totals in Indianapolis, with the doctoring of sub-district and local votes thruout the U. M. W. of A., with the suspected voting of hunderds of blue sky locals, locals that were not or are not in existence coupled with the refusal of the international office to send to each local union the tabulated return of the vote of the organization of the miners, proves to hundreds of thousands of miners, that Lewis is holding office illegally.

The execuse that the treasury was not in a condition to warrant the expenditure is shown to be false by the fact that a short tune previously Wm. Green, international secretary treasurer, stated in Peoria that the treasury was in a healthy condition; and coupled with that, the fact the president with the international board has the right to assess the whole membership any amount for legitimate purposes and in this case 4 cents per member would have covered the bill.

In view of the further fact that Lewis with his board immediately following the election did tax the membership $2.00 and did not use any of it for the above purposes, is taken to show that Lewis, "in panic" has taken the unprecedented action of deliberately tearing the constitution asunder to hold himself in the office, which the miners by virtue of their last votes have kicked him out of.

No articles, statements or excuses are appearing in the Miners' Journal in this connection. A campaign of silence is being carried out, and the constitution and the miners can go to hell when the same interferes with the office salary and expense account of the bureaucracy.

This instance only proves again what the progressive miners have continually driven home, that the labor fakers are in the U. M. W. of A. exclusively for their own benefit and would rather wreck it than permit themselves to be removed from the payroll.

Farrington and Lewis Combined

True to his canary color, Farrington has enshrouded himself with the stillness of King Tut's tomb. This latest outrage does not concern him, his personal publication, The Illinois Miner likewise is silent. Tongue and pen paralysis has at once overtaken the family and a strange hush has spread itself over the office of Judas.

At the present time, Farrington and Lewis have joined hands in a constitution busting campaign. Farrington in spite of the law has removed Thompson and J. Watt from office, and in return for his silence on the Lewis outrage mentioned above, in like manner receives the Lewis, and Lewis journal's support by ignoring the outrage in District 12.

Now Allied to "A Louse"

Only yesterday it was that Farrington notified Lewis he had the soul of a louse, that he was a constitution buster and disgrace to the union and Lewis replied in kind.

But it is noticeable this wrangling is gone, they have made up, and with the aid of the other fakers of the miners' union, coupled with that of Green now of the federation, with Hutchinson, Johnston, et al, a solid united front of fakirism is b into line against the militant w of all unions in the effort to p tuate themselves in office.

They feel this can only be done the expulsion of the militant w from the unions, the destruction progressive ideas and with the ance of the class collaboration p

Revolt of Rank and File Amazes Fakers

In the breast of the fakers th panic, because the last election conclusively that the militant repudiate their class collabo spurn and scorn their "labor" ing, insurance, "B. and O." and educational schemes, to enslave toilers.

And we miners say to you Le Farrington, Cappellinis et al. have finished with you and your go to your banks, insurance off It is more comfortable there than suing the lines of the class strug and leading fighting miners and w ers is no place for bank president insurance agents.

MUSSOLINI ARMY MOVE CREATES ONE-MAN RULER

War Force in Hands of Chief of Staff

ROME, Italy, May 19. — Premier Mussolini's army bill, placing the entire army, navy and marine forces under the dictatorship of the head of the army general staff, was passed in the senate today by a vote of 160 to 28. Admiral Thaon di Revel opposed the measure, not on the grounds that it tightens the dictatorship of the fascist troops, but that the navy officers should be allowed some control.

Mussolini, in a speech supporting the bill, said that any invasino of Italy would come from either the western peoples, the Germans or the Slavs. He advocated further militarization of the country in preparation "for the next world war."

Swedish Exporters Express Pleasure with Soviet Orders

MOSCOW, May 19—As reported from Stockholm, the Association of Swedish Exporters remarks, in its yearly report, the growth of Soviet business orders in connection with the conclusion of a treaty of commerce and, at the same time, the restoration of mutual normal relations between the Union of Soviet Republics and Sweden.

The sum total of such orders reached 18 million Swedish crowns in 1924, as against only 6.5 million, crowns in 1923; besides, there are the orders for locomotives, that are not included in the above sum. Most of the Soviet orders are for electrical machines, separators, agricultural machinery, paper, celluloid, etc.

The Swedish imports from the Union were also on the increase in the year under review.

Gen. Miles Was Hero of Strikebreakers in 1894 Railway Strike

The death at a Washington circus of Gen. Nelson A. Miles recalls to veteran Chicago labor men his unsavory role in the 1894 railway strike of the American Railway union. This strike, which was led by Eugene V. Debs, and for which Debs served a prison term, was crushed by Miles, whom Pres. Cleveland put in military charge in Chicago.

Though Cleveland's investigating commission later reported "no evidence that the officers of the American Railway union at any time participated in or advised intimidation, violence or destruction of property," Miles bombastically proclaimed, "We have broken, in my opinion, the backbone of the opposition to the federal government."

The senile militarist achieved his last national notoriety when he denounced LaFolette, candidate of small capitalists in the 1924 presidential campaign as a violent revolutionist.

Great Interest Shown in Soviet Pavilion at Lyons Fair This Year

MOSCOW,— (By Mail) —Makovetzky, chairman of the Northwestern Regional delegation to the Lyons Fair, stated upon his return here that an immense interest was displayed at the fair for the Soviet pavilion. While the number of visitors to the pavilion at the preceding Lyons Fair (1923) had been 100,000, this year it ran up to over 150,000.

The last Lyons Fair, the Soviet delegate concluded has given the broad commercial circles the possibility to draw a parallel between the year 1923 and the current one and be satisfied of the great improvement of the economic situation of the Union and its general progress during the specified period.

Chicago Flat Janitors Hold Strong Union in Spite of Rent Robbers

Sectional meetings of Flat Janitors Local 1 are increasing the organization strength of the union which is as powerful in Chicago as it is weak in New York. Its principal foes have been the Chicago real estate board and the state's attorney who has vainly tried by various prosecutions to break its power and increase the swollen profits of apartment house landlords.

ROUMANIA FAILS TO PIT NATIONS AGAINST RUSSIA

Attempt to Open Dispute on Bessarabia Falls Flat

MOSCOW.—(By Mail.)—The Vienna correspondent of the Rosta news agency reports that, after a certain lull, the so-called Bessarabian question is again in the center of the political interests of Roumania. The Roumanian government is carrying on energetic propaganda in foreign countries in an effort to induce Italy and Japan to ratify the Bessarabian protocol (by which the powers recognized the Roumanian annexation of Bessarabia).

However, a considerable part of the press is rather indifferent to this issue, with the exception, naturally, of some chauvinistic organs that pretend to believe that the present moment is an opportune one for the realization of Roumania's ambitious plans. The more reasonable and the moderate papers are beginning to veer round and counsels of reason are ever more frequently heard from their columns. These papers point out that not only is it highly improbable that Italy and Japan would be prone to spoil their relations of friendliness with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics by an action quite unnecessary from the viewpoint of their own interests, but that the further insistence of Roumania on this point may well bring discredit on her own government.

MASTER POURS OVER NEW YORK HERALD AND SNEERS AT REDS WHILE SLAVE SCRUBS FLOORS

"MR. BROIDIN is more than one hundred per cent American. He detests catholics, Jews. He has a burning hatred for radicals. Together with Weeks and General Pershing he is of the opinion that the pacifists were just as destructive as the Bolshevists. The measures taken by the government for getting rid of the red menace he considered as nothing less than right. The only thing he reads are the headlines in the local papers and the New York Herald."

Who is Mr. Broidin? He is the boss—the master.

"The work was not so simple as Nickles had imagined. He had to be on his feet at six o'clock in the morning to light the kitchen fire. He stood in close relation to the dishes—for he had to wash all those dishes. He had to polish the knives and sweep the carpets, and wash the floors. When it was about time to go to eat Nickles was dead tired. He thot again and again of how, outwardly, the liveried lackeys and servants in dress coats looked like idlers, but in reality they have to drudge just as bitterly."

Nickles?—Nickles is the worker—the slave.

These are but two of the interesting characters in the new novel of the proletarian artist, John Lassen, editor of the Communist Hungarian newspaper, Uj Elore. Read the third installment of "Masters and Slaves," a story of the working class, in next Saturday's magazine section of the DAILY WORKER.

BULGARIAN FASCISTS LEGALIZE MURDER OF WORKERS WITH DECREE OF DEATH TO ZANKOV'S OPPONENTS

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 19.—The act under which many Bulgarian Communists have been murdered by the Zankov government, is printed below. The act, issued in March by Premier Zankov, with the approval of King Boris, makes it a crime to believe in a change in the form of government, or "justify" any person who believes in such a change. Any worker being "hostile" to the present form of government, is to be punished, in some cases by death.

The decree offers immunity to any worker who betrays his comrades. The wording reminds one of some of the state anti-syndicalist laws in the United States. Some of the clauses in the order of Zankov follow:

Article 1. All kinds of organizations, groups, or their subdivisions which preach or incite a violent change of the government and social order established by the constitution, or advocate violent seizure of power, or in order to attain such ends wish to make use of crime, violence, or terrorism, are prohibited. Likewise those organizations or groups which with money or by other means aid the above-mentioned organizations or groups are forbidden.

Article 2. Those who create organizations, groups or their subdivisions mentioned in Article 1 of this act or become members of such organizations, groups, or their subdivisions will be punished; the founders and organizers by strict imprisonment of not less than ten years and a fine of 50,000 to 200,000 levs.

Article 5. The members of organizations, groups, or their subdivisions mentioned in Articles 1 and 2 of this act, as well as persons who have aided such organizations in the manner described in Articles 3 and 4 are freed from punishment if they inform the authorities of the existence of said organizations or the names of members of such organizations.

Article 6. Whoever by speech, letter, or by publication carries on propaganda with the purpose of changing the political or economic structure of the government by means of crime, violence, or terrorist acts will be punished by strict imprisonment for not less than five years, and a fine of from 50,000 to 500,000 levs.

Article 7. Whoever by speech, writing, or by printed, illustrated, or other publication incites hostility, hatred, or crime against separate classes of the population, or against the established authorities, and thereby endangers the public and legal order of the country will be punished by strict imprisonment of from three to eight years and a fine of from 50,000 to 300,000 levs...

Article 10. All printed and other publications mentioned in Articles 6 and 7 of this act will be seized by order of the prosecutor. Until the issuing of such order the police may take all measures to stop the circulation of said work. Simultaneously with the taking of these measures the police will notify the prosecutor. With the issuing of the order for seizure, criminal proceedings are thereby started against the guilty person.

Article 16. If an organization or grup resorts to riots, insurrections, terrorist activities, murders, or other crimes in order to attain its ends it will be punished as flolows: The instigators, organizers, chief leaders and executors, by death; the remaining members by strict imprisonment of not less than ten years; and all by a fine of from 200,000 to 500,000 levs...

Article 18. Whoever is aware that any of the criminal activities mentioned in this act are being planned and does not report that fact to the authorities will be punished by imprisonment. Moreover, he who conceals, or assists in the escape of a person whom he knows, or by the circumstances is presumed to know, has committed any of the criminal deeds mentioned in this act, with the exception of Article 13, will be punished by strict imprisonment up to five years, and a fine of 20,000 to 100,000 levs. This regulation is not applied to the descendents, ancestors, brothers, or sisters of the concealed person.

Article 19. Whoever, in the manner provided by Article 6 of this act, preaches, justifies, approves, or extols the formation of organizations, groups or their subdivisions mentioned in Article 1 or again justifies, approves, or extols the carrying out of any of the acts mentioned in the foregoing articles will be punished by strict imprisonment of from three to ten years and a fine of 20,000 to 300,000 levs.

Article 20. Whoever is a member of organizations, groups, or their subdivisions prohibited by this Act as well as one who is a believer in Communistic, anarchistic, or violent methods of social and political change may occupy no governmental, district, or municipal office, or be a member of the national assembly, or of any self-governing body. If such person already occupies a governmental, district, or municipal office he is to be dismissed. If he is chosen as national representative, district or municipal councilor, or school trustee he loses thereby his mandate. These decisions are made by Parliament in the case of national representatives; for the district and municipal councilors and school trustees by the district court. The immediate superior who consciously appoints or retains in service such person will be punished according to Article 443 of the penal code...

ROBBER LEAGUE OPENS CONGRESS AGAINST LABOR

Try to Pacify Workers with Statistics Barrage

GENEVA, May 19.—The seventh annual international convention of the international labor bureau of the league of nations, formed by the capitalist governments to bring international pressure against the workers who demand a higher standard of living, opened here with Edward Benes, foreign minister of the Czecho-Slovakian government, as the elected president.

The labor bureau was first formed "to establish laws tending to harmonize labor and capital." It was established at the close of the war in an effort to stem the tide of revolution which began to sweep over the workers of Europe at that time.

The bureau has nothing to its credit but a mass of voluminous reports on labor conditions in various countries, which are merely a compilation of statistics already gathered in those countries.

Forty governments of the 45 belonging to the league of nations have sent delegates. Great Britain has sent 25 delegates, and the Japanese government eleven. Argentina has seven The United States government is not represented.

A Little Example of What Marx Meant by Capitalist Robbery

MONTREAL, May 19.—The flour milling industry of Canada has vastly increased production while relatively reducing employment. The gross value of the product of Canada's flour mills is nearly five times greater than 45 years ago; but only 500 or 600 more persons are directly employed now.

In 1922, 6,757 employes turned out a gross value of $166,881,000. The gross value per employe was over $25,000; the net value was $4,500. Salaried workers received in 1922 an average of $1,700, wage workers just under $1,000.

If the employes spent all their earnings on flour they could buy back at mill prices about 4½ per cent of the gross product, and 25 per cent of the net product.

MEMBERSHIP IN UNION FALLS OFF IN CANADA

TORONTO, Ont., Canada, May 19.—The 14th annual report on labor organization in Canada, for the year 1924, issued by the department of labor, shows a decline in membership from 270,092 in 1923, to 260,643 in 1924, and an also yearly decline since 1919, when the membership was 378,047.

On Down Grade.

The 2,429 local branch unions of all classes in the dominion are divided by provinces as follows: Ontario, 1,007; Quebec, 429 British Columbia, 236; Alberta, 217; Saskatchewan, 164; Manitoba, 133; Nova Scotia, 136; New Brunswick, 106; Prince Edward Island, 11. Of the eighteen non-international organizations four reported having made disbursements during 1924 for benefit purposes, the total expended being $33,027, a decrease of $9,208 as compared with 1923. Of the 89 international organizations operating in Canada, 60 made payments for one or more benefits, the combined disbursements amounting to $20,200,364, a sum $3,876,577 less than that spent in the previous year."

Disbursements Decline.

Besides the expenditures of the central organizations a statement is also published in the report showing the amounts disbursed in benefits by local branch unions in Canada to their own members. These payments, which totaled $358,902, were $25,693 in excess of those for 1923.

Juniors and Youth to Have a Meeting Sunday on Religion

Juniors and young workers of Chicago will hear how the capitalist uses god and his friends, the preachers, to advantage in keeping the workers in a state of subjection, at Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., at 10 a. m. Sunday May 24.

The speakers will be: A junior on capitalist religion in the public schools, a young worker on the business of religion, and a worker on religion, the opium of the people.

Scandinavian Branch at Kenosha.

A new branch of the Scandinavian section, Workers Party, was organized last Sunday, May 17, at Kenosha, Wis., by some members from the Lake View branch of Chicago.

The new branch received fourteen charter members. Officers were elected and as every member is young and energetic we expect a lot of propaganda work for our ideas. Well done, Comrades, John Malmberg.

FIGHT TO SAVE SEVERINO

diction of the federal courts and will be heard by a federal district judge of the northern district of Ohio. Decision will be made by the judge without a jury.

The workers of this country should observe in this case how the principles of the constitution are violated under pretense of defending and upholding that document.

Under the American constitution elections are held in which political differences are decided by the ballot. Severino has participated in elections ever since he has been a citizen. In 1922 and 1924 he was the candidate of the Workers Party for congress in the 22nd Ohio district. In 1923 he ran for city council and was in the field again in the recent councilmanic campaign, in the 4th district. But if because of his political views, Severino is to be deprived of citizenship, and thus of the right to be a candidate and a voter, the principle of political expression thru the ballot will be set aside in his case. If done in his case, it can also be done in the case of other foreign-born Communists; (and others active in the labor movement), thus preventing the Communists from exerting their political influence thru the ballot.

Whether the disfranchisement of Communists is completely carried out or not, the disfranchisement of some Communists is evidence that those who attack the Communists under the cloak of constitutionalism do not really believe in the efficacy of democratic government themselves, as they are not willing to leave the question of the right or wrong of the Communists to the decision of the ballot.

Why the Action Against Severino?

Of course, this is not done from any personal desire to place hardships upon Severino and his American-born wife and family. No; it is because of his political beliefs and his activities in the labor movement.

Severino is one of the thirty-one defendants in the so-called "Michigan case," which resulted from the department of justice raid on the Communist convention at Bridgeman, Mich., in August, 1922. William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg have been tried already in this case, on the charge of violation of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law. Foster's jury disagreed and Ruthenberg was convicted; his case now being before the U. S. supreme court on appeal.

Max Burger, department of justice agent, one of the "red specialists" in the Michigan case, has been active in the preparation of the case against Severino, for cancellation of citizenship. This is evidently very closely connected with the Michigan case, representing an effort to revoke citizenship preparatory to deportation proceedings, and thus insure action of some kind against Severino whether the Michigan courts find him guilty or not. The citizenship cancellation case also affords an opportunity to gain evidence to use later in the Michigan case. Such procedure works hardship on the defendant because the citizenship cases are in the federal courts, where the defendant lacks the advantage of a jury trial and other protection of his interests by the criminal court procedure.

Other Cases of Suppression.

The Michigan criminal syndicalism law is paralleled by similar laws in thirty-three other states. The Michigan law makes it a felony to advocate the doctrine of "criminal syndicalism," defined to be the "advocacy of crime, sabotage, violence, and other unlawful means of terrorism as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reform." It is a crime even to "assemble with," "any society, group or assemblage of persons formed to teach or advocate the doctrine of criminal syndicalism."

This law and the other similar ones are absolutely in violation of the constitutional guarantees of freedom of thought and expression, inasmuch as they do not apply to the commission of crime but only to the expression of opinions. Neither the Communist nor the trade union movement advocates the doctrines of criminal syndicalism, nevertheless these laws are used to prosecute Communists and they can be used against trades unionists in case of the slightest disorder during a strike, caused by the employers' guards and strikebreakers. These laws were a product of the anti-red hysteria of the period following the war, but the fact that they still remain on the books indicates a desire on the part of the captalists to use them against the workers when expedient.

Another form of suppression is the deportation of foreign-born (political "offenders") radicals. In the last nine months about seven thousand foreign-born workers have been deported on grounds of improper visas, likely to become a public charge, etc. Others have been proceeded against by the immigration bureau, including John Lassen, Emil Vatjauer, S. Zinich, editors of Workers Party papers in Hungarian, Czech and Croatian languages.

A deportation bill is now before the senate, having passed the house, providing that an alien convicted of one year's imprisonment shall be deported. The effort to introduce registration, finger-printing, photographing of foreign-born workers, is another line of oppressive action.

Support Foreign-Born.

The foreign-born workers are especialy subjected to exploitation by long hours and low wages, and it is but natural that a large percentage of workers active in the labor movement come from their ranks. Hence to suppress the active elements among the foreign-born is to place handicaps in the way of the whole labor movement. For the same reason all workers, native-born and foreign-born, must support those workers who are subjected to attack by criminal syndicalism laws, deportation proceedings, etc.

The policy of governmental suppression in these various ways is an accomplishment of the capitalist campaign of wage cuts, open shop drives, speeding up, reduction of force with resulting unemployment. The workers must be made to accept their lot as decided upon by the employers and to insure this it is necessary to suppress the radicals, the agitators, the leaders of the working class in their struggles to resist oppression and wring from the bosses better wages and improved conditions.

If the Communist receive especially severe treatment it is not primarily because they are Communists, but because their activity and influence and policies result in their being an especial hindrance in the way of the employers. Therefore all workers must defend and support the Communists in order to at the same time defend and support all active workers in the labor movement, whether Communists or not.

Long Labor Record.

Severino has belonged to the Bricklayers' ever his arrival in this country from Italy in 1909. He has been active in his union and has served it in various official capacities. He is vice-president of the City Co-operative Dairy Co. He is an advocate of amalgamation of the craft unions; of an aggressive policy on the part of the organized labor movement toward the employers, instead of the present general policy of conciliation and class collaboration; of an aggressive campaign to organize the unorganized; of independent political action by the working class and poor farmers. His activity and study of the labor movement have led him to the conclusion that Communism offers the only correct political guidance to the working class. All workers must support Severino in his fight to retain his citizenship papers, in order to protect the general interests of the working class.

Call For United Front.

Every labor organization should pass resolutions demanding the repeal of the criminal syndicalism laws; against the passage of oppressive citizenship for political reasons; against the passage of oppressive legislation against the foreign-born workers. Every organization and all unorganized workers should contribute to the expenses of the defense of Severino, the Michigan defendants, the brothers faced with deportation, and to the campaign for the repeal of the criminal syndicalism laws.

SOVIET TRADE WITH CANADA IS ON THE INCREASE

Flour.

The largest purchase of any commodity made was that of flour. The total sum involved was nineteen million dollars. The purchases were made partly in the early part of December and partly at the end of February. The first transaction was for 706,000 barrels totalling about six million dollars, and was made from the Maple Leaf Flour company, Ogilvie Flour Mills, Western Canada Flour Mills. The second purchase, totalling about 1,300,000 barrels, totalling about thirteen million dollars, was handled by the Maple Leaf Flour company exclusively. The financing of these purchases was negotiated thru United States banks. The milling companies were paid for the flour upon delivery. The banks, however, extended their credit to effect these payments and were, in return, reimbursed by the Soviet purchasers on arrival of the cargoes to a Soviet port. Several attempts were made to interest Canadian banks in the handling of these short credits, but negotiations did not reach any conclusion, and all of this financing was done in New York.

Agricultural Machinery.

So far from the many negotiations that were carried on with a number of Canadian manufacturers purchases have been made from Massey Harris company, Toronto. These include reapers, binders, grinders and various spare parts. The total purchases made so far amount to about $150,000. These purchases were made on credit terms, part of which is to extend to February, 1926.

The Massey Harris company have agreed to supply the U. S. S. R. with machinery for the season 1925 to the extent of $350,000. This sum, however, has not been fully utilized as the credit terms extended were not very advantageous. As is known, immense quantities of agricultural machinery can be used in the U. S. S. R. On the conditions of limited credit only a small fraction of the needed supplies can be purchased. The credits which the U. S. S. R. asked of Canadian manufacturers were a period to extent, at least over two harvests.

Regrettably these terms were not extended, and in turn the Soviet purchases did not utilise the full sum offered by Massey Harris. From conversations with banks here it is evident that discounting houses in Canada are not prepared to negotiate trade acceptances of Russian purchases. Needless to say, with proper credit facilities Canadian machinery purchases for the U. S. S. R. market would, for years to come, count into the millions.

Alluminum.

At the end of December a purchase was made from the Alluminum company, Shawinigan Falls, Que., covering 195 tons amounting to $100,000.

Zinc.

During April a purchase was made from the Consolidated Mining and Smelting company of Electrolytic zinc totalling 415 tons amounting to about $75,000.

Seeds.

There are a number of seed varieties which are not generally grown in the U. S. S. R., while in Canada they are widely adopted. Active experiments of varieties suitable for the U. S. S. R. are being carried on and a number fo seeds have been purchased in Canada. In February a purchase of seeds was made from the Steele Briggs Seed company totalling 90,000 tons, amounting to about $11,000.

Thru the assistance of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association a number of seed samples are being transmitted to the department of agriculture of the U. S. S. R. For the coming season the U. S. S. R. hope to be in a position to place representative orders for Canadian seed.

There seems to be an active interest in commodities originating in the U. S. S. R. for the Canadian market. From various correspondence which has been carried on with over a hundred firms considerable interest was developed in the following: Casings, alcohol, ply wood, rubbers, bristles, matches, horse hair, caviar, linens, handicraft toys, rugs.

Some of the attempts, however, to place somo of these commodities on the Canadian market have received a setback due to statutory customs obstacles.

Van Sweringen to Plead For Trust.

WASHINGTON, May 19.— O. P. Van Sweringen, the master mind who developed the ambitious plan to control five big railroads into a trust will come before the interstate commerce commission during the last week in May to explain the proposed merger, it was learned today.

Minority stockholders of the Chesapeake and Ohio and Hocking Valley railroads, two integral parts of the proposed system, have attempted to knock down the Van Sweringen plans on the grounds that they were not getting adequate compensation for their holdings in the merger plans.

To Action Comrades!

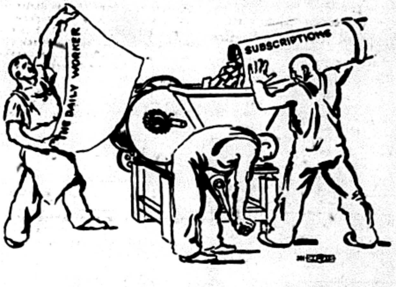
THE campaign to "Build the DAILY WORKER" is nearing the finnish. On June 15, your local—and your branch—will answer the roll as to whether or not it has done its Communist share of building the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party. You will answer also.

Will you be able to answer that you have filled your quota? It's an easy task to get at least two subs—and two subs from every Communist will fill the quota of your branch, your local—and it will double the circulation of "Our Daily".

A DAILY WORKER twice its present size will double the strength of the Communist movement—how seriously have you worked to do this much?

Getting a sub for the DAILY WORKER is the EASIEST task a member of the Communist Party can do.

In the Second Annual Sub Campaign



On Monday, May 18, the following comrades sent in new subs to show how easy it really is:

ANTI-EVOLUTION LAW WOULD SCRAP SCIENCE BOOKS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 19—Every science instructor in the state high schools and all science professors in the University of Tennessee will be subject to prosecution should the state anti-evolution law be found constitutional at the trial of Professor J. T. Scopes, young Dayton, Tenn., professor for violation of the new law, Dr. John R. Neal said today.

Dr. Neal, who has been retained to head the defense counsel for Scopes, has accepted the offer of Clarence Darrow and Dudley Field Malone to aid in the defense. This trio of legal lights will oppose the prosecutors headed by William Jennings Bryan.

Science textbooks prescribed by the state textbook commission are based on the Darwinian theory of evolution and 20 textbooks used at the university of Tennessee also contain theories of evolution, according to Dr. Neal.

"Every instructor who teaches science in the public schools with the present textbooks is guilty of violation of the anti-evolution act," said Dr. Neal, "and if the statute is not held unconstitutional by the court, we shall insist on its enforcement by prosecutions."

War in the Air

The militarists have the floor.

Any semi-articulate colonel, general or admiral can bust on to the first page of the capitalist press provided he yowls for more soldiers, battleships, airplanes, big guns and universal military training.

Hawaii has been found to be pitiably weak. The pineapple plantations there are at the mercy of any nation which covets them and Major-General Foreman of the Illinois national guard, who has just returned from a four-months tour of the world, yelled for a huge appropriation for Hawaii the moment he stepped off a train in Chicago, where he was welcomed with a great military display.

The opinions of such individuals are, of course, worth nothing, but the imperialists want the hysteria to increase up to the time of the test mobilization which has become an annual event in the United States and the capitalist press takes its cue and its subsidies from them.

The Hearst press syndicated last Sunday a huge picture of the Japanese dragon swooping over our defenseless shores—as vicious a piece of war propaganda as we have ever encountered. The military training camp publicity is well organized and continuous. Public stadiums are turned over to the army for military displays. A pacifist organization like that of the women who met recently in Washington is denounced and vilified by the capitalist press. All talk of disarmament conferences has ceased.

The tour of the Pacific fleet will be the occasion for another barrage of imperialist publicity and all signs point to a summer season devoted to putting the populace in the proper frame of mind for another slaughter. A war for world supremacy is in the offing.

Here is the basis for a united front that will bring into action millions of people who cannot be reached on any other issue.

The activities of the militarists must be utilized to point out to the American masses the very real danger which confronts them.

It is a concrete issue, but one befogged by much misconception. The duty of the Workers (Communist) Party is to explain the underlying causes for the campaign of the imperialists and the direct connection of their activities with the lives of the American workers and the world situation.

A Fake Label League

We have in the city of Chicago an organization known as the Trade Union Promotional League, which is officered by a collection of labor skates who are as free from a spark of the divine fire of revolution as so many icebergs. The ostensible object of this organization is to boost trade unionism by convincing the employer that he can make more profits by having his shop unionized than not.

It develops that this Trade Union Promotional League is actually a sales organization for the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, manufacturers of the Clown cigarette. The local organizer of the Trade Union Promotional League was an agent for the "Clown."

The Seattle Union Record, of May 14, states that a branch of the Trade Union Promotional League is being organized in that city. And the organizer is none other than "E. J. Helck, assistant to the president of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, manufacturers of Clown cigarettes, who has helped to organize branches of the league in various parts of the United States." How very kind of him!

If the trade unionists of Chicago realized that this fake organization on which they waste time and money, is actually a good sales agency for a cigarette manufacturer, they might come to the conclusion that they are bigger clowns than the cigarette that bears that name.

Australian coal miners strike for the release of their fellow workers jailed for violation of the bosses' law. This is an example that the miners of the United States could very well follow. There are miner prisoners in more than one American prison for their activity in strikes.

The support of the imprisoned soldiers, Crouch and Trumbull, by Hawaiian labor is one of the most encouraging events in recent labor history. It is further evidence that the labor imperialists at the head of the American labor movement have not succeeded in poisoning the membership.

Professor Chaffee thinks that the next imperialist war will end thinking. Thinking will end before the next war or else it cannot occur. When it does come, not only will it end thinking but many thinkers as well.

France and Morocco

Whatever the outcome of the Riffian war, it is certain that France has taken up the fight which Spain lost as a preparation for a future and larger war.

France depends upon the Negro colonials in West Africa as a source of supply for her conscript armies and Morocco must be hers if quick and safe transportation is to be had for them.

An article in the Action Nationale of 1922 gives the key to French policy in this matter. It said:

> If unfortunately there breaks out another general conflagration analogous to that of 1914, no more hesitation then! Let us draw widely, let us draw without counting, as we shall at home, upon the reserve of black men that we shall have had the foresight to preserve and increase. The Negroes whom we have guided into the path of progress, must then repay to us in the form of battalions the benefits they have received from us. These semi-civilized will contribute "chose admirable" to the defense of civilization.

The French imperialists have enacted compulsory military service in their Negro colonies since the war and they feel that an indepent state in northern Africa would menace their control of one of the principal sources of Negro conscripts.

Colonial troops are being used against the Riffs and thus at least a portion of the payment "for the benefits they have received" is being made. Meanwhile the Riffs, who are fighting for their country against the Spanish and French invaders, are being treated as rebels and denied even aid from the Red Cross for their sick and wounded.

The French government is engaged in wholesale murder of the Riffians without the shadow of moral justification. The whole adventure is typical of the complete disregard of the rights of the so-called backward peoples exhibited by American imperialism in Haiti, by British imperialism in India and Ireland, by imperialism in Korea—to cite only three of a hundred bloody instances.

The Riffians will find no friends among the "civilized" nations. If there is any interference with France it will be because Great Britain cannot tolerate an increase of French control in the Mediterranean, not because of any humanitarian feeling for the murdered colonials. Cynically the imperialist diplomats are wondering how long it will be before the Riffian war sets Europe aflame.

The colonial masses are watching the heroic struggle of the Riffians and there is more than a grain of truth in the statements of the capitalist press that Egypt, India and French and British Africa movements for their support are developing.

European capitalism rests today on its colonies and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that the Riffian war marks the beginning of new gigantic struggles for colonial liberation that will strain the resources of France and Great Britain to the breaking point.

Bosses Begin War on Cleveland Unions

The bosses are never backward in taking advantage of favorable conditions as is shown by the new drive on the Cleveland building trades following the court decision outlawing the closed shop on the street railway lines in that city.

An attempt is to be made to interpret the supreme court decision as a mandate to destroy all closed shops and the Cleveland bosses are lining up their forces for the battle.

There is a lesson here for the unions. It is generally known that no struggle of workers is unimportant to the rest of the working class and particularly that in a basic industry like transportation is there no place for the hesitancy and crawfishing that there was last year when the street carmen had an opportunity during the republican convention to strike a real blow at the bosses

The whole Cleveland labor movement will suffer now for the major mistake of last year and must begin by repairing it. Faith in capitalist courts, in the "fairness" of arbitration tribunals, belief that a policy of respectability will divert the hostility of the bosses, is evidence of a childlike conception of the class struggle and proof of weakness that the bosses see at once and count on to aid them.

The left wing in the Cleveland labor movement now has a splendid chance to put forward their fighting program and give new hope and inspiration to the trade unions.

Before the war the lives of German coal miners were safer than in many other countries. The kaiser has gone. American capitalism and a "democracy" patterned on its model are supreme and great coal mining disasters are the order of the day as in America. Thus are the blessings of American democracy spread over and under the earth.

The blow-up of the fake labor bank in Philadelphia is only the forerunner of a series of scandals that will awaken the whole labor movement to the fraudulent character of the financial institutions organized by the labor fakers for their personal profit and as propaganda for capitalism in the unions.

Caillaux, having made peace with the pope by submitting to a church marriage, get himself into the good graces of Wall Street by suggesting that France return all her industrial monopolies to private hands.

Japanese troops have almost finished the evacuation of Sakhalin Island. It does not look as if the Soviet power was "tottering."

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By G. ZINOVIEV.

III.

The Main Points in the Present Political Situation.

A NUMBER of changes can be noted in the world political situation, particularly those that have taken place within the last nine months. It is quite clear now that we were right. What interests us most in the present state of affairs of course is the world political prospects. Taking it on a world scale, the general situation is as follows, and can be divided into the following twelve points:

1. America—England;
2. Japan;
3. Eastern question;
4. U. S. S. R.;
5. England;
6. England—France;
7. Germany;
8. The Balkans;
9. Poland;
10. Italy;
11. Czecho-Slovakia;
12. Scandinavia.

Anglo-American Co-operation

THE relations between England and America, to a certain degree form the central point of our discussion. Probably, you remember that several months ago the representatives of the right wing of the International tried to give an exaggerated interpretation to the rapprochement between England and America and drew conclusions, which if correct, would have compelled us to change the whole of our tactics. One of the characteristics of opportunism has always been that it sees everything in the enemy's camp thru rose-colored spectacles while everything in its own camp appears dark and gloomy. This deeply influenced the estimination of the relation between England and America.

The fact that America has once again turned its face to Europe is, of course, a mater of world significance. The rapprochment between these two countries is a fact of world historical significance in spite of its temporary and passing character. To assert, however, as does Comrade Trotsky, that Europe is being converted into a dominion of America, means very considerably to over-estimate things. To say that America can place the whole of Europe on rations, means to overestimate the antagonism between America and Europe and within Europe itself. Antagonisms between France and England undoubtedly exist.

Recently we have witnessed a controversy over this question between Pepper and Radek. In my opinion, Pepper is right and Radek is certainly not. We do not in the least deny that the rapprochment between America and England is a fact of historical importance, but at the same time, we must not lose sight of the fact that between imperialist America and imperialist England, antagonisms exist and that they are becoming more acute.

AT the present time we have in both England and America, governments which socially, are akin to each other. There is social kinship between the conservative government of England and the present government of America. What does this fact imply, from the point of view of a correct estimation of imperialist antagonisms? What will it lead to in the capitalist world?

Is social kinship between two governments equivalent to friendly relations between them? Not in the least. In the beginning of the war of 1914, the reins of government in the countries of Europe were in the hands of governments who were also somewhat akin to each other, from the social standpoint. Nevertheless, this kinship did not prevent them from going to war against each other. The same thing applies to America and England. Imperialism is imperialism. The conflict, the competition continues. This sort of antagonism not only exists, but may become more acute, in spite of the social kinship between the two bourgeois governments.

Anglo-American Antagonisms.

INDEED, the co-operation between America and England is a definite fact. Nevertheless, the antagonisms between England and America are increasing. These antagonisms may be divided approximately into 10 points, and each one of these is sufficient to convince one, that the rapprochment between America and England, must not be exaggerated. The ten points are as follows:

1. The direct struggle for world hegemony. The world's crediter today is not England, but America. The fight between these two in this sphere is already raging and will continue to rage in the future.

2. Canada. 3. Australia. 4. Mexico. 5. Oil. 6. Markets. 7. The question of armaments. The open rivalry in armaments for the purpose of securing the domination of the seas. 8. Debts. 9. The import and export of raw materials and 10. Even on the question of the Dawes plan, around which the rapprochment has taken place, there are fundamental antagonisms between the two states.

EACH of these ten points is sufficient to demonstrate, that parallel with the process of rapproachment, there is the process of growth of antagonisms which, generally, is characteristic of capitalism. I will quote only one illustration which is characteristic of the relations between America and England. I have in mind Canada. In 1913, the amount of capital invested in Canada by England was double that invested by America. In 1923 a complete change is observed: there is about an equal amount of American capital invested in Canada as British, that is to say, about two and a half millards of dollars.

It should be observed also that America's method of investing capital in Canada differs from the method employed by England. America invests her capital directly in Canadian enterprises. The Americanization of Canada is becoming a fact. Culture in Canada is completely American accounts in Canada are kept, not in pounds, but in dollars. The press, the cinema, the theaters, the railways, fashions in clothes are all, not English but American. In England as well as in America, people quite openly speak of the possibility of the gradual conversion of Canada into a new state of the United States of America. At the present moment England is trying to find support in the two or three million French Canadians living in Canada, for the English who live there have long ago become Americanized. Only recently the Times spoke openly of the possibility of losing Canada.

Film Censorship and the Working Class

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE

TWO more states, Ohio and South Carolina, have been added to the list of those in which a bitter battle over film censorship is being waged by differing factions of the capitalist class. One group, made up principally of motion picture interests fights the open exposure of state dictatorship in this field, because it would slightly decrease their enormous profits.

In their support there are groups of liberals anxious to preserve the fig-leaf of democracy as in the case of "freedom of press and speech." It is interesting to note that those slogans of the bourgeois revolution do not cover the motion picture film, developed after the rise to power of the bourgeoisie. There is no such legal fiction as the "freedom of the films," instead, just like the press and platform of the 18th century, it is declared to be directly under the police power of the state.

Medicine Men For Censorship

Other big business elements line up in support of official censorship, and they are represented by their spokesmen among the clergy, pedagogs, professional reformers, and other medicine men of capitalism. Harmful films must be stamped out, they demand, and by harmful are meant all that would tend to arouse the class conscious of the workers or the group consciousness of any who are oppressed.

Questions of "immorality" in films are mere "fringe" and are themselves to be traced to economic backing. The support of the established order thru the suppression of criticism is the object of all censorship, and it is to be expected that we find the slightest disrespect to soldier, priest, lawyer, and other props of the old order, absolutely forbidden. Likewise the fake shibboleths with which the masses are narcotized must not be touched.

Workers Must Have Own Films.

Those who attack censorship as "un-American, un-ethical and un-everything," as did a Connecticut theater owner before the legislature there, are very careful to point out that they do not wish to foster any radical tendency in the movies. They prefer to "let the industry to be its own censor," or, as some put it, "let the public be the censor in the only effective place; the box office." What is meant by the first remark is that with the ever increasing trustification of motion picture production and distribution, it will be hard for anything but pro-capitalist pictures to slip thru, while the control of press and other avenues of advertising will prevent the movie goers from finding out about pictures that big business does not like, hence they and their timerous producers will be damned to financial failure. Both of these conditions are facts, as has been demonstrated in actual cases, many times. The fight over censorship resolves itself into the question of whether the capitalist economic machine shall crush out non-conformist films, or whether the political executive shall do the trick.

The only answer of the workers is to develop a motion picture field of their own. They should support such semi-friendly pictures as occasionally slip by the economic and political censors, but basically they must develop a class film precisely as they do a class press. Such films as are passed are weapons of enlightenment among the workers, such as are rejected are weapons and bases of struggle. The International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, is prepared to furnish excellent working class films.

Paul Bunyan Stories Turned Against the Boss.

By ART SHIELDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Paul Bunyan, by Esther Shephard, McNeil Press, Seattle, $2.00.

Paul Bunyan, by James Stevens, Alfred A. Knopf, $2.50.

PAUL BUNYAN logged off North Dakota and dug Puget Sound with the aid of his Blue Ox Babe and a crew that worked 12 hours a day in the good old days. And like most myth tales these classics of the logging camps have been cleverly used by the employing interests, old Paul's orgies of toil are hailed as examples to the toilers of today and have been amply exploited in the 4-L Bulletin, organ of the company union set up in wartime.

But now Paul Bunyan stories come into their own thru the pen of Esther Shephard of Seattle, who shows—incidently—how yarn spinners in the bunkhouses use the Bunyan tales for propaganda against the boss. Her book, coming out shortly before a similarly named volume from the pen of James Stevens of Tacoma is vastly more entertaining than the latter and more human, tho it has not the advantage of the fine bookmaking of Mr. Knopf.

All good Bunyan stories come from the bunkhouses and those Esther Shepherd tells are strung together as the tales of an old logger who had worked with Paul. So naturally he knew him well. Old Angus MacDonald, the story teller, liked Paul greatly, but he had to tell the truth about his boss, even to the way Paul got his Washington timber claims thru dummy homesteaders, some of them dead. And he shows us Johnny Inkslinger, Paul's bookkeeper, using a split pencil in charging up supplies to the loggers, so as to make more money for the boss.

The old timers liked to work with Paul: there was glory in it. But Paul's biographer lets slip the fact that they had to sleep in muzzle-loading bunks after their 12-hour day. And the bedbugs were so clever they would climb the bookkeeper's fountain pen to see where your bunk was, and the bugs always found you out. Them were the good old days. Things ain't as they used to be no more. The agitators have changed them.

There is no doubt that Paul and his Blue Ox did things on a grand scale. Read how North Dakota was logged off in one season. Or read about Paul's hotcake griddle, measuring 235 feet across; or Babe's stable that had to be raised 1,600 feet to keep above his manure pile.

It is a series of jocund tales that Esther Shephard gives. James Stevens' book is in more studied vein. His Paul Bunyan isn't the familiar Old Paul of the other book, but a dim sort of demi god that looked on common loggers as so very, very common. This is Stevens' first sustained literary effort. Earlier writings are in the 4-L Bulletin, the American Lumberman, the American Mercury and the Saturday Evening Post. In the American Lumberman, the employers' trade paper, he attacked the I. W. W., then the lone labor union in the woods. And in the Saturday Evening Post he pictured the common laborer's condition as a most happy one. Stevens was a workingman until recently, but seems always to have looked thru the boss' spectacles and it is natural that he should carry this viewpoint into his Paul Bunyan book.

THE WORKERS WEREN'T INVITED

ABBY ROCKEFELLER, granddaughter of the skinflint John D. Sr., was married to another son of the millionaires—but not a single worker was present. Billions of dollars were represented at the wedding—billions that the young "heiress" will inherit when John D. Sr. and John D. Jr., shuffle off their "mortal coils." The "heiress to the greatest fortune in the world," they called the young lady, billions that she had nothing to do with, except to pocket when her turn comes. But the working class was not invited—it was a "quiet" affair, with the "best people" present.

The same day's papers reported that a woman took gas, because she had no money and had a family of children to support. She did not "inherit" any fortune, nor did she have any prospects. But the workers were not invited to the Rockefeller wedding.

That is quite proper. The workers may grind out their lives in the Rockefeller oil refineries, steel mills and coal mines. They may strike to preserve whatever little organization they have—as the miners of West Virginia are doing. But the state supports Rockefeller St., Jr., and the "young heiress," in destroying the union and reducing the standard of living of the workers.

That is quite proper—and will remain proper until the workers of this country organize to put an end to this system whereby Abby Rockefeller can inherit billions, whereby John D. and Morgan & Co. can control the resources of this country. It will remain proper until the workers and the poor farmers of this country realize what kind of a system they live under—and organize plitically and economically to take over this rotten capitalist government of the United States and establish a workers' and farmers' government of the United States. Then there will be no "elite" weddings of the parasites, no suicides of men and women out of hunger, no destruction of unions to favor the bosses, no use of government authority—police, militia, federal troops, gas, machine guns, and bombs—against the workers. As long as the workers of this country still think it is proper that the capitalists should control everything—they will have to accept the consequences.

THE WAY OF THE ANARCHISTS

CARLO TRESCA, the anarchist, has been released from prison. His first action was to go to Washington to see the president. Tresca managed to get to Washington at a time when a large number of students were greeting the president. So Tresca, the cute revolutionist, got into line and passed the president and shook his hand without the president even knowing it. This must have been one of the happiest moments in the life of Tresca, the arch-revolutionist.

"There was no effort to stop me, no effort to identify me, and I might have done as I wished, but my only thought was to THANK the president for his kindness to me. However, since I was not an invited guest. I remained silent."

There were good reasons when President Harding released Debs. He knew that Debs is no longer a danger to capitalist rule in this country, for the socialist party has gone the way of all traitorous parties—and has lined up with the bosses against the aspirations and struggles of the workers.

When Coolidge commuted the sentence of Tresca, he also knew what he was doing. Traeca has sold out to the capitalists, and there was nothing fitter for him to do than to proceed to Washington and kiss the hand of the bosses' president who released him from prison.

Tresca can now be counted on to support the American government, American institutions and the American capitalist class against the revolutionary movement. His spoutings about the horried fascisti of Italy will be looked upon with a smile. Tresca and his associates are harmless—to the capitalists. The American working class now knows clearly where he belongs—to the class of the traitors—the class that so many of the anarchists, petty-bourgeois at heart and in method, belong to.

THE VOICE OF LENIN TO BE HEARD IN CHICAGO SUNDAY, MAY 24

Something new and different is being arranged by the Russian branch of the Workers Party for Sunday, May 24, at the Workers' Home, 1902 W. Division St. It will be a Lenin Evening, with Comrade Nicolai Lenin as the chief speaker. This is no joke, as the talk by Comrade Lenin will be heard from a phonograph record, as well as speeches by Comrade Lunacharsky, Trotsky and others.

Comrade Alexander Chramov, national organizer of the Russian Section W. P., who is touring the United States, will bring the records to Chicago. He will also speak on Lenin as a leader of the masses. A good musical program is also being prepared. Tell your friends about it.

MILITARY STAFFS OF BORDER STATES MEET TO PREPARE FOR NEW WAR AGAINST SOVIET RULE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.,—(By Mail)— The Russian Communist press has revealed the fact that a short time ago a conference of the general staffs of the so-called border states took place in Riga, in which representatives of Poland, Roumania and the Baltic States participated. Everyone knows what this means. It is the duty of a general staff to elaborate military plans.

When the general staff of different countries negotiate amongst themselves, there can only be one object in view, that of a common plan for war operations.

And when the general staffs of Esthonia and Roumania, Finland and Poland sit together round the same table, everyone will grasp the fact that it is a case of planning a war against the Soviet Union.

The governments of the border states made use of the usual official and unofficial apparatus of contradiction, in order to deny even the fact that this conference of general staffs had taken place at all. But the denials, as often happens when the imperialists try to deny their war policy, once again confirmed the revelations of the Russian press.

It happened as in the wellknown story of the borrowed jug. First denial: there was no jug at all—no conference took place. Second denial: the jug had always been broken—the Polish General Kessler had only gone to Riga to visit some friends. Third denial the jug was whole when it was returned—the Latvian commander in chief admitted to the Latvian parlia-

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

PRESIDENT CALLES of Mexico is doing well by his new masters. The bank clerks in the capital made certain demands on their employers recently. The banks superciliously turned their requests down and threatened to move out of the city unless the workers kept civil tongues in their heads. Calles went further than that. He threatened to throw them into jail unless they behaved like gentlemen towards the benefactors from Wall Street.

THE workers in certain oil fields demanded more wages and better conditions. The property is owned by American capitalists. Immediately the labor fakers, who are under the thumb of Calles and the Wall Street bankers got busy and brought down the weight of official disapprobation on the heads of the workers. Calles threatened to call out the army and give the workers a dose of lead unless they cease making "extortionist demands." There you are. Don't forget that Calles is a socialist president and that the socialist party of New York organised a parade in his honor thru the pawnshop district with red flags at the head of the parade.

WHILE thousands of girls are toiling in sweat shops thruout the country producing profits for the master class, that enable their female parasites to see the world and all the things that are worth while seeing, several U. S. "debutantes" are painting up preparatory to being presented to the queen of England. It is quite possible that while those useless females are decorating their carcasses to catch the eye of some broken down British aristocratic degenerate, their fathers are resisting the demands of their American wage slaves for a little more bread and butter.

THE second number of the magazine published for the purpose of bringing about international trade union solidarity is snappy and forceful. There are articles by A. A. Purcell, the editor, and by several British leaders including A. B. Swales, who was one of the fraternal delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention last year. There is also an article by Comrade Tomsky, chairman of the All-Russian council of trade unions, with his picture. The movement is gaining headway and the anti-Soviet prejudices fostered by the reactionaries are being broken down.

OTHER countries are watching the progress of the movement for one united trade union international with interest. The Voice of Labor, official organ of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, has the following comment on Trade Union Unity: "Trade Union Unity, if it lives up to its title, ought to find a welcome wherever conscious working people are thinking out the problems of their class. It is edited by A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, Edo Fimmen, secretary of the International Transport Workers' Federation and George Hicks, a substitute member of the executive of the I. STARVING IRISH PEASANTS TOLD TO GAZE ON SKY

Beautiful Scenery Does Not Appease Hunger

By ROBERT STEWART.

DUBLIN, (By Mail)—The much disputed question as to the extent of acute distress, as to the difference between acute distress, semi-starvation and famine, is not allowed to interfere with the work of the Irish section of Workers International Relief.

There is, of course, no doubt that the deliberate minimizing of the extent of the area of want has had its effect on the flow of funds for relief. If the Workers International Relief had not its base in the labor movement, the situation would have been very much worse. Our committees in all countries are so well used to the attitude of governments and their press agencies and propagandists, that we are able to discount beforehand the lies, and truth suppressions, which are become a commonplace in these days; nevertheless we heartily wish, for the sake of the suffering people that the actual truth of the situation could have wider circulation. I feel sure that thousands of people in

LEGISLATOR OBJECTS TO KLAN PROPAGANDA CIRCULATED IN HOUSE

AMERICAN SOLDIERS ARE WORKERS WHO MUST FIGHT DOPE OF LACKEY PREACHERS AND THEIR MASTERS

By WALTER M. TRUMBULL.

HONOLULU, Hawaii, May 20.—I was talking to a soldier of the U. S. army in Hawaii a short time ago and the topic came up of reasons for entering the service. Discussing the conditions in civilian life that had a bearing on his entrance into the army, he said:

"You see, I was a coal miner, a 'mucker.' I cleaned the coal from the face of the drift after it had been 'blown.' We were getting small enough wages as it was but they intended to cut the wages again. We went on strike.

"The strike lasted for four weeks and money was getting low. Then the mine owners forced the few stores that they did not own to refuse to sell us anything at all and gave the same orders to their own stores. We nearly starved and almost froze from the cold. We tried to get coal from the 'muck dump' but the owners had riflemen there and they were not afraid to shoot either.

"One Sunday, the preacher in our church gave us a long talk about the strike and proved from the bible that we were in the wrong. He called on

CHARGES THREAT UPON SOVIET BY ALLIES TO SUPPRESS COMINTERN

LONDON, May 20—The labor publication, the Daily Herald, reports that a concerted drive is on, started by British diplomats and joined in by all the allied powers to demand of Soviet Russia the suppression of the Communist International, upon penalty of breaking off diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia.

The Daily Herald says that the matter was discussed with the French and with the little entente at Bucharest. The British under secretary for foreign affairs denied the charge in the house of commons.

FOSTER SPEAKS TO RAILROADERS IN CLEVELAND

Invites Trainmen Delegates to Attend

CLEVELAND, May 20.—Wm. Z. Foster, national secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, will speak in Cleveland, Sunday, May 24, at 7:30 P. M., in the Labor Temple, 2536 Euclide Ave. This meeting will be under the auspices of the Cleveland Group of the Trade Union Educational League, and will be for the purpose of getting under way a campaign to expose the infamous scheme of Bill Lee, president of the Railway Trainmen, now in convention here, to turn the railroad unions into company unions, for which he has announced the calling of a conference between the unions and the railroad executives.

One Thousand Delegates.

The Convention of the Trainmen is attended by about a thousand delegates, and in the week or so of its existence, has occupied itself chiefly with listening to fine speeches on class peace. Lee announced with pride that this conventino was the first to be addressed by the labor secretaries of the governments of both the U. S. and Canada, which took place the other day.

"Our own" James J. Davis delivered one of his customary diatribes against the foreign-born workers, demanding their registration, in order to prevent what he claims to be a large amount of "illegal" entry. According to Davis, the standard of living of the American worker is depressed by this great influx, etc., etc., etc.

Fed Up On Class Peace.

After several days of such soporific wind-jamming from various "friends" of labor, the convention is now in a frame of mind to proceed with its work of haltering the Trainmen ever more firmly to the chariot of the railroad magnates.

The Foster meeting will represent an effort on the part of the militants of Cleveland to arouse the rank and file of the Trainmen here as delegates, as well as the thousands of railroad workers resident in Cleveland, to the threat which Lee's proposal makes to the existence of the unions as true labor organizations.

Not only the railroad workers, but the entire working-class is vitally interested in the question of whether the large group in the railroad industry are to abandon the strike as a weapon and serve as a demoralizing example to the entire labor movement.

Foster has just returned from Soviet Russia, where he studied in detail the workings of the railroad and other unions in that country. He is also a special student of railroad unionism, from his membership in the Carmen's Union, as well as of the entire labor movement of America.

Foster without doubt is the one most qualified in the whole country to discuss and expose the nefarious Lee scheme, and the Cleveland Trade Union Educational League urges upon the railroad workers and other workers of Cleveland and the Trainmen delegates to turn out in full force to this meeting. Admission free.

Lobby of Labor Officials on Last Legs at Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 20—Efforts were being made to line up factions of organized labor behind a comprehensive legislative objective. John N. Walker, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, was said to be striving for centralization on the injunction limitations bill now pending in the senate, while Miss Agnes Nestor, Chicago, head of the women's labor organizations of the metropolis, endeavored to throw the weight of the entire aggregation behind Lottie Holman O'Neill's 8½ hour bill. Immediate conferences of the two groups with a view to unifying forces were scheduled.

NATIVES BEHIND FRENCH LINES SUPPORT RIFFS

Cabinet May Fall on Moroccan Policy

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PARIS, France, May 20.—Native Moroccans behind the lines of the invading French army are sympathetic to the Riffian defenders and agitation for Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Riffians, has gained great headway.

The French are instituting a reign of terror behind their lines, among the natives of French Morocco, the military dictator of French Morocco, Marshal Lyautey announcing, "steps are being taken to clear out from the pacific regions of Morocco the agents of Abd-el-Krim, who everywhere are spreading insidious propaganda." The French dictator fears a general revolt thruout Morocco.

The Paris newspapers, especially those controlled by the left parties, are filled with pessimistic reports from Fez, which express anxiety over the Moroccan invasion, which is leading to a prolonged and costly war.

France, the war office announced, is seeking a combined three power offensive against the Moroccans, with Britain using her navy, and Spain and France supplying the troops.

The war ministry is still surpressing all news of the extent of the casualties to the French soldiers, and is maintaining silence on the number of French troops in Morocco.

The Communist Party is waging a campaign to prevent the further slaughter of France's young workers in the invasion of the Riffian's native land. When parliament opens this month a defeat Painleve government at the hands of the socialist bloc is a possibility. At the time the socialists must either indorse the imperialistic invasion of the Painleve government or must vote a lack of confidence in the government in which they are participating at the present time as an integral part.

Communists Denounce Invasion.

PARIS, France, May 20.— Paris walls are plastered with Communist posters demanding that the French workers unite to oppose "this murderous and fratricidal war." Thousands of pamphlets are being distributed to the soldiers who are to be sent to Morocco. "You will be compelled to march under a blazing sun until you fall from exhaustion," says one of these pamphlets, "and then if your brutal officers do not shoot you mercilessly, you are bound to be killed by Abd-el-Krim's sharpshooters, hidden behind the rocks of their native land."

The Communists appeal to the soldiers to refuse to fight the North Africans, to either surrender to Abd-el-Krim or turn their guns on their officers, according to press dispatches.

The entire population of the French colonies has grown restive and in many places is on the verge of revolt, since the Riffian defense against the foreign imperialists. In Algeria and Tunisia, the natives have displayed a growing disquiet, and are ready to join the uprising against the French oppressors.

FAR EAST SHOWS GAINS IN COAL AND GOLD MINES

Forestry and Fisheries Also in Good Shape

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARBIN, (By Mail).—In a press interview with the local press representatives on the general situation of the Soviet Far-Eastern region, Mr. Gamarnik, president of the Far-Eastern revolutionary committee (who recently visited Pekin), pointed out that the commercial turnover of the region had gone up from 138 million gold rubles, in 1923, to 151 million, in 1924, and that, generally, the state and the co-operative trade had been considerably consolidated during that period. The financial reform was now consummated in the Soviet Far East, and the "chervonetz" (10 gold ruble bank note) and the Soviet treasury note had finally secured their legitimate place in the monetary circulation.

Gains in Industrial Fields.

Substantial gains ought to be noted, too, in the industrial field, the coal and gold mining industries having benefited the most, with forestry and fisheries also in good shape. The Su-

WORKER CORRESPONDENTS TO HEAR JACK CARNEY IN NEW YORK ON SATURDAY

NEW YORK, May 20.—Jack Carney, one-time editor of Duluth "Truth," Butte Bulletin, "Rank and File," and other working class papers, will lecture before New York Workers' Correspondents next Saturday, May 23, at 7 p. m., at the party headquarters, 108 East 14th street, on Communist Journalism.

All workers interested in this subject are invited to attend. Those that heard the very practical lecture by A. Bimba, editor of Laisve, and the speech by Carney at the Workers' Correspondents meeting last Saturday evening, will need no urging to come this week. The meeting will begin promptly at seven o'clock, and will adjourn in time to enable those present to attend other affairs the same evening.

FASCIST CHIEF FORCES GAG LAW THRU CHAMBER

Anti-Secret Society Bill Hits Masonry

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, May 20—Premier Mussolini has forced the passage of the bill which outlaws secret societies. The fascist head was forced to bring discipline upon the deputies before they agreed to vote for the bill, which is aimed particularly at freemasonry.

Mussolini made a violent speech for the bill, and demanded that it be passed within five minutes. But while he was talking, the deputies slipped out of the chamber, and an adjournment had to be called. When the deputies were against assembled, they voted for the bill by a vote of 304 to 0.

The fascist papers are little concerned over the demand of the United States that Italy pay her war debt to America. "It would be no use for Italy to promise to pay it by so doing Italy were to be faced with constant peril," says the Corriere, reflecting the Mussolini position. "We could not keep the promise."

THE RULERS OF THE U. S. NAME NEW DIRECTORS

WASHINGTON, May 20.—New directors of the United States chamber of commerce were nominated today as follows:

Stanley H. Bullard, Bridgeport, Conn.; Philadelphia H. Gadsden, Philadelphia, John W. Arrington, Greenville, S. C.; Frank Kell, Wichita Falls, Tex.; J. G. Leigh, Little Rock, Ark.; Max W. Babb, Milwaukee; Edwin T. Meredith, Des Moines, Iowa; Dwight B. Heard, Phoenix, Ariz.; Everett G. Griggs, Tacoma, Wash.; all from chmabers of commerce.

Charles W. Lonsdale, Kansas City; James P. Orr, Cincinnati; A. J. Brosseau, New York; John J. Lonsdale, St. Louis; Paul Shoup, San Francisco; Harry A. Smith, Hartford, Conn.; Milton E. Marcuse, Richmond, Va.; A. L. Humphrey, Pittsburgh, all representing trade associations.

The nominations were made by 1,400 counselors representing all affiliated organizations in the national chamber.

The 17 directors nominated will serve for two years. The total membership of the board is 33.

WEST VIRGINIA POLICE AID WHITE TERROR OF POLAND, CLOSING RED AID MEETING WITH GUNS IN HANDS

WHEELING, W. Va., May 20.—When miners and workers came to the meeting arranged at Benwood, W. Va., for Comrade Radwanski, speaker for the International Red Aid, they found the hall closed by order of the police, and six policemen and many detectives ready to act.

The meeting was arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party branch of Wheeling, as one of the series of meetings being held thruout the country to expose the Polish white terror.

All of the police in front of the hall were armed. When the workers inquired the reason for closing the hall, the captain of police said he had "orders from the court," and if the workers tried to hold a meeting, all who attend would be arrested.

The captain muttered something about the Red flag law, altho there was no Red flag present. As always, seeing workers assembling, saw red.

Once more America was saved from the revolution, this time in West Virginia instead of New York.

'B. & O. JOHNSTON' LOSING ELECTION IN MACHINISTS' UNION DESPITE WHOLESALE FRAUD IN BALLOTING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20.—Altho only 14,786 out of the total vote of about 35,000 ballots cast in the election going on in the International Association of Machinists have been counted up to May 17, it is apparent that "B. & O." Johnston, the incumbent president, has been decisively whipped by Anderson, the opposition candidate. Anderson will be elected providing a fair count of the votes are given, as with the 14,786 counted, Anderson is leading by 100 votes, while wholesale frauds have been practised by the Johnston machine.

Among the other outstanding swindles, is the throwing out of San Francisco Lodge 68, which cast 700 votes, 90 per cent, favoring Anderson. Some of the Johnston agents in the local, apparently framed up an objection to the whole 700 votes being sent in because of a small number of ballots cast by members not in good standing, and managed to hold up for a few days the sending of the ballots in to Washington.

The Frame-up in Frisco.

As the union law provides that if ballots are not sent in within three days after voting ends, they are thrown out automatically, the Johnston machine thus managed to disfranchise the hundreds of San Francisco I. A. M. members whose votes went to Anderson. It is even charged that the Johnston agents in San Francisco themselves framed up to have the illegal ballots cast in order to have the complaint raised against the whole vote and get it thrown out.

The Johnston agents in Lodge 68 of San Francisco, even tried to expel Knutson, the Anderson centrist supporter, of stuffing the ballot box with the few illegal ballots. But upon trial before the local, he was acquitted by the local and another man, a Johnston supporter, was forced to admit that he marked the ballots that were cast illegally and which are used as an excuse to disfranchise the whole local.

Anderson Claims Election.

"My information is that I have won," said Vice-President Anderson,

KLUXERS HURT IN FRAY WITH ANTI-KLANSMEN AFTER K.K.K. MEETING

MILLBURY, Mass., May 20.—Four members of the ku klux klan were seriously injured, several anti-klansmen were less seriously hurt and scores of other combatants received scratches and bruises in a free-for-all fight in Worcester county early today.

Sticks, stones and wrenches taken from automobiles figured in the fray, according to chief of police, C. A. Dolan.

The gathering of the klansmen at a meeting started hostilities, it is said.

"The klansmen carried clubs," said the chief of police. "They told me they had been stoned while coming from North Bridge to their meeting and were going to put their assailants in the cemetery. They even told me they were going to get me.

"After the stoning at North Bridge, the klansmen and the anti-klansmen clashed in Millbury.

"When I came up, clubs were swinging right and left.

"Somebody rang the fire alarm and the firemen came up.

"The klansmen all carried clubs, some black jacks, others pick handles and still others long pieces of white birch.

"As they moved out of Millbury the klansmen shouted that they were coming back to clean up the place."

ARREST EIGHT IN STRIKE OF COAST TAILORS

Bosses Use Gunmen and Professional Scabs

By PAUL C. REISS

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 20.—The strike in the Golden State Tailors' Service, 206 Court street, is progressing well. The company succeeded in getting about 20 scabs, six of whom are professional and have scabbed in more than one shop before.

They are known tools of the bosses and as soon as they will not be needed at this place, they will be transferred to some other shop. The others are weak sisters of the union. The pickets are strong on the job. Eight pickets were arrested but the cases were dismissed as no definite charges were pressed.

Slugger Goes Free.

The business agent of the local union, Bastano, was attacked by one of the sluggers hired by the bosses named Julius Petino. A suspended sentence of ninety days was set by Judge Richardson.

All the scabs are working for about one-third less than the union scale and according to the union men, are not efficient in their trade. These scabs are being brought to and from work in special automobiles supplied by the bosses early in the morning and long after quitting time and are housed in separate shacks.

Scabs Held Prisoners.

They are not permitted to talk to each other on the job. So far the local press has been silent on this strike because they want to keep the white spot white.

The general board of the union promised financial aid and also moral support by sending a representative from the national office. This has added new encouragement to the members on strike.

Claim Deficit In Bankrupt R. R.

NEW YORK, May 20.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, whose receivership is now under investigation by the interstate commerce commission, had a net deficit of $1,868,606, in 1924, according to the annual report made public today.

LABOR DEFENSE TO DISCUSS CROUCH CASE AT FRIDAY'S MEETING

The Chicago Council for Labor Defense and Relief will discuss plans for new work at its meeting Friday evening, May 22, at the Greek Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave. All delegates are urged to be present.

One of the most important subjects to be discussed is the calling of a meeting in Chicago to demand the reelase of Walter Trumbull and Paul Crouch, United States soldiers arrested and sentenced to narc labor for being Communists. The sentences were at first placed at 40 and 26 years, but were later shortened to three years and one year. The Defense and Relief Council demands their immediate release.

WEST VIRGINIA JAILING MINERS BY HUNDREDS TO BREAK STRIKE

FAIRMONT, W. Va., May 20.—Approximately 150 striking miners were arrested today near the Big Four Mine of the Clark Coal and Coke Co., here.

Two international representatives of the United Mine Workers, Frank McCartney and a man named Williams, were arrested with the miners, who were charged with violating an injunction granted yesterday by Judge Maxwell at Clarksburg, W. Va.

The strikers, with a band, had assembled near the mine and were cheering loudly, but no disorder was reported.

GERMANY MOVES TOWARD KAISER, VOTE REVEALS

Move Giving President More Power Unchecked

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, Germany, May 20—When Communist members of the reichstag moved a vote of no confidence in the Hindenburg government, and were defeated, the socialists would not join in demanding a roll call.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany May 20—Germany further drifted toward a return to the monarchy today when the reichstag defeated an attempt to register a vote of lack of confidence in the Hindenburg government by a vote of 214 to 129. The no confidence move was made following a speech by Count Westarp, monarchist and leader in the nationalist party, who openly demanded amendments to the Weimar constitution on which the republican government is based.

Westarp urged that a special committee be formed to change the constitution. He recommended that the powers of Hindenburg be increased, and the color of the flag be changed to the monarchist colors.

Socialists Show Weakness.

"Gen. von Hindenburg's election does not mean that we approve the republican democratic parliamentary system," Westarp said.

The socialist motion to vote no confidence was based on "a conviction that foreign minister, Stresemann and chancellor, Luther are unable to cooperate with the nationalist influence."

In his speech before the reichstag the socialist leader Breitscheid failed to strongly oppose the government, confining his remarks to general propaganda for a utopian "United States of Europe." It was this weak speech which contributed to the socialist defeat.

FASCIST MURDER OF WORKERS IN ITALY MOUNTS

ROME, May 21—The persecutions of the workers in Italy increase in a terrifying manner. Government and fascist organisations act in common in the murdering of revolutionary workers and the distruction of their property. The Bulletin of the Italian section of the I. R. A. publishes the following statistics which are not yet complete:

	Dec.	Jan.	Feb.
Murders	5	7	9
Injuries to workers	78	177	118
Destruction of homes	4	81	10
Attacks on the street	57	194	151
Searches	350	12,306	432
Prohibition of papers	40	365	99
Prohibition of meetings	33	69	334

Parade on For Goose Step Show.

Troops will parade thru the loop today as the opening of the military show to be held for three days in Grant Park, with which the army officers are attempting to force the military spirit down the throats of Chicago's workers. The show is aimed to increase enrollment in the citizens military camps. These camps are being pushed by the manufacturers to prepare the workers for the next war.

"B. & O." Johnston Losing Election

"and I propose to have the ballots counted. I sent out a questionaire to most of the lodges, to get exact figures on the vote they cast on each candidate, and the answers show that I received 9,463 votes and Johnston 3,284 votes from the lodges that have not yet been officially counted. The official count covers 179 lodges that nominated Johnston, 82 that nominated myself, and 75 that made no nomination.

"The whole vote of San Francisco 90 per cent of which was cast for me, has been withheld."

The Left Wing Conditional Support.

Members of the left wing group in the I. A. M. gave conditional support to Anderson in the final election while announcing their own program and declaring that as Emma, the left wing candidate, had been kept off the final ballot by the primary election, they would support Anderson who represents the center group in order to break the Johnston machine.

This left wing group declares that Anderson is certainly elected and that the left wing will vigorously contest the stealing of the election by Johnston's fraudulent actions and warns the membership against tricks by Johnston to seize the election illegally.

Johnston Tries to Split Anderson Group.

The left wing points out that Johnston is trying to break the Anderson center group in two by declaring that Lauderman, a Johnston candidate for vice-president, will be beaten by Hannon, and Henning to be defeated by Chas. Fry of Chicago, for delegate to the A. F. of L. Johnston plans, say the left wingers, to work this plan to split the Anderson group in case of contest of the election.

The count is supposed to be completed about May 28, and the left wing gives, as proof of the heavy majority for Anderson, the following items of ballots cast in the larger districts.

How the Vote is Going.

District 2, New York, cast a total vote of only 74 for Johnston and 2,274 for Anderson. In Canada, Anderson got a majority over Johnston of about 1,200 votes.

In District 8, Chicago, the vote ran for Johnston 722 and for Anderson 2,747, distributed as follows:

LUMBER TRUST KILLS AND ROBS AS UNION SPLITS

Two Lumberjacks Die for Clear Lake Co.

MT. VERNON, Wash., May 20.—By lack of a strong and militant union in the lumber camps, the I. W. W. having deserted the fight against the lumber barons to quarrel about branch autonomy under the constitution, the lumber trust takes its pleasure in bitterest slave driving, sacrificing the lives and limbs of the workers recklessly, as the death of two lumber jacks here within a week amply prove. If the jacks miss death they get $3.40 a day—when they work.

One worker was drowned the other day when he fell off the log boom, and at the Clear Lake Lumber company camp Paul Dovick was fatally injured on May 7, when a flying cable struck him and inflicted fatal injuries.

Altho deductions are made from pay for hospital fees, there is never any attention at hand, and Dovick had to be taken 30 miles over rough roads to the Clear Lake hospital, which added to his injury and caused his death twenty minutes after his arrival.

As the union is more interested in internal controversy than in fighting for better conditions, nothing is done to stop the dangerous conditions which lead to these deaths or even to aid the unfortunate workers who are injured, or their dependants when, as in this instance, they are killed.

Ministers' Aid Took Bootleg Money.

Roy W. Carpenter, an investigator for the Rev. E. L. Williams, director of law enforcement for the Better Government Association, is in jail following his arrest charged with extortion. He is said to have accepted hush money from numerous bootleggers.

Grand Jury Called to Sit on Shepherd Murder Witness

The Shepherd-McClintock cauldron was set seething again with an unheralded announcement that the grand jury would be called for special session at 3 o'clock "to take up matters pertaining to the Shepherd case."

It was generally admitted that the matter of the disappearance of Robert White, one of the star witnesses for the state, and the charge that a $25,000 bribe had brought about his departure from the city, would be taken up.

Meanwhile, in the courtroom, the monotonous business of trying to find 12 men qualified under the law to act as jurors to decide the fate of William D. Shepherd, accused of the murder of his millionaire ward, Wm. McClintock, was resumed.

When the session started, only three of the 30 veniremen examined remained in the box. Of these, only one had withstood the questioning of both sides. The other two had been quizzed only by the defense and it is the state questions regarding their feeling toward circumstantial evidence, their faith in circumstantial evidence and their stand on capital punishment, which has disqualified the majority of those examined thus far.

Peru Turns Other Cheek.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, May 20.—A dispatch from Lima, Peru, states that M. LaPierre, Peruvian minister to Ecuador, declared that Peru will request the United States government to settle the boundary dispute between Peru and Ecuador.

Federal Prisons Overflowing.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20.—The federal government has asked the state prisons to take over federal prisoners from the penitentiaries, because of the overcrowded conditions prevailing.

CAL AIDS WHITE FINNS IN MOVE TO DEPORT RED

Mrs. Kannasto Held for Hibbing, Minn., Speech

DULUTH, Minn., May 20.—All Efforts to get a reduction in bail for Mrs. Sanna Kannasto, who was arrested at Hibbing, Minnesota, after making a speech there, have failed. Mrs. Kannasto is charged with illegal entry from Canada and violation of the war-time passport act. The bail was fixed at $10,000 and petitions for reduction have been persistently denied by Judge W. A. Cant of the United States district court of Minnesota.

Mrs. Kannasto, who is of Finnish origin has lived in the United States and Canada for the last twenty years. She was arrested after an informer a Finnish white guard sympathizer, had informed the authorities that Mrs. Kannasto was to speak in the Finnish Hall in Hibbing, on May 10. A stenographer was sent to report the speech and directly afterward Mrs. Kannasto was taken in custody.

In America 20 years.

Her informer also stated that Mrs. Kannasto had been recently in Finland and had taken an active part in the civil war there. Many Finnish resident on the Mesabo range who have known Mrs. Kannasto for the twenty years she has been in America, declare this to be a fabrication.

It is pointed out that in Canada, where Mrs. Kannasto has recently resided, the struggle between the "white" Finns and the "red" Finns very often assumes somewhat sanguine aspects. Mrs. Kannasto's informer is one of the "white" Finns who resented Mrs. Kannasto speaking at Hibbing.

Attempt to Deport Her.

The war-time passport act that constitutes one of the charges upon which Mrs. Kannasto is held, is still in force by re-enactment of congress as a rider to an appropriation bill in 1922. She was bound to the United States district court on this charge and bail fixed at $10,000. The other charge of illegal entry will be heard by the immigration department. No bail has been fixed on this latter charge. This holds her liable to an attempt that will probably be made to deport Mrs. Kannasto to Finland.

The Labor Defense Council has undertaken this case and has retained I. E. Ferguson of Chicago and John R. Heino of Duluth as attorneys. The fight is now being made for reduction of bail and the attorneys are making preparations to carry the case to the highest courts if need be.

BRITISH BLACK SHIRTS GIVEN OWN MEDICINE

Workers Invade Hall and Rout Fascists

LONDON, May 8.—(By Mail)—There were lively scenes at a meeting of British fascists at Birmingham last night. Mr. P. J. Hannan, tory M. P. for Moseley, who presided, was greeted with cries of "Kidnappers" when he announced that the British fascisti stood for free speech.

When he made the statement that the British fascisti movement did not borrow its program from other countries, there were loud shouts of "What about Mussolini?"

Mr. A. Kirby Hewlett, organizing secretary, was subjected to considerable interruption when he referred to what he described as "the unfortunate accident that happened recently to the secretary of the national minority movement."

Local Communists attended in full force, and one of them was threatened with forcible ejection if he did not sit down.

Hats Snatched Off.

The meeting ended with amazing scenes of disorder, during which the Daily Herald correspondent and other persons were violently assaulted by members of the fascisti. This arose after the singing of the national anthem.

Press representatives waited a few moments, owing to liveliness in parts of the hall, where groups of labor supporters were engaged in argument with the fascisti.

In the midst of the uproar the organ again struck up the national anthem, with the obvious intention of drowning the "Red Flag" being sung by the labor supporters.

The newspapermen were then endeavoring to leave the press table, but were pounced on by the fascists, who tore the hats from the head and flung them into the crowd.

Several blows were struck by the fascists, and the Daily Herald correspondent, together with local press correspondents, were roughly handled until a fascist official intervened and apologized for the blunder of his wild men.

Jap Workers in Hawaii Give U. S. Imperialism Many Restless Hours

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, another pin pricks uncomfortable American imperialism as it studies the population figures of Hawaii. It isn't enough that the Hawaiian defenses should be reported weak, that Communsits should be discovered among American troops stationed on the islands, but in addition that Japanese, workers, should constitute one-half the total population.

American exploitation always has had trouble with its workers. The millions of Negroes sold into slavery in the United States from Africa, brought on the Civil War, while the Negro problem now faces capitalism with all its anti-capitalist possibilities. It is among the foreign-born workers, lured to the United States by rainbow hopes, that today's revolutionary movement has its strongest foothold. That condition will not be changed by new immigration regulations.

Similarly in Hawaii, rich in its sugar and pineapple plantations. First the Chinese were imported because they toiled cheaply. Then the Japanese were brought in for the same reason; no doubt also to act as a race bulwark against any show of discontent among the Chinese. Then later Filipinos were brought over as another mixture.

Brutal exploitation under the lash of the American taskmaster, however, has welded these rival races into a growing working class solidarity; just as the workers' front takes on increased unity in the coal mines, the steel and textile mills, the packing houses and other great industries in the homeland of U. S. imperialism. There have been militant strikes of Hawaiian sugar slaves as well as of the serfs of West Virginia's coal mines.

• • • •

Thus the American capitalist government, thru its jingo press, shrieks that it is a Japanese problem that it confronts in Hawaii, whereas it is more a working class problem, born of the subjugation there as everywhere else under the American flag, of labor to the profit demand of the dollar.

• • • •

From his guard house cell in the Schofield Barracks, at Honolulu, the imprisoned soldier, Paul Crouch, calls for the unity of all soldiers, sailors and marines, to fight for their own interests, along with the exploited wage workers and the poor farmers. That is a note that has never been struck before in the American military machine,—a discordant note to the capitalist ear, but melodious indeed to the ears of all class-conscious workers.

Unity of the workers means unity of black, brown and yellow, as well as white workers, and the great hosts of labor in Hawaii, of many colors, will yet prove the bridge, showing the toiling masses of the two American continents their identity of interest with Asiatic labor.

• • • •

Representative Thomas W. Butler, of Pennsylvania, announces that he will introduce legislation in the next congress to make Hawaii "the strongest military outpost in the world."

Butler's proposals, however, will not be worth the paper they are written on, no more than the steel and coal industries of his own state will be safe in the hands of their private owners, if the workers, the farmers, the soldiers in one great fraternal unity combine their strength and take over all power.

• • • •

Wall Street's naval squadron is on its way to Australia, where it will greet the capitalists of that country, and there will be much talk of "white supremacy in the Pacific."

What all labor should be interested in and work for is, "Working Class Supremacy in the Pacific." The Russians have made a good start by raising the red flag of the world revolution along their entire coast line, where Siberia dips into the greatest ocean. Who is next?

Says Zinoviev Was Responsible for the Ricca Salary Bill

NEW YORK, May 20.—At a meeting of the Federation of Teachers' Association of the city of New York held in the rooms of the County Lawyers' Association, 165 Broadway, William McAuliffe, president of the Teachers' Council, set out to explain why he turned down the committee of fifteen in the recent battle over the Ricca teachers' salary bill. In building his alibi he cowardly tried to hide behind the broad shoulders of Gregory Zinoviev, president of the Communist International, who he said, was responsible for the bill.

With a lot of superfluous gestures and much shouting he went one better to the real estate men, who fought the bill, as he raved about the influence of radicalism in the schools and the propaganda of the "Communist International" which he said he was responsible for bringing the Ricca bill before Governor Smith only to embarass him.

He announced that a new teachers' salary bill was being prepared by the board of superintendents. These schedules he said would soon be presented to the board of education and he called upon the Teachers' Federation to give the bill its support.

Ten Million in Bonds Sold.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 20—Illinois today established the highest price ever received for state highway bonds, when a block of ten million dollars worth of bonds was sold to a group composed, with one exception, of Illinois financial institutions, headed by the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, for $998,810 or a rate of 99.881. The interest yield on the bonds will be approximately 4.008 per cent. The bonds were 4 per cent serial bonds, the maturities being $1,000,000 due each year from 1945 to 1954 inclusive.

GERMAN TARIFF DUE TO DAWES PLAN FAILURE

But Will Ruin U. S. Export Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, May 20.—The German cabinet today appeared before an invited assembly of newspaper men, to explain its proposed tariff against foreign goods being imported into Germany.

In effect it means a trade war against foreign business interests which counted upon the bourgeois miracle of the Dawes plan to make a market for their goods. There are three general reasons given for laying down the tariff wall.

Cannot Pay Dawes Plan Installments

Firstly, imports into Germany are steadily increasing in ratio to exports, making an unfavorable trade balance. This, of course, forbids in like measure, any payment of reparations under the Dawes plan, which now doesn't appear so miraculous as it did. This is, it is held, reason enough to justify the tariff without giving any additional excuse.

However, the cabinet insists that Germany must become "self supporting" and that a tariff barrier will help do it. And then the third fact is that the combined political power of big industry and the agrarian interests have agreed on the tariff as a mutual political measure, chiefly as an aid to the land owners.

Will Ruin American Trade

The tariff, however, will have a crushing effect on American trade with Germany. Particulairly in meat and grain. In the first quarter of 1925, fully 80 per cent of the meat imported into Germany came from the United States. And 60 per cent of the grain and flour came from America's middle west. The American farmer is due to get another lesson on international economy.

Another blow is at Poland, which sends its potatoes, vegetables and dairy products to Germany. This is not likely to lessen the friction between the two nations.

Murder Will Out

More and more it is seen that although the failure of the Dawes plan can be glossed over and hidden by the silence of the press, the tariff wall, which will injure foreign business and again boost the unbearably high cost of living in Germany, is due to bring the contradictions of the Dawes plan sharply to the attention of the world.

Comrade Chramov Talks to Big Crowd on Boris Savinkov

An enthusiastic crowd that filled the Workers' House Tuesday night listened to Alexander Chramovs' talk on Boris Savinkov. A few anarchists who were present attempted to discredit the speaker and Soviet Russia by asking some foolish questions. The answers they received were so pointed that the audience applauded and laughed at the poor followers of the bandit Machno.

A collection was taken up for the Russian daily Novy Mir and much literature was sold.

The other lectures of Comrade Chramov will be held as follows:

Chicago, Ill., Thursday, May 21, at 2734 W. 18th St.

Pullman, Ill., Friday, May 22, at Stanciks' Hall, 205 E. 115th St.

Milwaukee, Wis., Saturday, May 23, at Miller Hall, cor. State and 8th St., 3rd floor.

Kenosha, Wis., Sunday, May 24, at 2 p. m., at German-American Home, 665 Grand Ave.

Chicago, Ill., Sunday, May 24, at 7 p. m., at 1902 W. Division St.

Chicago, Ill., Monday, May 25, at 1080 W. 14th St.

Milwaukee, Wis., Tuesday, May 26, at Miller Hall, cor. State and 8th St., 3rd floor.

At the meetings at Pullman, Kenosha, Milwaukee on May 23, and Chicago on May 24, the voices of Lenin, Trotsky, Lunacharsky and others will be heard from phonograph records.

Natives Behind the French Lines Support the Riffs

Altho the French war ministry's statements are extremely guarded, it is widely reported that a Riffian counter attack on the eastern sector in charge of General Cambay has inflicted a serious defeat on the French forces. The official war office reports heap praise on the generals in charge of the other sectors, but has little to say of Gen. Cambray. "Infiltrations of rebels in the center front of the French lines were made, the situation remaining stationery elsewhere," says the official communique. "To the east the Riffians continue to threaten the Branes front."

SOLDIERS MUST FIGHT DOPE OF DOLLAR LACKEYS

Trumbull Tells of Lot of U. S. Cannon Fodder

us to go back to work and told us that we would go to hell if we didn't.

"After church, we got together and a few of us tried to make the rest hold out but they were afraid of what the preacher said. We had proof that the preacher had received money to get them to go back to work but they wouldn't listen to us. They went back to their slavery at a reduced wage."

Could any expose be plainer? This man is a typical coal miner of the red-blooded American type. He was fighting against superstitious dogma inbred by the tools of capitalism—the churches. Are you, comrades, going to be thus balked in your fight for freedom?

Merely because the preacher said so these men went back to slavery at a reduced wage. Too many of us take a thing for granted just because our mother, father, the school teacher or the preacher says so, without questioning the veracity of the statement.

Think For Yourself

As Comrade Crouch and I have done (along with millions of Communists thruout the world) so must you. Our motto is:

"If so, why? If not, why not?"

Think for yourself! Don't let the greed stained clergy sway your thoughts with fluent language. Use the brain that you were born with. One of the first steps to break the power of the green-headed monsters—the puppets of the church.

When the church openly opposes the action of unionized labor and for that opposition receives blood-money, then it is time for all true proletarians to expose and dethrone this vendor of ancient and impossible dogma!

How much longer is this curse going to continue in America? How much longer are we going to permit the preacher-wolf to keep the masses in ignorant slavery to the avaricious hand of capitalism?

In our war against the monster of class rule, we must not forget its right hand supporter—religious dogma!

Secret Organization Approved by Meeting of Commerce Chamber

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20.—That the federal government trade commission is merely the creature of big business was well illustrated today when the spokesman for the majority group of that commission appeared and spoke before the convention of the United States chamber of commerce and boasted that the commission's new policy of secrecy in charges against monopolies was a fine arrangement for business.

Formerly, when charges were made, usually upon complaint by one firm against another on the ground of monopoly in restraint of trade, unfair trade practices, etc., the commission, as a public body, gave out the news of the filing of the charges.

Since Coolidge was elected and managed to make additional appointments of the blackest reactionary commissioners, the commission has made a rule barring the records of its actions from publicity in the newspapers, and making all charges a close secret.

A small minority on the trade commission, feeling a responsibility to small business as against the great monopolies, has held that the secrecy is sure to cover up fraudulent practices and criminal business men may escape punishment and even publicity by simply promising to do better in the future.

OPEN SHOP DRIVE GOING STRONG IN THE ENGLISH BUILDING TRADES AS UNEMPLOYMENT AIDS BOSSES

LONDON, May 20.—The scheme of lord Weir to erect standardized steel houses on a Ford mass production basis means a new extension of scientific management and slavery to the machine. The British building trades unions are determined to fight it to the last ditch. Weir's plan presupposes complete disregard of the trade union conditions established by joint agreement in the industry, substituting semiskilled metal workers on a piecework basis.

The issue is difficult for the building trades unions because the Weir proposal is advanced ostensibly to meet the housing shortage. In 1919 England needed 1,000,000 houses and the shortage has increased to 2,500,000 according to General Secretary Geo. Hicks, Amalgamated Union of Building Trades Workers.

In spite of increasing shortage, building programs have been curtailed while the union has paid $1,500,000 unemployment benefit.

A Plain Open Shop Drive

Hicks sees the Weir plan with its rejection of the government fair-wage clause as an attack on wage standards by the federation of British industries. This is supported by Weir's statement that he would not pay metal trades wages on his houses if they were higher than the building trade.

He admitted he had no wage agreement with any union and stated that it would add about $120 per house to observe building trades conditions.

This clearcut attempt to take advantage of the widespread unemployment in the metal trades aims at introducing cheap labor into building. President Thomas Barron of the Building Operatives Union refers to it as a backdoor method to lower standards and eliminate skilled craftsmen from the industry.

Another "Impartial" Court of Capitalists

The recommendations of the court of inquiry, which practically gives the Weir plan a clean bill of health, produced much protest. The report discounts the fear that such plans will unduly compete with the regular building industry, holds that observance of the fair wages clause is a matter to be determined by the local authorities and asserts that rates of pay on the work should be settled by agreement between Weir and the unions of the men employed, which means the metal rather than the Bulding Trades Union. It then goes out of its way to assert that:

"Payments by results—a recognized feature in the metal trades—is particularly appropriate to the methods both of manufacture and assembly followed by Messrs. Weir in house construction."

This opens wide the door to Fordising the building industry in spite of the assertion of General Secretary R. Cappock of the Federation of Building Trades Operatives that "British workers are too intelligent to adopt the idea of Henry Ford as it is done in America." The question is will they be able to resist it.

SOVIET UNION EXPORTS OVER 35 MILLION GOLD RUBLES WORTH OF FARM PRODUCTS, NEXT CROP BIGGER

MOSCOW, May 20.—According to information gathered after the investigation by the department of agriculture the seeded area of the Soviet republics, excluding Turkestan, the Far Eastern region and Transcaucasia, is the following: Winter crop, 29,135,000 dessiatins; spring crop, 49,449,000 dessiatins. The total seeded area is 78,584,000 dessiatins, which in comparison with the area of last year is 6 per cent more than that of the spring crop and 6.2 per cent more than the area for the spring crop and 4 per cent more than the total seeded area of last year.

In Ukrainia the area seeded for the winter crop was 10 per cent less than last year; in Siberia, 3.6 per cent less; in Caucasia, 9.7 per cent less, and in Kirgisia, 13 per cent. No decrease in the seeded area was noted. The incerase in the area seeded for the winter crop in the R. S. F. S. R. is 4.9 per cent; in White Russia, .3 per cent.

The increase in the area seeded for spring crops in Ukrainia is 1.1 per cent; in Siberia, 10.9 per cent; in White Russia, 8.4 per cent; North Caucasia, 3.6 per cent; Kirgisia, 1 per cent.

Agricultural College in Siberia

The Siberian Agricultural Academy celebrated its first graduation this spring. Diplomas were given to 50 graduates, to 30 agricultural engineers and to 25 forresters. Among the graduates were several women. All of those who graduated have already secured positions in the villages. In the future the academy expects to graduate 150 agricultural specialists each year.

Progress of Cotton Campaign

The Central Cotton Committee reports that the cotton seeding campaign started in the regions of Fergan and Bukhara during the latter part of March and in Sirdiria the first of April. From the beginning of the campaign to the first of February 67,000 dessiatins were seeded, or 32.4 per cent of the entire area planned upon. In Bukhara 2,300 dessiatins were seeded in March with American seeds, which makes 58 per cent of this year's program for cotton seeding. The results thus far indicate that in Fergan 20 per cent more land will be seeded for cotton than was planned and in other regions 10 per cent.

Export of Farm Products.

Beginning October 1st, 1924 and up to april 1st, 1925, total export of furs from Russia exceeded 35 million gold rubles. During the same period new furs for export have been prepared in the amount of 15 million rubles.

During the last half year over 6,700,000 poods of flax have been prepared for export. Exported during the same period over 2,600,000 poods.

The export of hemp during the winter was in the amount of 270,000 poods. Various oil seeds, such as sunflower, flax, etc., were exported during October-November of last year in the amount of about 9½ million gold rubles, 3,100,000 gold rubles more than a year ago.

Considerable increase is noted, in comparison with last year, in the export of killed fowl. During the last year 500 carloads of killed fowl were exported. Eggs were exported in the amount of 1,250 carloads.

Sale of Pardons by Ex-Governor Goes to the Jury

TOPEKA, Kans., May 20.—Former Governor Jonathan M. Davis today was expected to know his fate by night. The case against him charging solicitation of a bribe in connection with pardons will go to the jury about six o'clock, it is expected. Evidence was completed late yesterday afternoon in one of the most routine ways of the ten days' trial.

Judge James A. McClure's charge is brief and arguments have been limited to three hours for each side.

chan coal mines have progressed especially well, while with regard to gold, it is worth while noting that a gold trust has been organized in the region.

A question closely bound with Manchurian interests, Mr. Gamarnik remarks, is the question of Eggersheld—the port of Vladivostok. The transit part (free harbor) of this port is being opened just now, and a number of vessels have already been chartered for the new service. In connection with the opening of the transit part of the port, a Soviet Chinese corn exchange is to be shortly established at Vladivostok.

Speaking of Saghalien, Mr. Gamarnik said that the first Soviet ship bound for the northern port of the island had sailed from Vladivostok on the eighth of this month, carrying on board sowing material, a detachment of military guard and a group of officials.

Receive Big Concessions.

A big number of foresty, mining and other concession propositions have been received from the Japanese since the signing of the treaty, and ensuing negotiations are now under way. Concession propositions have likewise been received from British, Belgian and German citizens, and have been or are being considered and negotiated. Meanwhile, the Petukhe tin mines have been leased on the basis of a concession contract to the Bruner company, while the Ayan Corporation, Ltd., an English firm has obtained a concession in the Okhotsk district.

Replying to questions as to the role of private capital in the economic life of the Far Eastern region and the treatment that capital could expect to receive at the hands of the authorities, the Soviet high official declared that there was abosolutely no administrative "pressure" brought to bear upon private capital in the Far Eastern region. On the contrary, he said, the greatest possible measure of initiative is being accorded, in the interest of the economic progress of the Far Eastern region, to private capital working on a sound and solid basis.

In conclusion, Mr. Gamarnik stated that, in view of the general economic and industrial progress of the Soviet Far East and, also, the growth of the regional budget, and with a view to encouraging the more rapid development of agriculture, it was proposed to lower the single agricultural tax levied in the Far Eastern region with a corresponding raising of non-tax income, that is the revenue derived from taxation of trade and industry.

Stabilization of Political Situation.

The internal political situation of the Far Eastern region, Mr. Gamarnik stated, was quite satisfactory, too; the recent local congress of Soviets had thoroly evidenced that the bonds between the peasant masses and the Soviet power, as well as between the urban workers and the farmers, were growing ever stronger. The same may be said, too, about the ties uniting the red army with the rest of the toiling masses.

Under such conditions, that is, taking into consideration the general stabilization of the political situation in the Far East, it was decided, at the last plenary session of the revolutionary committee at Khabarovsk (supreme administrative organ of the Soviet Far Eastern region), to amnesty and allow to come back on their lands the peasants who had been deported at the time by the Soviet administration for participation in white guardist actions instigated from abroad.

LEATHER WORKERS' UNION FACES OPEN SHOP MONOPOLY WITH BUT ONE PER CENT ORGANIZATION

By CARL HAESSLER

Federated Press Industrial Editor.

CHICAGO, May 20.—(FP)—Though gradually picking-up strength and buttressing its 50 to 60 locals, the United Leather Workers' International Union has scarcely scratched the surface in the huge job of organizing the 150,000 to 200,000 tanners in the United States. In eddition to the basic tanning industry, the leather workers enroll men and women in all the leather crafts except boot and shoe making. Among the trades are harness making, machinery belting, fancy leather goods, suitcases and bags and sporting goods including leather puttees.

The Leather Trust Is Open Shop.

Gen. V. Pres. I. Gordón of the international reports that business has been bad since 1920 and that the leather trust, the American Hide & Leather Co., has pursued a determined openshop policy. Nevertheless tanner locals are gaining in membership and Local 19 is building a healthy nucleus in Chicago.

Manufacturers' Sabotage.

Skilled tannery workers have been crowded out by trust methods which turn out notoriously inferior leather by reducing the time allowed to cure hides and by using corrosive chemicals instead of the tanbark which takes longer but produces better wearing leather. One reason the postwar shoe soaks up moisture so quickly is that the leather has not been prepared by experienced workers by the old tanning methods. Unskilled and semi-skilled men in mass production are replacing the oldtime craft expert.

Nevertheless locals in many sections of the country report improvement. Kansas City, which has Local No. 1 and also the international headquarters, says all union men there are working, especially harness makers. Younger members are leaving the harness work for fancy leather goods, probably a reflection of the motor truck's and farm tractor's conquest of the horse.

St. Joseph, Louisville, Chicago, Sioux City and Marietta, O., report fair business. Dallas, Quincy, St. Louis report dull conditions. Locals are organised all over the country and in Canada. Local 126 is chartered for San Juan, Porto Rico.

Enormous Loss of Membership.

The membership of the international which experienced a mushroom war growth, reaching 11,700 in 1920, as reported to the A. F. of L. executive council, had dropped during the succeeding depression to 2,000 in 1923, but is once more rising. The next triennial convention will be held in June, 1926, at a place to be fixed.

ROUMANIAN POLICE TO HOLD BACK TRIAL AGAINST COMMUNIST PARTY

BUCHAREST, May 20.—In December 1924 and January 1925 about 600 workers and peasants were arrested of whom 66 will be tried by the Rumanian military court. 33 accused are still in prison while the others, among them the whole former local central committee of the Communist Party of Roumania have been released.

The Roumanian police needed four months to collect "material" or—as this is the custom in a "modern" police, to make material for this purpose. For this reason the lawyers were only allowed twenty four hours before the trial to look through the accusation and its supplements. It is to be expected that "Zinoviev letters" will also appear in Roumania.

The character of this trial is quite clear, it is nothing but an attack on Communism in general.

The accusation is directed against the following groups of accused: against the former central committee of the C. P. of Roumania, Comrades Kristeska, Pauker, Fabian, Stefanov, Dobrodgeanu, Koblos, Maria Ivanush, Krutcheanu; against former leaders of the Young Communist League, comrades Patrashkanu, Strominger, Elena Filipovitch, Konstantinesku, etc.; and against many other comrades who, without evidence, are accused of illegal literary activity for the Communist Party and the Young Communist League.

Paper Discontinued.

The central committee of the party is accused of issuing the paper "Socialismus". This organ was up to April 1924 the legal central organ of the legal C. P. and nobody dared at that time to accuse this newspaper because of its ideas. Today, however, without consideration of the fact that the legal C. P. does not exist any more (only the social democrats publish now a paper under the above title), they are thrown into jail by the government.

When the government prohibited the appearance of the party organ, a further issue appeared (on June 14th, 1924) and informed the readers of the following:

"The existence of the C. C. was prevented by means of violence. The party leadership has been taken over by a directing committee."

On June 23rd, 1924 General Holbau issued a regulation in which he stated that "every kind of propaganda against the existing order or participation in it . . . will be punished with 5 to 10 years of imprisonment."

General Attacks Party.

On the same day a second regulation prohibited every meeting of more than five persons. These regulations, which were, as was stated later on by supreme appeal court, contrary to law and were thus declarel annulled, nevertheless forced the C. P. to keep its work more secret than before. In the end of July, 1924, the same General Halbau addressed a letter to one of the members of the party, which was sent in a very peculiar fashion. It was fastened to the door of the member's house. In this letter it was stated that the Communist Party was disbanded.

Very soon after a law was adopted by the government "for the protection of internal order" which was nothing else but a law against the Communist Party.

The wholesale arrests in December, 1924, were a consequence of the impatience of the police; they took place some days before the endorsement of the law by the parliament. Therefore the accused can be centenced neither on the basis of the "illegal" regulation of General Halbau nor of the law "for the protection of intrenal order."

Hold Mock Trial.

The accused appealed to a number of foreign comrades and writers, as Cachin, Barbusse, Serati, etc., to appear in court formalities. However, the military court abolished all usual formalities and instead of 200 witnesses only two appeared; thus the trial which was fixed for April 1, 1925, had to be postponed.

The government will arrange the trial against Communism behind closed doors. However, it will not succeed in doing this. The mask of bourgeois democracy must be torn down from its face. It is possible, however, that the government will use an old and tried method, i. e. to stop the trial and to arrange a comedy of liberation of the accused after they have been imprisoned for months and years. However, quite without consideration to the results of the trial, the workers and peasants will learn to understand where their real enemies are.

ment that a conference of general staffs had taken place, but maintained that it was merely a case of discussing "measures of disarmament" on the basis of the resolutions of the league of nations.

Hardly had he made this declaration than it was contradicted by the Polish Minister for Foreign Affairs Skrzynski, who explained that the Riga conference had been summoned on the basis of resolutions of the Helsingfors conference of the governments of the border states (thus there is no further mention of the league of nations.) The Helsingfors conference however, as is well known, had for its object the establishment of a politically united front of the border states against the Soviet Union under the leadership of the imperialistic great powers.

Roumanian Sheet Gives Confirmation

Finally the Roumanian newspaper Vittorul gave a report which confirmed all the revelations. It wrote that the Riga conference had discussed "measures of defense" against "the imperialism of Moscow." As for the "imperialism of Moscow," this is a demagogic lie which is completely played out. This is nothing but a cheap excuse, intended to justify the war plans which are now being openly admitted. As a matter of fact, the war plans are now admitted! The "measures of defense" are obviously war-like measures. As concerns the word "defense," history has shown that up to now every predatory war has been carried on under the flag of "self-defense." When the general staffs of the border states which are supported by the entente, speak of "plans of defense" against the Soviet Union which, being a proletarian state, carries on no policy of conquest, but devotes its whole attention to maintaining peace, it means nothing else than preparation for war against the Soviet Union.

Needless to say it is not the ruling classes of the border states which are the chief wire-pullers of these preparations for war, they are merely tools in the hands of the imperialistic great powers, in the hands of England and France. If any further proof were necessary, it is afforded by the fact that two high French officers, one of them being the French representative in the Polish general staff, were present at the Riga conference.

The background of this policy of the imperialists against Soviet Russia is clearly exposed. In the few years of peaceful reconstruction, the economic position of the Soviet Union under the direction of the proletarian state has tremendously developed. When the attempts to suppress the Russian revolution by military measures had collapsed, the powers of the entente tried to conquer Russia by economic means. They came to the conference of Genoa with a fairly detailed plan. Even today they have not yet given up this hope, even today France and England still demand the payment of the old debts of Czarism and the compensation of private property owners. But the tremendous rise in trade which Russia has developed out of its own forces and the political and economic strengthening of the Soviet power which continues to grow, cuts the ground away from under the feet of all who speculate on the realization of a Dawes plan in Russia, of which many a French and English politician dreams.

But the development of Russia has another side which is the reason for its great historical significance. The existence of a proletarian dictatorship as a great power in two continents, and the progress of socialist reconstruction are palpable evidence of the fact that the whole capitalist stabilization is built on sand.. The imperialists do not feel safe as long as the Russian revolution asserts itself victoriously. They know that the supremacy of the bourgeoisie is not completely whilst the proletariat rules over a sixth of the whole globe; they know that the workers in the capitalistic countries will not permanently allow themsleves to be starved and exploited for the glory and honor of capitalist "reconstruction" and "stabilization," whilst they can watch how the workers flourish in Soviet Russia without exploiters and without oppressors.

And finally the natural wealth of Russia stimulates the appetite for colonization of the imperialist powers, especially now when the new imperialistic points of dissension are ripening and imperialism is looking for new objects to exploit.

As early as last year one could observe the endeavors of entente imperialism to construct a new "holy alliance" against Soviet Russia. The negotiations of the league of nations have shown this pretty plainly. When the Georgian Menscheviki attempted to raise an insurrection, the league of nations, in which the interests of England and France are predominant, took up an unmistakably provocatory attitude towards Soviet Russia. The negotiations concerning the so-called guarantee pact also showed a definite hostility towards Soviet Russia. The paragraphs of this pact concerning common action of the powers of the league of nations against a so-called "disturber of the peace," were so formulated that anyone could see that it referred to the Soviet Union.

The negotiations between the entente and Germany regarding Germany's entrance into the league of nations and signature to the guarantee pact also proved that here it was mainly a question of getting Germany into the ranks of the united front against Soviet Russia, Germany which, through the Dawes plan, had been turned into a colony.

Only Link in Chain

The Riga conference is not an event by itself but one link of one of the most important events of the whole chain of imperialist preparations for a new war against Soviet Russia. It is then the duty of the workers, of the toilers in all countries to look the danger straight in the face and to be prepared to meet it.

The Second International, the social democracy in all countries has placed itself entirely at the service of the agitation against Soviet Russia, which is, so to speak, the "moral" war preparation for a future intervention. The leader of French social democracy, Renaudel, tried, with the aid of all kinds of demogogic tricks, via Georgia, to prevent the recognition of Soviet Russia by France. The forged Zinoviev letter came into being in MacDonald circles, and without his raising a protest. Finally the Russian menshevik Abramovich is making propaganda journeys against Soviet Russia in America. They are all spreading the lie of "Moscow imperialism," behind which the general staffs take ambush when they are preparing a war against Soviet Russia. As regards German social democracy in particular, it is the most ardent champion in favor of Germany joining the league of nations and subscribing to the guarantee pact. In this respect it shows a united front with the German national Luther governm

ILITARISM NOW ORE EFFICIENT THAN BEFORE WAR

eneral Says Cost of Killing is Cut

Two out of every three dollars spent the U. S. army before the war were asted if one is to believe Gen. Kinsey 7. Walker, chief of finance of the rmy. Speaking in Chicago he told s audience of railroad executives and ankers that the army is now getting wice as much out of the dollar as efore the war, though the dollar to- ay is worth only two-thirds of the rewar dollar.

Statistically considered this means at one dollar in the army now goes s far as three dollars before the war. other words Walker admits that wo-thirds of the prewar expenditure ight have been saved and the same sults obtained with a little more conomy and efficiency on the part of he war department.

It further means that the $355,723,- 00 spent by the war department in 923 was really equivalent to an ap- ropriation of $1,067,169,000 in 1913. he actual 1913 appropriation was 202,129,000.

Therefore the war department in 923, after the war to end war, was ive times as militaristic as in 1913 efore the Wilsonian crusade was sold the country,—provided Gen. Walk- r was not talking through his gold- orded hat, as army officers speaking o civilians often do.

LEIPZIG TRIAL OF COMMUNISTS REVEALED INTRIGUE OF POLICE TO WHICH SOCIALISTS CONSENTED

VIENNA, May 20.—The great spy trial in Leipzig was unequalled in the post-war justice of Germany which was so rich of sensations and tendencious political trials. With regard to the durations of the trial which was a continuous torture for the accused, as well as the manner of examination and giving evidence, it was unique. Never has a court in Germany tried so brutally and exposed itself so openly as the executive organ of the ruling class as this supreme court for the protection of the republic, which was established after the murder of Rathenau—for the struggle against the reactionary murderers organizations who could work for years openly in Germany and who today are the prominent supporters of Hindenburg's presidentship.

We will not deal here with the political side of the trial and the sentence. The trial was typical of the most corrupt part of state life which was exposed in it—the spy system of the police. Not less than three of the most important accused were in close connection with the police and the bourgeois lawyers could base their request for acquitment for their clients Diener and Konig on the argument that these did not really intend to commit the crimes, but played the role of agents provocateurs on the instruction of the police and with close contact with it.

The statements of these spies and those of the main witness of the prosecution, Neumann, provided the material for passing the sentences against the other accused. This is the method by which in Germany not only in this case but in dozens of other cases revolutionary workers are sent to hard labor.

Army of Spies.

The agents provocateurs were systematically trained in Germany after the war. In every situation where the workers prepared themselves for struggle, the police, supported by the bourgeois parties and by the social-democratic leaders, sent an army of spies against the working class in order to arrange plots, to provoke and then to be "discovered" by the police in a fit moment. By these methods two ends were attained: a number of revolutionary workers, victims of the spies, were delivered to class justice and the "exposures" of the spies were utilized to create a hostile spirit against the revolutionary labor organizations which made their suppression possible.

Expose Police Intrigue.

One of the best-known spy trials in Germany was that caused by the murder of the police agent Blau in the summer of 1919. The prosecutor tried to provide material from all kinds of dark sources in order to prove that the murder had been committed on the instruction of the C. P. and by its members and officials. However, the trial proved something quite different. The lawyers Rosenfeld and Theodore Liebknecht, with the assistance of statements of witnesses and of documents, threw a light into the dirt of the spy system existing at that time in the political police and among the officers of the Eden Hotel (the hotel where Liebknecht and Luxemburg were murdered) and several other reactionary organizations. A disgusting picture of moral and political degeneration was exposed. The spies carried on among themselves a bitter war and the murder of Blau was a result of this struggle. As they had succeeded in drawing a number of revolutionary workers into this affair, several heavy hard labor sentences were passed while the actual murderer was not found.

The trial of Leipzig reminds in many respects very much of the Blau trial. Here also the only person who was killed was the agent provocateur Rausch, and the main witnesses are spies or suspected of being spies. In the preparation of the trial an immense apparatus was built up, booklets were printed, newspaper comments published, a terrible incitement organized against the Communist Party and the result of the trial was —apart from the above mentioned witnesses—an extremely poor one. And yet there is a prosecutor and a trial with the political title, the political assessors and a hostile chairman passing sentences as they have been passed in Germany only against workers, sentences of unequalled brutality and with the purpose of annihilation.

Socialists Betray Workers.

With regard to this trial which is no glorious leaf in the history of German justice, but expresses the most ruthless class antagonism, intensified by the use of the dirtiest means against the accused—the point to the means of examination of Criminal Inspector Koppenhofer—the question must be put how long this campaign of "justice" against the German working class will continue. Since the beginning of this year motions for amnesty are buried among the material of the legal commission of the reichstag, to the joy of the bourgeois parties who are against every amnesty, and with the silent agreement of the social-democrats. The social democracy has repeatedly stated before the last general elections that they, too, would fight for amnesty. If they really meant this, they would have had the best occasion during the president's election to demand from their bourgeois friends an agreement for amnesty. The social-democrats have not done that. It is the more the duty of the social-democratic workers to influence their leaders and froce them to stand for the liberation of the political prisoners.

With the example of the spy trial of Leipzig before our eyes, which shows the great role of the police spies in all trials against revolutionary workers, the call for liberation of the political prisoners must be raised clearly and loudly by the German workers till it will be fulfilled.

IV.

The Democratic Pacifist Era, Fascism and Social Democracy.

THE tendency for the British Empire to break-up is becoming more and more marked. The London Times, between the 2nd and 5th of February, published a series of articles entitled, "The Dominions in Foreign Politics." For the first time, the leading organ of British imperialism spoke openly of the ever increasing danger menacing the unity of the British Empire. The Times starts out with the failure to convene the imperial conference, which was to have been called to obtain the views of the various parts of the empire upon the Geneva protocol. This failure was due to the fact that the dominions generally are hostile to all rivalries which may result in imposing fresh burdens upon them, and may give rise to fresh wars. The article in the Times roused the greatest interest all over the world and for weeks were reproduced in the whole of the British press.

The British bourgeoisie is realising that the dominions are slipping thru their fingers. Of the ten points, the point of Canada alone is sufficient to prove that the antagonisms between England and America are becoming increasingly acute. The question of the dominions, is assuming more and more an acute and urgent character.

CONSEQUENTLY, to assert that a rapprochement is taking place between England and America is merely to present one side of the picture. On the other side, we see a continuous growth of antagonism, gradually assuming a more and more acute character. At the same time, America is striving to take advantage of the antagonism existing between the various European states. All the characteristic symptoms of imperialism, the proper calculation of which lays at the basis of the Leninist theory of imperialism, are visible at the present time.

Japan on the Eve of a Bourgeois Revolution

THE Japanese situation is pregnant with a bourgeois revolution, which is acquiring enormous significance in developing in Japan calls to mind the period of 1905 in Russia. Demonstrations, the general growth of the peasant movement, the growth of the terrorist movement, all these are characteristic of the Japanese movement. But the working class in Japan is politically weaker than were the workers in Russia in 1905. Numerically perhaps it is about the same as the Russian proletariat was at that time, but politically it is weaker. For all that, bourgeois revolution is knocking at the gates of Japan and such a revolution, in our epoch must undoubtedly hasten the liberation movement in the East and by that, hasten the world proletarian revolution.

The Orient and its Significance to the World Revolution.

THE third is the Eastern question. This is a particularly important question: the Eastern problem is maturing with a rapidity that we could never have imagined before. The Soviet republic at the present time has a common line of front with China. The growth of Sun-Yat Sen's party, the Kuomingtang, which sympathizes with us to a certain extent, is of enormous importance for the Comintern. In China, in Egypt, in the Dutch Indies, everywhere the movement is growing.

In the concluding days of his life, Lenin paid more and more attention to the Orient. He clearly saw that from the East a large reserve army of the revolution was marching and that perhaps the revolution would change its route, and enter by other gates. The Orient, by itself, without the assistance of the western proletariat, would be impotent. Only the Communist movement in the west—even if it has not yet led the working class to victory—will give to the struggle of the eastern peoples altogether different weight.

I WOULD like to remind you what Comrade Lenin said concerning the Eastern question before the war. Already in 1911, after the revolution had taken place in China, Lenin wrote about progressive Asia and backward Europe. To many at that time, this comparison seemed a very strange one. Today, all see that it was prophetic. In a certain sense we have indeed today a progressive Asia and a backward Europe. It must not be forgotten that the East embarrass 900,000,000, the majority of the population of the globe.

The enormous significance of the fact that this gigantic mass is beginning to move, must not be forgotten.

Recall what a profound influence the first, second and third Russian revolutions had upon the development of the Orient. If we desire to obtain a general idea of the world situation, we must direct our attention, not only to Europe, but also to the Orient.

The Consolidation of the Soviet Union

THE next point characterizing the present political situation is that of the economic revival of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. What is the situation here? The union has grown stronger. Its economics and political position has become consolidated. In the first place, the economic position of the union has improved. You will remember how happy Comrade Lenin was at the fourth congress to report to you that we had accumulated ten million gold roubles and therefore, were in a position to make some progress in restoring the metal industry. Now, ten million roubles is not nearly so important a sum to us.

You will remember how some of our friends in our opposition, more or less openly said during the fifth congress: Wait until the autumn, "they" (i. e. the government of the U. S. S. R.) will then have a budget with a deficit of 400,000,000, and then you will see what a tight corner the central committee will be in. But what actually happened? I am not revealing a state secret, when I saw that not only is there no deficit of 400,000,000 roubles, but on the contrary, we have a respectable surplus (applause). If in 1923 ten million roubles obtained from foreign trade, was regarded as an achievement, I think that the surplus which I have just mentioned, will serve as a more striking confirmation of the consolidation of the Soviet union.

Furthermore, the wages of the workers in Moscow, Leningrad and other towns, during the last three months, in a number of branches of industry, have exceeded pre-war industry. This is another proof that the economic position of the country is gradually improving.

AS you know comrades, our enemies are gradually becoming reconciled to this state of affairs and this has resulted in a number of treaties, recognitions etc. By this I do not wish to say that we are no longer confronted by any dangers. There will still be intense competition on the economic field. The stronger the Soviet republic becomes, the more inevitable will be the attempts on the part of the world bourgeoisie directly to attack us. The international proletariat must reckon with this possibility. It is quite possible that a situation will arise when the very progress we are making will compel the bourgeoisie to make aggressive plans against us.

Hence, when we review the political situation, we must not be deceived by the fact that a rapprochement has been established between England and America. We must, to a no less extent, take into our calculations the situation in the Orient and in our Union of Soviet Republics, which to a considerable degree also belongs to the East, or more correctly, is a bridge to the East.

May 23 Is Big Day in New York

ONCE a year, the Young Workers League of New York runs a Spring Ball of Youth. In the past, this ball has been the best the revolutionary movement has produced. This year, May 23 has been selected as the day for the Spring Ball, and from the information that has been given out by the district office of the league in New York, it looks as if this year will surpass all previous years.

The program thus far arranged, besides a good band which will provide the best dance music, includes the following:

School Days—a play that will be presented by the Junior section. This is the best propaganda and dramatic work produced by the Communist movement.

Social Amusements and the Working class Movement—a talk by Comrade Herbert Zam.

An exhibition of wall newspapers—These newspapers, from all over the world, especially from Russia, are extremely interesting. They will be exhibited in order to give the comrades instructions as to how to produce them.

The selection of the winner of the set of books—The contest is at present going on, and the winner of Eugene Sue's "History of a Proletarian Family Across the Ages," a twenty dollar set of books, will be selected at this Ball.

These are only a few of the inducements. All the notables of the party and the league have already promised to be present, and some of them may even participate in providing the entertainment—who knows?

Comrades are urged to come early. No tickets will be sold. Admission at the door will be 50 cents.

The place is 105 Eldridge St. The time is 8 p. m.

Livingston, Mine Town, Sees Big Strike Film

A feature of special interest in the movie show at the Eagle Theatre, Livingston, Ill., on May 26th, will be the picture of the Paterson (N. J.) silk workers strike and the part played by the Workers Party in that struggle. The demonstration in front of the Polish Consulate against the threatened execution of Stanislaus Lanzutsky will also be shown in this "Daily Worker Film Edition."

The main picture will be "Polikushka," made in Russia by the Moscow Art Theatre. A two reel slapstick comedy, "Soldier Ivan's Miracle", will complete the bill.

Modernists Score Victory.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 20.—Modernists of the presbyterian church, today scored their first victory in the pre-assembly battle, which will permit them to carry their fight to the floor of the general assembly.

The church general counsel, at its first meeting, voted to recommend to the general assembly an amendment of church law which will permit minority reports of the judicial commission to be submitted to the general assembly. Only majority reports have been permitted before.

ATTENTION! NEW YORK!

LESS than half of the New York branches have balanced their Press Pageant subscription ticket accounts, as is shown by the following tabulation which has just been issued by the New York office of the DAILY WORKER. Every member in New York should immediately look over this list, and if the branch to which he belongs is marked with a — he should bring the matter before the next branch meeting.

EXPERTS EXPOSE FATAL DANGERS OF 'LOONEY' GAS

Standard Oil Product Is Menace to Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 20.—In a long and authoritative article in which organized labor's scientific experts collaborated the current issue of the American Medical Journal, organ of the American Medical Association, details the dangers of tetraethyl lead treated gasoline to workers and the general public and exposes the inadequacy of the report of the bureau of mines that gave a bill of health to the product of the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation that financed the report.

The American Medical Journal's report comes out almost simultaneously with the conference on the mooted fluid being held in Washington at the call of the U. S. bureau of health and it is the joint product of Mrs. Grace H. Burnham, director of the workers' health bureau; Alice Hamilton, M. D., of Harvard Medical School and consulting expert for the workers' health bureau and Paul Reznikoff, M. D.

Eleven Already Killed.

The dangers of the new motor fuel are divided into four divisions in the article. Scientific evidence in each case is given.

1. Danger to workers manufacturing tetraethyl lead: 11 died and one went insane in Dupont, Standard Oil and General Motors laboratories;
2. Danger to the workers handling ethyl fluid: in the production plants and the dictributing and filling stations;
3. Danger in the handling of ethyl gasoline—gasoline mixed with ethyl fluid;
4. Danger to garage workers and to the general public from breathing the lead dust fumes from the exhaust of automobiles using the new motor power.

To Hold Conference.

The last danger reaches the great masses of the people and may lead to slow lead poisoning of vast numbers of persons. The U. S. health bureau's conference, in which the American Federation of Labor and the workers' health bureau participate, was called after the agitation that followed the warning of Dr. Henderson, of Yale university, consulting expert of the workers' health bureau, against the nation-wide peril of tetraethyl lead gasoline and his exposure of the U. S. bureau of mines report.

Storm Halts Interurban Traffic.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 20.— All northbound interurban traffic between Springfield and Peoria came to a halt at 10 a. m. today while linemen were hurriedly dispatched to adjust difficulties said by traction officials to have resulted from a storm which struck north central Illinois this morning.

Starving Irish Told to Gaze on Sky

Ireland, and beyond it will be interested to read two messages that reached our committee quite recently

The first is from: The Rectory, Glen Columcille, Co. Donegal, under date of April 4. It reads:

Robert Stewart, W. I. R.

Dear Sir:—I have been asked by your representative who has charge of this locality to say a word about the condition of the people of this place.

They are very poorly off, and, I think, some in want. Their first requirement now is seed for their potato crop. Some have the ground turned up, but no seed to put in.

The season is running out now, and if relief in that way is to be given it should be done at once.

Yours Faithfully,
T. H. Meara (Rector)

No Seed; No Crops.

That is a very mild and careful statement, but if "no seed is put in" what will be the outcome for the time that lies ahead of these "very poorly off" people? Surely a worse time next year. Are people "in want" with "no seed to put in" famine stricken or not? The fine shades of meaning conveyed in the words want, distress, or famine, may interest straw splitting dilletanti, but the plain person will agree that whatever name it is called by, relief speedy and sufficient is the one thing necessary to alleviate it.

Letter No. 2 is a trifle more explicit, and comes without solicitation from an official source and states:

Ardara Co., Donegal, April 30.

I hereby certify that distress is acute in this district.

I am in a position to state positively that in many cases starvation is not very remote.

Signed: CHARLES H. FALVEY,
Medical Officer.

"Starvation is not very remote," sounds rather ominous and discredits completely those responsible for the policy of concealment.

No Exaggerations.

The facts of the situation have never been exaggerated in any way by the Workers International Relief. Our investigators in Donegal and Mayo say with the most complete conviction based on personal examination that the Medical Officer C. H. Falvey is right.

We have committees working at the distribution of food, seed and clothing in an area in Donegal which includes Teelin, Kilcar, Killybegs, on to Dungloe, and in Mayo all the way from Ballina to Portacloy, Caaratigue, etc. There is not a single place in which we have been able to do as much as is necessary. We have been compelled to "deal small and share all" and have only faced the situation so far, as food and seed is concerned, and even that inadequately. The questions of rent, mortgage debt, etc. are quite beyond our province, but these are a present fact which intensifies the misery of these poor people, and ought to be the subject of vigorous and sustained agitation, so that a complete moratorium might be secured.

Poetic Tommyrot.

The future could then be faced with a reasonable measure of hope, as it is, we must keep the people alive, we must provide them with seed. It is stupid and criminal to sentimentalize over the beautiful surroundings amidst which the people of the West are starving. Sunset and evening star, winding path and heathery hills, the bright blue sea, are good food maybe for poets' dreams, may even fill a poet's belly, but when in a report of Lady Mayo's, or some other lady's relief in the Dublin Evening Herald of the 22nd of April I find: "Though other conditions fail them the people of the West have this compensation. They can feast their eyes on incomparable beauties and breathe wonderful fresh air! Tho insufficiently clothed it was marvelous to see their rosy cheeks and clear eyes."

I confess it was not poetry that rose to my lips when I read that. What kind of mental inebriate was responsible for penning these lines I do not know. "Rosy cheeks and clear eyes" amid semi-starvation and real nakedness, are probably the indication of tuberculosis, surely nothing to raphsodize over in that. The Workers International Relief says let us have an end of this slobbering slush. Want is Want. To starve on a hillside is no more pleasant than to starve in a cellar.

What is important is, that the Free State government, while it it not responsible for "the incomparable beauty" must certainly be held to account for the condition of acute want amounting to famine in certain areas in Ireland. They can and will be forced to make provision if the people of Ireland once appreciate the naked truth.

Meantime the Workers International Relief will continue the work of raising funds, and will distribute these without regard to politics or religion. Relief from the workers to their fellow workers in distress, betokening the unity of the working class independent of the charity of the oppressor, native or foreign.

Our Readers' Views

To the DAILY WORKER: "There are only a few of us active here. We have the DAILY WORKER and Workers Monthly on two newsstands and we are distributing the DAILY WORKER among the Negroes and canvassing for subs. So far we have not been very successful.

I am trying my best to get subs at the factory where I work. Up to the present I have given every man in the department where I work copies of the DAILY WORKER and talked to them about subscribing, but it seems those fellows have no time to read.

Where I work they have the best system for keeping the workers' minds enslaved. They have a psychological way of handling the slaves. Mr. czar, the boss, who is on a trip around the world every once in a while sends in a notice and bulletins are posted on the board telling how he is enjoying himself and he tells them to keep happy. Of course they feel flattered and call their master a good man. It makes my blood boil to see those slaves so humble—but I am not tru with them yet.

About six weeks ago I asked for a raise in pay. The super told me that I wasn't a very good talker, but I am a good mechanic. I keep on asking every week and I always get a different excuse for not getting it.

NEGROES WON'T SCAB; STICK TO KANSAS U.M.W.A.

Evicted Rather Than Leave Mine Union

By J. E. SNYDER.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Kansas, May 20.—Down in the Pittsburgh, Kansas, district, where they fight industrial court laws, defy officials and reactionary labor leaders alike, the negro miners have demonstrated their solidarity for unionism.

A year ago last April the 14 Sheridan mine was shut down and an attempt to force the 1917 scale on the Negroes, working there, was begun. They would not budge, so the "law" was called in and eviction notices were served, but the case was taken to the courts and so it happened that four different notices were served, but the Negroes would not move from the company houses.

Negroes Refuse the Baited Hook.

Each time a notice came the deputy dropped the hint, that if they would go back, as the company proposed, and thus desert the union, they could stay in the houses; otherwise they would have to move.

Unable to get them moved without causing too much excitement in the mining camps, the Sheridan Company claimed to have sold out to the Doubleday Company and that the houses were sold to a real estate man by the name of J. Luther Taylor who, after many threats, came with the "law" and set the Negroes and their families out in the yards of eighteen of the houses.

A Scab Company.

The Doubleday Company is the one that has been trying to open up its mines, nonunion, and against which move Alexander Howat and Mat Walters led parades of miners and stopped the proceedings, the mine remaining idle to this date with the Howat men on guard.

Mat Walters is the newly elected president of this district and so far shows some intention to resist the wage scale cut. He has called a picnic for the entire district to meet near Crowberg next Sunday and there get more unity for a big drive to organize the district. Many unorganized districts have asserted that they are staying out because Howat was given such a raw deal, but this, Howat is urging on them, is the wrong attitude to take, and to get in and fight for the right to be heard and recognized.

Cannot Break Negroes From Union.

In regard to the Negro families that were evicted, they have found refuge with their brothers of the union in Crowberg, Franklin, Pittsburg, Girard and other towns. They are standing just as solid as before and manage to keep in touch with each other. They say that the company can never force them to break with the union nor the scale and that it is their judgement that the mine will stay closed down until the owners see fit to sign up.

This stand of the Negroes has done much to bring respect for the race in these parts. All over the district there has been loyalty on the part of the Negroes and they have been loyal to Howat in his battles, also.

A Plain Case of Open Shop.

The company claimed that they wanted to move the houses, but gave themselves away by calling up the U. M. W. of A. office and stating that they would rent the houses to white miners. The Negroes even offered to buy the houses, but they would not sell them to Negroes. They were located in such a way, that they interfered with nothing and so there was no excuse whatever except to try and force them to go back to work.

Who says that the Negro does not make a good union man? Given half a chance he sticks and fights without compromise.

Two More Challenges

PHILADELPHIA—UKRANIAN BRANCH and BROWNSVILLE ENGLISH—NEW YORK

STILL the call for action continues with only a few more weeks left in the Second Annual Sub Campaign. Live Builders continue the good work. Comrade Pidlisny of the Ukranian branch of Philadelphia secured a sub and immediately challenged every member of the Ukranian branch of that city to do the same. That's a small job for a Communist branch that has three weeks to do it in.

Philadelphia Ukranian branch, your job is a sub from every member before June 15. Will you do it?

In New York, Comrade Louis Niebrief secured a full year's sub and threw the challenge to Comrade Mitnick of the Brownsville English branch to go out and get another—and gives him until June 15 to do this.

Up and at 'em Comrade Mitnick!

DIRECT CONNECTION BETWEEN HIGH PROFITS AND UNEMPLOYED, SHOWN

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Wealth is pouring into Wall Street so fast that there are not enough good securities being issued to satisfy the demand. Says the New York Times, "the flow of wealth into the bond market for the first 4 months of the year indicated that 1925 would set a new record." The problem of the financiers seems to be to satisfy the demand of the wealthy for more and more securities.

No wonder! There is the regular flow of about $700,000,000 a year to the American investing class from its $10,000,000,000 foreign investments. This is in addition to the domestic interest and dividends which go on growing in spite of unsettled business and diminished employment.

That the Dawes family has its share appears from the annual report of Pure Oil Co., which is captained by Hell an' Maria's brother. For the year ended March 31, 1925, Pure Oil turned in an operating profit of $20,000,000 in round figures. After paying interest and making heavy deductions for depletion and depreciation about $10,000,000 remained for the stockholders, or somewhat over 11 per cent on the common stock.

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., with $10,000,000 profits on the common stock which is carried on the books at $1,250,000, provides the outstanding profit story of the week. This means $42 per $5 share, a profit of about 840 per cent. A. & P. has been paying cash dividends of $4 (80 per cent), the rest going into reserve to enlarge the business. It has just raised the dividend to $5 or 100 per cent.

A. & P. operates about 12,000 stores with the number increasing by 3,000 a year. This steady advance means the conquest of the retail grocery field by an anti-union corporation. The old individual grocer who was willing to employ union clerks is being driven from the field or absorbed. The business of this great distributing corporation for the year amounted to $352,093,342. This is roughly 40 percent, as large as the business done by the giant U. S. Steel corporation.

Botany Consolidated Mills, the American textile concern which has been advancing capital to German mills, reports a 1924 profit of $1,731,298. This represents $17 a share on 100,000 shares of Class A stock or a return of 34 per cent.

The foreign deal was made possible by the fact that Botany had accumulated larger surplus profits than were necessary for its enterprises in this country. It consisted of a loan of $2,000,000 to Kammgarnspinnerie, Stoehr & Co. and the Elberfelder Textile Works, two of the most important textile concerns in Europe. The loan gives Botany a long-term option to acquire a 50 per cent interest in a holding company to control these two concerns which in turn control over 30 plants located in Germany, Latvia, Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, Italy and Holland.

Here is a good example of how excess profits which American workers produce for their masters go abroad to back the competition of low-paid European labor. There is a direct connection between high profits and unemployment in the United States.

Sheppard Enters the List

Another rather flabby but willing defender of American capitalist institutions against the inroads of Communism has made his appearance in the person of L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors. Speaking in Minneapolis, where his union—the word "his" is used advisedly—is in convention, this high-salaried labor aristocrat pleaded with businessmen for the support of his kind in their war on the reds.

This incident is interesting and important. If any labor union in America should be deaf to Communist agitation it is the Order of Railway Conductors with their substantial incomes, white collar jobs and the general atmosphere of small town respectability with which they have surrounded themselves. Almost without exception the members of the union belong to the two powerful fraternal orders—the Order of the Mystic Shrine and the Knights of Columbus. The conductors are accepted as equals by the business element and one would be inclined to say that they are so much of the privileged strata of labor which imperialism subsidises that the class struggle is beneath their attention.

But Sheppard's speech is an indication that this conclusion is incorrect. The speech would not have been made if somewhere and somehow the class struggle which has produced the left wing movement in America had not made itself felt in the organization. Pressure from some source is worrying the officials of the hitherto complacent Order of Railway Conductors and that pressure can come only from below.

We promise Brother Sheppard to investigate with Communist thoroness the causes of his expressed fears and make the proper recommendations.

Physical Examination in Toronto

The physical examination system introduced in cloak and suit shops of Toronto, and agreed to by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is one more example of the constantly increasing restrictions with which workers are confronted in the unending search for a job.

The pretext of the bosses is that they wish to protect their customers from contagious disease, but the workers will soon discover that the only protection that will result from this rule will be the protection of the boss from the activities of militant workers.

All physical examination systems have the professed love of sanitation for their excuse, but it is notable in this instance that before the rise of unionism in the garment industry the bosses cared neither for the health of their customers or that of their employes. Sweat shops were the centers of the clothing industry and sanitation was conspicuous by its absence.

A good rule to go by is that whatever the boss wants is a bad thing for the workers. A sanitary shop from the standpoint of the capitalist is one in which the workers are devoid of all class consciousness even tho they might have every foul disease in the calendar of the medical profession.

The Toronto workers will have to fight this physical examination system one of these days and they may as well begin right now by not submitting to it.

The Klan in North Dakota

The peaceful plains of North Dakota have been invaded by the ku klux klan. They are burning fiery crosses and exploding bombs, conducting their "moral" campiagns and in general preparing the ground for the orgies of whippings, tarring and terrorizing for which the klan is infamous.

In North Dakota the farmers are not half a jump ahead of the collector for the harvester trust, the collector for the loan shark and the collector for the local robbers who call themselves businessmen. The farmers work for this trio and the railroad companies. From year to year they slave for someone else.

Into this situation comes the klan with its doctrine of racial and religious hatred, its weird ceremonies and its threats of violence culminating always in some cowardly outrage on helpless individual objects of its wrath.

It is all very well to brand the klan as an organization of degenerates, but it serves a very valuable purpose for the big and little robbers. It diverts attention from the class issues involved, creates dissension in the local organizations of the exploited and enables the local rulers to persecute those more militant workers and farmers who refuse to be fooled while being robbed.

In North Dakota as elsewhere the klan must be treated as an enemy of the workers and farmers and an ally of the robber clique.

Trying to Suppress the Comintern

A London dispatch says that the Daily Herald, an organ of the British labor movement, accuses the British government of engineering a conspiracy among all the allied powers to bring a concerted demand upon the Soviet Union that it suppress the Communist International.

The penalty for failure to agree to this deprivation of the liberty of the proletariat to organize and maintain its headquarters in the first workers' republic, is, according to the dispatch, to be the breaking off of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union of those nations which have recognized Soviet Russia.

We have no doubt but that some such conspiracy has been afoot. The existence of the Communist International is a standing challenge to the capitalist class of all the world, and it is unquestionably annoying to the capitalist nations, that the Soviet government grants the working class every liberty which is denied and suppressed by the capitalist powers.

But we also imagine that the plot will not get very far from the stage of talk, altho there is always the danger that the imperialist world will find some excuse for open warfare against Soviet Russia. But it will not be a popular war if it is waged for the suppression of the Communist International. Hence the present underhand and underground move threatening breaking off of relations.

The reason that the plot will not get far in this respect is that in place of Soviet Russia being in deadly necessity of the recognition of capitalist nations, it can make shift without extreme privation, while the capitalist nations have each required Russian trade as a first essential of continued existence.

The plot of half measures such as that reported is doomed to failure last but not least, because Soviet Russia will maintain the rights of organization of the workers denied by capitalist nations.

Taft's Tribe

Chief Justice Taft of the United States supreme court dedicated the other day the national headquarters of the chamber of commerce in Washington, D. C. The building was erected by scab labor thruout and the role of Bill the Fat, otherwise known as "God Knows" Taft, at its opening is symbolical of his solidarity with the open shop employers who gathered there for the festivities.

High dignitaries of the existing order hold up their hands in holy horror when Communists tell the workers that there are two classes in America and that between these two classes a state of war exists. The protests rise to a shrill shriek when the statement is made that the courts are class instruments or that Taft, a servant of the ruling class, will not pass impartially on the merits of cases in which workers and capitalists confront one another.

Yet here is the Chief Justice of the highest court in the land surrounded by his masters, dedicating a structure within whose walls campaigns to reduce wages, lengthen the hours and take more toll of workers' sweat and blood will be planned. The building itself is a monument to the mastery of the capitalist class and it stands in the capital of the nation of whose most powerful judicial body Taft is a member.

No class struggle? No classes?

Tell it to the marines whose bayonets enforce the decisions of the tribe of Taft.

The Example of Paterson

Paterson textile workers have secured wage increases of $4 and $5 per week recently. In the rest of the textile industry the workers have received wage cuts.

Attempts will be made to explain this by talking of the special conditions of the silk industry in Paterson that made the raises possible while the cotton and woolen goods workers took reductions, but this is mostly tommyrot. The Paterson workers resisted wage cuts and got increases because they organized, struck and fought the issue thru. Had the other textile workers been able to overcome the divisions and dissensions that weakened them, had they been able to organize, had they struck as militantly as the Paterson workers they would at least have prevented reductions.

The textile workers have been victimized by the fake labor leaders, they have been fooled by the belief that a dozen or more different unions can get results, they have had peace and sweet reasonableness in the face of the onslaught of the bosses preached to them until their will to fight has almost been destroyed.

In Paterson is the hard cold fact that fighting unions win. Even tho they do not achieve all they set out to do the workers are certainly not worse off than when they give in without a struggle.

The story of Paterson should be broadcasted thruout the textile industry together with the slogan of amalgamation—one union for textile workers.

Sixteen mines have now been closed by the Pittsburgh Coal company. Unemployment is being used to force the miners to take lower wages and longer hours. In the face of this condition, a general one thruout the industry, the sabotage of the campaign for the nationalization of the mines and the six-hour day by the officials of the United Mine Workers of America is nothing more or less than joining hands with the enemies of the coal miners.

Every day get a "sub" for the DAILY WORKER and a member for the Workers Party.

The English Independent Labor Party Conference

By R. BISHOP.

THE conference of the British Independent Labor Party was useful in so far as it provided a key to what likelihood there was of any lead being given to the working class from any source outside of the Communist International.

Since the demise of the Labor Government there had been strenous attempts made by the proletarian elements of the I. L. P. to try and "recapture the spirit of socialism," which to a certain extent at any rate had inspired them before the war. Consequently, much curiosity was manifested as to what the precise strength of this left wing element actually was.

Some thought it would sweep the conference off its feet and be able to give a clarion call to the workers to which the latter would respond. Others, among them MacDonald himself, felt that they were a negligible influence and would count for nothing.

As a matter of fact the truth lay somewhere between the two extremes. The Left certainly made its presence felt, but the petty bourgeois influences to which the Party had succumbed in the past were too strong to allow of them achieving anything tangible.

Sooner or later these Left elements will have to realize that there is no room for their activities in the circumscribed limits of the I. L. P. and that in the Communist International only lies the hope of the realization of their aspiration.

The opening of the conference by Clifford Allen supplied the key to the whole of the later proceedings. In the same breath as he criticized the actions of the labor government he pleaded for the conference to treat it leniently. Incidentally this is the same Clifford Allen who prior to the formation of the labor government had advocated that a minority government chould go forward with the full socialist program and when defeated on it go to the country at once asking for a fresh mandate.

When the National Administrative Council's (N. A. C.) report came up for discussion two items vewe of paramount interest; the Dawes report and MacDonald's action on the forged Zinoviev letter.

Here MacDonald got the shock of the conference; he had imagined that everyone had completely forgotten his action in this matter, but when Southall of Birmingham, who for years past has fought the pundits of the N. A. C., demanded that the I. L. P. itself should refer the matter back and itself set up a committee of enquiry, the motion was carried by 286 to 261.

The reference back of the section dealing with the Dawes report was moved by Marcus, a young I. L. Per from St. Pancras who for some time has been showing signs of dissatisfaction with the official I. L. P.

But here the proletarian spirit failed to manifest itself, and the reference back was defeated by a large majority.

The first resolution was on a minimum wage for all workers, and it called on "the government to set up a national commission to decide on a living wage and to arrange for the immediate nationalization of all industries that did not pay such a wage."

It was ironical to see the I. L. P. contemplating the possibility of a Tory government nationalizing industries immediately after they themselves had endorsed the Dawes report and the consequent denationalization of important German industries.

Realizing that the hope of a government commission in the dim and distant future was not a prospect to enthral the workers, David Kirkwood moved an emergency resolution, full of fine phrases about encouraging a militant spirit amongst the workers and asking for better industrial organization.

This "left wing" resolution offered nothing tangible, it offered no alternative to the program of the minority movement which E. E. Hunter and other I. L. Pers had attacked so virulently of late.

Both these resolutions were passed; this means that the I. L. P. has expressed its belief in class collaboration tangibly, and class struggle tangibly.

Apparently they are strongly of the opinion that running with the hares and hunting with the hounds is sound political policy.

Then came the item which the optimists declared would show that the I. L. P. still had a fighting spirit. This was the parliamentary report. But actually, though Buchanan and Stephen, two of the Clyde M. P.'s indulged in some very strong criticism of the labor government, the conference was so weak that MacDonald with his windy effervescence and appeal for justice and his claim to be immune from criticism, finally carried the support of the conference for what a right wing labor member once called "The best conservative government of modern times."

It is something new in an assembly of presumably working class delegates when a member, however eminent, can get away with it by objecting to criticism of one so exalted as himself and can brand with complete impunity all his critics as small minded men.

On the question of armaments the pure pacifism of a small section was promptly squashed by the official bunch, whose policy apparently is to talk peace and brotherhood and to build armaments as fast as possible.

Eventually it was decided to allow I. L. P. members of parliament to vote exactly as they liked upon this question. This of course was just as well, because they have always in the past done just as they liked, with but little regard for the interests of the working class movement.

A long debate then took place on confiscation or compensation. The champions of compensation were Dr. Hugh Dalton and W. Graham. Maxton took up the cudgels on behalf of confiscation.

The line of the compensationists and their argument was one which has been rendered familiar by generations of liberal and tory street corner tub-thumpers. We were referred to the hard lot of the half million "capitalists" in the co-operatives. In order not to antagonise the workers with small savings we must compensate the capitalist. In other words, we must forego the very object of our existance, the establishment of socialism.

On the other hand Maxton, while making a good destructive speech, failed entirely to face up the problem of how to confiscate if reliance is to be placed solely on the parliamentary democracy that the I. L. P. professes.

This item was eventually referred back to the branches for discussion. This fact alone is proof enough that MacDonald's influence with the working class is on the wane, otherwise the mere suggestion would have been scouted.

Apart from these main items hurried resolutions were discussed dealing with the reform of parliament, on the lines of the ordinary British bourgeois municipal council, on India, advocating Dominon Home Rule, support of the league of nations etc.

If one surveys the work of the conference, one finds that the I. L. P. is still facing both ways, still unable to make up its collective mind on any working class problem, still largely under the influence of liberals, who have joined the I. L. P. not because they love and admire socialism, but because they hope to make the socialists love and admire liberalism.

Still one gleam of hope arises from this conference: MacDonald, who last year was greeted with the most servile adulation, who in the past was undisputed tyrant of the I. L. P., now finds not only criticism of his action supported by one third of the conference, but that some elements are striving for a militant policy.

That policy they will not find in the I. L. P., and in the near future the Communist Party should begin to recruit the best of the proletarian I. L. Pers into its ranks.

TRADE UNION UNITY IN FRANCE

By P. SEMARD.

IT will be remembered that a short time ago the Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire (C. G. T. U., General Unitarian Federation of Labor) proposed to the reformist Confederation Generale du Travail (C. G. T., General Federation of Labor) to hold a mixed conference between the two federations in order to discuss the question of arriving at trade union unity. It was proposed that a congress of both federations should be held in September, the month in the course of which the congress of each federation was to take place. At the same time it was pointed out that a congress thus held in common might be decisive for the creation of a united General Labor Federation through the immediate amalgamation of the revolutionary and reformist trade unions.

At the end of March, the national council of the reformist C. G. T. met, and after examining this proposal, rejected it and declared that the question of unity must be discussed at the reformist conference which was to take place in August, and that in any case it could only be realized by the return of the wage workers to the organizations which officially belong to the C. G. T. and are affiliated to the Amsterdam International.

THIS was a brusque refusal as a reply to the proposal of the C. G. T. U. With indefatigable zeal the latter again approached the reformist C. G. T. with another more precise proposal; that of calling a mixed conference of the executive committees of both organizations at short notice, in order to discuss the following agenda:

1. That a congress of both associations be held in August after the conclusion of the congress of each separate association.
2. That the way should be prepared for this congress by calling a combined general meeting of the trade unions belonging to the C. G. T. U. and the C. G. T., in order to carry through the amalgamation from below and to make definite plans for the extended and closer direction of the restored trade unions.
3. That congresses of the trade unions of the departments and of the industrial unions be called, in order to carry through the amalgamation under the same conditions.
4. That a committee be formed immediately, consisting of representatives of both federations which should ensure the organization, the supervision and the carrying out of the measures agreed upon in common for the restoration of unity, until the August conference.

THE C. G. T. U., in making this proposal, expressed the opinon that the amalgamation of the organizations of the C. G. T. U. and the C. G. T. would, at every stage, be dependent on the success of the first joint conference which it had proposed, and on the work of the combined committee of representatives of the C. G. T. U. and the C. G. T. which was to follow this conference. It further pointed out that, in case the C. G. T. did not agree to this simplified method of carrying through the unity, it still would maintain its proposal to call a combined congress at the conclusion of the two August congresses.

The national committee of the C. G. T. U. which met on April 17 and 18, unanimously confirmed this proposal by accepting a report which points out the urgent necessity of realizing unity, in view of the threatening economic crisis and of the inflation which will further aggravate the living conditions of the workers; unity is necessary in order that the workers may give a victorious answer to the threats of fascism and may defend themselves against the rise in prices, the breaking down of the eight-hour day and the unemployment which would result.

At the very moment when the C. G. T. U. was making these proposals and once more placing before the working class the question of trade union unity and the realization of a completely united front, the leaders of the C. G. T., side by side with the socialist leaders, were involved in the lowest political intrigues in their efforts to solve the ministerial crisis which was taking place, and to continue the policy of suporting the new government.

THE negotiations with the representatives of the bourgeoisie have shown the working class how far they have already been guilty of treachery. When the renegade Briand was called upon to form a ministry, the socialist leaders called the national council of their party in order to discuss whether they should accept the proposal made to them by Briand, that they should take part in the government. It was no longer merely a question of supporting the government but of actually taking part in the ministry, side by side with one of the worst opponents of the working class. The majority of the active social democrats of the national council expressed themselves in favor of this participation, but they postponed it to a later date as they feared, in view of the fact that the municipal elections were about to take place, that immediate acceptance might have unpleasant consequences for their party.

The resolution passed by this socialist national council commissions the party to examine into the future possibilities of participating in the ministry, and declares that this must be done in agreement with the reformist C. G. T.

Attention should be called to the fact that, at the same moment when the socialist national council came to this decision, Jouhaux in the name of the reformist C. G. T., paid an official visit to Briand, during which, under cover of a discussion about the economic labor council and the league of nations to which both belonged, the two cronies discussed the possible participation of the socialist leaders and even of the leaders of the C. G. T. in the government.

AS a result of the momentary refusal of the socialists to participate, the renegade Briand failed to form his ministry. He prepared the way for the formation of a republican concentration government Painleve, Caillaux, Briand, with regard to which the worthy social democratic leaders have decided on a policy of support, as they suported the government of their friend Herriot.

Thus, at the same time as they refused the proposals for unity made to them by the C. G. T. U., at the same time as proposals were made to them by the revolutionary organizations for the formation of a united front of all workers in the fight against fascism, the social democratic leaders accepted the support of a government which nurtures in its bosom the bitterest opponents of the workers, the most faithful allies of high finance and the reliable accomplices of fascism.

THIS last treachery will open the eyes of the reformist workers who are still hesitating; it will bring the whole of the working class into closer touch with the revolutionary organisations, the C. G. T. U. and the Communist Party.

Finally, the campaign for the municipal elections which is now beginning, will afford us an opportunity to pillary the attitude of the leaders in the course of the political events of these last weeks. It will make it possible for us to intensify the agitation for trade union unity and a united front, and to prove that the C. G. T. U. is the only organization which is really desirous of unity.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

The Chicago Junior Section.

Since the last convention of the Junior Section locally the groups have made decided strides and have increased their activities in large proportions. The party appreciates the importance of this movement and is lending assistance and giving its time to build the groups. Financially the party has been an important cog and the federations have helped and are at present helping in organizing large numbers of children who attend the lnaguage schools.

The Junior groups are taking an active part in pushing all the activities laid down by the league and party. The organization of school nuclei is taking hold in Chicago and thru these nuclei we expect to center our drive against religious teachings and militarism in the public schools.

A membership meeting will be held very soon where all the Juniors in the city and also league members will be present to take up in detail plans for the drive against these two evils, and also to discuss future activities.

At factory campaigns the Juniors are prominent and are always willing to sell our party organs and aid in all the "Jimmy Higgins" work. The proletarian character of the children helps us in our work and makes it easier for them to understand us. The major activity the Juniors are now engaged in is the complete reorganization of the section locally as well as nationally.

Organizationally the Juniors are taught that their future aim should be to become members of the Young Workers League and then of the Workers (Communist) Party. Realizing the importance in their new field of work the Juniors are taking to the work wholeheartedly.

SHAKING A KING'S HAND

AN Iowa manufacturer was in London and was given the opportunity of shaking the king's hand. King George of England, an idiot who sits on the British throne, emperor of the crushed millions of India, was overwhelmed by this "republican" American, who grasped his hand at the Wembley exposition, declaring "now I'm happy. I have shaken hands with the king of England and Jack Dempsey."

This is a specimen of the "republican" spirit of America, as manifested when Hindenburg was elected president of Germany. The American capitalists care very little for the "republic" of the United States. The United States offers them an opportunity to accumulate millions—that is to say, to bleed the workers. The United States may be changed into a monarchy, as far as they are concerned, provided it allows them to further their income.

The workers of the United States do not want these bosses of theirs to shake the workers' hand. What the workers of the United States need is to give the capitalists such a shake that they will throw them off their—the workers'—backs. Hindenburg, George, Coolidge—what is the difference? To the American capitalists it is all the same—as their actions prove. Mussolini of Italy and Horthy of Hungary are all the same to them. The capitalist republic of the United States is not yet endangered. What the workers of the United States need is a workers' republic, where there will be no kings, no capitalist presidents, but a republic where the workers and poor farmers will rule. It is up to the American workers to do the shaking.

RAILWAY CONDUCTORS VOTE TO QUIT LaFOLLETTE; WILL PEDDLE VOTES TO THE TWO OLD PARTIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 21.—The Order of Railway Conductors of America voted at its triennial convention here today to withdraw from the third party political movement and henceforth to remain a non-partisan political unit endorsing for office candidates friendly to labor, irrespective of political affiliation.

The organization also went on record rescinding a former resolution demanding government control and regulation of the railroads and approved construction of a new home for aged and disabled conductors to be erected immediately, at a cost of $200,000, probably either in Florida, Georgia or California.

The question of motor bus regulation was before the convention when adjournment was taken. Election of officers was on the schedule. L. E. Sheppard, a candidate for re-election as grand president, apparently is unopposed.

"In withdrawing from the third political party the order of railway conductors is back on the same political basis on which it rested previous to the 1924 presidential campaign," Sheppard said. "The defeat of LaFollette came as a disappointment to labor, particulraly because labor was not responsible for the failure of the third party to win the election. The belief has grown that we can accomplish more by endorsing and supporting candidates friendly to labor, no matter what party they belong to, instead of lining up solidly behind any one party."

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE German monarchists are not letting the grass grow under their feet in their desire to wipe away the stain that was placed on the imperial standard when the Weimar constitution was substituted for the ukase of god's anointed, the kaiser. Not that the German working class found much improvement in their lot, by the substitution. Formerly the capitalist club made contact with his cranium via the flunkeys of the kaiser. Since then his skull was cracked in the name of the republic, in behalf of the same capitalist class.

ONLY a few days ago all the premiers of the German states met to felicitate Hindenburg on his election. Their spokesman was Otto Braun, socialist premier of Prussia. Braun told Hindenburg that everybody in Germany, from the leader of the fascisti to the head of the social democrats was as pleased as a cat basking in the sun, with the field marshal's election. Old Hindenburg is such a patriot, the socialist said, that he could not think of being the servant of any one class. But a few days ago, the socialists in the reichstag moved a vote of no confidence in the government and they were defeated.

ELATED with their victory, the monarchists decided to take the ball on the hop and moved that a committee be appointed to fumigate the Weimar constitution and take the republican poison out of it. The social democratic workers will have plenty of time to reason with themselves whether the dictatorship of Hindenburg and the capitalist-monarchist-fascist group is preferable to the dictatorship of the workers and peasants. them, but even tho she has proven The goddess democracy has deceived herself to be a shameless slut, the socialist leaders have uses for her. They are the political simps of the German working class.

THE Wall Street bankers are not alone in coming to the conclusion that Hindenburg will do all right as their show window figure head in Germany. The New Leader, of New York, and the Milwaukee Leader of Milwaukee, one unofficially and the other officially, have declared for the kaiser's favorite butcher. Berger shows his hand by quoting a long article from a British socialist paper, which eulogises Hindenburg and sets him up as a kindly soul who would not hurt a fly even tho he has no compunction about slaughtering millions of human beings.

THE United States government was forced to reduce the savage and unprecedented sentences imposed on Privates Crouch and Trumbull in Honolulu. The Milwaukee Leader is relieved, not because it has any feeling of sympathy for these rebel soldiers, but because "the great United States government has fortunately Wooden Cars Menace Life.

NEW YORK, May 21.—One hundred and forty-seven wooden and semi-wooden cars are still operated on the elevated lines of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. and are a serious menace to life, Corporation Counsel Nicholson reports, following a wreck in which eight persons were injured. The company ignores the order of the Transit commission requiring 100 new steel cars, despite large profits.

BRITISH PLUTES FEAR REBELLION AMONG COLONIES

Wales Makes Matters Worse in South Africa

LONDON, England, May 21.— The forced resignation of Viscount Allenby as high commissioner for Egypt, is but one of a number of indications that the growing spirit of revolt among the subject races dominated by Great Britain is causing increasing worry to the Baldwin government.

Allenby's resignation came following the dissolution of the Egyptian parliament by the puppet premier, after it was found that Zagloul's anti-imperialistic party had gained control.

Wales Plays the Monkey.

Allenby's withdrawal is said to be due to his failure to suppress the move of the Egyptians for independence from foreign domination, which was exemplified in the killing of Sir Lee Stack, governor general of the Sudan.

The prince of Wales, now in South Africa, is kept busy hopping from one British colony to another, watching hula hula dancers, playing polo, dancing, and shaking hands, in order to impress the colonial people with England's "good will."

However, the native South Africans cannot be impressed with that elusive commodity, when they are being exploited at starvation wages by British capitalists under the protection of the British government.

Serious Revolts.

The prince of Wales' visits have already caused one serious revolt among the Orangemen, and several other disturbances and demonstrations against British imperialism.

The revolt of the Moroccans against Spanish and French imperialism has caused the British capitalists to become great concern as to their hold on the colonies exploited by England.

WORKERS MUST PUT AN END TO ZANKOV TERROR

Fascists Caused Sofia Bombings, Reds Show

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 21—The foreign delegation of the Bulgarian Communist Party issued the following declaration on recent happenings in Bulgaria, signed by Comrades Kolarv and Dimitrev:

"The Communist Party of Bulgaria had planned NO armed insurrection either for the 15th of April of for any other date. The statements of the government in Sofia are nothing but conscious lies based on forged documents. The Central Committee has had nothing whatever to do with the attempt on King Boris' life, nor with the explosion in the Sofian cathedral. The government's calumnious campaign was only to serve the purpose of justifying the mass executions

In view of the internal and external situation, the Bulgarian party had not considered the creation of a Soviet government in Bulgaria as its immediate aim. The Communist Party and the working class could carry on their struggle illegally only, because they were outlawed; but the party continually demanded the legalization of the workers' organizations, and repeatedly declared its readiness to return to legal methods as soon as the rights and liberties of the working masses were restored.

Zankoff Cause Bombing.

The Communist Party was always opposed to indiivdual terror, always supporting only one form of struggle; The mass struggle of the workers and peasants. Only two months ago the Central Committee had criticized the neglect of the campaign against the high cost of living, and had declared itself against the formation of partisan troops. The Communist Party was always opposed to the partisan invasions from Yugoslavia. But the party repeatedly declared that the reign of terror of the militarist clique was inevitably driving the masses to a new insurrection, and that this time too the party would fight on the side of the people.

"The Sofian explosions and the other terroristic acts, are the inevitable result of the unparallelled governmental terror. The prisons are overcrowded with thousands charged with belonging to illegal organizations. The outlawed workers and peasants who have been shot or otherwise murdered, possessed no other means of defence than those dictated by the instict of self-preservation.

"The Communist Party repeats emphatically that the country cannot be

FACTS ON SPEED-UP TO BE GIVEN BY MILL UNIONS

Textile Union Convention June 24-27

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 21—(FP)—Assembling of facts on the multiple loom system and the efforts of industrial engineers to introduce speed-up efficiency methods is to be done by the emergency committee of the executive council, American Federation of Textile Operatives.

The union executive council decided that the propaganda of machinery manufacthurers and over-zealous engineers must be combatted by telling the facts from the point of view of the worekrs involved.

Reports of new unions organized at Brattleboro, Vt., Biddeford, Me., and Nashua, N. H., were brot to the meeting. The strike of voile weavers at Lincoln Manufacturing mill, Fall River, is settled after four months' fight against a wage cut.

The convention of the American Federation of Textile Operatives is scheduled for June 24-27 at Biddeford, Me., and all affiliated locals are being asked to send delegates.

FINNISH WHITE GUARD GOVERNMENT ATTACKS LABOR ORGANIZATIONS

HELSINGFORS, May 21.—Finland's supreme appeal court having declared the Finnish Communist Party's activities illegal, the party has been ordered by the government to be dissolved. The government has instructed the public prosecutor to obtain legal decrees, for the dissolution of ninety-seven other supposed Communist organizations.

ONE MAN DYING, SIX WOUNDED WHEN DALLAS MOB STORMS JAIL TO LYNCH TWO NEGROES WHO AWAITED TRIAL

DALLAS, Texas, May 21.—One man is dying and six others were wounded early today when a mob of about 5,000 stormed the Dallas county jail in an effort to seize two Negroes, Frank and Lorenzo Noel, brothers, being held for the alleged murders of two white men and an assault on their woman companions.

The wounded are:

Dwight Stewart, C. J. Tullennen, K. T. Swain, N. E. Duncan, J. J. Young and Tim Jollu, all said to live in Dallas.

Stewart's injuries were believed to be of a fatal nature.

About 100 of the would be lynchers were arrested.

The attacking party, armed with pistols and rifles, shot a volley against the jail building, where the two Negroes occupied cells. The volley was returned by police inside the jail.

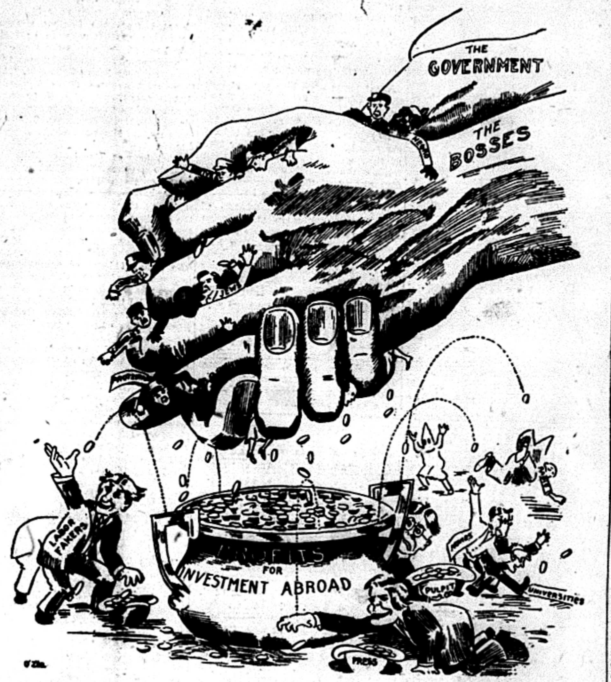
One Dying, Six Wounded.

Five hundred men, heavily armed, will guard the Dallas county jail tonight to protect Frank and Lorenzo from mob violence, Sheriff Schuler Marshall said.

Any group that attempts to approach the jail to take possession of the Negroes will be shot down, he warned.

"We are not going to remove the two Negroes," the Sheriff said. "We are going to stand pat and do our duty."

CREATING "OUR" NATIONAL WEALTH



IRISH RAILWAY STRIKE LOOMS ON WAGE CUT

Entire Island May Be Tied Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 21.—The railway workers of Ireland are menaced by an attempt to cut their already insufficient wages on the part of the Irish railway administration. This is tending to bring about a strike as a defensive measure and will not add to the dislike on the part of Irish workers for the Free State government.

All Irish railway workers in both North and South are affected, as all are threatened with a cut of five shillings a week. The men are organized in the Railway Transport Union which has its chief strength in England, and C. T. Cramp, the head of this union is now in Ireland fighting the case of the men before an arbitration board.

In the southern section particularly, the men are threatening to take strike action the moment a wage cut is announced. The so-called "wage board" is made up of representatives from the chambers of commerce of both Belfast and Dublin, two congressmen and six members each from the union and the companies.

Bribery and Jury Fixing Charged in Shepherd Trial

The Shepherd-McClintock tangle took a forward step today with the announcement that James Callan, the ward politician alleged to have attempted to influence a prospective juror had been found and that Arthur E. Byrne, Shepherd investigator, had changed his mind about testifying before the grand jury and was now awaiting only a call.

The trial thus far has been marked by kidnapping and disappearance of witnesses and charges of bribery and jury fixing.

UNITY MOVEMENT MAKES PROGRESS ON CONTINENT

Social - Democrats Play Judas Role

The current issue of Trade Union Unity, which is edited by A. A. Purcell, George Hicks and Ed. Fimmen, gives a list of organizations that have endorsed the international unity movement initiated by the British and Russian trade unions. The magazine calls attention to the failure of the socialist and official press on the continent to publish expressions of the rank and file in behalf of unity. The following are some of the unions that have endorsed the action of the British Trades Union Congress in entering into an agreement with the Soviet unions to further the cause of unity:

GREAT BRITAIN—Both the Shop Assistants' Union and the National Union of Distributive and Allied Workers have received at their recent annual conferences presidential address strongly urging trade union unity.

MORGAN FIRM IS READY TO FLOOD U. S. WITH POISON

Cal's Aid Favors the Ethyl Gas Company

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—That the Ethyl Gas Corporation has little fear that the conference which the surgeon general Cumming of the public health service called to convene here on May 19, will bar the sale of "looney," tetra-ethyl gasoline, was seen in the announcement of the trust that special motors will be introduced to use the lead gasoline.

The Ethyl Gasoline Corporation is a combination of the Standard Oil company, and the General Motors Corporation, a J. P. Morgan concern.

A. S. Maxwell, sales manager for the "looney" gas corporation, declared that preparations are now being made to introduce special motors which are aimed to triple the mileage of ordinary gasoline.

The lead gasoline has already killed 11 workmen employed by the Standard Oil company and the Dupont Chemical company in manufacturing it, and has wrecked the health of many more. Doctors and universities investigating the sale of the gasoline, declare it to be a public menace.

Surgeon general Cumming showed that he is anxious to aid the Morgan-Rockefeller combination, when he announced upon the opening of the conference that "I sincerely hope that if it should be found that tetra-ethyl gas is deleterious to the public health, some substitute possessing the same efficiency will be developed."

FIERCE FIGHT RAGES ON RIFF-FRENCH FRONT

Paris Suppresses All Casualty Lists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RABAT, French Morocco, May 21.—Fierce fighting is raging along the Bibane front, with the Riffian natives inflicting severe damage on the French invaders. The Moroccans have reinforced their western flank, a war communique issued by the French admits.

Gen. Colombat had great difficulty in bringing up supplies to his troops, and succeeded only after heavy fighting, in which artillery and airplanes took part. Several hand to hand battles in the Riff trenches took place. No statement as to the French losses has been made since the beginning of the French invasion of Northern Africa.

Communists Disclose Heavy Losses.

PARIS, France, May 21.—Newspapers opposed to the French invasion of Morocco are printing the news of heavy French losses which the Painleve government is attempting to suppress.

The Communist newspaper Humanite prints a dispatch from Morocco disclosing that one regiment of colonila infantry has had more than 400 men killed and wounded since operations began. The first battalion fo the foreign legion has lost forty-nine men, the Communist paper reveals.

The guarded official communiques conceal the fact that the French have been forced to retreat.

Last week, according to war office statements, the fighting was all north of the Ouergha river, but the latest communique mentions occupation of places south of the river, shwoing that the French line has been pushed back.

It is now a well known fact that the official statements of the French army and the news dispatches of the correspondents are censored and changed.

The newspaper [illegible], organ of the left bloc, declares: "All we know with certainty is that one cannot trust entirely either the official news or the unofficial news sent by correspondents, who are watched and instructed and even censored."

The Cri Maroca further reveals the heavy losses sustained by the French invading army. It tells of how the young soldiers newly arrived from France march past long lines of caskets and graves on their way to the front. Abd-el-Krim's forces were within 12 miles of Fez, this newspaper states, and declares that the seriousness of the situation has not been allowed to become public.

General Cambay's forces have had much bayonet fighting, it is now known, with severe losses which have not been reported in the official communiques.

OPEN SHOPPER IN THE DEVER ADMINISTRATION CLASHES WITH UNIONS

Police and fire alarms in Chicago may break down owing to lack of repair, if the obstinate open shop efforts of John T. Miller, city commissioner of gas and electricity, to defy the union of truck drivers is not ceased.

Work on $400,000 worth of city lighting and the regular repair work was stopped when Miller suspended the truck drivers because they obeyed the union rules instead of his orders in the matter of working overtime, which they refuse to do without pay.

The absence of the drivers leaves 300 linemen and electricians out of work and halts maintenance and repair.

BRITISH AND RUSSIAN UNIONS ISSUE STATEMENTS ON PROGRESS OF INTERNATIONAL UNITY MOVE

LONDON, May 8.—(By Mail)—Today the London Daily Herald, official organ of the British trade union movement, published the following story giving the latest developments in the efforts being made by the Russian and British unions for a United Trade Union International. The progress of the joint effort is marked by the most cordial relations between the officials of both labor movements.

. S. IMPERIALISM OASTS OF LABOR ID IN TRADE WAR

aft Dedicates Temple to Open Shop C. of C.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—The higher level of wages in the nited States is fully balanced by pecialization, superiority of tool quipment and management," said rancois de Stphalle, vice-president of e Baldwin Locomotive Works, yeserday, speaking before the 17th anual convention of the United States hamber of commerce.

This shatters the unqualified boasts f capitalists and their labor lieutenants that the wages of American orkers are so much better absolutey than European workers, without entioning that American workers re also speeded up and produce so uch more than European workers hat, compared to the value of their roduct, American workers are paid t a lower rate than the European orker.

Says American Economy is Secure.

De Stphalle went thoroly into the apprehension that America's position n the world market would be injured when "Europe is stabilized and its cheap labor becomes a factor in marketing merchandise."

"Even at the height of currency depreciation in Europe, and therefore the cheapness of European wages, this competition did not materialize. The outstanding fact is that the United States is the only great power now enjoying a foreign trade higher than in 1913, not only in money but in volume of goods.

"A great asset to American exporters," he continued, "is the ingenuity and labor saving features of American production."

Trade War in Far East.

Echoing the sentiments of De Stphalle, George E. Anderson, former consul general, asserted that American manufacturers need have no fear of German and British, "their most formidable competitors in the Far East and in Australia."

Besides these observations on the dominant position of American imperialism abroad in its relation to wages at home, Richard F. Grant of Cleveland, president of the national chamber of commerce, attacked the restraints upon monopoly and private capital by government "meddling." "Government inquisition of the private citizen and his business, from the publishing of his income tax to innumerable investigations by specially constituted commissions, is becoming unpopular," he said. It is understood that he referred especially to the Teapot Dome investigation of Daugherty and the "Ohio gang."

Want no Regulation.

A. C. Dodson, coal operator of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, also attacked government regulation of mining, while Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, Kentucky, criticized the "cheap demagogue politicians" in congress and opposed any more "farm relief" laws.

Last night, the great $3,200,000 building of the U. S. chamber of commerce built by "open shop" labor, was dedicated by William Howard Taft, chief justice of the supreme court of the United States.

Taft Fathered the Outfit.

It was Taft, who, seventeen years ago, called together the first conference of capitalists who organized the U. S. chamber of commerce. He was then president of the United States.

Silas H. Strawn, whom Coolidge tried to name as "prosecutor" of the Teapot Dome scandal, but who appeared to be too deeply involved in financial connections with the Teapot crowd to be finally accepted as official whitewasher, was named along with William R. Dawes, "Hell and' Maria's" brother, to the resolutions committee of the convention.

Charging that "excessive speculation of the last few months was destructive to the legitimate purposes of the exchange," Rothwell awaited the opening of the board of directors' meeting to present a resolution which would bar excessive fluctuations in the grain market due to speculation.

Merchant Capital Complains.

The split was expected in board circles. If the resolution is determined of "national importance," it immediately would be presented to the resolutions committee which meets later.

Factions in the national Millers' Federation and many prominent whole sale grocers are backing the resolution because of belief their legitimate business is being handicapped by excessive fluctuations in the market.

All the important exchanges are affiliated, thru officials of the national chamber.

Objects to Price Fluctuation.

WASHINGTON, May 21.— A wide open split in the ranks of the United States chamber of commerce appeared imminent today over Chicago grain market speculation, now being investigated by the department of agriculture.

A faction of flour millers and wholesalers headed by X. J. Rothwell, Boston, president of the Bay State Milling company, announced immediate approval would be sought on a resolution censuring gambling on the grain market.

CHURCHES' MILLIONS INVESTED IN OPEN SHOP CORPORATIONS IS CHARGE; PENNSY BONDS NAMED

By ART SHIELDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 21.—How can a christian church consistently say it stands for the right of the workers to unionize and to receive fair wages while at the same time its church funds are largely invested in stocks and bonds of corporations that deny these rights?

This is the challenge presented to the wealthy protestant episcopal church by Dean Lathrop in a leading article in Christian Work entitled "The Churches' Stocks and Bonds." The article has attracted wide attention not only for its opposition to the current investment policies of the church but for its proposal that investments shall in future be made only with concerns that come up to the ethical standards the church has laid down.

Christian Theory and Capitalist Practice.

Dean Lathrop tells what these ethical standards are. They were adopted at the general convention of 1922 by the house of bishops and the house of deputies of the church and declare that "Human rights must take precedence of property rights. Therefore a minimum subsistence wage, and if possible, a comfort and saving wage must be the first charge on the industry . . ." And it is further emphasized that labor as well as capital has the right to organization.

That is the church theory, but church practice has drifted along old lines. Dean Lathrop shows that the national council has been guided in its investments by financial and not by ethical considerations. The investments are for the most part in bonds yielding secure and regular income.

Church Millions Behind Open Shop.

What these securities are in which the church funds are placed is shown by the annual reports of the various funds. There are a number of big fund groups. The writer has to hand the printed report for December 1923 of the standing committee on trust funds of the domestic and foreign mission society of the church—obtained thru the courtesy of Dean Lathrop.

It summaries the $7,843,325.84 of cash and securities in the mission funds alone. It is impossible here to enumerate the more than two hundred varieties of securities furnishing the mission revenues but nearly all of them are railroad and public utilities holdings whose labor policy is partly or entirely on an open shop basis.

One of the corporations represented is the Pennsylvania R. R. In talking to the Federated Press Lean Lathrop listed this enterprise as one whose labor policy was bad and whose securities would not meet the test of an ethical evaluation of investments.

ORPHAN HOMES SELL CHILDREN INTO SLAVERY

Victims Sent South in Car Loads

NEW YORK, May 21—A traffic in child slaves was revealed at the Child Welfare Conference at the closing session at the Hotel Biltmore. Mrs. Bennet Smith of Temple, Tex., said that thousands of children from foundling homes are shipped to Texas farms where children are placed in unfit homes to be turned into cotton plantation slaves. To give the semblance of legality to these slave deals children are tagged with the names of their new parents. As a matter of form they are adopted by farmers who use them for heavy farm labor.

"There is no kind of supervision," she said, "over the welfare of these children once they are taken into Texas under the guise of legal adoption."

Mrs. B. F. Westmore of Spokane, Wash., made similar charges, declaring that very young children are taken in large groups from the congested East to Northwestern states, and, altho legally adopted by farmers, become a part of the migratory labor.

"The adopted parents of such children evade the compulsory education laws," Mrs. Westmore said, "and agents are sent East to arrange for the wholesale transportation to great apple orchards and truck farms."

Children are disposed of as one would dispose of "chickens and puppy dogs" by many of the great foundling institutions," Dr. Hastings R. Hart of the Russel Sage Foundation declared, saying he had seen crimes committed in the placing of children in family homes that made the blood run cold.

Engineers' Strike in N. Y. to Tie Up Ice Making Plants

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—(By Mail.) — With union engineers ordered to quit their posts, more than two-thirds of the ice manufacturing plants in Manhattan and Bronx face a tie-up.

The action of New York local No. 29 of the Stationary Engineers' Union follows closely a similar move by Local 56 in Brooklyn and Queens, which ordered its members employed in ice plants out the other day.

Both strikes have been called to enforce the union's demand for an increase of about $1 a day in wages and for a union contract. The union has asked for a rate of $9 per eight hours work.

John J. McDonald, secretary of Local 29, said that more than 100 men would answer the strike call here and that about sixty plants would be froced to shut down on account of the strike. This means that some 12,000 tons of ice of the 18,000, which is the normal daily consumption of ice at this season of the year, cannot be produced.

In Brooklyn, according to Fred Rauscher, secretary of the local, forty-six plants in Brooklyn and Queens are tied up and that 300 men are on strike.

NORTHWESTERN LAYS OFF 3,000 MEN FROM SHOPS

Move to Cut Wages by Unemployment

Between 50 and 55 per cent of the workers of the northwestern railway shops in Chicago are now unemployed and tasting some of the Coolidge "prosperity," according to the information reaching the office of the DAILY WORKER.

In latter April the railroad announced its intention to lay off 86 per cent of the force of about 7,000 employed. However, this was later changed, and the lay offs took effect on a lesser, though still a great, scale on May 4th. It is estimated that about 3,000 or more are now laid off.

In the locomotive department a reduction of forces of from 50 to 55 per cent was put into effect. In the freight car department nearly all the men were laid off. The only department which did not suffer was the passenger car department, which is running a full crew.

Action by the shop crafts union is, apparently, undecided. While the lay off is apparently a part of the campaign of the business interests to give the starvation cure to the workers in order to make them accept a wage cut, no word of fighting back has reached the ears of the men from the shop craft unions.

The shop chairman at the northwestern shops is John Collins, a socialist.

Coolidge Can't See It.

WASHINGTON, May 21—President Coolidge's mythical spokesman has flatly denied that he is going to call a new Hague conference of the powers, to codify international law as a necessary preliminary step to American adherence to the international court of justice. He sees no need for codyifying the law before joining the court. Hence, the report that Sen. Borah had "sold" the idea to him is worthless.

Besides, calling a conference would raise the issue of Russ'an recognition. Borah, in a speech at the university of Michigan, has again demanded that the Soviet Union be recognized in the family of nations. The state department bureaucracy is still unwilling to support Borah. Coolidge prefers to let the issue sleep.

Winter Defends Justice Department.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Congressman Winter of Wyoming, where Teapot Dome is located, has addressed an open letter to the Wheeler defense fund committee, in whcih he heatedly denies that the conduct of the department of justice toward Senator Wheeler has been a disgrace, as asserted by the committee in its public appeal. Winter defends everything the department has done to the Montana senator, and denies that his indictments were secured because he performed his duty in exposing rotten conditions in the department.

Farm Boys Worst Exploited.

WASHINGTON, May 21. — Boys brought up on farms get less schooling than any other group of children —less even than their own sisters, says the U. S. bureau of education, reporting on a survey of rural schools. The increasing cost of farm labor has resulted in depriving more and more of the farm boys of the chance to attend high school, until now the bureau finds them seriously crippled in educational start in life.

WORKERS MUST PUT AN END TO ZANKOV TERROR

liberated from the Zankov government thru guerilla warfare or individual terror, and warns the tormented workers and peasants against the use of such methods of struggle. The Communist Party declares, however, that it cannot condemn those who have sacrificed their lives in the struggle against the white terror. The barbaric regime bears the entire responsibility.

Workers of World Must Act.

"Only a change in the government of the mad criminals, only the abolition of the emergency law, the restoration of the rights and liberties of the working masses, and amnesty, can bring this peasant country back to the methods of mass struggle for the demands of the workers and peasants. The criminal band of generals and bankers is trying to reinforce its insecure position thru new mass arrests, thru bestial terror, and thru mass executions of the best fighters. In these frightful days of terror that have befallen the whole Bulgarian nation, the Communist Party expects the support of the workers of all countries, especially from the workers of England, France, America and Italy, whose governments are supporting the hangmen of Sofia. Energetic action on the part of the workers of these countries can still save the lives of thousands of workers and peasants, and help them free themselves from the bloody Zankov regime."

Coroner's Jury Frees 15-Year-Old Vampire Killer

Lucille Wunsch, 15-year-old Thornton high school pupil, walked from the coroner's inquest here this afternoon, a free girl—exonerated of the murder of Agnes Simneck, her father's alleged affinity, by a vote of 2 to 1.

She plead the "unwritten law," and the jury allowed her to go free.

New Haven Carmen Want More Money

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 21—The trolleymen of New Haven are seekink wage rates increased from 55 and 60 cents an hour to 70 and 75 cents; 80 cents and hour for operators of one-man cars and 90 cents an hour for bus operators. The union complains that tho trolleymen are supposed to have first call on buss positions, the company has been employing outsiders. The agreement expires June 1. Union demands are filled with President J. K. Punderford of the Connecticut company and will be referred to the trustees for action.

Profits Before Human Safety.

NEW YORK, May 21. — The new type of shaft and transmission guard on machines in the needle trades industries which the New York state labor board has ordered brought a delegation of manufacturers' association agents to the headquarters of the state labor department to protest that the safety measure would cost too much and was of doubtful value. The list of protesting boss organizations include the American Cloak and Suit Manufacturers' Association, the Associated Dress Manufacturers, the Eastern Millinery Association, the Shirt and Boys' Waist Makers' Association, the Bonnaz Embroidery Manufacturers' Association, the Pants Contractors' Association.

Turkey Buys German Submarines.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 21.—The Turkish government has given to Herr Blohm an order for two German submarines to be used for coast defense. Blohm represents the Maatschapij Fijenoord of Rotterdam, a Dutch company owned by the Aeg. Vulcan and Blohm and Visz interests of Germany.

Capitalist Hope Tries to Put Rebellious Riffs in Class With Indians

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, American workers are blandly informed, thru the employers' press, that the trouble the Riffs are making for Spanish and French capitalist rule in North Africa doesn't amount to very much. It is just an incident in the onward march of irresistible imperialism, it is said, like the futile effort of the American Indians to stop the progress of the white man upon this continent.

This is, of course, a confession of blindness to what has been going on in the world for the last century and a half, like Senator LaFollette, and his "socialist" following, with the political slogan of "Back to '76."

• • • •

The Russian Bolshevik revolution destroyed the "socialist" myth that nations must go thru an intensive development, under capitalism, before exploitation can be abolished, and the workers and poor farmers come into power. The apologists for capitalism support this position by lauding the uplifting influence that capitalist "civilization" brings to "backward peoples."

Christian soldiers, with Bibles in their hip pockets, murdered defenseless Indians on this continent "for their own good," so it was said; just as Victor L. Berger, the American "socialist" congressman, defends American intervention in Mexico, claiming that a good dose of Wall Street imperialist rule will better prepare the Mexicans for the advent of socialism.

• • • •

It was inevitable that the tide of white immigration, pouring across the Atlantic, should overwhelm the American Indian. But it is not argued in the parliaments of Spain and France, nor in the American congress, that the drift of the white human flood is into North Africa or Mexico. It is not new settlements for white peoples that France and Spain seek in Northern Africa. It is an effort to subjugate the African colonials to its imperialist rule, just as Great Britain tried to mainain its imperialist sway over the American colonists.

• • • •

The Moors of Northern Africa have a centuries'-old civilization back of them. If they are able to challenge European capitalism, as they have already met and rebuffed the imperialist armies of Spain, then the whole colonial policy of Rome, Paris and London is threatened, not only in Africa, but also in Asia, where hundreds of millions of restless colonials groan under European rule, ready at the first favorable opportunity to rise in open rebellion.

• • • •

The repeated defeats in Africa of the Spanish military junta may soon result in the ending of monarchic rule in Spain and the inauguration of a bourgeois republic.

But French imperialism's troubles in Africa may have greater consequences. The bankrupt French treasury, in spite of its aid from the House of Morgan, cannot meet the heavy drains that an extended war against the Riffs demands. After a month of fighting, military operations are being pushed on a larger scale than ever. The fall of the Painleve government, as a result, is already predicted.

• • • •

In the French chamber of deputies stand the Communists, raising the cry of the solidarity of French workers and peasants with French colonials, not only in Africa but everywhere. Across the world the Communist International sends the demand for the right of self-determination for all peoples, that the capitalist diplomats discussed at Versailles, but that only the Bolshevik revolution has made possible for the world's land surface, all harmoniously united in the Union of Soviet Republics.

• • • •

The Riffs of Northern Africa, trained in European warfare, are not the "poor Indians" of the American continents, easy victims of expanding British, French and Spanish imperialisms, at their very dawn.

Rather the Riffs symbolize one of the insoluble problems of a fully developed world imperialism that is faced not only with discontented and rebellious colonial peoples abroad, but with the rise of a developing revolutionary working class in the home countries, struggling to create their own Soviet power. Truly the oppressors are being surrounded on all fronts by the oppressed, pushing forward for the final victory.

RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOR UNIONS GREETS DANISH STRIKE

(Inprecorr Telegraph Service)

MOSCOW, May 21.—The executive bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions has directed the following appeal to the striking workers of Denmark:

"The executive bureau of the R. I. L. U. sends its fraternal greetings to the striking and locked-out workers of Denmark, and expresses its hope that you may keep up your struggle with determination and steadfastness. In your hitherto comparatively peaceful country too, capital has taken up the offensive, as in the other countries. Compromise and agreements cannot halt the growing intensification of the class struggle, nor reduce the pressure of well organized and concentrated capital.

"You can achieve victory in your defensive struggle against capital only thru solidarity in your own ranks, thru the support of all workers, the determined will to fight on the part of those locked out, and thru the united front with the workers of other countries. Such insolent attacks on the part of the employers can be prevented only thru international unity of the trade union movement. The lessons you have learned from your struggle should serve you as a new incentive to unity.

"Long live international solidarity!

"Long live the unity of the international trade union movement!"

54 MINES CLOSED IN PITTSBURGH DISTRICT; 11,000 OUT OF WORK

MONESSEN, Pa., May 21.—The last of the union mines of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. closed down when the mine at West Newton near here closed and the men where ordered to take their tools out. This makes the 54th mine to close down in this district. When these mines are running full it is estimated that between 10,000 to 11,000 men receive employment.

There are still several mines that are operating on the union scale that are owned by independent concerns, and several that are running on the non-union or open shop basis.

Pittsburgh Coal Co. says that it cannot operate but on the 1917 scale. All along the valley you can see men tearing down coal tipples and bring out the coal cars, and rails.

NEGRO SLAVES ARE BEATEN IN FLORIDA CAMPS

Judges Sell Workers to Peonage Farms

PENSACOLA, Florida, May 21.—Negro victims of peonage told in the federal court here ho— County Judge W. I. Chafin had virtually sold them into slavery in the turpentine camps, and when they tried to escape, had them beaten with sticks until they streamed blood.

Those on trial under indictment for violating the United States statute prohibiting forced labor, are besides Chafin, Sheriff C. S. Clark, deputy Sheriffs Thomas Shuler and T. E. Cason, G. W. White, commissary manager, Will Proctor, bookkeeper, Chas. and Alfred Land and M. B. Davis, turpentine operators.

Sold Into Slavery.

Henry Sanders, a Negro, told how he and three others had left the Calhount county turpentine orchard of Land and Davis, and were arrested on a state process from Chafin's court charging them with stealing $8.00 worth of tools. They were taken to Chafin's court and "permitted to plead guilty." "Costs" were then assessed against each, and a $90.00 bond was placed over each worker. They were then taken back to the turpentine camp to "work out the debt."

"The longer we worked the deeper we got in debt," Sanders said. Another worker told how in less than three months of work, they had chalked up a "debt" of $114.00 against him. "I got nothing for it," he said. "When I tried to leave, I was chased by armed men and beaten."

"I was caught some miles away and the sheriffs ordered De Witt [illegible] (another Negro who had escaped) to beat me. He did, as they had guns pointed at him. The Davis (one of the defendants) told De Witt to draw the stick toward him so as to cut my flesh. Three other Negroes repeated the same story. As they appeared in court they had big welts on their bodies as the result of the beatings. George Diamond and Galveston Jackson, also told of being taken prisoner and forced to labor by court order and told of beatings they had received.

The judges practicing peonage in the south have arrangements with the lumber and turpentine interests whereby they are paid so much a head for every Negro who is pressed into slavery in the camps. Many Negroes are murdered, and the "officers of the law" who are party to the crimes, make no move to bring the murderers to justice.

City of Chicago Sells Valuable Land to Railroad Trust

The city council, by a vote of 36 to 9, passed an ordinance giving the Nickel Plate railroad 255 acres of submerged land and an exclusive belt line right of way around the proposed Lake Calumet harbor in return for a channel to be built by the road down the center of the land. The land will be incalculably valuable when the Calumet harbor is completed.

The Nickel Plate railroad is owned by the Van Sweringen interests, who are backed by the J. P. Morgan company.

Little Entente Protests Against Hungary.

VIENNA, Austria, May 21—The countries of the little entente, Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania, and Jugoslavia, have sent a note to Marshal Foch protesting against the violation by Hungary of the treaty of Trianon, charging that Hungary has created too big an army.

SOCIALISTS IN ESTHONIA AID WHITE HANGMEN

Military "Court" Gives Death to Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVAL, May 21.—In White Esthonia the military court is working without interruption. Nearly every day in Reval, Dorpat or Narva workers are tried. The number of the accused in every trial is 3 to 5 persons. One or two of them are always sentenced to death. Why does the Esthonian bourgeoisie not attempt to arrange another trial of "149"? Because the officials cannot organize such a big trial within a week and the judges are impatient, and futher because the trial of the "149" has proved a great failure.

Furthermore the coalition government in which Social Democrats participate, tries to hide in smaller trials the terror of the bourgeois rule. By shoting the workers and peasants in smaller groups the bourgeoisie believes it can be done unnoticed. This "legal" and systematic murder of the workers and peasants is the greatest terror in present Esthonia.

Military "Trials."

About one of these trials in which Comrades Welt and Uelgekutt, representatives of the peasantry, were sentenced to death, the bourgeois press writes laconically:

"The trial is opened at 10:20 p. m. under the presidency of the permanent member of the court martial, Colonel Helkas, assessors are Major Ainsen and Colonel Elb. The assistant of the military prosecutor, major Knorring, represents the prosecution. The lawyers Erik and Liig have been assigned to the defense on a decision of the court."

In "democratic" Esthonia colonels and majors are always playing the most important role. The accusation is the following:

"Long before the December revolt John Welt was known to the secret police as one of the most active members of the labor movement. In 1924 he joined the fraction 'The United Front of the Workers,' participated in the demonstration against the war on August 3rd and during all this time energetically prepared 'revolt' by carrying on agitation and collecting arms."

The same accusation was raised against the other accused, the small peasant of the Isle of Oesel, Ulgekutt. Comrade Welt did not declare himself guilty.

Spies Only Witnesses.

The trial examines the "witnesses" who, as even bourgeois papers admit, are all agents of the police. They naturally all affirmed that they had seen Welt and Ulgekutt near the barracks where the conflicts between armed workers and military took place. Comrade Welt names his witnesses. The chairman of the court asks the police agents what is the political tendency of these witnesses. The agents answer that they are communists. The defense asks how the police agents know that. They state that these witnesses have formed in their district a branch of the "United Front."

Therefore the statements of Welt's witnesses are not taken into consideration.

After a conference of five minutes the court reads the sentence: John Welt, 27 years old and G. Ulgekutt, 29 years old are sentenced to death.

Comrade Welt was born in 1896. His father was an agricultural worker on a land estate. In 1919 Welt as an ex-soldier received a piece of land on which he worked with his father, maintaining all the time a close connection with the labor movement. Since 1920 he worked among the peasants of the district of Pernau and later on in the district of Pollin. In the elections of 1923 he was appointed by two electoral districts as a candidate on the list of the "United Front of the Workers and Peasants." When in the beginning of 1924 the parliamentary fraction of the "United Front" was arrested, comrade Welt entered the parliament in the place of the arrested comrades and continued energetically their revolutionary activity till his arrest in December 1924.

Comrade Ulgekutt, also a peasant, is one of the most popular workers among the small peasants of the Isle of Oesel. He was born in 1896. The revolutionary ideas found a strong response among the working population of the Isle of Oesel. The overwhelming majority are small peasants who live under the most difficult conditions. In order to live and to pay their taxes, the peasants look for work in other districts during the winter season. At the time of the revolt Comrade Ulgekutt was in Reval. After the revolt he returned to Oesel where he was arrested and transported to Reval as a "participant in the revolt." Comrade Ulgekutt similar to Comrade Welt was a candidate for parliament of the district of Oesel for the "United Front." This circumstance alone was sufficient to pass against him a death sentence.

BRITISH AND RUSSIAN UNIONS ISSUE STATEMENT ON UNITY

T. U. C. and the delegates of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions.

The conference, it will be remembered, discussed questions affecting the possible affiliation of the Russian trade union movement to the International Federation of Trade Unions. The statements by each side, the substance of which is here given, will shortly come up for discussion by the I. F. T. U. at Amsterdam.

The British Statement.

The British statement, after preliminary remarks, is as follows:

(1) It is suggested that the Russian movement should consider a reply to the Amsterdam resolution to the effect that in the interest of international unity they are desirous of participating in an International Federation of Trade Unions which would include among its objects those enumerated in the rules of the Amsterdam International and a constitution, in general outlines, not essentially dissimilar from that of the Amsterdam International.

As the present rules of the International Federation were drafted to meet the requirements of the countries, at present affiliated, and, without supplementary revision, may fail to meet legitimate requirements of the Russian trade union movement, preliminary conversations and conferences are absolutely necessary.

The object of such conversations would be to ascertain how best to develop the existing International Federation so as to facilitate the inclusion of the Russian and all other trade union organizations.

Conference Proposal.

(2) The British section will undertake to submit to the Amsterdam International that this, in principle, complies with their condition for a conference as far as can be reasonably required, and will urge that full consideration must be given to those special difficulties confronting the Russian trade union movement, as representing a country with a great variety of very distinct nationalities.

The British section will declare that an international federation of an all-inclusive character cannot be fully developed except by making full provision for variations in tradition, historic association, and political differences in the various countries.

The British section will also again affirm that the differences between the Russian Trade Union Council and the International Federation of Trade Unions can be most successfully dealt with by an informal conference.

(3) Subject to joint agreement on the above clauses, the British section will submit to the International Federation of Trade Unions the following proposals:—

(a) The Bureau of the International Federation of Trade Unions to call an immediate conference, with the representatives of the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions for the purpose of considering the position arising from the decision of the General Council meeting at Amsterdam on the 5th to the 7th February, 1925, and also the conclusions of the joint discussion of this conference.

If such a conference be convened, the British section will endeavor to secure the fullest co-operation of all parties concerned.

(b) In the event of the Bureau of the International Federation of Trade Unions deciding that they are unable to convene a conference as proposed above, the British Trades Union Congress General Council will undertake to convene a conference and endeavor to promote international unity by using its mediatory influence as between the Russian trade union movement and the Amsterdam Bureau.

In this capacity the British Trades Union Congress General Council will be inspired by a full appreciation of existing difficulties and a desire to create a united industrial international organization capable of efficiently representing the international interests of the workers.

The Russian Statement.

The Russian delegation states that it will recommend the British statement to the All-Russian Trade Union Council. This has since been done, and the statement approved.

The deelgation reaffirms that the trade unions of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics always conceived of the unity of the international movement as the concentration of all working-class forces in a single International, on the basis of national unity and of united national and international trade union organizations.

The delegation welcomes the good-will expressed in point two of the declaration of the British section, and intended to eliminate the difficulties standing in the way of realization of international unity.

For its part the delegation recognises as equally acceptable both a formal and an informal conference.

The delegation similarly concurs with the intention of the British delegation expressed in paragraph three of the statement of the British section.

Amsterdam Replies.

For its part, the Russian delegation states that the trade unions of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics cannot conceal the circumstance that all their correspondence with the Amsterdam International concluding with the last resolution of February 5 to 7, 1925, has created on them the impression that the majority of the Amsterdam International, which rejected the correct and just resolution proposed by the British trade union representatives, are unwilling to meet the sincere desire of the unions of the union.

Such a conference, says the delegation, may represent a considerable step forward. It will be the first business-like approach towards the settlement of the vast and very complicated question of the realisation of actual unity of the international labor movement, and of the gathering together of the forces of all working-class organizations, based on the principle of the class struggle between labor and capital.

The delegation, therefore, concurs with point B of paragraph 3, and for its part expresses its fullest readiness to take part in the conference which may take place, by the force of necessity, on the initiative and by the mediation of the British trade unions.

It particularly welcomes the desire and intention, clearly expressed in this point, of the representatives of the British General Council, to devote every effort to bringing about the international unity of the labor movement, by creating a united industrial labor organization, capable of becoming an efficient organ for representing and defending the international interests of the workers.

Workers' Desire.

It notes with special satisfaction that the Russian trade union movement entirely shares the idea of the establishment of the most complete unity of the international trade union movement by the setting up of a single efficient international of trade unions, independent of any influence of the capitalist class, for the purpose of uniting the trade union organizations of the whole world, both in their daily economic struggle and in their struggle for the final emancipation of the working class.

The delegation is convinced that this completely coincides with the fervent desire of the broadest mass of the workers in every country, who see in this the sole real barrier against capitalist reaction, economic and political, and equally against the peril of new fratricidal wars.

Nevertheless, it is essential to recognize that all this can be brought about only if all labor organizations display the necessary good-will in this direction and accord the necessary fraternal and attentive consideration to all the existing international, national, and other independently existing trade union organizations.

Letter From a Russian Railway Worker

TO keep up your energy which you need in the continuous struggle against the capitalist exploiters, I will tell you something about our life, the life of the working class in the U. S. S. R. and I can vouch for the veracity of my statement.

Comrades, I am a railwayman and the assistant of the station master in "Savintzy" on the Donetz Railway. We work in four shifts, the number of hours per month is 192 and no more. The monthly wage is 35 roubles which is gradually increased in accordance with the increase of the productivity of labor. It is true that the housing crisis here is very acute. But the housing co-operative societies have already done much in this direction, and new workers' settlements spring up as the result of every building season. Social insurance is on a satisfactory basis: on the birth of a child the local insurance fund gives to the mother 13 roubles and 60 copeks (prior to the 9 roubles) and 3 roubles per month for the child. Unemployed members of trade unions receive 5 to 10 roubles a month according to family conditions. This is a considerable help. We get regularly every year a fortnights holiday and free railway and steamship tickets, wherever we like to go.

The trade union movement—the surest way to socialism—is developing rapidly. Trade unions derive their funds from fees calculated at the rate of 2 per cent of the wages of its members. There are great achievements to record on this field. For instance three years ago trade union membership in the U. S. S. R. was only a few hundred thousand. Now there are millions of trade union members. Our vanguard—the Russian Communist Party (Bolshevik) is also growing in strength and numbers and is progressing slowly but surely. Every year brings hundreds of thousands of new forces into its ranks. Interlopers are ruthlessly cleared out by the party. In this manner all the healthy elements of our country are drawn gradually into constructive work. The country is steadily recovering. Our main slogan now is: "Down with everything that is decayed, and make way for everything that is healthy".

With Communist greetings,
Workers Correspondent No. 1125.

NEW YORK FOOD WORKERS BUILD UP THEIR UNION

Unorganized Voice a Readiness to Fight

By Arthur Smith

NEW YORK CITY, May 20.—An impressive demonstration of the willingness of unorganized workers to fight for the betterment of their conditions was given at the Bryant Hall meeting last Thursday by the hundreds of unorganized workers of the the Hotel and Culinary Industry. They eagerly listened to the words of the speakers, most of them participants of our past struggles. The first call to battle by the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Branch was responded to the non-union workers with an unexpectedly good line-up.

Old Bryant Hall, mute witness to many a great struggle of the hotel and culinary workers, was filled almost to capacity. Union and non-union workers cheered and boo-ed unitedly whenever the occasion called for it. Comrade Gitz after a brief opening address, introduced Comrade Obermeyer as the first speaker.

Voices From the Kitchens

Obermeyer is a waiter by trade and one of the old and loyal fighters of our union. His description of the miserable conditions prevailing in the industry made all feel the injustice of it.

As the meeting progressed groups of workers were still pouring in. The smell of un-ventilated kitchens and dining rooms was still lingering about them giving taste of reality to the words of Comrade Mobille, describing the merciless exploitation of the workers in the culinary industry. Their faces yet perspiring from a long days hard labor, just fitted into his words as living examples. Comrade Mobille is a cook. He spoke in French.

Rank and File Ready to Fight

There were speeches in Italian, and some more in English. But what marked the climax of the meeting were the simple words uttered by some workers of various open-shop hotels and restaurants. "Are we to endure for the rest of our lives every day, 12 long hours of labor, under most rigid supervision and unbearable working conditions? Shall the bosses and their lieutenants forever continue to suck out every ounce of our strength and energy every day? No! Now is our chance. If we only stick together we'll surely win." that was the essence of the words of all of them. They pointed out that conditions have changed and today the men in the open-shops are willing to fight.

This sentiment expressed by representatives of the unorganized masses carried significance in itself; it was a declaration of war against the open-shop bosses.

Then Brother Glassman took the floor and soon was followed by Chairman Gits who made a few explanatory remarks on the question of abolishing the tipping system.

The Demands of The Workers Are:

The complete abolishment of the tipping system;

Eight hours work, straight watch; our minimum weekly wage scale:

$50 for cooks and waiters;
$38 for commis;
$30 for busboys and blue jackets.

Entire Families Work 14 Hours Daily Under Dawes Plan in Germany

BERLIN, May 21.—German home workers in the toy, artificial flowers and clothing industries and their compensation was the subject of a talk delivered by Professor Heyde, president of the Society of Social Reforms at an exhibition of home work products. The exhibition comprised all those trades and industries which in the rural sections of Germany employ entire villages and larger communities in the making of toys, labels, feathers, flowers and embroideries.

Wages are so low that wooden boxmakers are paid at 2½ pfennigs an hour. Those engaged in the cutting of leaves, the gumming of petals and the assembling of entire flowers in the flower industry receive 12 pfennigs an hour.

The homes of these workers were described as shacks that are little more than heaps of ill-assembled bricks comprising one room in which they work, sleep cook and live. Conditions in Thuringia are so bad that workers with their wives and children have to put in 14 hours of hard work each day in order to avoid starvation.

Wage Slaves Amuse Clothing Bosses

The convention of the International Association of Garment Manufacturers, now meeting in the Hotel La Salle, made their employes put on a style show for the amusement of the bosses present and awarded "certificates of merits" to the employes displaying the most bizarre clothing styles. The certificates, one manufacturer explained, cost nothing.

Getting a DAILY WORKER sub or two, will make a better Communist of you.

POLISH WHITE TERROR TORTURES SOLDIERS, JAILS WORKERS AND PERSECUTES SCHOOL CHILDREN

WARSAW, Poland, May 21.—The police of the districts near the frontier continues to undertake mass arrests among the local population. According to the latest news 20 persons have been arrested in Grodno and ten workers in the tobacco factory. The hall of the tobacco workers has been closed by the police.

According to news from Bialostok, in Bolsk and Bolowosh the authorities have arrested 20 persons for membership in a militant organization. The purpose of this arrest is the organization on a new anti-Bolshevik trial.

For the same purpose in Pinsk and Kobinya 80 persons have been arrested.

Children are not allowed to receive instruction in their mothers language.

The population of the village Prud of the district Slonim established their own White Russian school. This did not please the local authorities. The police called the teacher Rapontchik to their office and demanded from her a written promise that she would give the children no instruction in the White Russian language. For refusal of this demand the teacher was arrested.

Sentences Against Labor Editors.

The district court in Warsaw sentenced the editor of the Na Perelome, Marian Kozentzky, to two years of prison for publication of an "anti-state" article with a criticism of the comments of the Polish bourgeois press at the occasion of the protest movement of the state officials of Poland against white terror.

At the same time news reached us that the district court in Sosnovetz sentenced the former editor of the radical organ Molot, Sawadsky, to four years hard labor. In order to make the sentence more "convincing" the editor was furthermore accused of distribution of Communist leaflets in the coal mines "Paris" in Bendsin and of membership to the local relief committee for the support of the starving Russian population in 1922. In the trial a number of police agents and spies appeared as witnesses.

Soldiers Brutally Maltreated.

Under this impressive title we read in the paper Nash Psheglend: "In the battalion of Colonel Schuster the soldiers are brutally maltreated. For the least offense they are sentenced to barbarian corporal punishment, are beaten in their faces, etc. In the letters of the soldiers to their families facts are mentioned which are unheard of. Some soldiers have been driven to such despair that they have committed suicide."

SCOPES HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY ON CHARGE OF TEACHING SCIENCE

DAYTON, Tenn., May 21.—A special session of the Rhea county grand jury was called for Monday to indict J. T. Scopes, teacher in the local high school, for violation of the state law prohibiting the teaching of evolution.

Following his plea of not guilty in a justice's court here, Scopes was bound over for action by the grand jury.

Women Workers Protest Against Persecution of the Foreign-Born

NEW YORK, May 21.— A protest mass meeting will be held on Friday, May 29, at 8 p. m., at the Workmen's Circle Building, 143 E. 103rd St., to protest against the new deportation bills now before congress. If this bill is passed, every foreign-born worker will be exposed to deportation upon the slightest pretext. This means a decided threat against the foreign-born workers and an attack on the wages, living conditions of the foreign-born and native workers. If they protest against such conditions, they will be considered undesirable and be deported.

It is in the interest of all men and women workers to see to it that this mass meeting is well attended. The speakers will address the meeting in English and Yiddish. They will be William Weinstone, of the International Workers' Aid, Ben Lifschits of the Freiheit and Workers Party of America, Rose Nevin, the well-known worker in the labor movement; Kate Gitlow, secretary of the United Council of Working Class Women; Sonia Diamond, member of the executive committee of the United Council of Working Class Women; will preside.

This meeting is one of a series of meetings arranged by the United Council of Working Class Women.

Los Angeles Juniors Force Public Schools to Recognize May Day

By WM. SCHNEIDERMAN.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 21.—The Juniors of Los Angeles are jubilant over their first school victory when they forced the school authorities to recognize May Day as a legitimate holiday for working class children. Nearly one hundred and fifty Juniors had observed May Day by staying out of school and celebrating with a big outing. Two schools especially, where the Juniors are well organized, attempted to severely punish the children and refused to recognize their parents' request that they observe May Day.

In the Hollenbeck High School, 29 children were given severe punishments which included two weeks after school detention, demerits, etc. Immediately the Young Workers' League got busy and organized a parents' protest meeting, and a parents' committee went to the principal of the school and presented a resolution demanding the withdrawal of the punishment, and threatening to make an issue of it in the coming election campaign. The principal informed them that the matter was in the hands of the board of education, thereby admitting that he was merely acting as a tool of the capitalist politicians who control the education of workers' children. He admitted to the committee that these twenty-nine Juniors who were being punished for their courageous support of the working class were the brightest students in the school.

Evidently the principal was impressed by his first contact with real working class solidarity, for the next day, the punishments were completely withdrawn. The parents and the Young Workers' League were informed of their victory just as they were preparing to present protest resolutions to every local union in the city which recognized May Day.

In the Malabar School, over 45 children had stayed away on May Day, and they had also been punished with demerits and threats. The principal of this school had gone into a rage, threatened the Juniors with dire penalties, stormed and fumed, and told the children that they all ought to be shipped to Russia. But the Juniors stood their ground, and when another parents' committee visited the principal with the same protest resolution and the same demands, he had to sing a different tune. After a conference of over an hour with the committee, he realized that he was bucking up against a real organized force that could make things unpleasant for him if they made an issue of the matter before working class parents. He finally decided to give in, and the children were immediate re-instated without any punishment.

WORKERS OF CHICAGO CONDEMN BALKAN WHITE TERROR IN RESOLUTION

A mass meeting of several hundred workers met in Hodcarriers' Hall and listened to speakers in English, Croatian, Greek and Bulgarian tell the story of the terrible white terror that is sweeping over the Balkans. Most of the workers were representatives of the various Balkan nationalities. The following resolution was passed unanimously:

WHEREAS the countries comprising the Balkan states are, without exception, suffered to endure governments nothing short of dictatorships of militarists, who are the tools of the imperialist capitalism of the greater powers to the west.

WHEREAS, the militarist and fascist dictatorships of the Balkan countries serve the purpose of buffer states, against the Workers' and Peasants' Republic of Soviet Russia and constitute ever-present dangers as counter-revolutionary forces.

WHEREAS, there is no place in Europe where the working classes are more oppressed and economically depraved than in the Balkans where the cruelest exploitation is joining hands with economic chaos in the enslavement of the Balkan people, and

WHEREAS, in every country of the Balkans there reigns at this time white terrors of varying degrees of brutality and violence. The boyar oligarchy in Roumania thru the infamous "Siguranza" has crowded in the jails of the whole country with workers and peasants and has conducted a bloody attack on the workers, especially in Bessarabia, that it has forcefully occupied and held with mailed fist for almost seven years. The militarist party in Greece rigorously suppresses working class organizations and fills up its jails with workers and peasants. The Pachitch Pribitchewitch government of Jugo-Slavia assures its re-election by constant terrorizing of all opposition in the form of heavy jail sentences and executions. And in Bulgaria more than 10,000 workers and agrarian revolutionaries have fallen under the dripping sword of the bloody Zankov regime, and

WHEREAS, this unprecedented terror in the Balkans promises to grow more intense and merciless as the menace of war hovers nearer over southeastern Europe, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we here, workers of the city of Chicago in mass meeting assembled, pronounce our most emphatic condemnation of the inhuman methods of the bourgeois terrorists not only in the Balkans but the world over, declare our undying enmity for all fascist dictatorships and express our solidarity with our Balkan comrades in their struggle to attain a united Balkan Soviet Republic of workers and peasants, and that this resolution be sent to the Labor Press of all countries and to the Balkan ambassadors in America.

U. S. BUREAU HEAD PUTS ROSY VIEW ON LACK OF JOBS

Tells Miners to Become Farm Hands

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—Francis I. Jones, director general of the U. S. employment service, endeavors to put a rosy view on the employment situation for the month of April. However, he has to admit that in coal mining, particularly the unemployment is growing rather than lessening. His best suggestion is that the minors leave home and get seasonal jobs on roads or farm work. He says nothing of the necessity of government assistance to the starving miners. He states:

Advises Miners to Become Seasonal Migratories.

"The only disappointing feature of the major group is the bituminous coal mining industry," he proceeds. "Further reductions in employment occurred in the majority of the bituminous mining states. The encouraging feature is that many of the coal miners will be able to obtain employment on the farms and on the large road building projects now being carried on thruout the country.

"The iron and steel industry eased up somewhat, but not to any alarming extent. The textile industry is on the upward trend. Demands are general for all classes of farm help. The building program is broadening thruout the country and there is practically no unemployment among the building tradesmen."

Thirty Per Cent Jobless.

A report by Felix Morley of the editorial staff of the Baltimore Sun indicates that 30 per cent of the organized bituminous miners are now unemployed.

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By G. ZINOVIEV.

III.

The Main Points in the Present Political Situation.

The Situation in England Becoming More Revolutionary

WE come now to the next point, the situation in England. Here certain changes are to be observed. First of all, I will state that the Second International is gradually transferring its attention from Germany to England. This is a fact. With the formation of the first, so-called labor government,—the MacDonald government—the center of gravity of the Second International was removed to England. It seems to me comrades, that we are on the threshold of a period in which the center of gravity of the future development of the world revolution will also gradually commence to shift to England.

The opportunists will ask: do you really think that robust, full-blooded, conservative England has to fear revolution? Those who look upon things superficially are hypnotized by the full-bloodedness of British capitalism. But a pupil of Marx and Engels cannot but see that the power of the British bourgeoisie is seriously threatened from three directions. The first is the dominions. The second is the revolutionary character which the labor movement is assuming and the third is the Orient.

THE place of the conservative government in England can no longer be taken by a liberal government. There are only two great forces in England today: The conservatives and the labor party. If the conservatives will have to make way for another party, that party will not be the liberal party, but the labor party. For that reason the position taken up by the British labor party is of enormous importance. The gradual transformation of the labor party is obvious. Not less obvious is the growth of its left wing. These facts indicate that full-blooded, conservative England is standing on a volcano. The situation in England does not show symptoms of increasing stability, but on the contrary, is continuously becoming more revolutionary.

Antagonisms Between England and France

THE sixth point—the relation between England and France. Here too antagonisms exist. A conflict is going on for the domination of Europe. Both states at the present time are, in a certain degree, dependent upon American imperialism, which is striving to play off one against the other, rousing mutual conflicts between them and at the same time rousing conflicts between the two and other states. The situation in France is not in the least stabilized. The Herriot government, politically, has outlived its time. In order to prolong its life, it must abandon the very sense and content of its life. The French proletariat has increased numerically. The party of the proletariat has grown also. Work is being commenced in the colonies and among the peasantry.

The Situation in the Balkans

IN several countries, in Roumania, Bulgaria, Yugo-Slavia, there are in my opinion three revolutionizing factors: (1), the peasant movement, (2), the national movement and (3), the labor movement. The interaction of these three factors is of extreme importance, and this interaction is visible. Sometimes we are told that the fight is being conducted too half-heartedly; that the counter-revolution in these countries has become stronger. However, the dialectics of history teach us that sometimes, precisely at the moment when the counter-revolution appears to have reached its culminating point, it turns out that the revolution is near, precisely at such a moment, counter-revolution is substituted by revolution. That the national movement, the peasant movement and the labor movement in these countries bear a mass character there is not the slightest doubt. The Yugoslav government may annul the mandates of from 60 to 80 peasant deputies, and from the "constitutional" point of view, this may seem a mere bagatelle. But such things cannot be done with impunity: The discontent of the masses is merely driven down deeper. For that reason we Communists, in estimating the position in the Balkans, will not allow ourselves to be deceived with what we see on the surface. Superficially, the reaction appears to be omnipotent. At a first glance it may appear that the government in Yugo-Slavia has crushed the Raditch movement. If we look deeper, however, we shall be compelled to admit that the position of the Balkan government is still shaky and is not approaching stability in the least degree.

Germany and the Dawes plan

IN Germany we see the greatest changes. The tactics of our party with regard to the Dawes plan were correct. The international approves these tactics,—although it was clear from the beginning that, even with correct tactics we, for a time, would not be able to achieve considerable successes. We are concerned with adopting a line of tactics which would show to the proletariat that in the perspective of historical development, our point of view is correct.

At the present moment the working class of Germany is in a position in which it sees the "favorable" side of the Dawes' plan. There has been a revival of industry, an influx of capital, the currency has become stabilized. The exploitation of Germany by the entente, however, continues. the time will come when antagonisms will become more acute on other grounds. We openly stated in the press,—and I think this created quite a sensation—that the revolutionary situation which prevailed in Germany in 1923 does not obtain in 1925. I am afraid, comrades, that this assertion may cause considerable misunderstanding. No doubt some comrades will say: So! There is no clearly expressed revolutionary situation? That is exactly what we wish to establish. Consequently, the whole tactics of the Communist International and the German party are wrong?

WE must frankly state the facts. Harbouring illusions has never been of any benefit to the revolution. In Germany at the present moment there is not a direct revolutinoary situation; we recognize and analyze this fact. But this of course, does not imply the cessation of the class struggles in Germany. The class war in Germany has not ceased, and will not cease. Recent events confirm this. It is sufficient to recall the shooting down of the workers by the police in Halle. Read the reports in Rote Fahne of the demonstrations organized in connection with the events in Halle. We see that the class war is being carried into the streets. A fresh wave of economic strikes is breaking out. Consequently the struggle in Germany is continuing. Moreover, this is not the class struggle that was fought in pre-war days, but the class struggle of the post-war periods, i. e. always and invariably bearing the seed of civil war. On the other hand, this struggle is not conducted in the spirit of 1923, but in the spirit of 1925, which has its specific features.

The changes which have taken place in Germany are most striking. Soon, the Dawes' plan will have caused greater acuteness in the class struggle, which will not become blunted even if it drags on for several years. Again and again it will become acute on continually new grounds.

The Situation in Poland, Italy Czecho-Slovakia and Scandinavia

IN Poland, the situation is the same as that in the Balkans. Strong peasant movements, strong movements among the national minorities, which represent parts of the peasant movement, and also a strong labor movement. Consequently, in Poland also the combination of these three factors is in operation. A superficial investigation may lead to the conclusion that an improvement has taken place in the position of the Polish bourgeoisie, but the three factors mentioned above should not be lost sight of.

A word or two more concerning Italy. We have not yet succeeded in overcoming fascism there. Several weeks ago it seemed that Mussolini was approaching his end. It turned out not to be the case. But, the position of Italy is shaky, unstable and pregnant with everytihng in the world but consolidation.

NOW with regard to Czecho-Slovakia. The position of the bourgeoisie there is such that it can find no constitutional way out of the difficulties in which it is immersed. The coalition is breaking-up, and this is becoming more marked as time goes on. Here, as in Poland and in the Balkans, we observe the inter-action of the same three factors. It is true that the peasant movement and the movement of the national minorities also is weaker than in the previously mentioned countries. But on the other hand, the third factor, the labor movement is much stronger in Czecho-Slovakia than in the other countries.

As for Scandinavia, these "blessed" lands of the petty-bourgeoisie where the reigns of government are still in the hands of social-democrats, it is characteristic that even in these countries, the class struggle is becoming more acute. The idyll has come to an end. The sharp class struggles which we have witnessed in Scandinavia recently, particularly in Norway and recently also in Sweden and Denmark, testify to the growing acuteness of class antagonisms in the Scandinavian countries.

The Attraction of the International Proletariat towards the U. S. S. R. is Increasing

SIMULTANEOUSLY with this the power of attraction of the U. S. S. R. is increasing steadily. We must admit that for a little while, particularly in the period of the famine, this power of attraction diminished somewhat. At the present time, however, an opposite tendency is observed. The movement in favor of sending numerous trade union delegations to the U. S. S. R. is only just commencing and will no doubt grow. What attracts representatives of social democratic and non-party workers from other countries to us? An instinct that genuine socialistic construction has commenced in the U. S. S. R. These delegates reason to themselves approximately as follows: We have proceeded by different paths to those followed by Russia; we follow the social democrats. What have we achieved? Economically, our position is very bad. In Russia, the proletariat took what is, indeed, the thorny path, the path of blood and civil war. But, the Russian workers have already achieved much. The consciousness of this is awakening in the minds of the social-democratic workers and from now on will become more fixed.

The World Situation, as Before, Remains Objectively Revolutionry.

TO sum up, I would say: we must not separate Germany from the general picture, although we for a long time imagined that the revolution there was imminent. We must analyze the world situation as a whole and estimate it at its real value. We are a party of the world revolution, and not of the Russian revolution, or German revolution. For that reason, our estimation of the situation must embrace the world situatin as a whole.

Thus, in summing up, we must say: on certain sectors of the front the fight is no longer raging with the same heat that it raged in 1923. Although there is no armistice nevertheless, as compared with 1923, the fight on certain sections of the front (Germany) has temporarily subsided. Nor is there an acute revolutionary situation in Western and Central Europe.

But, with regard to the world position as a whole, as before, it remains revolutionary. The Orient is advancing more determinedly than we supposed. The influence of the Communist International is increasing and the idea of world revolution is becoming more and more popular there. Great Britain is more shaken than it seemed to us up till now. Karl Marx considered that a revolution without Great Britain would be but a storm in a teacup. If we place the position of Great Britain in juxtaposition to the position in Germany, and also take into consideration the progressive awakening of the Orient with its nine hundred million inhabitants, we will see that the factors retarding the revolution and the factors stimulating the revolution, approximately balance each other.

Consequently, comrades, the general position is that, as hitherto, we must reckon upon a twofold possibility; we must in future construct our tactics on the lines indicated in the resolution of the Fifth International congress and differentiate them according to the requirements of each country,—taking into consideration the possibility of both a prolonged and an accelerated development of the class struggle: From the point of view of our fundamental aims, there are not the slightest grounds for pessimism.

A Wrong Estimation of the Situation Leads to Anti-Leninist Deviations

THE Comrades who, from a wrong estimation of the rapprochement between England and America, draw pessimistic conclusions are directly faced with the danger of the beginning of a revision of the Leninist theory of imperialism. These comrades, frequently, are prepared to vote for any resolution, and to call themselves Leninists, but, they refuse to understand that when it is necessary to apply Leninism, they frequently commence to revise the most important and fundamental parts of Leninism.

Those who strive to show that the rapprochement between America and England must lead to the conversion of Europe into a dominion of the United States and to the removal of the antagonisms in Europe, by this repeat what Kautsky said in 1915 on the question of ultra-imperialism I do not wish to make extensive quotations and I refer you to Lenin's article in the collection entitled "Against the Stream" and to his controversy with Kautsky in his book "Imperialism, the Modern Stage of Capitalism." Lenin, in anticipation as it were, replies to the very questions which are now being put by the representatives of the right wing. I will quote merely one passage from the above-mentioned book.

"OF a similarly conservative character, as we have seen above, is Kautsky's notorious theory of 'ultra-imperialism.'

Indeed, it is sufficient to compare generally known and indisputed facts to become convinced how false is the perspective with which Kautsky is attempting to imbue the German workers and the workers of all countries. Take India, Indo-China, and China. It is known that these three colonial and semi-colonial countries, having a population varying from five hundred to seven hundred millions, are exploited by the finance capital of a few imperialist states: England, France, Japan, United States, etc. Let us assume that these imperialist countries make alliances against each other for the purpose of protecting or expending their possessions, interests and 'spheres of influence' in the Asiatic countries mentioned. These alliances would be "interimperialist" alliances. Let us assume that the imperialist states form an alliance for the "peaceful" partition of these Asiatic countries. This would be "the international combination of finance capital." Practical examples of such alliances are to be found in the history of the 20th century, for example in the attitude of the powers towards China. The question arises is it "conceivable, while preserving the capitalist system (and this is the assumption Kautsky makes) that such alliances can be anything but shortlived? That they could exclude friction, conflicts and struggles in a multitude of forms?

"IT is sufficient to present the question clearly, to make it impossible for any other reply to be given to this question except in the negative; for under capitalism, no other basis for the partition of spheres of influence, interests, colonies, etc. exists except the calculation of forces of those taking part in the division, viz., economic, financial, military, etc. and the forces of those taking part in the division, do not change equally, for an even rate of development of individual enterprises, trusts, branches of industry and countries under capitalism is impossible. Half a century ago, Germany was insignificant in comparison with the capitalist power of England at that time. The same comparison can be made between Japan and Russia. Is it conceivable that within the next decade or two, the present relations between the imperialist states will remain unchanged? It is absolutely inconceivable.

"Consequently, 'inter-imperialistic' or 'ultra-imperialistic' alliances, irrispective of the form in which they may be concluded: either the form of the coalition of one group of imperialist powers against the coalition of another group, or in the form of a general alliance of all the imperialist powers, must inevitably be only 'respites' between wars.

"Peaceful alliances prepare for wars and in their turn grow out of wars. They mutually determine each other, give rise to changes in the peaceful and non-peaceful struggles arising out of one and the same cause of the imperialist ties and inter-relations of world economy and world politics."

(V. I. Lenin. Collected Works. Vol. XIII, pp. 328, 329, Russian Edition).

COMRADES, we could use the same words today in reply to ur "prophets" who so over-estimate the importance of the rapprochement between England and America which in their opinion should almost abolish revolution.

Radek asserts that the democratic pacifist "era" has not yet passed away. It is true that MacDonald has left the stage, but, in the opinion of Radek, pacifism still remains. How does Radek arrive at this conclusion? Simply by regarding every situation in which war is not being actually conducted as pacifism. But imperialism requires respites between wars during which to prepare for fresh wars. Although war is not actually being conducted at the present moment, nevertheless, we see masked preparations for future wars. We must have the greatest clarity on this question. In December 1922, Comrade Lenin wrote:

"We must take the present conflicts, even the most insignificant, and use them as illustrations to show how war may break out, any day as a consequence of the differences between England and France concerning some detail in their treaty with Turkey or between America and Japan, concerning some trifling difference, over a Pacific question, or between any large powers over colonial disputes, customs policy, commercial policy, etc. etc."

THIS is how Lenin estimated the situation even before the end of 1922, when the situation generally seemed perfectly clear. He assumed that fresh wars might arise not only as a consequence of the important antagonisms between England and America, but even over such questions as customs and commercial policy. This is precisely the character of "pacifist" imperialism as a whole. Fresh wars may break out over most insignificant question. That is why we must resolutely repudiate even the most cautious and masked attempt to revise the Leninist theory of imperialism.

I repeat: The general world situation remains objectively revolutionary, in spite of the fact that in several countries, as for example in Germany, an immediate revolutionary situation no longer exists. The Fifth International congress, quite correctly estimated the situation. Our former tactics remain in force to this day.

How We Live and Work

Editor's Note:—This paper is printed for the workers, poor farmers and those who work and sweat under the present system of society. It is a paper of the workers, by the workers and for the workers. We want to reach every corner of this country where labor is being exploited for private gains, for profit. We want the workers and farmers all over the country to read the DAILY WORKER. In order to make it more interesting and be able better to reflect the life of the wide laboring masses, WE WANT OUR READERS TO WRITE TO US. This new department "HOW WE LIVE AND WORK" will appear as often as there will be sufficient letters from our readers about the life and working conditions under which our masses struggle. Try to make the letters interesting bringing out facts which may not be known to workers in other sections of the country. Try to make them short and to the point.

On the Trail of Job

YOUNG MAN: assist in cutting room, Underwear factory; $20 start; good opportunity; bring reference. Eisenkramer, 487 Broome St.

THE above is the advertisement I answered Monday morning. I arrived there at 7 o'clock and there were ten (10) fellows waiting already. The first question always asked by a new arival is, "has the boss come yet?" that is considered as an introduction and a conversation arises by counter-questions. The noise and conversations grew as the crowd accumulated and in about 15 minutes there were about 60 fellows standing all over the steps and hall waiting for the boss.

About 8 o'clock, a girl who probably took care of opening the place in the mornings, came and when the crowd saw her going towards the door, there was a general rush, and remarks such as "line forms to the right and left, don't all rush at once; you'll all get the job, etc." floated around the air.

When they got inside, you could have seen how many were there for the job, over 100 fellows. Every time the door opened, all eyes were turned in that direction to see who it was.

Another few moments went by and an employe happened to come in, it was lucky for him that the men's room was near the door, otherwise he would have been mobbed. Seeing such crowds near each department, he tried to get them into the hall to wait, but no one moved.

At 9 o'clock the boss came and everybody started for him but he would not speak to anyone in there. He said that he already had someone, and nobody moved even at that; they crowded all the more about him, knowing full well that he was not telling the truth. As he couldn't do anything he sent for the police. When they arrived (three of them) they started dispersing the crowd. Some of the fellows sneaked upstairs and the rest went down. One fellow on the stairs happened to turn around which caught the cop's eye and he was told to keep moving and not turn around, or he'll punch him on the teeth, backing his threat up with a raise of his fist and shoving half a dozen of us over each other.

A few of us waited downstairs and we saw the cops come down carrying a few packages which they placed in the rear of their two seated lizzie and then waited until most of us left.

There were 200 or that many when we were chased from upstairs and about 10 were still there when I left.

JAMES CONNOLLY MEMORIAL MEET HELD IN GOTHAM

Pass Resolution for United Front

NEW YORK, May 21—A mass meeting held in honor of the memory of James Connolly was held Sunday, May 10, at Harlem Terrace Hall, 210 East 104 St. The chair was occupied by Patrick Ennis (Dublin comrade of Connolly and president of the Connolly Memorial Committee.)

A leture on "Connolly, Patriot and Revolutionist" was given by Joseph O'Byrne, which dealt in detail with Connolly's ideals of economic and political freedom. An interesting debate followed the lecture. Songs in Gaelic and English were rendered by H. O'Byrne, the Dublin tenor. The following resolutions were passed unanimously and copies ordered sent to President DeValera, Sean T. O'Kelly, envoy Irish Republic, Miss Mary MacSwiney, William O'Brien, Sec'y Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, James Larkin, Secy. Irish Workers' Union, and the press:

(1) Whereas, it is now apparent to all unprejudiced observers that economic and political extinction of the historic Irish nation is the goal of the governments of the Free State and "Northern Ireland;" this mass meeting of the Irish workers held to honor the memory of James Connolly urges the workers and peasants of Ireland to inaugurate a policy of political, economic and social boycott of the "Free State" and "Northern Ireland" usurpations.

(2) We urge all Irish republicans to refuse payment of taxes to said usurping governments and not recognise any courts of law functioning under their "parliaments."

(3) We urge all citizens of the de jure Irish Republic to boycott and refuse all social recognition to members of the Northern and Southern Irish parliaments, members of the army, civil guard, peace commissioners, etc.

(4) We urge all members of the Irish labor party to withdraw from the "Northern" and "Southern" parliaments and form a working alliance with advanced labor in Great Britain, Russia, France, Germany, etc.

(5) We urge the officials of the Transport and General Workers Union and the Irish Workers Union to unite and make a united stand for the establishment of the Workers' Republic in Ireland.

(6) We urge the Irish republican party to throw its whole strength, moral, physical and financial, into an immediate political, economic and social boycott of the enemies, lay and clerical, of the Republic of Ireland as established in 1916.

Social-Democrats Play Judas Role

gratulates its especially on the results of the recent joint conference between the representatives of the British T. U. C. General Council and the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions. It calls upon the General Council of the Trades Union Congress to ratify the agreement arrived at by the joint conference, and to proceed with the utmost possible speed to put it into operation, as a preliminary to a world-wide propaganda and agitation for the unity of the world's workers in one trade union international.

The London Trades Council has passed a similar resolution.

BELGIUM—The Belgian Clothing Workers' Union sent two fraternal delegates to the Congress of the Russian Clothing Workers' Union at Moscow (February 16-20). On their return to Brussels these delegates have published an extremely interesting and appreciative report on "Trade Unionism in Russia," following the line of the British delegation's report.

One of the delegates, Mr. Liebaerts, the general secretary of the union, in the course of an interview has made the following observations on International trade union unity:

"I feel that Amsterdam will end by having to change its attitude. It is evidently mistaken in trying to force the Russian workers to sacrifice the organization—the R. I. L. U.—born of their revolutionary struggles. The international struggle of the workers, which daily becomes more difficult, cannot leave indefinitely the Belgian Trades Union Congress indifferent or hostile to the united front that is so urgently needed."

Mr. Liebaerts has further written to Mr. Purcell: in the course of his letter he states:

"Like the British Trade Union delegation, we returned from the new Russia firmly convinced of the possibility and necessity of realizing trade union unity with our Russian comrades. Our report and conclusions have been unanimously approved (with one hostile vote only) by our national committee."

FRANCE—During the past month the number of French trade unions which have passed unity resolutions is considerable. For the most part, these resolutions are directly concerned with the urgent question, for French workers, of national trade union unity. These resolutions are therefore unanimous in urging the holding of a joint Unity Congress between the two chief trade union centers, the C. G. T. (General Confederation of Labor, affiliated to the International Federation of Trade Unions) and the C. G. T. U. (Unity General Confederation of Labor, affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions).

Thus the joint committee of the C. G. T. and C. G. T. U. railwaymen of Mantes has resolved that:

"It is time to break all obstacles in the way of the reconstruction of a single C. G. T. We propose the holding of an inter-confederal Unity Congress which will decide upon the fusion of all trade union organizations."

This resolution has been passed also by the railwaymen of Beauvais (Oise) and a similar resolution has been passed by the joint committee of the C. G. T. and C. G. T. U. railwaymen of Sotteville. The C. G. T. and C. G. T. U. postal workers of Boulogne, at a joint meeting, have added to a resolution of the above character a clause urging their respective unions to support the Anglo-Russian committee.

The council of the Union of Officers of Taxes has declared its "firm intention, while retaining its independent position, to take an active part in the movement for unity begun by the British trade unions and the International Transport Workers' Federation."

GERMANY—The general meeting of the Chemnitz (Saxony) Branch of the Federation of State and Municipal Employes has unanimously adopted, against a few votes only, a resolution greeting the Anglo-Russian committee and urging the parties concerned to do everything possible for the reconsctitution of Trade Unity.

The Berlin branch of the German Wood Workers' Union has passed unanimously the following resolution:

"This general meeting instructs the branch committee to request the executive committee to work for the establishment of a single Trade Union International. We must congratulate ourselves that for some time our union has been affiliated to the Building Workers' International. But we cannot stop there. The task of the executive committee is to strive for the union of all those trade unions of the world which are based on class struggle, whether they are at present affiliated to any international or not, in one single Trade Union International. To this end the two internationals shall summon a World Congress."

SWITZERLAND—The Basle Trades Council, after hearing a report by Karl Durr (Secretary of the Swiss Trade Union Federation and member of the general council of the International Federation of Trade Unions) resuming the official I. F. T. U. policy against unity, has resolved that:

"The meeting takes its stand on the basis of international trade union unity. For this reason it congratulates and supports the action taken by the British delegation at the session of the I. F. T. U. general council on Feb. 5-7, for the summoning of an unconditional conference of both sides in order to discuss the question of a definitive decision on Trade Union unity. The meeting considers the unity of the international trade union movement as a vital question for the whole of the working class, in order to defend its interests against the united front of the bourgeoisie, and disapproves all expressions and actions tending to prevent the realisation of unity."

Bulgarian Terror Seeks More Blood.

SOFIA, May 21.—The court of appeals today confirmed the death sentence passed on three of the workers convicted in the Sveti Kral cathedral bombing. Those condemned were Friedman, sacristan of the cathedral, Colonel Koeff nad Zadgorsky.

The sentences were sent to King Boris for his signature. It was believed the hangings would take place in the public square before the ruins of the cathedral.

FOSTER SPEAKS NEXT WEDNESDAY AT T.U.E.L. MEET

International Unity Leads on Agenda

The militants the world over are interested in the unity of the world's trade unions, and greet with joy the forming of the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity committee, which sets up in the Amsterdam International a definite left-wing. The strength of this left-wing lies in the British trade unions led by such internationally known labor leaders as A. A. Purcell, George Hicks, et al.

The British trades union movement, with the exception of the Russian, is the most advanced and progressive labor movement in the world. The pushing of the British trade unions to the left is largely due to the pressure of the left-wing minority movement. The minority movement of Great Britain should be studied very closely by the adherents of the T. U. E. L.

Foster to Speak Next Wednesday.

Wm. Z. Foster, who has just recently returned from Europe, will speak at the regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Local General Group of the T. U. E. L. next Wednesday, on "World's Trade Union Unity and the Minority Movement of Great Britain."

Comrade Foster attended the International Unity conference held in London last January, as a fraternal delegate from the T. U. E. L. There were 630 delegates at this session, representing the cream of the labor movement, with such powerful unions as the Miners and the Amalgamated Engineers' Union (Machinists) sending delegates.

The Left Wing of England.

The minority movement of Great Britain plays a very prominent part in shaping the policies of the labor movement in that country. No member of the Workers Party, T. U. E. L., or progressive trade unionist should miss this opportunity to hear Comrade Foster lecture on these two important and co-related subjects, "The World's Trade Union Movement," and the "Minority Movement of Great Britain."

This is only one of the features of the Chicago T. U. E. L. meeting. The regular industrial reports will be made, which promise to be very interesting.

Mining Report.

A report on the mining situation by Alex Reid, national secretary of the Progressive Miners Committee. Also the latest developments in the Machinists national election—the T. U. E. L. group in the Machinists failing to get their own candidates on the ballot, have been supporting the center group headed by Anderson. Without question B. & O. Bill Johnson has been defeated, but he is striving, by juggling the votes, to retain his position at the head of the Machinists' Union.

All militants should be present at this meeting to be held Wednesday, May 27, at 8:00 p. m., at the Northwest Hall, cor. North and Western avenues.

BUILDERS AT WORK

PUT YOUR BRANCH ON RECORD

Jewish Branch of Stamford Shows the Way

To the comrades of all foreign speaking branches and as striking example to the English branches as well, we point to a recent action of the Jewish branch of Stamford, Conn.

Together with a number of subs, Comrade Isidor Wofsy, secretary of the branch, writes us that the branch went on record for EVERY MEMBER OF THE BRANCH TO BECOME A SUBSCRIBER to the DAILY WORKER. This is a drive that should be started by every single branch of the Party.

It will prove a splendid medium for interest and education in Communist activity and principles—and it will supply every member of the branch with necessary day-to-day information.

In Russia it is a condition of membership and every worker who joins the party must become a subscriber to the official organ of the party. Some day (and we hope it is soon), this will be a rule in our party as well and today we can begin the job.

Start the drive in your branch NOW: Every member (who speaks English—no matter what branch he is in) should become a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER—the official organ of our party.

Kansas Ex-Governor Acquitted, Faces a Second Bribe Charge

TOPEKA, Kansas, May 21.—Jonathan M. Davis, who was found not guilty on a charge of conspiracy to solicit a bribe from Walter Grundy, convicted banker, in return for a pardon, faces another trial. Davis and his son are charged with selling a pardon to Fred W. Pollman, forger paroled while Davis was governer.

Four ballots were taken by the jury which was out three hours. One juror voted for conviction on the third ballot.

State and county attorneys were conferring today regarding the case against Russell Davis, son of the former governor and Carl J. Peterson, former banking commissioner, growing out of the investigation which brought the charges against the governor. It was considered certain today, in view of the fact that evidence in all the cases was presented in the case just closed, that the Peterson and Russell Davis charges would not be brought to trial.

Give your shopmate this copy of the DAILY WORKER—but be sure to see him the next day to get his subscription.

C'mon Over!

If you have a day, an hour, or a minute to spare—why, c'mon over. There is so much work piled up on the small force in our office that we need your help so very badly, to insert letters, address, seal and stamp envelopes and ever so many other little jobs that have us swamped. If you volunteer your services that's a fine way to help the DAILY WORKER. We'll be glad to see you—so just for fun, c'mon over!

TRADE UNIONS OF AMSTERDAM PROTEST TERROR

Demand End to Crimes of Polish Fascists

AMSTERDAM, May 21.—A meeting called by the trade unions in Amsterdam adopted unanimously the following resolution:

The revolutionary workers of Amsterdam in the meeting called by the national labor secretariat and the local labor secretariat, protest energetically against the disgusting terror which is committed against the revolutionary workers in Polish prisons; they demand the immediate release of Lanzutsky and amnesty for the political prisoners who suffer in jail by the thousands for the just struggle against the Polish bourgeoisie.

We, the workers of Amsterdam, consider it our honorary duty, to participate in the work of the International Red Aid of Holland which on an international scale offers its protecting hand to all revolutionaries who have been torn by the bourgeoisie from the ranks of the international militant working class.

We decide to send this resolution to the general consulate of Poland, to the minister of justice of Poland and to the International Red Aid.

(Signed on behalf of the meeting),
Langkemper.

IMPERIALIST EXPORT TRADE IN MACHINERY DEFEATS COMMODITY EXPORTS, SHOWS CASE OF BRAZIL

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

That chronic unemployment in industrial nations can be cured by foreign markets appears as an illusion from department of commerce figures showing the development of capitalist industrialism in Brazil. The increasing ability of this once backward nation to supply its own manufactured articles is typical of a world trend which is narrowing the market for the United States, Germany and England.

The Case of Brazil

Responding to the enforced self-sufficiency when the world war cut down its supplies from outside, Brazil added 5,940 manufacturing establishments with a capitalization of about $146,000,000 between 1915 and 1919.

The proportion supplied by home production in 1919 of Brazil's consumption of important commodities was:

Textile of cotton, wool, linen jute and silk	90 ptc.
Shoes	99 "
Hardware	82 "
Hats	97 "
Tobacco	93 "
Matches	100 "
Porcelain and glassware	32 "
Wallpaper	98 "
Drinks	89 "
Pharmaceutical specialties	59 "

Sao Paulo Industrially Developed

Sao Paulo, the district which last year was featured in the news from Brazil on account of its armed rebellion, is the largest manufacturing center in the country. In it are employed nearly one-third of the industrial workers in Brazil.

The industrial development of this district has been phenomenal. Between 1900 and 1915 the value of its products increased more than 150 per cent while from 1915 to 1922 they increased 7-fold. The production of cotton goods increased from 36,600,000 yards in 1900 to 215,000,000 yards in 1922 and production of boots and shoes from 1,600,000 in 1900 to 7,293,386 in 1922.

A Trade That Kills Trade

As long as the less developed countries absorb machinery they will provide an outlet for the metal industries of the United States, England and Germany. But as much exports hasten the development of modern machine production in South America, Africa and Asia they will curtail the foreign market for textiles, boots and shoes, manufactured foods and the great number of consumers goods.

Export of machinery is the concrete expression of foreign investment. The department of commerce shows that nearly half of the individual firms in Brazil represent foreign capital. The ownership of corporate capital is hard to trace.

How profitable foreign investment in Brazilian factories is appears from the department's statement that 40 factories chosen at random in Sao Paulo city showed 1923 net profits averaging 33 per cent on paid-up capital.

Charge Explorer Killed Eskimo

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 21.—The Danish government, after more than two months negotiations with the state department at Washington, has granted Donald M. MacMillan permission to go with his expedition to Greenland, where he will be allowed to land at a western port. The delay in granting the permit was due to the charge that a member of a previous expeditin killed an Eskimo.

Organizing Industry For War!

The story of how the bosses are hurriedly organizing the industries of the country for war is told for the first time in tells how the organization of the big bosses, the Ordnance Advisory Board, headed by E. H. Gary, which is preparing industry on a national scale to make bigger profits than ever before out of the next slaughter of young workers.

The New Issue of the

How Near Is War?

Dark clouds are gathering over the Pacific and the imperialists are adding more young workers to their armies and navies.

The U. S. navy has been practicing for war in Hawaiian waters and Comrades Crouch and Trumbull are in jail in Honolulu because they opposed the coming war!

All these preparations of the bosses for war have been exposed weekly in the YOUNG WORKER which carries on a continual fight against capitalist militarism and imperialist wars.

The Machinists' Election

William H. Johnston, better known in labor circles as "B. and O. Bill," has been defeated in the election in the Machinists Union.

This does not mean that he will relinquish his office immediately, but detailed returns are conclusive proof that the membership has rejected Johnston by their ballots. What kind of jugglery will be practiced by the Johnston machine from now on to justify his continuation in office is hard to say, but it will have to be of the rawest kind and evidence is already at hand that fraud of the most brazen nature has been carried on.

The defeat of Johnston means a good deal more than a mere change in the administration of the union. Johnston has become the symbol of class collaboration in the United States and Canada and his defeat can be interpreted in no other way than as a repudiation of his class peace scheme. We do not say that the majority of the membership consciously recognizes the B. and O. plan as the company union which it is, but an analysis of the campaign conducted by the Anderson center group of the union, which was supported by the left wing, shows that one of its most telling points was a denunciation of the bankers and businessmen of which the Johnston group is composed.

The Mount Vernon Savings Bank and Johnston's connection with it entered prominently into the campaign discussion and there was evident a widespread disgust with the non-working class character of the Johnston machine.

The left wing made its position clear thruout the campaign. Its election statement made searching criticisms of the Anderson slate and pointed out its confused and hesitating character. The Anderson slate was supported as an opposition ticket and not because the left wing thought it was a class conscious group or expected it wage a militant struggle.

It would be extremely encouraging if we could say that the defeat of Johnson was a sign of real class consciousness on the part of the majority of the organized machinests, but this would be untrue. It is, however, a healthy sign that class collaboration has not fooled all of the workers and that the Trade Union Educational League is building a real left bloc in the metal trades. The vote is the more significant in this respect as one of the principal campaign documents of the Johnston machine was a copy of the Trade Union Educational League statement supporting Anderson, published in the DAILY WORKER. This was put out as proof that Anderson was merely "a tool of Moscow."

It failed to take.

West Virginia and Poland

Two news items from West Virginia show the direct connection between the capitalists, the various agencies of the United States government, the struggle of the coal miners in that state and the class war which in Poland and other European countries has assumed a still more acute form than here in America.

One story tells of the arrest of 150 coal miners for picketing a scab mine near Fairmont, West Virginia, the other tells of the closing of the hall in Benwood where a Polish worker was to speak and expose the murderous acts of the Polish government perpetrated on labor and revolutionary movement of that cuntry.

The coal miners in Poland have been the target of especially vicious attacks by the Polish terroristic government. They have suffered more than some other sections of the workers because of their fighting spirit. The House of Morgan, the most powerful section of the capitalist group that owns most of the mines in West Virginia, lends millions of dollars to the Polish government so it can continue to terrorize the workers. In the United States, and especially in West Virginia, the Morgan-steel trust group wages the same war on the workers that its puppet Polish government carries on.

The connection between all the robber class could hardly be much clearer than in this instance. The world solidarity of the working class is the only effective answer to it.

World trade union unity, in the drive for which the British nad Russian unions are taking the lead, is the immediate task of all the militant workers everywhere. Unity of the world trade union movement against the coal capitalist in America, unity of the labor movement against the murderous Polish and Bulgarian governments and the imperialist governments of France, Great Britain and the United States, this is the need of the hour and the unity of the capitalist class and their agents in West Virginia against the American miners and the oppressed Polish working class is a concrete example of that need.

The Kannasto Case

The arrest of Mrs. Sanna Kannasto in Hibbing where she was held under $10,000 bail, after she has been in this country for twenty years, on a charge of illegal entry from Canada, is an instance of despicable persecution of foreign-born workers that is made possible by the immigration restriction act.

Mrs. Kannasto was arrested on information sworn to by a counter-revolutionary Finnish immigrant, in all probability an agent of the bloody Finnish government held in power by the allies, following the overthrow of the Finnish workers' and peasants' government by the army of the German General Mannerheim.

By virtue of the exceptional clauses contained in the immigration act, which places a premium on stoolpigeons and their filthy activities, the American government has become an agent for every counter-revolutionary govrenment in the world. All of them maintain spy agencies in the United States and they keep their governments informed of the aid given the labor and revolutionary movements in the old countries by foreign-born workers here.

Whenever they feel it advisable these foreign governments call, for aid from the American department of labor and justice in persecuting some worker whom they want to jail in order to hamper the relief movements.

If this practice is to be stopped, it must be done first by fighting every one of such cases as that of Mrs. Kannasto by all available legal means and secondly by carrying on a campaign of publicity and agitation the laws under which such persecutions are carried out.

Surely the American workers, when they understand the real meaning of such cases, will not allow the agents of other governments to jail foreign-born workers without protest and action because they fight for the workers in the old countries, take an active part in the class struggle in America and thus give a badly needed international character to the American labor movement.

The Hangmen's Central Committee

We are publishing these days column after column of news of the white terror in various countries and some of our readers may wonder if there is no other news obtainable. It is probable that some of them may ask if the amount of attention and space we are giving to news of this kind is necessary and we reply that because of the small size of our paper this news may over-balance other stories, but it is necessary that the American working class, and first of all our readers, the most advanced group of the American working class, be made thoroly familiar with the almost unbelieveable conditions of oppression under which the labor and revolutinoary movement of many European countries has to struggle.

This is the more necessary in that the bloody hand of American imperialism, a hand filled with gold that is distributed to the murder governments of Poland, Esthonia and Bulgaria, is to be seen in every one of the attacks upon the working class of these nations. We must know exactly what the American ruling class is doing to our comrades in other nations that we may be steeled for the fight against it that we must carry on.

The United States is the center of world reaction and we must make it plain that here is located the central committee of hangmen of the world's workers.

Small Strikes

Tailors are proverbially peaceful people, but when the interests of the bosses and the workers clash, as told in our story of yesterday from Los Angeles, the profession loses all of its peaceful character.

The Los Angeles tailors' strike is a small one. Only twenty workers are directly affected, but in miniature the whole panorama of the American class struggle passes in review. The bosses import scabs and gunmen, strikers are slugged and the police protect the scabs.

All fo the above is important. It shows that even in the petty industries where competition has not as yet been wiped out entirely the class differences are acute and that the police power of the capitalist state agencies find no conflict between workers and capitalists so small as to call for neutrality.

Our class must adopt the same attitude. No struggle of our fellow workers must be considered, because of the small number involved or the minor nature of the industry, as unimportant. In this we can learn from the capitalist class.

And so the allied imperialist governments and their puppet states are going to demand that the Soviet government suppress the Communist International! We have no wish to advise the workers' and peasants' government of Russia, but it occurs to us that the proper reply to this would be a demand for the suppression of the House of Morgan by Great Britain, France and the United States.

The bureaucrats of the city of Chicago have opened war on the Electrical Workers' Union. 26 men have been discharged because they insisted on the enforcement of the union rule for payment for overtime. All of the discharged men are citizens but first of all they are wage slaves, as this incident proves.

100 per cent Americans, please notice.

Gregory Zinoviev will undoubtedly be as much surprised as we are to learn of his influence in the teachers' federation in New York, where a local babbitt stated that he was responsible for the Ricca teachers' salary bill.

No Charge for Ladies at Italian Comrades' Grand Ball on Saturday

Our Italian comrades are giving a grand ball on Saturday evening, May 23, at the Greek Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave., the proceeds of which will go to the fund for making the Italian Communist paper, Il Lavoratore, a daily newspaper again. Il Lavoratore has been forced to become a weekly after a long financial struggle as a daily newspaper.

As a daily, going into homes of Italian workers thruout the country, Il Lavoratore can function far more effectively for Communism and the Italian comrades are putting up a determined fight to put their paper on a daily basis again.

Comrades come to this ball if only to lend your encouragement to these ardent Italian workers. Tickets are 50 cents and there is no admission charge for the ladies. Music is furnished by the Guiseppe Verdi orchestra and the ball starts promptly at 8 p. m.

William F. Dunne to Speak Before Y. W. L. Area Branch

William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, will deliver a lecture on "The American Negro Workers and the World Revolutionary Movement" tonight at 8 p. m., at the meeting of Area Branch No. 5, of the Y. W. L.

Every league and party comrade not having another meeting tonight is urged to attend this meeting. A full attendance of the members and a lively discussion is expected. The branch meets at the local office, 19 S. Lincoln St.

Chramov and Cannon will Speak Sunday at Lenin Evening

James P. Cannon, who recently returned from Soviet Russia, will speak at the Lenin evening to be held this Sunday, May 24, at the Workers' Home, 1902 W. Shop Nuclei Active in May Day Campaign

NEW YORK.—Last week a meeting was held of the organizers of the most important nuclei in New York City. The meeting opened with reports on activities in the May 1 campaign and the general work of the nuclei. These reports showed the wonderful possibilities for shop nuclei work in this country.

SHOP NUCLEUS NO. 9 reported the distribution of 4000 leaflets and 200 party papers. Twenty-five tickets were sold for the party May 1 meeting. Three subscribers were obtained for the DAILY WORKER and one of the active comrades of the nucleus was one of the chief speakers at the Union May 1 banquet All the workers quit on May 1 as this is in accordance with the Union rule.

SHOP NUCLEUS NO. 6 reported the distribution of 1400 leaflets. Two sympathizers helped in this work. Twenty-three tickets for the party mass meeting were sold. One subscription for the DAILY WORKER and one for the Workers Monthly were sold—the latter being sold to a colored worker. Although no one had ever stopped work on May 1 in this shop in the last five years this year due to the propaganda of the nucleus, one half of the workers quit work for a whole day and the other half worked only a half day.

SHOP NUCLEUS NO. 13 called a shop meeting on the question of working May 1. This shop had been working on this day for the last three years. The shop meeting under the leadership of the nucleus, decided to quit. When the boss received word about this decisian he frantically appealed to the secretary of the union to hold the workers back. However the workers of the shop came down in a body to the union meeting and demanded that the entire trade quit on May 1. Although this was not carried, and although the seeretary ordered the workers in this shop not to stop work, when May 1 came not one worker reported for duty.

Every comrade in this nucleus is a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER. Freheit Ball tickets and DAILY WORKER subs, have been sold to a number of workers in the shop.

The comrades in the nucleus make it their business to report at the shop a half hour before opening time. During this time they discuss with workers the current news of the day, which the workers, who have either no time or ability to read for themselves, are very anxious to hear. In the course of this talk the comrades show the contrast between the Communist and the capitalist press in the way the news is handled. At first the workers ridiculed this idea but now they are genuinely interested and a large number report early for this discussion. This of course is a very interesting beginning of the verbal newspapers, which are carried on by word of mouth in many factories in Russia.

The nucleus is planning an organization campaign to organize the female workers in the shop. More will be heard from them in the near future.

SHOP NUCLEUS NO. 11 distributed over 1000 leaflets and newspapers. Whereas last year only two workers stayed away on May 1, this year comrades induced 22 workers to quit in spite of the fact that the shop is unorganized. Twenty-six tickets were sold for the mass meeting run by the party.

SHOP NUCLEUS NO. 2 is in a shop which always worked on May 1. The shop nucleus decided to bring the matter of May 1 before the shop meeting. After a strenuous debate led by the comrades in the nucleus, it was decided that the whole shop should quit work. Not only did the nucleus carry this through successfully, but it also arranged an open air meeting, which was held two days before May 1. This meeting not only resulted in waking up the workers of the neighborhood to the significance of May 1, but it also resulted in the formation of another shop nucleus in a neighboring shop. Two new comrades were brought into the party and a collection was made for the Freiheit. The nucleus also won a fine victory for the workers in that they forced the boss to cease penalizing the workers for spoiled work, a practice that had been costing the workers several dollars each week.

NUCLEUS NO. 20 also reported that they had brought all the workers out of the shop on May 1, in spite of the fact that this shop had always worked on May 1 and in spite of the fact that there was no union rule in regard to quitting on May 1.

Other reports of nuclei activity will be published as they come in. The remainder of the meeting was given over to a discussion of belshevizing the nuclei through educational methods and plans. It is hoped that by tackling the comrades in the nuclei, one by one, that they will be persuaded to give serious study to Communist theory and practice as found in the classics of the party.

IT is not impossible that another world war may develop out of the French war in Morocco, hints the Chicago Tribune. Not by any means. Morocco is the key to immense wealth in Africa and France has troops enough to give John Bull a creepy feeling in the spine. The imperialist buzzards are watching the French operations in Morocco with an anxious eye. England is standing on the rock of Gibraltar with a telescope. Spain can't do very much, but what she can do will not be to the interest of France. Italy would like a share of the Moroccan pot. Wall Street could find some room for its millions of idle capital there.

THE enlarged executive of the Communist International stated that capitalism had been able to reach a certain degree of stabilization. But it was careful to point out that there could be no permanent stabilization. Things did not look so dark for capitalism when a Serbian student scrambled the grand duke of Austria in 1914. Before the dead were counted the capitalist system itself came within an inch of being as dead as the czar of Russia. Wise capitalists know that another world will put them on the historical scrap heap. Yet they are feverishly preparing for it. They remind one of a man who stands on the brink of a precipice and is so fascinated with the void in front of him that he jumps to it even tho he knows it means death. Or like the fly that keeps flitting around a light until it burns into ashes.

Soviet Union Sends Protest to China Against Troop Graft

PEKING, China, May 21—M. Karakhan, ambassador to China, for the Soviet Union, has registered a vigorous protest with the Chinese foreign office against the practice of the troops under Chang Tso-lin, who have stolen $6,000,000 from the Chinese Eastern railway by selling military passes. The Manchurian general has been policing the railroad.

Chang Tso-lin's troops are now occupying Peking, as General Feng Yu-Hsiang has withdrawn to the northwestern front.

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

THE RESULTS OF THE SESSION OF THE ENLARGED EXECUTIVE OF THE YOUNG COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

By V. VUYOVITCH (Moscow)

THE Enlarged Executive of the Young Communist International was faced by the task of discussing the resolutions of the last enlarged E. C. C. I. as to the political situation and as to Bolshevization of the Communist parties, and of working out instructions for the further development of the mass work of all sections of the Y. C. I. on the basis of the resolutions of the Comintern and of the experiences gained in the practical work of our leagues during the last seven months.

The Enlarged Executive of the Y. C. I. unanimously accepted all the resolutions of the enlarged E. C. C. I. and pledged all the groups, especially that of Czecho-Slovakia, to a really active participation in political life, to join in the work of the communist parties, to the energetic defence of the line of policy of the Comintern and to support the parties in the difficult task of Bolshevisation.

On the basis of the estimation given by the Comintern, the Enlarged Executive of the Y. C. I., worked out a resolution with regard to the Bolshevisation of the Youth Leagues, in which the opinion was clearly expressed that the chief attention of the leagues should be concentrated on work in the various concerns and in the factory nuclei, on the fight for the economic demands of the working youth, and on work in the trade unions. Thanks to the vast experience of our French, Italian, American, German and other groups, our plenum was able this time to concern itself in much more detail with working out the concrete methods and forms of the economic struggle and of the mass work of the Youth Leagues in the factories. On this occasion the plenum pointed with special insistence to the possible modifications in the fight for partial demands and to the necessity of combining our daily struggles with the outlook of the revolution and of the ultimate victory of the working class over the bourgeoisie.

The second question on which the plenum threw the necessary light and for the solution of which it made concrete suggestions, is the struggle to win over the youth of the rural population. Up to now the minority of our groups has only done quite insignificant work among the peasant youth. The plenum pointed out the necessity of developing an energetic campaign for the conquest of the proletarian rural youth and the poorest members of the peasant youth, but at the same time laid emphasis on the class character of the Young Communist Leagues and the necessity, under all circumstances, of preventing a firm proletarian leadership which will be realized by the proletarian nucleus in the leagues and with the help of constant and firm leadership on the part of the communist parties. For this reason the plenum resolved that the Young Communist Leagues in the West should only extend their organization activities among the proletarian youth in the villages and among the poorest of the peasant youth. As regards the youth of the middle class farmer, our task is to neutralize it. The plenum took up an attitude of opposition to the creation of youth sections in the Peasant International, as it was of the opinion that the peasant youth should join the non-party associations together with the adults.

The plenum took cognisance of the fact that many leagues had been very successful in organizing the leagues on the lines of factory nuclei. The most important sections of the Y. C. I. are about to complete their reorganization. The plenum therefore had to pay increased attention to the purpot of the work of the nuclei in the West, and to issue a number of instruction which will make it possible for the leagues to increase the activity of their members and to give the daily work of the nuclei a revolutionary purpot which interest broad groups of the working youth.

The slogan of the Communist Youth International is: "Complete transformation of the leagues into factory nuclei before the next International Youth Conference."

The plenum devoted special attention to the work amongst the youth in the East. In all the most important countries of the East, Young Communist Leagues already exist, and some of these, especially the Chinese Mongolian League, have already done important work in mobilizing the youthful workers and peasants for the struggle against feudalism and imperialism. The resolution as to Bolshevisation emphasized the necessity of differentiating our work in the East, and laid down the concrete tasks of the Young Communist Leagues on the basis of the three different types of the colonial and semi-colonial countries.

In recent times, the menshevist youth of Germany and of other western countries has developed an intensive propaganda against the Leninist Youth League and against Soviet Russia, by false statements regarding the economic and political situation of the working youth in the Soviet Union. The plenum accepted the report of Comrade Tchaplin, who submitted extensive material to the delegates regarding the actual situation of the youth, on the basis of which all the sections of the Y. C. I. will be in a position to give young menshevist organizations the answer they deserve.

The central point of the attention of the plenum was the question of Leninist education for all sections of the Y. C. I. The present political situation involves great dangers for the ideological clearness of vision and political steadfastness of the youth leagues and demands a sound theoretical education not only of their functionaries but of all members of the leagues. The plenum passed a whole number of resolutions which represent a guarantee that all section of the Y. C. L. not only promote the Leninist education of their members but will, in the shortest time, bring this work up to the desired level.

Thus the 5th Enlarged Executive of the Y. C. I. created the political and organizing basis for further work in the Bolshevisation of all sections of the Y. C. I., and represents a considerable step forward in the development of the Leninist Young Communist International.

WHAT has happened to the grand plan of William Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which provided for the calling of a conference between rail workers and their employers for the purpose of eliminating strikes in the transportation industry and breaking down the wall of misunderstanding that separates the employes from their masters? This is the way Lee chants the dirge. The rail workers and their employers are of the same family, says this human toad, and their scraps are only family quarrels.

NOT that Lee is much worse than the rest of the labor skates who are engaged in the business of selling the railroad workers. He is a little bit more offensively frank, perhaps. The DAILY WORKER quoted from an article in the Switchmen's Magazine, in which Cashen, chief of the switchmen, said some very harsh things about Lee. In fact, he charged him with being a strikebreaker and with employing stoolpigeons to spy on members of his own organization, with a view getting them fired by their employers.

LABOR fakers are the same all the world over. The American section of fakerdom is better paid than the capitalist lackeys in other country. The American capitalists can afford to pay their flunkies generously. But even in poverty stricken countries the skates are getting along nicely. Some of those birds of prey mouth revolutionary phrases while engaged in the business of betraying the workers. In Mexico Calles is using the Wall Street club on those that placed him in power. Tho he pretends to be a socialist, Calles is highly thot off by the house of Morgan, which uses the president of the American Federation of Labor as a liason officer with the Mexican labor leaders.

TOM MOORE is the leading labor skate in Canada. The capitalist governments no longer has any quarrel [illegible] that a leading faker may criticise some particular administration. But that is by way of exercising his rights as a citizen and because some other capitalist political group can offer something better.

IN England the leading capitalist labor lieutenants are J. H. Thomas and Ramsay MacDonald. To his credit be it said, J. H. Thomas does not pretend to be a socialist but MacDonald does. There is not the slightest difference in the attitude of both flunkeys towards the master class. Even Ireland has a finished specimen of this type in the person of Thomas Johnson. It is merely an accident of birth that he happens to be an Englishmen, hailing either from Manchester or Liverpool. But the revolutionary Irish workers do not scorn Johnsn because he was born in England. They detest him because he is one of the sliniest traitors that ever rose to prominence at the expense of his class.

JOHNSON was the only labor leader in Ireland who supported the British Empire during the war. He was opposed to the Easter Week revolution which was initiated and led by James Connolly. He has been a wet blanket on the Irish working class since and the most distressing feature of the situation is, that old comrades of Connelly who occupy leading positions in the labor union and labor party which he built, support Johnson, tho he was forced to confess in a recent libel case that he was opposed to all that James Connolly stood for. The Irish workers will learn to rid the labor movement of Johnson and also of those who prefer to stand with Johnson, despite his repudiation of the principles to which Connelly devoted his life and for which he died.

Whew! It Is Hot Wheather! But Picnic Time Is Soon Here

WHEW! But it was hot yesterday. That's the way it is liable to be on next Saturday, May 30, when the T. U. E. L. holds its picnic at Altenheim Grove. And a picnic is the place to go on a hot day to get away from the brick blocks and hot streets. Make a note of how to get to next Saturday's picnic: Take the Forest Park "L" on the Metropolitan branch to the end of the line, or transfer from the end of the Madison car line to a suburban car. The T. U. E. L. picnic will be waiting at Altenhiem Grove. Don't forget.

LOCAL 38, A. C. W. IN BATTLE FOR FAIR COUNTING

Officials Disregard the Vote of Membership

The rule of sluggers in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union has created such a revolt that in some locals, at least, the yellow socialist bureaucracy has had to change methods and rule by bluff, deception and trickery. This was shown Wednesday night in the Polish Local 38, of the Amalgamated, when a packed hall of members fought the officials for an hour and a half to force them to restore Brother H. Bramorski, taken off the job by Levin and "suspended indefinitely," to his rights and his job.

Two meetings back, the report of the officers of the local suspending Bramorski, was rejected by a majority vote of the local; but in spite of that, the chairman declared the motion carried. And then he hurried to adjournment. At the following meeting, the membership stormed at the officials in such a militant manner that the chairman was forced to admit that he "had made a mistake" in declaring the suspension of Bramorski carried, and begged that the minutes of the previous meeting be accepted in order that the agreement could be considered.

Stalling Off the Members.

The membership would not accept that part of the minutes, however, and finally, the chairman stalled the members off by agreeing that the matter of considering the old minutes would be taken up at the meeting following—the one which met Wednesday night, May 20.

But when the meeting Wednesday gathered a hall full of members, the chairman and his Levin-yellow socialist clique which had caucused and deliberated for two weeks on how best to keep on stalling and fooling the membership, refused to open the meeting, giving as a reason that Bramorski was present. This, they pretended, kept them from calling the meeting to order.

Battle to Make Chairman Obey the Rules.

The members insisted. The chairman continued to refuse. The members then demanded that the vice-chairman take the gavel. He, also one of the clique, also refused to take the chair. For an hour and a half the people raged at the disruption of the officials, who insisted on ruling against the plain will of the members. Even the doorman became so angry at the officials that he tried to get the gavel himself, but the chairman put it in his pocket—and the members, so far at least, have not been provoked into giving their anger physical expression.

After an hour and a half, some of the members, including many of the

'BILL' LEE OF TRAINMEN HAUNTED BY LEFT WING AT CONVENTION; FOSTER TO EXPOSE LEE SUNDA

By A. WAGENKNECHT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, May 22.—"Bill" Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, needs a breathing spell. This charming leader of the grand march at a ball recently held jointly with his ladies' auxiliary, has been given several hard chases down the reactionary pike. To get back his wind he has hypnotized a large wing of the one thousand delegates upon the question of constitutional amendments, and at Gray's Armory, where the convention is being held, one hears constitutional buncombe mouthed in sickening volume. This red herring is to hold the attention of the delegates for eight or nine days, it is reported. But William Z. Foster, the leader of the left wing in the American labor movement, is due to speak here Sunday and the railroaders are invited to attend as he will deal with "Bill" Lee and his tricks.

'New" Delegates Give Bill Lee Ague.

The convention is attended by a bloc of delegates that has made Lee look cross-eyed and feel uneasy. More than half of the delegates are known to the reactionary machine as "new," by which is meant that they can not be definitely placed.

A progressive caucus is meeting at some unknown place and the spectre of amalgamation is looming up so large and formidable, that Lee and his ring are really pale of face. The T. U. E. L. is making an active campaign for its program.

Amalgamation Haunts the Fakers.

A resolution for amalgamation was handed in and referred to the resolutions committee. As a preliminary to the amalgamation of the sixteen railroad unions, this resolution calls for the immediate amalgamation of a department of the service by bringing into closer touch with each other the order of railway conductors, the switchmen's union and the railway trainmen.

The resolution calls for a committee of fifteen, ten to be elected by the convention, five appointed by the officers, to undertake negotiations. It was introduced by the Minneapolis delegates.

Reject Officers' Report at First.

But what winded Lee as much as anything, was the rejection of the officers' report. In this report, what is known as the "five and a half per cent" Chicago wage increase was the sugar with which the bureaucracy expected to induce the delegates to swallow the report. The delegates gulped here and there, but a majority refused to swallow.

Instead, some tall talking was indulged in, which proved that Lee and his ring had compromised hard gained working conditions far in excess in value to the five and a half wages increase. After the officers' report was defeated, Lee sweated for three hours trying to secure a reconsideration, and this he finally put over.

"Anybody—Anybody But Lee."

The slogan of a very large portion

GARY STRIKERS RESIST STEEL TRUST LOCKOUT

3,000 Builders Fight Against "Open Shop"

GARY, Indiana, May 22.—A bitter struggle between the striking building trades workers and the "open shop" contractors, who have locked out over 3,000 members of the Building Trades Unions for insisting on a closed shop, is on here.

The bankers, and the real estate board, chamber of commerce and the Commercial Club have united behind the contractors in the attempt to smash the Gary unions. These organizations have ordered the contractors to continue the lockout or immediately have their credit cut off, building material withheld, and financial backing removed.

The United States Steel corporation own the largest part of Gary, and practically all the construction in the town is being done by the steel trust, either thru contractors who are doing their work or directly thru the steel trust's own construction company.

The steel corporation is attempting to break the backbone of unionism in Gary, as the effect on the steel workers is feared.

The strikers are holding firm in their demand for the closed shop and thus far no scabs have been imported.

The contractors, however, spurred on by the steel corporation, are making a move toward importing strikebreakers from Chicago.

Sheppard Pledges the Union to Railroads

MINNEAPOLIS, May 22—The revolutionizing of the railroad business in the United States through the inclusion of motor buss service on every system affected by the competition of bus transportation companies was the promise that grew out of the closing session here today of the triennial convention of the Order of Railway Conductors of America.

Isn't This Nice of Budd?

Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern R. R., addressed the convention this morning bringing to the meeting formal announcement that the Great Northern has entered the bus business with the organization of two $1,000,000 corporations headed by executives of that road.

"Collaboration? Sure" Says Sheppard

L. E. Sheppard, grand president of the Order of Railway Conductors, responded with an announcement that conductors and practically every other group of workers on the railroad field are preparing to band together to lend assistance and encouragement to the railroads in carrying out a nation-wide railroad bus line development project.

Sheppard was re-elected grand president of the Order of Railway Conductors last night. He has served six years as grand president and 17 years as vice-president. S. N. Berry,

The Communist campaign against the imperialistic slaughter, in which France's young workers are being sent to their death in order to subdue the Riffians on their native territory has stirred the workers thruout the country.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The congressional "independent bloc" has started a move to abolish the federal trade commission on the ground that its membership is defying congress, it was learned today.

Aroused by the commission's action in eliminating all publicity on anti-trust complaints and by the fact it is dominated by conservatives, the senate independents favor repeal of the statute which created the government board. A bill to abolish the commission probably will be sponsored at the next session of congress.

ALL PICKETING FORBIDDEN BY COURT ORDER

Federal Judge Makes New Air-Tight Rule

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WHEELING, W. Va., May 22. — There is no particular rejoicing among the striking miners that the infamous reactionary, former Secretary of State Charley Hughes, has "volunteered" to defend the officials of the U. M. W. of A. against an injunction issued by Federal Judge William E. Baker here this week. The West Virginia miners are sufficiently well aware that strikes are won on the picket line and not in capitalist courts, hence they are in no flurry over the Hughes offer, tho their pacifist district and international officials are.

Union Won't Fight, But Capitalist State Will.

The present injunction against the union must be clearly understood as forbidding "peaceful persuasion" in picketing, in fact it forbids all picketing. As Van Bittner, international organizer in charge of the strike for the union, had not only discouraged, but forbid all militant picketing, in order to "obey the law" by "peaceful picketing," the injunction takes another wallop at the miners by forbidding even peaceful picketing as unlawful.

The same court had previously ruled that an ancient injunction of

BOSTON UNIONS PICK DELEGATES FOR FAMINE MEET

Joseph Manley Will Address Meeting

By George Kraska.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 22.—A generous response from all labor unions is looked for in Boston next Wednesday May 27 for the formation of the Boston branch of the Irish Workers and Peasants Relief Committee. Joseph Manley member of the National Cimmittee will address the conference. A lively meeting is expected, and definite plans to raise funds for the Irish Workers and Peasants, will be worked out, and so at last Boston will be put on the map, securing the much needed relief for the Irish sufferers.

More than 150 labor, fraternal and political organizations have been invited to this conference, which will be held at 8 p. m. in Paine Hall, 9 Appleton St. Boston.

House To House Collection.

The labor unions in Boston are almost all in the control of Irish-Americans, and Boston being a special center of the Irish population, gives great promise for successful work, that this committee will undertake. The entire section called South Boston is inhabited by Irish workers and should prove fertile ground for the work of raising funds for the Irish famine sufferrers.

Plans for a house to house collectinos will be made at this conference to be concentrated in South Boston. Also a mass meeting with John P. McCarthy who recently returned from the famine district in Ireland as speaker, will be planed in the near future.

Favorable sentiment from some union members who have already acted on the call and elected delegates to this conference has already been announced in labor circles.

State Pamphlets Useless.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 22.—A resolution was introduced in the senate by Rodney Swift, demanding an investigation of the printing of public documents and pamphlets at state expense. Swift charged that many of the pamphlets were useless.

RENEGADE CZECH EDITOR RECEIVES SEVERE DEFEAT

All Traitors Cannot Be Rewarded

Frank Kosumplik, editor of Spravedinost, a Czecho-Slovakian paper formerly an official organ of the Czech federation of the Workers Party, learned to his cost that the path of a renegade is not always strewn with roses, when he was defeated for the vacancy to the city council seat caused by the death of Alderman Kostner.

Kosumplik's defeat was not caused by his devotion to the working class, tho the sheet he now edits lives by the grace and generousity of the Hillman-Levin machine in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The fake radicals behind Spravedinost have betrayed the Czecho-Slovak workers for the meat bones that Sam Levin of the Amalgamated may see fit to throw at them.

The Political Chameleon

Spravedinost secured the services of Kosumplik as editor when the Workers Party severed relations with it. Politically he is like the chameleon. Today he is a socialist, tomorrow a republican, the day after, a democrat. The elections are allegedly non-partisan in this city, the republican and democratic groups nominate their slate and put their machines behind them. Bersan, the republican, failed to qualify and the contest was between Kosumplik, sometimes socialist and John Toman, democrat. Bersan and prominant members of the rowe-Barret-Brundage machine supported Kosumplik as did the Chicago Tribune. The Daily News and the Municipal Voters' League. But the democratic machine was too much for Kosumplik and when the votes were counted, he was far in the rear.

Air Tank Goes on Rampage.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., May 22.—The giant air pressure tank of the city water supply system at San Jose, near here, exploded today, wrecking the building it occupied, a drug store, damaged other structures and smashed hundreds of windows in stores and dwellings.

"Bill" Lee Haunted by Left Wing

of the delegates is "anybody but Lee." This makes Lee feel badly, and so applause (anti-Lee applause, of course) from the gallery has been prohibited and visitors in the gallery who make notes are looked upon with suspicion. Threats of expulsion have been made by the guards.

A move is on foot to abolish the board of appeals, an extra disciplinary body for grievances and appeals. This board consists of seven members and is elected by the convention. Some progressives favor abolition, but so also do the reactionary leaders. These progressives say they want the bureaucracy to settle appeals and so compromise itself and loose the support of the local unions.

However, the abolition of this board is a moot question. There are many arguments for its retention for it may yet be the means of saving the organisation against the disruptive tactics of the reactionary leaders.

Altogether Too Much Bunco!

While the convention is on, nothing is left undone to amuse the delegates. "Keep them entertained so that they will keep their minds off of deep organisational problems," this is the strategy of the Lee cohorts. Bunco parties have been held. One delegate remarked that the convention with Lee leading it, was enough of a bunco party for him.

And the New York Central believed enough in Lee to do something to tickle the convention, so it gave several trains to Lee last Sunday so that the convention could have a squint at Niagara Falls.

Last night Lee received quite a measure of criticism at the Cleveland Federation of Labor meeting for refusing to allow Wm. Dawson, the floor at the convention to talk against prison made goods. Kitty Donnelly of the Waitresses' Union, was also kept off the floor. She wanted to ask the delegates not to patronise unfair restaurants.

Foster Speaks in Cleveland.

"Bill" Lee has graduated far beyond this kind of trade unionism. Advising delegates which are Cleveland's non-union restaurants is small potatoes to him. Consorting with presidents and managers of big railway systems, this is big stuff so far as Lee is concerned.

Wm. Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, will expose this union wrecking scheme of class collaboration at a meeting to be held in the Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid avenue, Sunday evening, May 24. All workers are invited, but railroad workers especially so.

Calles Breaks Strike in Mexico

on his terms after sending federal troops to take up the "protection" of the property last week.

The Gompers of Mexico.

In conformity with its class collaboration policy officially made effective in the Mexican Federation of Labor (C. R. O. M.) since Calles was elected and Luis N. Morones, the "Gompers of Mexico" was appointed as cabinet member, the C. R. O. M. has "outlawed" the oil workers' strike and agreed to go along with the government in suppressing labor revolt against the Yankee imperialists.

The strike originally was for union scale, but the company threatened to close down. The men replied they would seize the oil fields. Then a union worker, Miguel Padron, was murdered by a gunman of the Huesteca company named Villicana, Padron, when dying stated: "This is the work of the company which pays men to assassinate us."

Wanted Protest at Murder.

At once the local union membership, led by Reds, appealed to the C. R. O. M. to protest the policy of assassination with a general strike. Juna Amaya, a delegate, came to Mexico City in an airplane to demand of the general labor federation that it support the oil workers. Reds in the C. R. O. M. assited him, but the Morones-Calles-Wall Street combination was evidently too powerful.

Amaya declared that if the Huesteca company persisted in closing down the oil fields and plants, the union workers would take possesion and run them themselves. He promised that if this were done, the profits would be sent to Mexico City for use by the Mexican nation and not to New York to fatten the vultures of Wall Street. Upon this declaration, Calles dispatched troops to beat the men by heavy guard.

The "Understanding" of May 15.

This brazen servility of Calles to American imperialism is his habit since he took office, but the Huesteca affair follows in shameless step upon the understanding arrived at between Calles and Ambassador Sheffield of the United States on the morning of May 15.

The ambassador at once left for Washington to report his success, but before going he told American newspaper men that he took up what Sheffield calls, "unwarranted seisures of American property and interference by Mexican labor organisations with American manufacturing plants, banks, motion pictures or stores wherever employes are organized."

Calles Agreed to Betray Workers.

He further stated that Calles agreed to do all posible to protect Yankee monied interests and to "curb the growing labor union demands."

Five days later Calles sent police armed with rifles against a red labor union of milk wagon drivers and distributors and dairy hands in the federal district. When the Bakers' Union, which is controlled by reds, struck in sympathy, the Calles government gave them only a few hours to return under threat of violence. The C. R. O. M. fakers then declared the strike outlawed and drove all strikers back.

In addition, the Calles-Morones class collaboration combine, Luis N. Morones being the head of the C. R. O. M., issued a circular letter threatening severe discipline of any local union which struck without the consent of the fakers in control of the executive council.

Fess Believes in Convict Labor.

"As a humanitarian I know that the prisoners of the country must be kept employed," senator Simeon Fess of Ohio told the International Association of Garment Manufacturers at the Hotel LaSalle, in defending the prison sweatshop system. Fess has introduced a bill in the senate calling for prevention of interstate shipment of prison made merchandise. He is not against the prison sweatshop system but wishes to control convict labor so that the garment and other bosses will not lose profits by competing with the cheaper convict labor.

GOD DISLIKES RANTING OF PREACHER; STORM BLOWS HIS TENT AWAY

HERRIN, Ill., May 22.— Altho swept by strong winds that inflicted a slight property damage, Herrin and its rural districts received last night's storm with a welcome. The rain broke a drought of sixty days which had lowered the water supply and handicapped farmers.

A large tent in which an evangelist was conducting a meeting, was blown for half a mile, leaving spectators exposed to the storm. Telephone wires were down thruout the district.

McANDREW PAY PLAN BEATEN BY SCHOOL BOARD

New Members Force a Reconsideration

At a recess meeting of the board of education the new board members, sitting at their first business meeting since their appointment, passed a motion to reconsider superintendent of schools McAndrew's teachers' salary plan, defeating the old board members by a vote of six to five.

J. Lewis Coath, who was the only old member of the board to vote with the new members, presented the motion, giving as his reason that the new members should be given a chance to consider the salary plan under which the teachers would work during new members in office.

The old board members voting against the motion to reconsider McAndrew's pet scheme were J. Mullenbach, Julius F. Smitenka, Mrs. William Hefferan, Grace Gregg and Edgar Greenebaum.

Those voting for the motion and opposing acceptance of the McAndrew plan "sight unseen" were Coath, and the new members, Byrne, English, Ellicott, Schmidt and Dr. Schiller.

Previous to the calling of the meeting, the board members caucused for a full hour, endeavoring to come to an agreement. The meeting finally started an hour late, with the old and new board members still differing as to the support of McAndrew's salary plan.

McAndrew's plan will now be referred back to the finance committee of the board, under the terms of the motion, for further consideration.

Meanwhile, the court ordered a hearing on the new injunction for June 1.

In addition thirteen pickets were arrested at the Grant Town mine of the New England Fuel and Transportation company.

Prepare Funeral for "Labor Bureau" Born of Versailles Peace

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the question is raised by the Versailles peacemakers, whether their creature, the international labor bureau of the league of nations, should be quietly "bumped off," to use one of the favorite expressions of retailers in homicide. The wholesale murderers of the last war merely suggest that their child; thrown as a sop to anti-Bolshevist labor officials the world over, in the stormy days of 1919, be merely "abolished as no longer useful." Thus will end another chapter in the revolutionary struggles of the workers, especially in Europe, against the official misleaders since the ending of the war.

• • • •

Albert Thomas, the French "socialist" munitions minister during the war, was made head of the "labor bureau," which was even acceptable to Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, righthand man to President Woodrow Wilson, at the Versailles negotiations.

The "universal eight-hour day" was dangled before international labor, valiantly struggling in some countries to establish its own Soviet power. This was the empty promise with which the great employers hoped to satisfy the workers until bankrupt and chaotic capitalism could regain its breath. It was the pledge, with others of like nature, that the late Hugo Stinnes, the German industrial overlord, made to the late Karl Legien, head of the German trade unions, when labor in Germany, under the leadership of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, was battling to send German capitalism the selfsame way the kaiser went.

• • • •

The international labor bureau never developed into more than a debating society; just as "socialists" are content to make speeches in various parliamentary bodies. The Chicago Daily News admits that it was established for no other purpose when it declared:

> "Such discussions by delegates representing the nations of the world should serve to disseminate knowledge of benefit to labor and to industry. Further, while Communist agitators under the direction of Moscow conspirators are striving to bring about world revolution thru appeals to class hatred, the action of enlightened governments in trying to hit upon beneficial measures for the enhancement of workers' welfare should have a valuable moral effect."

• • • •

However, the funeral is that of the "labor bureau," with all of its fake promises. Western European labor, in spite of the "bureau," backed by traitor "socialists" and subsidized with millions of "open shop" dollars, has been drawn closer than ever to Russian labor. This is clearly seen in the discussions now going on over international trade union unity. European capitalists, witnessing the conferences between British and Russian labor, and reading of the interchange of labor delegations between the two countries, easily realize that their pet "labor bureau" isn't proving what it was originally intended to be; that it has failed of its criminal purpose.

• • • •

The Dawes-Morgan plan enslaving the workers of Germany has helped. Germany was supposed to be the land where "workers' welfare" had made the greatest progress before the war. It was the capitalist utopia of eight-hour laws, social insurance, unemployment insurance, and other palliatives, that were to be internationalized under the league of nations' labor bureau. But the Dawes-Morgan plan, with its replica promised for other countries, especially France, has spoiled all this. Capitalism stands before the workers of Western Euroe, more than ever, as their open and bitter oppressor. The "eight-hour day" has disappeared in Germany, and its promise becomes a mockery in the rest of the capitalist world, driving the "international labor bureau" to its grave. The workers can take another forward step by burying the social-democracy, loyal servant of capitalism, along with it.

AMUNDSEN FLIES TO NORTH POLE IN PLANE DASH

LONDON, May 22.—Captain Raold Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, has been successful in his airplane dash for the North Pole, according to unconfirmed reports today reaching Oslo, Norway, from Kings Bay, near Spitzbergen. Lieutenant Ellsworth, Ohio aviator, accompanied him. The Kings Bay report, received here via Central News said the two airplanes carrying the six air explorers, had started the return trip. The ships hopped off from Kings Bay late yesterday afternoon.

While first dispatches received here from the Norwegian Island in the Artic Ocean made no specific mention of Lieut. Ellsworth, it was presumed that both planes had completed the northward half of the trip. Amundsen was the navigating officer of one ship and Ellsworth, an expert aviation engineer, recorded the progress of the flight aboard the other plane.

COMPANY THUGS DISRUPT MEETING TO ORGANIZE AUTOMOBILE WORKERS

DETROIT, Mich., May 22.—Five thousand men and women, nearly all employes of the Brings Manufacturing Company, engaged in a small riot here this afternoon, when company stool pigeons tried to break up a meeting addressed by two representatives of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

No one was injured seriously, although scores suffered bruises and face and head cuts.

Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor and, Dennis E. Batt, editor of the Labor News, were speaking in favor of unionization of the automobile workers. They were arrested.

LOCAL [illegible] C. W. IN BATTLE FOR FAIR COUNTING

Officials Disregard the Vote of Membership

girls, began to leave, mistakenly thinking that it was no use to stay and fight any longer, or fearing that the men were going to give the officials a beating.

Bramorski Leaves to Prevent Disruption.

At this point Bramorski spoke to the members, and urged that in the interest of preventing the officials from disrupting the meeting, he, tho entitled as they know, to stay as a member has right, would leave the hall. But, he told them, that they must carry on the fight and oust such disrupters from power over them. Then he would return.

The members heard the officials agreeing that no matter how the vote would go, when finally the acceptance or rejection of the now ancient minutes came up, to declare that it was against Bramorski anyhow. Then the officials could stall along the matter another month or so, fooling the membership again.

Either Way Bramorski Loses.

Thus it happende that the vote, taken upon accepting or rejecting the minutes which falsely set forth that Bramorski had been "indefinitely suspended" went 63 for rejecting and 55 for accepting; but the chairman declared blandly that "The vote is against Bramorski!"

When asked how that could be figured out, he said, "Well, you see if you rejected the minutes, you reject Bramorski, and if you accept them, you accept the ruling of the local executive board against Bramorski—so Bramorski is out either way." These hypocrite officials who have tricked and fooled the members now time after time, even had the gall to commiserate with Bramorski who waited in the corridors, "Well, Bramorski, we voted for you, but the people, they voted against you."

Not Forever, Not Forever!

Members of Local 38, who are not to be fooled forever, remembered the saying about fooling part of the people all the time, all of them part of the time, but the inability of anybody, even the crooked officers of Local 38 to fool all the people all the time. And they are determined that the officials shall feel punishment for such shameless autocracy.

French Cabinet Crisis Over Riff War Due Monday

they would demonstrate their complete bankruptcy.

The socialist (reformist) coalition is splitting on the question of the Riff invasion, and Painleve's Government is in danger of falling on the first vote of confidence.

Violent Fighting.

A violent combat is taking place at Ain-Aicha between the soldiers under Gen. de Chambrun and the Riffians, dispatches from Fez reveal. It was admitted by the military officers in Fez that the situation of the French army is more grave than has been officially reported previously. The advanced outposts in the Taounat region which were surrounded by the Riffians have not been recaptured, contrary to official communiques, it is now admitted.

Right Parties Hope for Power.

At the bidding of the French mining and other big business interests, Painleve has sent the French workers to Morocco to be slaughtered on foreign soil. The French capitalists have been striving desparately to maintain France as a world power. But the financial crisis, aggravated by the Coolidge government's demand for war debt payments, has given the Wall Street bankers the opening wedge in the drive to saddle a second Dawes plan on the French workers as was done in Germany, and subordinate the French government to American finance capital.

The Riffian campaign is becoming as disastrous to the French as was the Spanish campaign, and the financial strain of maintaining a large army on foreign soil is becoming unbearable.

The right wing parties, those favoring fascism, monarchism, dictatorship, and a more intense explotation of the workers, are biding their time and are hoping to win the government, tho a minority, when the threatened break up of the Painleve government arrives.

U.S.S.R. DECLINES INVITATION TO ARM CONFERENCE

Chicherin Takes Smash at League of Nations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW,—(By Mail).—The following telegram has been sent by G. Chicherin, People's Commissary of Foreign Affairs, to the General Secretariat of the league of nations in reply to the latters' invitation extended to the Soviet government to join the pending international arms traffic conference:

"In reply to your letter of January 9th last, in reference to the invitation extended to the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to take part in the international conference for studying a draft convention on the international arms traffic, I have the honor to bring to your notice the following:

"The Soviet government has on repeated occasions stated its negative attitude toward the league of nations as it is actually constituted; and while, in minor questions of a technical order as well as on certain occasions with a purely humanitarian purpose, the Soviet government consented to co-operate in certain discussions held under the auspices of the league of nations, such consent on its part did not in any way modify the general negative attitude of the Soviet government with regard to the league—which circumstance this government always took care to put into relief.

"However, in the present case, the government of the Union does not find it possible to co-operate with the league of nations in the examination of a question entailing the interference of the league of nations with the internal affairs of the Soviet Republics. Neither does the government of the Soviet Union deem it possible to be subordinated to the decisions and intervention of the league.

"In view of the above motives, the Soviet Union is constrained to decline to participate in the conference to be convened on May 4 of this year."

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE official leaders of the German trade unions, are the servants of the house of Morgan and of the British bankers in trying to make the Dawes plan work. Remember that the profits from the Dawes plan must come out of the bodies of the German workers. This gang are in accord with the social-democrats who murdered Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht. The story of their crimes would take up too much space here.

AND France! One of the most ferocious of the "moderate" socialists of France is M. Jouhaux, secretary of the General Confederation of Labor. He is against unity between the workers in the Russian trade unions and the workers in the unions affiliated with Amsterdam. But he is not against unity with the capitalists. There he was at the arms parley in Geneva bellowing like an ox in behalf of French interests. Jouhaux, the socialist and labor leader defending the most militaristic nation on the continent of Europe! Isn't this a sight for the gods? And only last week, Paul Boncour, prominent socialist leader delivered a speech at the same conference, that won the applause of leading American politicians. Socialism no longer has any terror for the bourgeoisie.

THIS list is not complete. There is no country no matter how small where the capitalists have not their "trusted labor lieutenants" playing the role of the trained rams in the Chicago stockyards. They are part and parcel of the capitalist system and will go down with it. Russia is the only country in the world free from that type of pest. Russia got rid of them when the fires of revolution were raging. Today, the labor leaders of the Soviet Union are servants of the Soviet Union, which is the republic of the workers and peasants. Yellow socialists and anarchists will say: "What's the difference? Are not the labor leaders in Russia in alliance with the government?" Sure thing, but the big difference is that the government in which they are in alliance with is a workers' government.

Don't let the Tobacco Trust bunco you. Get your tobacco direct from the farm and SAVE MONEY

You workers and we farmers can join hands and beat the capitalistic tobacco trust at their own game.

Do you know WHY you have had to pay so much for your tobacco? We used to have to sell to the trust or they'd let our tobacco rot on our hands. They paid us next to nothing for our finest grades, sometimes mixed them with a lot of alfalfa and dope and sweepings, dolled them up in fancy bags or had starving sweat shop labor in stinking dungeons make unfit cigars—and charged you fancy prices—and made millions—that fat trust! But those days are gone forever. The U. S. Government now lets us farmers sell direct to you without paying the heavy revenue tax on tobacco which the trust has to pay.

Save Your Money and Help Us BUST the TRUST!

by ordering your tobacco direct from this association of nervy, trust-busting, hard-working farmers. We farmers who raise the best leaf tobacco in the world will send you the choice extra selected leaf tobacco—the kind we smoke and chew ourselves. Don't send any money. We'll trust you with THREE pounds for only $2. That's enough for 125 cigars, or a whole wash boiler almost full of the finest pipe tobacco you ever smoked. All you have to do is to roll it into a cigar, crumble it into your pipe or twist it into shape for chewing.

Free Tobacco Book

tells exactly how and as you've got plenty of sense you can do it as it's easy anyhow. Safely tucked in the heart of each package we'll ship FREE a bottle of our famous Kentucky Flavoring Mixture to improve your tobacco. WORKERS' HEALTH BUREAU DEMANDS LEAD GAS PROBE

A Menace to Life, Tells Govt. Conference

fare division of the war department, the U. S. bureau of mines and the commercial interests directly involved.

Control of Industrial Poisons.

Charging that the bureau of mines report is scientifically unsound the workers' health bureau calls for an impartial, scientific investigation of tetra ethyl lead and the prohibition of its sale until it has been proven harmless. The bureau will also ask for some form of government control of all industrial poisons.

Tetra ethyl lead is a liquid combination of lead and the ethyl group to which grain alcohol belongs. After going thru a series of changes it becomes tetra ethyl lead. The Standard Oil company and the General Motors Corporation who were looking for some method of stopping the "knock" in gasoline engines, have developed tetra ethyl lead to add to gasoline.

Extremely Poisonous.

Tetra ethyl lead is extremely poisonous. Poisoning occurs when the liquid is absorbed thru the skin or when its fumes are inhaled. In its concentrated form as pure tetra ethyl lead, it affects workers engaged in its manufacture. When it is mixed with certain other chemicals and becomes ethyl fluid, it is a danger to anyone handling it. In distributing and filling stations where it is mixed with gasoline, it affects not only workers in those places, but garage workers or others liable to handle gasoline; chauffeurs, car owners, etc. Finally the health of the general public as well as that of garage workers, chauffeurs, teamsters, traffic cops, may be affected by breathing lead dust from the exhaust gas of engines burning ethyl gasoline.

Tetra ethyl lead is so poisonous that it was considered by the U. S. government for possible use in chemical warfare. Experiments by the chemical warfare service showed that four dogs and eleven guinea pigs died from absorbing tetra ethyl lead thru the skin. The dogs died after exposure of from twenty-four to one hundred and eighty hours; the guinea pigs after from twelve to sixty hours.

Dangers to Motorists.

Attention was focused on the danger in manufacturing tetra ethyl lead last fall when five men died from handling the fluid at the Standard Oil company's plant in Bayway, New Jersey. During the past seventeen months the total number of deaths from tetra ethyl lead has reached eleven.

The method of mixing ethyl into gasoline involves considerable danger from splashes of the poison, as well as from inhaling the fumes. Exposure to repeated doses of small amounts of tetra ethyl lead cause mild symptoms of lead poisoning which would only come to light after years of exposure. Studies of medical examinations of workers exposed to this risk have not been made.

Exhaust gases from engines burning tetra ethyl lead contain lead compounds in the form of dust. The danger here is from repeated small doses liable to result in chronic lead poisoning.

Since 1923, the U. S. bureau of mines has been carrying on investigations of the danger to the public from exhaust gases containing tetra ethyl lead. The report was undertaken at the request of and paid for by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation which is owned and operated by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey and the General Motors Corporation. The company continued the manufacture and sale of tetra ethyl lead during the investigation.

Government Probe a Farce.

In December, 1924, the bureau of mines made public its report with the conclusion that there was no danger to the public from breathing exhaust gases containing tetra ethyl lead. On the strength of this report the ban which had been placed on the manufacture and sale of tetra ethyl lead and ethyl gasoline in New York and New Jersey was lifted in both states.

The bureau of mines report is based on experiments on ninety-seven animals. At least half as many animals were used as "controls"; that is, they were kept in fresh air, while the test animals were placed in rooms to which a certain amount of exhaust gas containing tetra ethyl lead had been added. Investigations were started December 6, 1923, and were completed July, 22, 1924, the purpose of the investigations being to determine wether the test animals, exposed to tetra ethyl lead, showed signs of lead poisoning.

However, such poor stock was used that 50 per cent of the rabbits, both test and control, and about 25 per cent of the exposed guinea pigs died from accident or disease before the experiments could be completed. This left too few animals over too short a period of exposure for proper conclusions to be made.

Vancouver Workers Hold Tag Day for Nova Scotia Miners

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 22—True labor solidarity was shown in Vancouver when both Japanese and white unionists worked together on a tag day for the relief of the destitute Nova Scotia miners and collected $1,319.73 in one day. Side by side with the white women collectors 17 Japanese women assisted in the Japanese section of the city.

Among these were the wife of the editor of The Daily People, Japanese labor daily published here, and the wife of the president and the wife of the vice-president of the Japanese Workers' Union. The wife of the secretary of the Vancouver Japanese consulate also assisted.

There was a notable absence of the usual "nice" ladies who for weeks past have pestered people to buy tags for more "respectable" causes. Had the city council permitted the workers to hold their tag day on Saturday instead of Friday, the amount collected would have been far greater.

FARM SLAVERY CLAIMS ORPHANS FROM NEW YORK

Thousands of Children Slave in Texas Fields

ers who use them for heavy farm work," Mrs. Smith claims. "There is no careful selection of homes for the children," she says and they are adopted "into a condition which amounts to child slavery." Mrs. Wetmore asserts that parents of adopted child slaves in Washington and other Northwest states evade compulsory school laws. They send agents east "to arrange for wholesale transportation to great apple orchards and truck farms."

Mothers and Children Toil.

The National Child Labor Committee's booklet "Child Labor Among Cotton Growers of Texas" tells of cotton farm conditions which are shared by children adopted and otherwise, in six Texas counties. The committee's investigators do not mention the use of adopted children but report vicious enough conditions for all children, especially those of Negro croppers and tenants. Children of 6 to 16 are studied and reported "not just temporary or emergency workers, but are regular hands, determining in a large measure the extent of the cotton crop." They are almost a half of the available labor supply. Over half the mothers work in the fields.

More Than Half Under 12.

More than half the children working are under 12. They work between 9 and 11 hours a day, and from 52 to 93 days a year. "The administration of the school attendance law makes it easy for cotton growers to keep the children from school." The parents received little schooling and do not appreciate that their children are much retarded. "Trying to make a living crows almost everything else out of life," the committee reports.

Death Falls on Children.

Houses of tenants and croppers, especially of Negroes, are poor and many unfit for human habitation, for which the committee blames owners. "The congestion here is quite as real in regard to rooms and lack of privacy as in the cities, altho the houses are widely separated from each other," says the booklet. "Almost all the families lack adequate household conveniences. Most families lack fresh vegetables, depending chiefly upon cheap grades of canned and dried food obtained at the country store or commissary. The goods are bought mostly on credit, and therefore the amount and variety of food depends largely upon crop prospects. . . . The food is usually poorly cooked and served because the mothers are busy in the fields."

Morbidity and mortality rates are high: "Over 35 per cent of all persons had been ill during the past year, the percentage for mothers being highest. There were 8 per cent more of Negro persons ill than of white. . . Death falls most heavily upon the children."

Emigres Must Take New Road

MOSCOW, May 22.—It is proposed this year to direct emigrants from Soviet Russia to United States thru Leningrad. In this reference the northern board of the State Commercial Fleet is taking up the question of carrying to America about 4,000 Menonites (German sectarian colonists living mainly in the Azov Sea and the river Don districts.) The Leningrad papers remark that this will be a novelty, as previous to the war the flood of Russian emigration to the United States went thru two ports only, namely—Odessa, in the south, and Libau (near Riga), in the north.

U. S. S. R. Denies Break With Finns

MOSCOW, May 22.—In an official communique, there are denied the reports having appeared in the French press, alleging that the Soviet-Finnish relations are strained. It is announced that relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Finland are normal now as heretofore.

The Workers Party in Action

CHICAGO CITY CENTRAL ADOPTS POLICY OF ACTION DESIGNED TO STRENGTHEN A. C. W. LEFT WING

A spirited discussion took place at the city central committee meeting Wednesday, May 20, Workers (Communist) Party Local Chicago on the situation prevailing in the needle trades and on ways and means of building a strong left wing block in the Amalgamated, I. L. G. W. and other needle trades union. At the conclusion of the discussion, a resolution was adopted by the C. C. C. endorsing the campaign of the C. E. C. against opportunism in the needle trades by a vote of thirty-nine to one (39 to 1).

"WHEREAS, the enlarged meeting of the Central Executive Committee of the party adopted a resolution condemning the support given by certain comrades in New York City to the right wing opportunists in the needle trades, and sensuring Comrade Gitlow for violation of the discipline of the central executive committee in leading the fight against its policy, combining with the so-called Lore group and thereby defeating the resolution of the central executive committee, which has previously been adopted unanimously, and

"WHEREAS, such tactics are nothing more or less than support of the right wing in the party which the C. I. has categorically condemned, therefore be it

"RESOLVED, that we endrse the action of the central executive committee in this matter and pledge it our fullest support, and be it further

"RESOLVED, that we hereby call the attention of the central executive committee to the somewhat similar situation existing in Chicago in the Amalgamated and the support, active or passive, given by certain comrades to the right wing Shneid group, in and out of the party, and urge the central executive committee to conduct a thorough investigation of the Chicago needle trades situation and take such action as may be necessary to eliminate all opprtunistic tendencies in the local party organization and unite the party against this danger which the C. I. has pointed out."

Building a Left Bloc in The Trade Unions

Excellent program on the industrial field in other unions was reported by Comrade Jack Johnstone, industrial organizer. In I. L. G. preparations are being made to enter a slate in the elections, and the left wing can be expected to put up a stiff fight and to get results for the left wing. I. L. G. left-wingers are meeting now and are drawing up a program and slate.

In the Amalgamated the party membership is responding to the necessity of eliminating confusionism and opportunism among some elements, as the resolution passed charged, and a sound left block in the Amalgamated will surely crystalise itself.

In the Machinists elections the vote of 4 to 1 for Anderson as against B. & O. Johnston shows that the left wing conducted a strong campaign of propaganda for its program.

In the Barbers' Union where our comrades have been developing a strong sentiment for the progressive group, the machine is now retaliating with charges for suspensions and expulsions, with our comrades resisting to the full.

Resolutions against the class collaboration scheme of Scabby Bill Lee are being brought up in various railroad and machinists locals. In the painters, Comrade Johnstone, reported, first signs of a small developing left wing are to be noticed and in the carpenters, progress has, of course, been much more marked of recent.

Course of Lectures for Worker Correspondents Planned

A series of lectures for workers correspondents is to be given, starting the first Thursday in July, by Comrade William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, as a means of getting more working class news direct from the shops.

Comrade Dunne also gave report on the work among the Negroes, especially in relation to the coming American Negro Labor congress, stressing strongly the need of conducting the agitation among the trade unions. Unions and other working class bodies are being visited by members of local Negro committee on the Negro Labor congress.

The greatly increasing sale of literature, such as the Little Red Library, Workers Monthly, etc., by the English units especially was commented on by Comrade Hammersmark. The house to house and factory drive for DAILY WORKER subscriptions are bearing fruit, though hundreds more of party members must be drawn into this most important elementary work of building and insuring the DAILY WORKER.

The recent Irish, the Balkan protest and the Jewish left wing Workmen Circle protest meetings were reported on in conjunction with Labor Defense Council. The party and Y. W. L. are to hold soon a protest meeting for the release of the Communist soldiers, Crouch and Trumbull. Report on the miners situation and party activity in Illinois was given by the secretary.

Applications were received from the Greek, Mid-City English, Lake View Scandinavian, Czecho-Slovak Brookfield, Italian West Side No. 1, Dougles Park English, South Side English.

See other columns for announcements and details about the T. U. E. L. and July 4th Picnics.

Book Store Campaign On

The Book Store campaign for $2,500.00 is now under way and every party and Y. W. L. branch and nucleus is receiving the campaign books.

Free speech scraps for the right to hold street meetings are being conducted.

Fundamental party activities, such as trade union work, building the DAILY WORKER, etc., is on the increase and more and more response to party work from party comrades must be got.

The next meeting of the city central committee will be held on Wednesday, June 3rd, 1925 at 722 Blue Island Ave.

Communist Colonial Policy in Practice

All is not going well for French imperialism in the Riffian war. The facts of mutinies among the French troops and general disaffection in the whole expeditionary force are escaping the censorship.

The war is unpopular among the French workers and the peasants see in it only an excuse for further heavy taxation. Recruiting is slow and the Communist Party is leading the agitation against enlistments.

As usual the ministry of war tried to create the impression that only a few minor battles would be necessary to crush the Riffians, but it is a matter of public knowledge now that not only have the French forces suffered severe defeats, but that at the best a huge army and many months will be required for victory and even with this extensive and costly preparation victory is not certain.

A speedy defeat of the Riffians would cause comparatively few complications at home, but this is impossible and the longer the struggle continues the more restive become the tribesmen in other French possessions and the French populace. Coupled with the precarious state of French finances this latest venture creates a real crisis.

In the old days such projects could be conducted with more or less secrecy and even if known did not result in great disaffection in the ranks of the working class. The parties of the Second International never thought of aiding the liberation movements in the colonies of their respective countries and the imperialists could crush uprisings with ease and dispatch.

But the situation has changed. The colonial peoples have a new outlook since the world war. They have become accustomed to the use of weapons of modern warfare and the Communist parties extend every possible aid to them. The working class in the imperialist nations are not in accord with these adventures of their rulers for which they are recruited and for which they must pay either with their lives or in lowered standards of living.

So far these colonial movements are more or less sporadic and lacking in unity. But the tendency is to unite in the common struggle against imperialism and every extension of imperialist oppression, as the French war on the Riffs, brings more unity among the colonial peoples.

With the working class in France and the colonial peoples working in harmony against the bloody system of robbery, French capitalism is confronted with a power that it cannot crush.

The extension of this united front to include the workers of all imperialist nations and all colonial and semi-colonial peoples means the victory of the world revolution, a world Soviet Republic.

Why Wall Street Laughs

President Calles of Mexico breaks strikes and smashes unions and the Mexican Federation of Labor issues manifestos to the workers telling them to like it.

So it is that Calles is a popular hero in the American capitalist press and the idol of the yellow socialists.

His latest exploit is to break the strike of Huasteca oil workers and come out openly against them in their endeavor to force concessions from foreign oil capitalists. This also has the support of the Mexican labor fakers and it must bring a grin of glee to the faces of the Wall Streeters to see the whole-hearted co-operation and profitable returns they are getting from the money invested in, first, subsidizing the officialdom of the American Federation of labor and secondly in its Americanizing of the Mexican labor movement thru its officials and the socialist hangers-on.

It is a far cry from Mexico to Ireland, but the similarity in role and method between the Free State government and the Calles regime is too obvious to be overlooked. Both murder the most militant workers and sell the rest to their imperialist masters while the labor officialdom of both nations not only applauds but conspires to weaken and destroy all resistance in the ranks of the working class.

The Communist Party of Mexico alone points out to the working class the treacherous role of their leaders and points to the path of struggle which they must follow.

Signs of Revolt in the Ranks of the Labor Aristocracy

Lee, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, announces a gigantic plan of class collaboration while his union is in convention in Cleveland. Sheppard, head of the Railway Conductors, attacks the Communists and the left wing in a public meeting and his union severs all connection with the LaFollette third party movement at its Minneapolis convention and sinks back into the quagmire of the old "reward friends and punish enemies" policy.

The two incidents illustrate a reactionary trend of the most dangerous character—first, the willingness to surrender the weapon fo the strike, second, to abandon even the vague and confused form of independent political action represented by the LaFollette third party movement, in favor of active participation in the capitalist parties.

As an explanation of this trend in the American labor movement, a trend which the last election campaign interrupted temporarily, and which finds additional expression in the launching of banking and insurance schemes on a purely profit-making basis by the union officialdom, the mere pointing out of individual labor officials as traitors does not suffice. On the surface of American working class political life these officials are only bubbles. We must look for the chemistry of social change that agitates the mixture and forces these evil-smelling bubbles to the top.

We find the real explanation in the new status of Americna capitalism as a world power. American capitalism has become the creditor of all the capitalist world—a stream of gold flows ever outward to needy nations in the form of loans and in consequence a new kind of income, interest on foreign loans and investments, shows itself in the credit balance of the ruling class.

Foreign investments carry with them the danger of war. Defaulting debtors must be whipped into line and encroachments on the fields of American financial influence by other imperialist nations must be fought.

Modern warfare, successful modern warfare—and success is the watchword of America—demands as its first requisite a docile working class. For the great mass of the working class the era of imperialism brings added hardships and increase the danger, for the ruling class, of revolt. A working class united in opposition to wars of conquest and the cause of these wars, is something that the rulers must find ways and means of preventing.

With a tremendous surplus from foreign investment, a huge portion of it derived from the robbery of colonial workers and peasants whose standard of living is much lower than that of the American workers, the ruling class proceeds to divide the labor movement by granting special favors, in the form of higher wages and better than average working conditions to certain strata of the working class, particularly among the organized workers.

It is not necessary even that the labor officials be bribed outright altho for quick results in an emergency, this is done. It is sufficient that workers who occupy key positions in important industries, notably transportation, be made to feel that their interests lie with an imperialistic policy rather than in opposition to it. Right here we find the moving factor in all the schemes for class collaboration including the Johnston "B. and O." plan and the extension of it advocated by Lee.

But the class conflict is not abolished simply because a privileged section of the working class lines up with the imperialists. The conflict continues and ravages even the highest strata of labor. Revolt develops even here. It is necessary therefore to disembowel the unions of well-paid workers and make of them an empty shell. They must be made an integral part of the capitalist organization in order that organized action in time of crisis becomes impossible. Company unions that can control every action of the workers are the only form of labor organization that imperialism will tolerate and it is trying, thru the Johnstons, Lees and other less outspoken advocates, to transform the railway unions into outright adjuncts of its political power.

We do not wish to give the impression that the Lees and Johnstons are consciously working to this end. This would be giving them credit for too much intelligence. It is probable that they do not even understand very well the real nature of the treacherous work they are doing. It is sufficient that they are middle class in outlook, with all the servility to the big bosses that all middle class elements manifest, willing to do anything that will keep them well-fed and respectable.

But these procurers for American capitalism are not doing as well as might be expected by those who realize the lack of class consciousness among the American workers. In Johnson's union a rank and file revolt has defeated him and in the convention of the Trainmen, Lee is having the fight of his life. His whole policy is challenged and the struggle has crystallized around a resolution for amalgamation brought in by a Minneapolis delegate.

So the American working class, even its labor aristocracy, is not so backward after all. The left wing movement gathers momentum day by day and any one who knows the A. B. C.'s of the American labor movement knows that when amalgamation becomes an issue in a convention of the Railway Trainmen there must be a great ferment at work whose internal stress will yet break the class collaboration bubbles, clear away the scum and leave the clear solution in which the revolutionary germ already there will begin to multiply.

The Masterpiece of the Sofia Criminals

By V. KOLAROV.

Secretary of the Communist International.

NOT long ago it was revealed that thousands of forms for the production of false "Comintern documents" had been printed by a printing shop in Berlin, at the order of a person who was in touch with the Russian monarchists. As we were informed, these forms had the following heading: at the left top corner, "E. C. C. I.," illustration of sickle and hammer, below this "Central Section of the Department for Foreign Relations," space for date and number and "Moscow." Besides this, as is proper, at the right top corner "Proletarians of all countries, unite!" A few weeks ago the Bulgarian telegraph agency trumpeted thruout the world that the Bulgarian government had got hold of a "command of the Third Communist International" to the Bulgarian Communist Party, according to which the C. P. of Bulgaria was to start an armed insurrection in Bulgaria on April 15. No more and no less! As is well known, the Enlarged Executive of the Comintern detected the Sofia murderers and their forgers as early as April 6.

The Bulgarian papers of April 4, which are before us, contain the whole text of this "document," even in "facsimile," and we thus have the opportunity of being edified at the same time by the refined Jesuitism and the stupidity of the Balkan criminals. This is how the "document" is arranged:

E. C. C. I. (Illustration of sickle and hammer.)	Proletarians of all countries unite!
Central Section of the Department for Foreign Relations.	Absolutely private!
March 12th, 1925. No. 2960. Moscow."	Destroy after carrying out instructions!

WE herewith communicate to you that, in accordance with a resolution of the Communist Balkan Federation of the E. C. C. I. of March 12, 1925, you are immediately on the receipt of this letter, to get into direct touch with the comrade who is chairman of the supervising committee of your section in the Macedonian "Ouena Ojuka Taueb," and to let him know that the Communist Balkan Federation, through the above resolution, confirmed the resolution of the Macedonian "Ouena Ojuka Taueb" with regard to carrying out the verdict against Russinow and Garchitsch and agreed to enturst the execution of the resoltuion to Comrades Motjko and Kaschemirow as approved functionaries of the operative terrorits department.

Further you must on the basis of the same resolution, initiate all the comrades of the supervising committee of the Balkan center who are at your immediate disposal, into the following:

1. From April 15th of this year, all the functionaries of the supervising committee of the Balkan center will be regarded as mobilized.

2. Those of you who are organized in groups of threes, fives and tens must, at the latest by midday of April 15th, communicate the order of mobilization to the comrades under your direction of work according to instruction No. 27,001 of the E. C. C. I. of May 10th, 1924.

3. The directors of the centers for the distribution of arms must, by 1 p. m., on April 15th, prepare the distribution of munitions in the quantities necessary for each district according to the statements of the district directors.

4. The arms will be distributed in the night of April 15-16, and must then be in the keeping of the leaders of groups of ten, on their personal responsibility.

In points 5, 6, 7 and 8, detailed instructions are given as to the tasks of the individual fighting subdivisions in the carrying out of this plan.

9. The members of the workers, and peasants' organizations, with whose action of the Macedonian "Ouena Ojuka Taueb" will be brought into line, are to be informed that the slightest breach of the fighting orders will be punished on the spot by execution.

Point 10 is devoted to the connection between the individual bodies of troops.

THIS decree is to be communicated at once to the provincial department, and that with the use of code Al. Z. and while pointing out that the communication is to be destroyed as soon as read.

By order of the Executive of the Comintern
A. Dorot,

General Secretary of the Department for Foreign Relations. At the end of the document is the following postscript:

	To Comrade Sotow!
E. C. C. I. (Illustration of sicke and hammer.)	Communicate the verdict at once to Comrade Jantschew, translate the instructions in code Al. Z. and pass it on in the necessary numbers to the Department for secret Exp.
Central Section of the Department for Foreign Relations.	To be preserved in my personal archives.
No. 2960	19. III. 1925. S. Buschalek Recd. No. 346a.
Moscow.	19. III. 1925 Department for general supervision of the depts. for Foreign Relations.

As we see, the international forgers were quite indifferent to the fact that their plan was exposed from the beginning. They used the forged forms without reflecting that the Comintern, as an international organization can have no "Department for Foreign Relations," since the Communist parties are for it no "foreign" organizations, but their own sections. At the end of this monstrous "document" they put the signature of some imaginary A. Dorot. Without turning a hair, they, in this "document," passed a sentence of death on some unknown persons and "fixed on the executioners who were to carry out this verdict." And, to prove the genuineness of their production, they even added the mysterious words "Quena Ojuka Taueb" and go so far as to mention the "code Al. Z.," etc. The "Central Section" instructs the "Balkan Section" to pass on the decree—naturally in full—coded. At the same time, however, they write this decree in pure Russian!—obviously with the intention of making it possible for the band of forgers to read it, should it "fall" into their hands. Otherwise, of course, it could not be exposed.

THE rulers of Sofia have, as is well known, declared war on their people: martial law, court martials, persecution of the "illegals" in the villages and in the towns, street fighting, daily murders and "suicides," persons disappearing without leaving a trace behind them, individuals jumping from the building of the secret police in Sofia, the houses of suspected persons being set on fire, wholesale arrests, barbaric tortures, etc. As, however, the government includes not only generals but also professors who appreciate the significance of the "moral element" in warfare, the above—more or less crudely Balkan measures—are not the only methods of fighting used, for they might rouse the indignation of "public opinion among the democratic powers." Other, finer, intellectual methods of fighting, i. e. "Zinoviev letters" are added which, as experience has shown, are not condemned even in countries possessing all the virtues, such as England. To do them justice, we must acknowledge that the Sofia strategists made use of this kind of weapon as early as during the preparations for their September attack in 1923, that is to say, a year earlier than the English conservatives; it is only now, however, that they have learned to handle this weapon in an accomplished and cold-blooded manner. The "Moscow order" published in Sofia is indeed their masterpiece.

At the very moment when the government has mobilized all its repressive and provocative forces, when, in the towns, in the villages and in the woods, thousands of workers and peasants are being chased to death under the pretext that they are "conspiring," when every-day workers and peasants are being shot down in the streets like mangy dogs—at this very moment the government publishes "the order of the E. C. C. I." with regard to the declaration of the insurrection, which had been written on an exposed Berlin form. The moment has indeed been well chosen and the effect is tremendous. How is the Bulgarian petty bourgeois to know anything about the forged forms from Berlin? How could he, since not only the Communist, but every more or less independent press was suppressed long ago. No one in the country can write anything which is contrary to the orders of the Zankov police. And if, at any time, the forgery is exposed, it will be too late, as by that time the government will have attained its ends.

THE fact remains that the whole press has, with great eagerness, published this "document." With the exception of two papers which express a certian doubt as to its genuineness, all the rest of the papers, among them the social-democratic organ, represent it as a genuine document. The foreign correspnodents who are well paid by the government, have communicated it to the foreign press. Bulgaria is represented as an unfortunate victim of the devilish plans of the Comintern, at the back of which, of course, is the Soviet government. The latter is said to have no less an object than that of wiping the Bulgarian people from the face of the earth. But the Zankov government stands like a guardian angel at its post and prevents the collapse of Bulgaria. Thus the band of murderers who, in the interests of a handful of bankers and speculators is terrorising a whole people and physically exterminating the most self-conscious and active part of the people, are trying in the light of this "document" to represent themselves as a group of self-sacrificing "heroes" and "saviors of the country." In this way they obtain: exculpation of the crimes they have committed, a free hand for further shedding of blood, the concession to increase their army and, as the result of all this—a temporary strengthening of their power. Is not the political success of this "Zinoviev letter" sufficient to encourage the Zankov band to manufacture similar "documents" in future?

HOWEVER important this "success" may be, it will not enable the Sofia leeches to establish their power for long. A large dose is not always the most helpful. When the government resorted to this monstrous forgery, it was only because its situation was desperate, hopeless and that heroic means were needed to save it.

We are firmly convinced that the masses and the Communist Party will preserve their self-control in the face of the devilish attempts of the bands of provocatory agents, whose power is shaken to its foundations. In the atmosphere of blood and forgery which the government creates and the general discontent, to which it gives rise, as well as in the defensive of the working masses, the bands of murderers will soon be exterminated.

WORKERS PARTY CONDUCTS FREE SPEECH FIGHT

Holds Meeting Tonight Where Police Interfered

The Workers (Communist) Party will hold an open air meeting tonight on the corner of Orchard St. and North Ave., to establish the right of the workers to speak on the streets of Chicago. The police have on two Saturday nights arrested Workers Party speakers on this corner. Four weeks ago D. E. Early was arrested on a charge of "disorderly conduct," and two weeks ago Thurber Lewis, Karl Reeve and John Hecker were jailed, charged with speaking on the streets "without a permit." The city ordinance which required a permit for street speaking, was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court many years ago. No meeting was held last Saturday night on account of cold weather.

At tonight's meeting J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and Manuel Gomez, will speak.

Other open air meetings will be conducted by the Workers Party tonight on the following corners:

Division and Washtenaw—Speakers, William F. Kruse and Barney Mass
12th and Marshfield Sts.—Jack McCarthy and Karl Reeve.
12th and St. Louis—D. E. Early and Sam Hammersmark.
20th and State—Robert Minor and E. L. Doty.

Baku Fair Attracts Far East

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—According to information given by the Russo-Oriental chamber of commerce, a great number of applications have been filed with the chamber by Turkish and Afghan merchants wishing to participate in this year's Baku fair. Accordingly, the Russo-Oriental chamber of commerce has asked the competent authorities for an extension to Turkey and Afghanistan of the special privileges and facilities granted for the Baku fair to Persian merchants.

This Is a Different Challenge

WILL COMRADE BLOCK OF CINCINNATI ACCEPT?

Many builders have gone out to get subs and then challenged others to get what they got and the challenges have produced and are producing results.

But Comrade Meyer Esterkin goes further. He not only got subs but means to get more and has the audacity to challenge no less a person than the City DAILY WORKER Agent himself! A brave builder indeed and here is his open and unashamed defiance:

> Comrades:—I'll bet Comrade Goodman Block one year's subscription to the WORKERS MONTHLY that he will not get as many subs as I will during this campaign. I hope you will take up this challenge Comrade Block!

Now what do you say Comrade Block? Let the DAILY WORKER hear from you at once that you accept and mean to play h—avoc with this bold builder Comrade Esterkin. IS THE RACE ON?

THREE DIE IN 2ND SOUTHERN ILLINOIS STORM

Destitute Workers Are Again Hit

CENTRALIA, Ill., May 22.— Two persons were killed here in an electrical storm that swept the southern part of the state, inflicting severe damage to crops and homes of workers already made destitute by the tornado which cost several hundred lives early in the year. Homes were demolished, trees uprooted, and other severe damage done.

The dead are M. B. Kesterson and his wife, Laura. One man was reported killed in McLeansboro.

At Fairman, a dozen houses were unroofed, small structures were overturned, and window panes shattered. Outlying rural districts reported a heavy crop damage.

Fifty thousand dollars worth of property was reported destroyed in Marion. Many houses were wrecked.

Burlington Train Overturns.

BROOKFIELD, Mo., May 22.—One man was killed and two others, all members of the crew, injured when a Chicago, Burlington and Quincy passenger train derailed and overturned several miles west of Novinger, Missouri, early today. Fireman Robert Watson, of Milan, was killed outright, pinned beneath the locomotive.

Engineer Harry Kendal of Milan, and Baggageman C. F. Lewis were cut and bruised when they leaped from the train. No passengers were injured, but panic ensued when the entire train stalled on the brink of a steep embankment.

Italy Would Reduce Debt to U. S.

ROME, Italy, May 22.—Mussolini will ask the United States government to reduce the debt of Italy, to reapportion the debts among the victor nations according to what each got out of the war in the way of plunder, it was made known here after a speech of the fascist dictator before the senate. A small rate of interest will also be asked.

English Pacifism and English Aversion to Theory

By VLADIMIR ILYITCH LENIN.

Note.—The following article by Comrade Lenin was published recently in the Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party for the first time. The manuscript has not been dated by Comrade Lenin. Hence it is impossible to state exactly when it was written. The Pravda estimates that it was probably written about the beginning of 1915.

IN England there has existed up till now an incomparably larger measure of political freedom than in any other European country. Here the bourgeoisie has been more used to governing than is the case in other countries and understands the art of governing better.

The relations between the classes are more developed and in many respects clearer than in other countries. Freedom from compulsory military service affords the people greater liberty in respect to their attitude to war insofar as everybody is free to refuse to enter the army. The government is therefore compelled (in England the government constitutes in its purest form a committee for conducting the business of the bourgeoisie) to exert all its forces in order to arouse "popular" enthusiasm for the war.

It would be quite impossible to achieve this aim, without committing a fundamental breach of law, were the proletarian mass not completely disorganized and demoralized by the minority of best paid and qualified workers organized in the unions going over to liberal, that is, to bourgeois politics. The English trade unions comprise one-fifth of the wage workers. The leaders of these trade unions are liberals for the greater part, and Marx long ago designated them as agents of the bourgeoisie.

ALL these peculiarities of England enable us on the one hand to understand the nature of present day social chauvinism the more easily, as it is precisely the same in the countries with a despotic form of government, as well as in the democratic countries, in the militarist countries as well in those without compulsory military service. On the other hand they help us, when regard is had to all the facts, to estimate the importance of those reconciliatory tendencies with social chauvinism, which find expression for example in the glorification of the slogan of peace, etc.

The most complete expression of opportunism and of liberal labor politics is undoubtedly to be seen in the Fabian Society. In this connection the reader should carefully peruse the exchange of letters between Marx and Engels and Sorge. He will there find a brilliant characterization of this society by Engels, who treats Messrs. Sidney Webb & Co. as a gang of bourgeois scoundrels, who wish to poison the workers and to influence them in a counter-revolutionary direction. We can be quite sure that not a single one of the influential and responsible leaders of the Second International has at any time attempted to refute this judgment of Engels and that none of them have attempted to cast any doubt upon the correctness of this judgment.

LET us lay aside theory for a moment and compare the facts. We shall see that the attitude of the Fabians during the war (see for example their weekly paper, The New Statesman) and that of the German social democratic party, including Kautsky, is exactly the same. The same direct as well as indirect defense of social chauvinism, the same uniting of this defense with the inclination to utter all sorts of kind, humane and almost left phrases regarding peace, disarmament, etc., etc.

The fact exists and there follows from it, no matter how disagreeable it may be for various persons, the inevitable and indisputable consequence: that the leaders of the present day German social democratic party, including Kautsky, are in practice just as much agents of the bourgeoisie as the Fabians, whom Engels long ago characterized as such. The repudiation of Marxism by the Fabians and its "recognition" by Kautsky and Co. make not the slightest difference to the matter when it comes to actual policy, but only proves the transformation of Marxism into Struvism by certain writers, politicians, etc. . .Their hypocrisy is not their personal sin; they can, under certain circumstances, be the best fathers of families. Their hypocrisy is the result of an objective contradiction in their social position. Ostensibly they represent the revolutionary proletariat and in reality, are agents for the promotion of bourgeois chauvinst ideas in the ranks of the proletariat.

The Fabians are more honest and sincere than Kautsky & Co. as they have not promised to go in for the revolution—but politically they are of the same kind.

The "deep-rootedness" of political freedom in England and the high stage of development of English political life in general and of the English bourgeoisie in particular has resulted in the various shades of bourgeois opinions in this country finding quickly, easily and freely a new form of expression in new political organizations. One of these organizations is the "Union of Democratic Control." The secretary and treasurer of this organization is E. D. Morel who is at present a constant contributor to the central organ of the "Independent Labor Party," the Labor Leader. Morel was some years ago the canidiate of the liberal party in the constituency of Birkenhead. When Morel, soon after the outbreak of the war, spoke against Russia, he was informed by a letter from the Birkenhead Liberal Association, dated October 2, 1914, that in future his candidature would not be acceptable for the liberal party, that means, he was simply expelled from the party. Morel replied in a letter dated October 14, which he then published in a special pamphlet under the title: "The Outbreak of the War."

MARX AND LENIN

SPOKESMEN OF THE WORLD SOCIAL REVOLUTION.

In this pamphlet, as well as in a number of other articles, Morel exposes his government by proving how incorrect it was to point to the violation of Belgium neutrality as being the cause of the war and to claim that the object of the war was the destruction of Prussian imperialism, etc., etc. . . Morel defends the program of the "Union of Democratic Control": Peace, disarmament, the right of self-determination of all territories on the basis of a plebiscite, and democratic control of foreign policy.

FROM all this it is to be seen that Morel as a person undoubtedly deserves recognition for his sincere sympathy for democracy, for his turning from the chauvinist bourgeoisie to the pacifist bourgeoisie. When Morel proved by facts that his government deceived the people when they denied the existence of secret treaties, altho they existed all the time; that the English bourgeoisie, even in the year 1887, was perfectly clear as to the inevitability of the violation of Belgium neutrality in the event of the Franco-German war and emphatically rejected every idea of intervention (Germany at that time was not yet a dangerous competitor), that the French militarists of the type of Colonel Boucher have before the war, in a number of books, openly announced their intention of conducting an aggressive war on the part of France and Russia against Germany; that the well-known English military authority, Colonel Repington, in the year 1911 characterized in the press the increase of armament in Russia since 1905 as a danger for Germany—when Morel proves all this, we must admit that we are dealing with a courageous bourgeois who is not afraid of breaking with his own party.

Everybody must however, immediately percieve that he is nevertheless a bourgeois whose phrases regarding peace and disarmament remain empty phrases, as without the revolutionary action of the proletariat there can be no talk either of a democratic peace or of disarmament. And Morel, who has now fallen out with the liberals on account of the question of the present war, remains on all economic and political questions a liberal. Why is it regarded, not as a piece of hypocrisy, but as a merit when Kautsky in Germany uses the same bourgeois phrases concerning peace and disarmament, decorated with Marxist terminology? Only the backward development of political conditions and the lack of political freedom in Germany prevents a bourgeois league of peace and disarmament springing up, on the basis of the program of Kautsky, with the same ease and rapidity as in England.

LET us recognize the fact that Kautsky adopts the standpoint of the pacifist bourgeois and not of the revolutionary social democracy. We are living in the midst of sufficiently great events to have the courage to recognize the truth "regardless of persons."

In their aversion to abstract theory, proud of their practicality, the English often approach political questions in a direct manner. They thereby help the socialists of other countries to find the real content within the husk of every kind of terminology—including the "Marxist." In this connection the pamphlet, "Socialism and War,"* which was published before the war by the chauvinist paper, The Clarion, is instructive. The pamphlet contains a "declaration" by Upton Sinclair the American socialist against war, and the reply of the chauvinistic Robert Blatchford, who has for long occupied the same imperialist position as Hyndman.

SINCLAIR is a sentimental socialist without theoretical training. He puts the question "simply,' he is incensed at the approach of war and seeks salvation from war thru socialism.

"We are told," writes Sinclair, "that the socialist movement is still too weak, that we must rely upon evolution. But evolution proceeds in the hearts of men; we are the instruments of evolution. We are told, that our movement against the war will be suppressed. But I declare, and I am profoundly convinced of it, that the suppression of all activity which has as its aim, on the ground of the highest humanity, the prevention of war, would constitute the greatest victory of socialism—the greatest it has ever gained—as this would rouse the conscience of civilization and stir up the workers of the whole world as never before in history. Let us not be too anxious regarding our move-

The Mass Lockout in Denmark

By KARL V. JENSEN (Copenhagen)

SIX weeks ago 50,000 workers were locked out. On the 22nd of April the struggle was extended by the addition of 100,000 fresh workers. Practically all the factories are at a standstill. This is the greatest struggle in the history of the Danish working class. And this situation has arisen in spite of the fact that the trade union bureaucrats and the social democratic ministers did everything possible in order to avoid the struggle, in spite of the government arbitration commission, which did its utmost to maintain peace, and in spite of the fact that the arbitration proposals on the part of the highest authorities in the Central Trade Union Federation and the Employers' Federation were accepted.

The first negotiations regarding the prolongation of the collective treaty were commenced last autumn. The policy followed by the employers was that of waiting in order to see the effect of the Dawes plan, in order thereby to be able better to judge the competitive capacity of Danish industry, and then to take a definite attitude in the spring on the expiration of the treaty, but at the same time to make use of the preliminary negotiations in order to judge the attitude of the trade union leaders.

FROM the secret minutes of the sitting of the executive committee of the Employers' Federation, which fell into the hands of the Communist Party of Denmark, it was to be seen that the employers were not inclined to enter upon a decisive struggle in order to reduce wages, as they very much feared "meeting with resistance on the part of the workers which they would not be capable of overcoming."

The Communist Party immediately called the attention of the workers to this favorable situation, and called upon the trade unions to put forward their demands accordingly. In spite of this the president of the Metal Workers' Union, I. A. Hansen, at the first negociations intimated that he was prepared to accept a prolongation of the old treaty on the basis of a wage regulation according to the index of prices and an increase of the minimum wages which are too low for the metal workers.

The Communist Party put forward the following demands: a considerable increase of wages beyond the price index, factory councils, summer vacation, and securing of the eight hour day by increased rates of pay for overtime.

A number of trade unions adopted these demands. The executive of the trade union federation, however, did not put forward any joint demands on the part of the workers nor lay down any common fighting tactics, but left this to individual trade unions. This of course, could only lead to shameful compromises.

THIS lack of fighting spirit on the part of the trade union leaders, these strenuous attempts on the part of the social democrats to maintain peace at any price, rendered the employers arrogant, and this arrogance was still further increased by the fact that at the decisive moment the Trade Union Federation put forward as a basis for negotiations the demand that wages be increased according to the price index and, in addition, a further increase of the lowest rates of wages only. In order to compel the workers to drop their wage demands, the employers put forward the demand for a general reduction of wages by 10 per cent, accompanied by the threat of a whole lockout.

After weeks of negotiations, an arbitration proposal was submited as regards the union of unskilled workers, which numbers about 80,000 members, according to which they would be granted a 30 per cent increase of wages on account of high prices, whilst the workers in the metal industry would not receive a penny increase. When the federation demanded time in order to convene a congress, this was declared to mean non-acceptance of the arbitration proposal, and 50,000 workers were locked out, among them being members of trade unions who had already concluded new treaties. Fresh wholesale lockouts were contemplated, with the result that isolated sympathetic strikes were declared as counter-measures.

In this situation the Communist Party called upon the workers to take up a common struggle and demanded the convocation of the trade union congress in order to organize the struggle by the general strike, and in addition demanded unconditional support on the part of the social democratic government. These demands were immediately and unanimously accepted by the workers in a number of trade unions and met with enthusiastic approval in many workers' meetings in all parts of the country.

INSTEAD of the congress, however, a conference of so-called "representatives" was convened, which rejected the communist proposal regarding the convening of the congress and the calling of a general strike and constituted a tragi-comedy, as the conference was only intended to cover a new manoeuvre of the trade union leaders. Behind the backs of the workers, the executive of the Trade Union Federation negotiated with the employers and the arbitration committee, with the result that a new arbitration proposal was worked out.

This proposal was at first rejected by the employers, whereupon the Executive of the Trade Union Federation recommended the conference to accept the proposal for tactical reasons in order to demonstrate the will to peace of the workers. This was done. The employers thereupon calmly accepted the proposal, but with the provision that if the proposal should be rejected by even one trade union, the lockout of all the workers would come into force and the 50,000 workers already locked out would contnue to starve until everything was settled.

The proposal, however, made no provision for high prices, either for the unskilled or the skilled workers in the metal industry. Whilst the proposal was recommended by the president of the metal workers union, it was very energetically opposed by the president fo the Workers' Union (union of unskilled workers) Lyngsie. It is worth remarking that although Lyngsie is an old social democrat and out and out reformist, he still retains some of his proletarian class feeling.

ON a ballot being taken, the metal workers rejected the proposal by a small majority, and this was only due to to the very energetic agitation on the part of the Communists. In spite of the fact that Lyngsie was in the minority on the executive of his union, he nevertheless succeeded, supported by a fairly strong communist fraction, in rejecting the proposal with an overwhelming majority at the congress of the trade union. Five smaller trade unions, who had received a 3 per cent increase on account of high prices, accepted the proposal. The 7 trade unions which rejected the proposal represented about 110,000 workers, whilst the 17 trade unions accepting it represented only about 30,000 members. Thus the majority of the workers, refused to accept defeat, and the C. P. has started a renewed campaign for the extension of the demands and for the fight.

The tremendous increase in prices and the growing unemployment forced the Danish workers to put forward their demands for higher wages, and the workers believed—and the majority of them still believe—that "their own government", the Stauning Ministry, could be an important point of support in the struggle. But the workers are being disappointed. The most important task of the social democratic government up to now has been to stabilize the Danish valuta, that means, to stabilise the capitalist order of society at the expense of the workers. For this purpose a law was passed in January which imposes fresh burdens of taxation, both direct and indirect, while a pre-requisite for the carrying thru of the stabilisation of the valutá was the limitation of the purchasing power of the workers, in other words wage reductions, and that "law and order" be maintained.

IT was for these reasons that the trade union bureaucrats did not wish to fight and that the social democrats did everything possible in order to preserve "law and order". It was for these reasons that the social democratic ministers everyday urged the workers to have regard for the interests of the whole community. There must be no disturbance of the economic life of the country; there must be no difficulties placed in the way of the government. In order not to disturb the peace of the Stauning Ministry it is the duty of the workers to continue peacefully at work even if they only receive starvation wages. The social democratic ministers who are so much concerned with the interests of the whole of the community, are greatly excited because their party comrade, Lyngsie, threatened a transport strike, which would hit the export of agricultural products and shake the whole economic life of the country.

THE fighting spirit of the workers however, is increasing every day. At a full meeting of the executive of the Copenhagen trade unions—composing about 2000 workers—the communist, speakers met with applause and a fighting speech by Lyngsie received an ovation. The meeting declared that the demands must be extended and that the workers canot show regard for the community, but only for their own class interests. The communist demand: Trade union congress and the general strike, extracted the promise from the president of the Trade Union Federation that the trade union congress will be called in the first week in May.

The Communist Party of Denmark is confronted with the enormous task of convincing the Danish workers that the social democratic policy leads to defeat on the trade union front and that the victory of the workers is only possible if they abandon this policy. The Danish workers during the last few weeks have begun to think over this.

Letters From Our Readers

No Miracles in Truth.

To the DAILY WORKER:—Sometimes when I read your paper and see things about lack of prosperity in this country, I wonder where you are getting the news. For one never sees it in our daily sheets, tho I seldom waste my time on them.

However, the editorial in The Nation of May 20, confirms past articles in your paper, and would recommend its quotation in your columns. Its heading is "We Are A Bit Worried." I also spoke to a business man today. He did not see any good times ahead till European debts to us have been wiped off. He cannot quite conceive that such action would shake the foundation of our present system, which is the theory that one has to live up to his contract even tho it may break his neck to do so.

This manufacturer I spoke to, happened to know that our factory system has been expanded thru the war period to such an extent that we can supply the nation's needs by running our factories four months a year.

Your Alex Reid's article of May 16, about 200 mines out of 274 in Illinois being idle, has been substantiated by the same business man, who quoted the expert testimony of a coal broker a friend of his, "That running all of our coal mines two months a year will supply all the coal we need."

Now, why are working people so ignorant, even many of Lenin's followers, and are inappreciative of your efforts to educate them.

Your classes, where you are endeavoring to train workers for militant class conscious agitation, are commendable. Your efforts to give facts in your paper and omitting trash, are laudable. Of course, trade union controversies are at times nauseating, but I presume you are compelled to repell their vicious acts copied from parliamentary fillibustering carried on in our legislatures by our paid and honored officials.

Let every worker tell you what he knows, and we will soon know a lot.—A Reader, Detroit, Mich.

Socialist Party Local Dead.

To the DAILY WORKER: I was born in Muscatine, Iowa, in 1881, in a working class family. Always looked up to Debs as a good fighter in the ranks of labor, especially when he went to jail for the railroad men during the 1893 strike. In 1902 I helped organize a local of the socialist party and was financial secretary most of the time and did most of the real work in the local for 16 years, or until the world war started, then I was sent to Leavenworth for two years of rest (which I needed).

From Leavenworth I came to Denver, Colo., where I helped organize Local Denver Workers Party and have been financial secretary of the English branch for the past three years.

Yesterday I received a letter from a former member of Local Muscatine, Iowa, Socialist Party which tells of the demise of same (which is all O. K. wit hme), and I hope you will punish the letter as I received it which speaks for itself.

Yours for the DAILY WORKER,
Lee W. Lang.

Muscatine, Iowa, May 11, 1925.

Dear Friend: Will drop you a few lines to let you know I still exist. Am cntting buttons now, but am thinking of fishing and shelling this summer, but don't know just what I will do. Well, Lee, I guess the local has blowed up. The last meeting we had there wasn't enough there to call a meeting, so that is the last I have heard of it. Even the members ain't interested in it enough to attend the meetings. It's enough to digust the devil if there is such an animal. Did you hear about Joe Miller, the mayor, who is reported to be a K. K. K.? (Miller was a socialist alderman for a number of years). I suppose your folks told you about it. Sunday I drpve my Lizzy to Wilton carrying six passengers with me and then I drove over to Moscow (Iowa), and back home again.

As ever your friend,

Mammonart and Communist Art

By Robin E. Dunbar

THE thesis of a late discussion on bourgeois art and artists seems to be that some artists are bigger prostitutes than others, and much clothesline gossip and spicy detail are given to "prove" the theory. There isn't much use in paying serious attention to this attempt at catch-penny sensationalism; were it not for the fact that it fools many of my simple minded comrades.

But just as the bourgeoisie fool many millions of workers into kissing their chains by means of the church, the press, the public school, the platform and even the soap-box, so does it make potent use of the various forms of art expression, such as the novel, the essay, the drama,—spoken and silent,—and the art critique to enslave its subjects.

SO the writer who is guilty of the piece of bourgeois collaboration mentioned above has done his masters a good turn by again drawing the red herring of false criticism across the workers trail of the revolution. Let's recall our dogs and start over the path anew.

All art is mammonart save Communist art; so there's that. It is a fact that a bourgeois artist's first works are less obsequious than his later ones, after he has tasted workers blood. But aiming at popularity, which means royalties, even his first works are subtle attempts at class collaboration, whether they are in the forms of novels, poems, paintings, statues, sermons, essays, plays or what-not.

THE difference between those bourgeois artists who start by licking the king's boots, and those who end in doing so is the difference between tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum. Rudyard Kipling likes the dust of his Edward's No. 12's so well that he doesn't stop licking them until he has lickt off dust, blacking and all. Bernard Shaw hates the job but he buries his disgust long enuf to journey to France during the world war and return to make a lick spitling plea for more cannon fodder for king and country (both with capitals you observe). And who forgets that the very man who now draws such fine haired distinctions between god and mammon in bourgeois art price offered his mighty services to President Wilson to help make this land safe for democracy (this too with capitals) in return for a little recognition and some office of emolument and profit.

I NOTE that this brassy author claims to be the third great artist of the U. S. A., Mark Twain, the humorous cuss, and Jack London, the drunken bum, being No. 1 and 2. He is welcome to such company, so far as we are concerned. Mark spent his last days in financial, political, artistic and philosophical bankruptcy kissing the toe of his god and savior, H. H. Rogers, the Wall St. pirate. Jack didn't sink quite so low, but he bought an estate, stocked it up with horses and booze and a bourgeois wife and renounced socialism, thru which he had acquired all his popularity acquired a fat belly, and died a sot.

THE eminent and profound critic, whom we shall call No. 3, begins to look bloated and puffy, and tho for the present he keeps fit by daily exercise, he is on his way to a breakdown from over-eating and underwriting. He better turn common laborer, join the union, quit talking about art, and do a little work for Communism, if he wants to be remembered along with the blessed, like John Reed, Joseph Dietzgen and Daniel De Leon, whom I should call the big 3 of American letters.

LET us examine closely into this thing and find out if we can see the difference between bourgeois art and Communist art. The matter is quite important since so many of our shrewdest comrades fail to see it.

In the first place no art is art unless it is first of all wise and truthful. That is, if the artist does not live amongst evolutionists and revolutionists, he will get no material worth while. He may like Mark Twain, be an adventurer in his youth, and a loafer in his old age; that won't get him anywhere. Not with adults. I understand his "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" circulate widely amongst the children of Russia; for that matter so does "Treasure Island."

NO one claims these books have any value for fighting men and women. There is nothing revolutionary about them. Nothing Marxian or Leninist. In short nothing therein to add thot to the wise; or make them more resolute in their struggles to be free. These books are childish; composed by childish minded men, who never grew up, or if they did grow up, became corrupted by sycofancy, parasitism and class cllaboration. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has more guts in one of its historic pages than all of these other works combined, and I don't find it catalogued in the famous Howl by No. 3. (Someone had to take a fall out of that intolerably conceited bourgeois ass; if no one else would do it, I who have no appetite for such nauseous matters must volunteer!)

COMMUNIST art is ripening in Moscow. I can't say much about it as I haven't been there, but Barkis is willing, and I hereby serve notice on my left wing comrades to organize and send me as a delegate there, if they want a better report than I can give now.

However suffice it to say that Pletnev in the Proletcult theaters has kickt out the Nos. 1, 2 and 3's and replaced them with proletarians who give the worker audience the thrill of their lives. He makes them participate in the performances too, as singers, marchers, and collaborators: working class artist collaborators, if you please. He throws out the old Belasco settings with their overstuft drawing-room furniture; he puts overalls over the John Drew creased pants; he sets on the stage platforms, machines, bits of the shop, the circus, the street and the field and centers the action around proletarian revolition. He considers that Communist art must be all propaganda, just like bourgeois art is now; and he blue pencils love as the prime motive, and makes mass progress the main spring of the new stage.

THE individual is set aside; the great man killed off; the Nos. 1, 2 and 3's with their sloppy and slobbering heroes and heroines are thrown out of the door by the scruff of their necks, and the clean high spirited men and women actors of the factory are invited in.

The theater itself is torn down and the shows are given in the factory communal halls.

No salaries; no professionals; no charges at the box office. All is for love, instead of all being about love, and sensual love at that.

The dirty, the pornografic, the lewd, the drunken, the low, the bummy, the bourgeois in short is shown the gutter, and the healthy worker running his beloved machine, conqueror of famine, poverty, and want is given the center of the stage.

The trapeze, and the flying rings replace the davenport and the sofa. The setting is for work and for workers, not for lounge lizards, and jazz hounds and sex degenerates, who moan and whime in Oscar Wildean monotones about not sufficiently satisfying their degenerate appetites, their sadistic cravings, their abnormal thirsts. This stuff is fine business for the artistic brotherhood, who denounce all that part of the brasscheck press that doesn't pay them royalties, praise their scribblings, while contributing snide and sly counter-revolutionary article to the so-called radical papers, the other branch. (YES: it is true. No. 3 did invite President Wilson to meet him at his local hotel, and take lunch with him. Prexy respectfully declined, showing almost as much contempt for N. 3 as the working class itself does.)

EURIPIDES first put woman-in-love on the stage. According to the other Grecian playwrights, this marked the degeneracy of Athenian art. Euripides had two wives who both betrayed him, like bourgeois wives usually do where it is a question of how much money they get out of their trechery, they act just like bourgeois artists do. But Greek art was founded on conquest of workers in and out of Greece; it was for the owners of slaves, just as art has been ever since. No wonder that it is rotten; no wonder that the American stage has become Frenchified, where nude women and adulterous wives hold the boards to the exclusion of all other heroines.

Wine, women and song is the bourgeois littany; all its artists must sing that or pass out. No. 3 sings it too, tho with a wry mouth; but he listens to it with wide open asses ears! That's why he likes his own kind so well; the Shaws, Menckens, Brisbanes and his paymaster, Hearst. No. 3 is a sad example of bourgeois perversity. He may be a great humorist like Mark Twain, but he'll never die a laughing at his own jokes any more than Mark did.

WHAT killed Mark was he had to keep his mouth shut or lose his job; so he took to his bed and smoked himself to death; just like Jack London took to his front porch and his bottle. Both were good men and true; and both died cursing their paymasters Isn't it too bad, comrades, to be a great author?

The third in America, that means in the world, for America thru Wall Street, leads the world; and of course its artists, being Wall Street artists, are greater than Lombard St., or Wilhelm Strasse, or the Paris Bourse or other literary thorofare artists in foreign countries. And as for Moscow outside the Belasco Art Theater there, that town is not in the running at all! Third in the world, and not be recognized by all the bourgeoisie as such and by none of the Third International? Such negation is a great deprivation.

COMMUNISM doesn't pay. I rather like it for that reason. For I am not tempted to follow No. 3's fatal foot steps, and become an unknown number like he is; unknown to the real rebel workers of the world; an X whose value in the equation turns out to be zero.

Jubilee Concert to Honor Proletarian Composer

ON the 24th of this month, Jacob Schaefer, the well-known musician and leader of the Freiheit Singing Organization, will receive an enthusiastic, real proletarian welcome and ovation from the workers of Chicago, as the day will mark the close of his ten years of intensive work and considerable accomplishments in the field of music. Jacob Schaefer, as a musician identified himself with a proletarian task, namely, to bring the esthetic and educational influences of music to the workers who labor in factories and in other various places of business and as they endure the harsh conditions prevalent in their personal lives, gradually lose their sensibilities for the finer assets of life among which music probably plays the most predominant part. He had therefore, devoted his talents and time to the work of developing and creating the song of the toiler, clearly indicating thereby, his firm belief in the existence of proletarian music.

HE realizes as well as we do, that the (so-called) class struggle, becoming such distinct an event at the present time, has also reached the sphere of the finer arts. A line of demarcation must be drawn in that great field of art. Our music should incorporate characteristics of proletarian consciousness and reflect the conceptions and tendencies of our revolutionary times. Music of the higher sort is at the disposal of the rich. They are patronizing the artist and the latter, in turn, seeks their favor and tries to satisfy their whims.

IN the future we are bound to see music being responsible to the great events of time. To the facts which will particularly determine the destinies of humanity as they will be manifested in the revolutionary struggles of the oppressed, downtrodden masses for liberation and freedom. Proletarian music suggests to us the idea that proletarian emotions are to find incarnation in musical conceptions expressed in musical sounds. Music which has been a source of inspiration to humanity and has been used to elevate the spirit and inbue the soul with longing and desire for justice, spiritual gratification will serve an eqpal purpose to the workers, yet will strengthen their belief in their ideals and inspire them to do things essential to bring about the realization of their dreams.

TRUE proletarian composers are not to be found in numbers. They are rare; but they will appear in due course of time. One of them is the man mentioned in the previous lines, Jacob Schaefer. His musical compositions present themes, dealing with life of workers. His newly created work which is to be given on the 24th of this month is a musical score composed to the words of a dramatic poem written by a revolutionary Russian playwrigth. The selection of that dramatic poem for a theme of a musical work and the making of its performance coincident with a time which is regarded by him and his fellow workers as a jubilee, are evidence that he is the new type of a proletarian composer, organically connected with our proletarian aspirations and ideals.

J. Schaefer is a man of whom we can expect very much. His past life had proved that. He came over to America as an immigrant and started to work as a carpenter. Being a child of poor parents he never knew what meant to live comfortably and enjoy those things which a person in the blooming period of youth is longing for. Here, in America, he faced those hardships and deprivations which meet newcomers. He labored hard, and at the same time spared time and saved some of his meager earnings for the purpose of taking up musical studies. Being a man of energy and determination he overcame the difficulties. He gradually acquired a musical education and thereby afforded his natural talents to come into play and secure for him a prominent place in the profession. It is expected that the workers of Chicago will take notice of this affair and will be present at the Studebaker Theater on the 24th day of May, 2:30 p. m., to hear the work of Jacob Schaefer, performed by the Freiheit Singing Society, members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and conducted by the composer himself.

MASTERS AND SLAVES (A Story of the Working Class)

By John Lassen

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Nickles and Joe Vavas, migratory workers, meet under a freight train while beating their way west. They get off at Colorado Springs. Joe Vavas, Hungarian, is a barber by trade, and Nickles, a Greek, has no fixed trade. In Colorado Springs Vavas buys second-hand clothes for the two and they go to look for work. Vavas gets a job as a barber. Nickles manages to get work at Broadmoor, the mansion of the Broidins. His work is constant drudgery. Vavas is class conscious, but Nickles is not. Now go on with the story.

VI.

JOE and Nickles met often. They did not agree on many things, but liked each other a lot. Joe had more free time than Nickles, and would walk over to Broadmoor in the evening. There is fresh air here and the forest.

Joe felt as if he had been in Colorado Springs from the beginning of time. That is part of a workers' nature. He has no roots. He felt at home wherever there were workers.

"Look here, you ain't got no idea how much the workers are dissatisfied here."

"Ah, that't a lot of talk. I think myself they'd like to tear each other's head off."

"That's something I don't believe. No sir There ain't no reason why they should. They al work hard, don't they, and the guy that's got a family to support suffers the most, even though he works his head off."

"You can't do a thing to the bosses. They're too strong."

Joe was aware that the power of the bosses depended upon the workers. But Nickles wouldn't hear of it. He clung to the belief that there were always people who had others work for them, and lived from the toil of others, and it would always be so. Anybody who is very industriaus and has luck can also come around to the point where he would live from the work of others.

"Why look here, anybody that can talk good American gets along fine!"

• • • •

NICKLES felt great admiration for Joe.

For his enthusiasm.

The way he loved his Communist paper for instance. It was always sticking out of his pocket. And he would tell Nickles what was in it.

Nickles read the "Denver Post."

It was full of pictures. And yet there was nothing in it that held him really.

The "Denver Post" would always boast about how rich it was.

But Joe reported on every occasion how the Communist paper was in financial difficulties.

And this was certainly a thing to be wondered at.

It was Nickles' idea that a paper that was always in financial difficulties ought to be given up. And yet he saw the very contrary, that: the relation between Joe and the paper became the more cordial, the greater the paper's hardships.

And all these collections . . . !

Joe never tired of sending in at the end of the week the money which he had saved from his wages. And he didn't earn much!

Nickles was of the opinion—and he told that to Joe—that his actions contradicted his words. Joe always said that all the money, all the property and possessions of the rich must be taken away, and yet he himself gave away everything he had. Nickles thought, why does a man need wealth when he gives away the little that he has?

He thought of how Joe had shared with him his few dollars when they had come here—and that he could have bought a much better suit for himself for all the money.

And another thing. Every time that Joe read in his paper about a misfortune or that in some country the reactionaries were again murdering workers, he would shake his fist, would threaten, say all kinds of things—that the day of judgment would come for those rascals of capitalists. His talk was bloody.

And yet as a matter of fact Joe was extremely gentle. Ridiculously so. He would even get out of the way of a caterpillar.

Nickles often kidded him about it.

And yet.

These qualities attracted him to Joe. He had to admit that he liked him so much precisely on account of these qualities. And he even gave his friend something from his low wages for the Russian children or for the revolutionists packed into the prisons of the Hungarian capitalists.

And Nickles didn't realize that through Joe he learned more about what was happening in this big, wide world to the poor, his fellow workers, than he could learn in the thirty-two pages of the "Denver Post" that he read every day.

• • • •

VII.

"IT is a privilege to live in Colorado"—Nickles read at least ten times every day in the "Denver Post."

"But not for everybody"—he thought while pol-

The sun shone through the window.

There wasn't a bit of breeze.

And the heavy dress-coat in which he had to serve! The heavy, parrot-green dress-coat!

"I don't need no steam bath! . . ."

Sweat trickled in big drops down his back, in his arm-pits, down his neck. With all his might he longed for the evening.

For the forest.

For the wind. The soft wind. The forest-wind, of which he got so little.

• • • •

MARGUERITE accompanied him.

They waited for Joe.

• • • •

Nickles reached for Marguerite's hand. And Marguerite yielded it.

Nickles was a strong, hansome chap. And Marguerite was a lively, affectionate girl.

ishing the knives.

It is so natural, after a hot, exhausting day for two bodies to find each other in the cool dimness of the forest.

Did they love each other? Why not? They were lonely. And both of them wanted to love.

Nickles pressed Marguerite tightly. His arms held the girl in iron embrace.

Marguerite cried out faintly.

Nickles laughed: "Does it hurt?"

Marguerite wanted to free herself from his arms.

"You . . . You . . . !"

Nickles laughed.

He bit the girl on the shoulder.

Marguerite slapped him dutifully on the mouth, although secretly she rather liked his intimacy and didn't really resent it . . .

They heard steps.

Joe came.

His face was unusually cheerful.

Nickles asked:

"Did you catch a sparrow?"

"No, but ther's big things goin' to happen."

"That so?"

"Yes. Think of it, I brought together all the fellows in my trade, and tomorrow the union organizer is coming from Denver."

"Nickles didn't grasp the entire significance of the thing, but anyway he was happy together with his friend.

"Just think, there'll be a fight!"—and Joe stamped from joy.

Nickles had never seen his friend so cheerful before.

Joe reported in detail how he had succeeded in bringing together the dissatisfied, and that there was a splendid chap among them, a certain William who was very helpful to him in the organisation.

"He is an American. It's easier for him"—Joe sighed. "Me they call a foreigner plenty of times."

"D'you see?"—Nickles said trumphantly—"that's how your fellow-workers are." And he stressed sarcastically the word "fellow."

"Naturally they are like that. And . . . if they wasn't that way, you wouldn't be Mr. Broidin's servant, you'd be workin' in the public library or the children's sanatorium of Broadmoor. That's what they do with them mansions in Russia, turn them into something useful. And the Mr. and Mrs. would be starin' down at you from the next tree."

This statement gave Marguerite and Nickles a terrible fright.

"Don't spring anything like that! Marguerite might have bad dreams."

They laughed.

"I'm tellin' you, something is happening in Colorado Springs."

Marguerite put in a word:

"Is it alright to do such a thing? Will the bosses allow it?"

Joe laughed.

"Is it alright? The constitution allows it. Of course, the bosses don't like to see it happening. The ones that organise are the stronger. When they're stronger they got power. And when they got power, they win the fight. Right?"

That was clear.

Even Marguerite could not find a flaw in the reasoning.

"You say everything so plain and clear, that I can't help believing you"—the girl stammered forth, blushing happily.

The mountains gave forth a deep and heavy fragrance. The three were not conscious that the air was permeated with the fragrance; but in their innermost beings there trembled the wonderful magic of this summer night. After the shop and the kitchen they found salvation far off in the forest which embraced them. The splendor of youth had thrown its spell over them, and Nickles and Marguerite both could not help clinging to each other.

Joe stood there for a moment.

"Some nice couple you make!"

Both laughed.

He took in the situation qucikly.

"I'm all the time happy when loving hearts get together."

And he was sincerely happy. He began to whistle the tune of the International.

Nickles and Marguerite did not know the tune.

The forest poured forth its fragrance lavishly.

• • • •

VIII.

IT was a magnificent triumph.

It is true that all weren't present in the hall of the little hotel, but there were twenty-four anyway. Twenty-four barbers from all parts of the city.

Joe looked with great satisfaction upon those assembled. All were waiting impatiently for the union organizer from Denver.

At last, A fat man.

He came with William, who had fetched him from the railway station.

William was a young chap with quick gestures. His eyes sparkled, they could arouse people to enthusiasm. He greeted the assemblage. He explained the purpose of the meeting: to organize against the insatiable greed of the bosses, to regulate wages and working hours.

Then he gave the floor to the delegate of the union.

The fat man was a disappointment to Joe. He had expected the man to be wise, and to find the right words to say about capitalism which he himself hated so much. He had hoped that the organiser would arouse the people with his speech. That he would fill them all with enthusiasm. Instead he warned them to be cautious. To moderate their demands, to reduce their claims. And about organising he did not speak with enthusiasm, and love, as Joe had expected.

"I'm not going to interfere"—thought Joe—"the main thing is to get them organized."

A few took the floor.

They had one thing or another to say. They pointed to fruitless attempts in the past. Still, everyone recognized that the situation was unbearable. And that something had to be done.

The decision to form a local of the Barbers' Union in Colorado Springs was made unanimously.

William was chairman of the local, Joe treasurer.

The composition of the executive board did not please Joe. The delegate from Denver had all those elected to the executive committee who had been responsible for the failure in the past.

It was decided, in the interest of the organization to start an energetic campaign for reducing the working time and for a just increase in wages.

• • • •

THINGS developed faster than Joe had thought.

The local union functioned, The ice was broken, The hand-bills were grabbed from all sides. Two weeks later the meeting took place in an over-crowded hall.

And what is more, the workers themselves now demanded quicker action,

"The favorable situation must be utilized"—they said.

It was summer-time. The busy season. The bosses needed workers. The stores were busy from morning to night.

It was decided to draw up the demands in writing and to present them to the bosses' association.

Joe too was on the committee which formulated the demands, He was known to everybody. He did the best work in distributing leaflets. He did not allow himself to be cowed by the bosses, nor did he become disheartened when he would meet a worker who would say that "he could settle his affairs with the boss himself without meetings and organization."

The formulation of the demands did not go smoothly. In the first place they could not agree on the tone. The old ones spoke of "humble request," the young men of "strong demands." Finally they agreed and chose a more moderate tone which was in the middle between the two extremes. In the course of the conference there were often violent differences, and at times it seemed as if the two sides would come to a clash and the document would not be drawn up. Still, in spite of all that, they all agreed in the end.

William and Joe had conceived of the "fight" differently, but they had to accept the fact that they were dealing with "old" people and they hoped that the fat fellow would not be around at the next election.

• • • •

THE master barbers' association would not recieve the delegation of the workers.

• • • •

THE old ones said that after the failure there was no sense to the organization and that the master barbers' association would perhaps receive them the next year. The young workers attacked the old ones violently and demanded the calling of a membership meeting.

The demand had to be granted.

• • • •

THIS time they hired a bigger hall, and this one too was filled to overflowing.

A policeman tried to stop the meeting because the American flag was not displayed prominently enough. But when he saw the angry mood of the crowd he decided to retreat.

A big American flag was hoisted.

One of the old men opened the meeting. He spoke of the unexpected difficulties. There was nobody with whom to negotiate. The thing would have to be put off.

There was an explosion of feeling.

The old man could not continue with his speech.

Finally there was a short lull and he threw the floor open to discussion.

William took the floor.

He spoke with passion and with masterful gestures.

The organisation was in danger even before its birth. And he did not spare the old men. He declared that the weaklings were just as dangerous as the bosses. The time was ripe for action. He demanded the immediate calling of a strike.

Thanderous applause and general agreement showed that the workers were of the same view as William.

Nobody dared to speak about a delay. They all wanted action. The old men were crowded into the background, and they had to accept their fate.

IT was decided to declare a strike immediately.

This decision took the master barbers by surprise. They had thought that the matter had been settled once the workers' delegation had been thrown out. Up to now that had always been the case. It had always succeeded. Now they published in the "Springs Paper" a long article on Bolshevist agitators. And they ordered an editorial which attacked the barbers in the name of the public. But the barbers opened some union shops, and the workers came there with a happy heart. The newspaper articles received approval only from those who did not go to those barber shops.

And the season was at its height. The best time, the most favorable time for business.

The master barbers called a special meeting. And here too something unexpected took place. The owners of the small shops attacked the leaders of the association. They charged them with having acted like autocrats.

The unity was broken. There was danger that a part of the master barbers would act independently. In order to prevent this it was decided to negotiate with the union.

This was the first victory of the workers.

The "Springs Paper" adopted a new tone. The number of papers sold in the city was constantly dwindling. An open letter addressed to the barbers appeared in the paper—but they no longer read it.

• • • •

THE old men brought down the fat delegate from Denver, for they saw that the leadership was going over into the hands of the "inexperienced" young men.

It was summer-time. All efforts of the master barbers to recruit strikebreakers were unsuccessful. The pupils of the barber-school of Denver reached only as far as the railroad station of Colorado Springs. As soon as they learned what was the matter they demanded their return fare from the bosses. This caused great confusion. The young fellows raised such a racket at the railroad station and hurled such choice epithets at the heads fo the elderly bosses that the latter felt that it was for the best to let these fellows get back the quickest way possible.

This was the second victory of the workers.

The third victory went into the pocket of the fat man from Denver . . . He sold out.

All the demands were trimmed down, reduced by half. In the end there was hardly anything left of the victory.

The worst of it was that the agreement would terminate at a time when working conditions in Colorado Springs would be at their worst.

The strike was called off.

• • • •

AND yet—in spite of what happened—victory, betrayal—the strike assumed deep significance.

It was a call to battle.

A call to battle for the workers.

A call to battle for the capitalists.

Bucharin Closes Discussion on Agriculture Question

The DAILY WORKER recently published the opening speech of Nikolai Bucharin, editor of Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, before the recent meeting of the enlarged executive committee of the Communist International. Following the discussion of his report Bucharin made the following closing address:

By NIKOLAI BUCHARIN.

MOST of the speakers did not oppose the theses, but made various remarks of a supplementary nature.

Comrade Varga proposed including a special passage on village poverty, in other words, on small peasants and peasants on small allotments. I formulated the theses in the Russian terminology. We make a distinction between small peasants and peasants on small allottments, and in order to be precise, I believe that we can accept this subdivision.

We can also accept the suggestion of Comrade Varga in connection with the thesis stating that in the present epoch it is impossible for the peasantry to be an independent governing force, to say instead "a lasting governing force."

On the other hand I do not share the view of Comrade Varga on the formation of peasant parties, nor of the analogous statement of Comrade Dombal.

VARGA'S whole argument consists in his stating that we ourselves claim that the peasantry is becoming political. The political party is the expression of this development, and therefore we must have a political party of the peasants. That may be correct from a vulgar formal standpoint, but viewed dialectically, this is not correct and does not conform with reality. Can one say then that a peasant league is a non-political formation? I believe it is false to say that a class organization can exist without having a political character. The peasant organizations have a political character as the trade union organizations have.

Does, for instance, the A. D. G. B. (General Federation of Trade Unions) in Germany play no political role? Of course it does, and yet it is not a political party. Did the peasant league here in Russia play no political rôle? Of course it did, but it was not a political party. Here the socialist revolutionaries, menshevists and other parties carried on activity within the framework of the peasant league. This is also the case with the peasant organizations already in existence.

They exist, they grow, new organizations not only one, but sometimes many political parties engage in activity. It may be that these parties differ from on another in very few respects, but that is a fact.

VARGA states that the principal demands of the peasants are counter to the bourgeois state. It is a bit strong to say against the "bourgeois" state. One might get the impression that the peasant organizations are the greatest revolutionary organizations against the state. They are not counter to the state, but they put forward demands to the state which have both an economic and political character, for instance, the question of taxation.

Most of the demands of the peasants are of such a nature. The revolutionary elements among the peasants are not so advanced that they set up direct revolutionary demands. It is not right to say either politics and then the political party, or only economic demands and then NO political party. This is how Varga puts the question and Dombal repeats it. Therefore it is no accident that the peasants organize carefully, not in the conventional political form, but in the form of the peasant league. The question which Varga puts and which Dombal repeats can also be raised logically and tactically. They ask whether there is any difference whether some peasant league engages in politics and when it does so as a political party. What is the difference? No difference can be drawn here because the economic demands are closely bound up with the political demands. And yet a relative difference exists. It consists in the political party being a much firmer organization, which has a definite program, strict discipline, etc. Within one party there cannot be three or four other parties. That is possible in a league. And there are such political parties who to some extent have such a character; for instance, the British labor party; but everyone understands that the labor party is a peculiar structure. It is a cross between a league and a political party in the real sense of the word. What is specific in a peasant league is its mixed character. For us it is better to have such an organization, if only for the possibility of its great extent. In a political party only those may enter who seriously accept the program and do everything the party asks.

THERE is a great deal of liberty of movement in the peasant league. Our people can enter it, and in the amorphous conditions of the peasantry, can create a situation in which we can win more and more new followers. What sort of slogan does Dombal suggest. Not a league, not a party, but a transitional form. In this way we would merely create a different term, nothing else. The specific character of the peasant league is its loose organization form, the possibility of uniting members of various parties and even non-party people into organizations which have not so strict a discipline and which put forward demands of a mixed character. No positive arguments were produced against such a conception. It was merely stated that if the peasantry is developing politically, the parties will grow. I can reply to that that the peasant leagues will also develop politically. That depends on the various circumstances and on whether we work well or badly in these organizations.

Comrade Dombal brought forward two arguments. He says that the theses state that we need a policy which will separate the left organizations from the joint organizations. That is quite clear: we must use them for spreading our influence for the purpose of winning over the majority of the toiling population. By what means? That is the question of our policy, our political and organizational methods, and of the method of drawing the masses into real action. All that is fairly clear.

COMRADE MESHTCHERYAKOV made two observations on the credit system. The theses also speak of this subject but perhaps this sentence can be developed. As far as the second observation of Comrade Meshtcheryakov is concerned, I believe that there is either a misunderstanding or that he represents a false standpoint. The theses state that we need a separate organization of the agricultural workers and it was added that these organizations of agricultural workers cannot and must not enter the organizations of the peasants. I believe that is correct. Comrades Meshtcheryakov says that the Italian experiences have proved the contrary. Comrade Grieco says that the Italian experience shows that in mixed meetings of peasants and agricultural workers, chaos ensued, but he says further that it was evident at the same time that federated alliances of the organizations, joint centrals, etc., are possible. This the concrete form did not prove feasible in Italy, but generally speaking it was proved that these organizational connections are possible and desirable. If we want to win over the small peasants, and on the other hand, already have won the agricultural proletariat, the latter must somehow or other influence the peasantry.

A FEW more words about Varga. In the preface to his book: "The Status of the Peasant Movement," there are two paragraphs which are absolutely incorrect. He says:

"Social democracy has always prevented the creation of a class alliance between the workers of town and country in two ways, and thus had a counter-revolutionary effect. Firstly, by issuing the slogan 'Those who possess and those who do not,' in the interpretation of which the toiling and even the poor peasants were placed in the ranks of those who posses. In this manner the social democrats brought about a formal distinction in place of the class distinction between exploiters and exploited, and thus objectively served the interests of the exploiters and enlarged their camp at the expense of the proletariat."

THE fault of the social democrats did not lie in their having spoken of possessing and non-possessing classes. Naturally a distinction must be made between possessing and nonpossessing, between class strata which are linked up with private property and those which have no private property whatsoever. But this distinction is not everything. In his polemic against Plekhanov, Lenin, in formulating our first party program, observed that we must first become separate, we must first differentiate ourselves as a revolutionary class, as the proletariat which stands in a peculiar relationship to all other classes. Then, after we have constituted ourselves, the time comes when we must determine our attitude to other classes.

And in this second phase, let us say, lies the fault of the social democrats —I determine myself as a class and am seeking an ally. Here I differentiate between various classes, between earned property and capitalist property, between property which is bound up with exploitation and that which is not. That is a further separation, and here the socal democrats began various blunders and political crimes. But to formulate the matter as Varga has done, is theoretically incorrect: Varga says: "Both standpoints were the natural consequence of the general attitude of the social democrats who always considered themselves the party of the industrial working class in the narrow sense and followed the policy of improving the condition of the industrial working class. within the framework of capitalism by changing the distribution of income."

THAT is, mildly speaking, a very careless formulation. That means that there is no agricultural proletariat. I believe that Varga wanted to say something different. Two things must be borne in mind: we are the workers' party, not a workers' and peasants' party. We are first of all the party of the industrial proletariat. When we declare this, it is no betrayal of the cause of the workers. The mistake is not that we are a pure proletarian party. But the mistake of the social democrats, the political crime of the social democrats, consists in the fact that the party placed the working class in an incorrect relationship to the peasantry, that it sees only that which goes on within the proletariat, and does not understand that this class, or this party of the class must have an ally. Why do I say all this? Two dangers menace us: that we maintain a passive attitude in general towards the peasantry, and the other danger, that we dissolve into the peasantry. If we dissolve we are no Marxists and no workers' party and cannot claim the dictatorship of the proletariat. Leninist teaching about the workers' and peasants' bloc does not consist in our being the bloc of the workers and peasants, but in the working class retaining the hegemony within this bloc. That cannot be eliminated. The same thing is true after the conquest of political power. The bloc does not consist in our realising a workers' and peasants' state. Sometimes we call ourselves a workers' and peasants' government. In reality it is the dictatorship of the working class, a class which constitutes itself as state power, which has formed a bloc with the peasantry. We have very good connections with the peasantry, we lean on the peasantry, but from the point of view of class character, we are a proletarian power.

IN Varga's fomulation this "nuance" is a very important thing. I believe that these corrections were necessary, for in itself this booklet of Varga's is an excellent piece of work. These introductory remarks might cause a certain degree of confusion, especially in a period when most of our parties have become contaminated by the narrow guild spirit; such a representation might have a repelling effect in the present situation; therefore complete theoretical clarity is necessary. Then we can determine a clear political line, and that is what we need. (Applause).

MAY 1, 1925 IN MOSCOW

By JOHN C. TUCHELSKI.

MOSCOW, (By Mail)—I happened to be one of the lucky ones to witness the May first celebration in Moscow with members of the Kuzbas organization.

We were awakened at seven o'clock by an organization passing our windows on their way to assigned places.

We were given passes, as guests, to the Red Square in front of the "Brotherly Graves," and we stood in front of John Reeds' grave.

The Red Square was lined with Red soldiers and sailors.

On the buildings of Moscow, the walls of the Kremlin and from wires strung across streets waved red banners, with slogans in white letters, in many languages. A few of the slogans were: "Workers of the World Unite," "Long Live the First of May;" "Raise high the banner of Lenin, it brings us victory;" "To the prisoners of capitalism, greetings of the First of May!" "To the Workers of England, entering the struggle for the unity of the world labor movement, together with the working class of the U. S. S. R.—Our greetings.' "To the marching new elements of the revolution, the brave comrades in the struggle; the toiling women of England, fraternal greetings on the First of May."

A large picture of Lenin measuring 30 square feet, was hung on top of the center entrance to the Kremlin. On each side of it hung the sign, "First of May," in the Russian language.

Promptly at nine o'clock, Commissar of War M. F. Frunze appeared on horseback with his staff from the Kremlin entrance and greeted every regiment. The regiments returned the greeting and their bands played the International.

At the same time motion pictures were taken, of the crowds lined on both sides of the Red Square, also of the soldiers and sailors.

At nine thirty Commissar Frunze passed us, exchanged greetings and returned to Lenin's mausoleum where a speakers' stand was set up with a microphone connected with loud speakers set at various places around the Red Square, so that everyone of the large crowd could hear.

Sitting in front of this stand was an English womens' trade union delegation, Comrades Zetkin, Rykoff and officials of the U. S. S. R.

At ten o'clock all the bands united in front of the reviewing stand and played military music while the parade passed. The first to pass were the military forces present, and afterwards the workers' organizations, each carrying a red banner with its name and in some instances pictures or models of their trade.

After the workers' organizations, groups of Young Communists, Pioneers, dressed neatly with red handkerchiefs around their necks, sport groups and students passed the stand, also several companies of the Moscow fire department.

It was wonderful to see such a large number of women, girls and children taking part in the demonstration.

No street cars were running, all the stores were closed, only a few nepmen were selling cigarettes and fruit on the streets. No, dear comrades, the nepmen did not march in the parade. The parade ended after six o'clock.

The Democratic Pacifist Era, Fascism and Social Democracy.

The True Character and Significance of the Democratic Pacifist Era.

COMRADES, in recent times, all the important differences that have arisen in the ranks of the Communist International, in the final analysis, have centered round the estimation of the democratic pacifist "era." Persons like Newbold, Phillips, Price, Hoglund, Rosmer, to a certain degree are the casualties of yesterday's democratic "era."

How did these people picture the situation to themselves?

Simply that the revolution has passed and that the world situation had ceased to be revolutionary. They said, since the Soviet Government has not been able, to achieve much improvement in the lives of the workers, in the course of five or six years, then MacDonald should be given as much time. This was said by Communists! Hoglund judged events of world historical importance from the fact that Newbold was defeated in the parliamentary elections.

THE question of the proper method of approach to the democratic-pacifist era has been the central point of our tactics during the last nine months. Several comrades were laboring under doubts which, however, they feared to express openly. They stated that, on the whole, they were in agreement with the line of policy of the Fifth Congress, but they continued to regard the democratic pacifist episode as a genuine era, as a prolonged period, as a new epoch in world history. They thought that from this logically follows the necessity to change the whole of our tactics in a more or less social-democratic sense. Newbold and Hoglund fell victims to this illusion. Others were more cautious and more diplomatic. They only caught one of their fingers in the door, but their astonishment was so great that they lost all desire to put any more of their fingers in it. What do the facts teach us?

First of all, with regard to the duration of the notorious "era," the facts show that the democratic-pacifist "era" was nothing more than an episode, as was foretold in the resolution of the Fifth Congress. In a certain sense, it may be said that the "democratic-pacifist" episode was tantamount to the approach to power of the petty bourgeoisie. As a matter of fact, power fell into the hands of the petty-bourgeoisie not entirely, but only within certain limits. In the period of imperialism and proletarian revolution (a period which can least of all be described as democratic-pacifist), the petty-bourgeoisie cannot hold power independently. For that reason, it was compelled to play the part of a puppet in the hands of the big bourgeoisie. England and France serve as a brilliant and historical illustration of this situation, for in those countries it was clearly demonstrated, that in the epoch of imperialism, the petty-bourgeoisie cannot govern a country as an independent force.

WHAT do the facts teach us? They teach us that willy-nilly, MacDonald was working for us. A process of differentiation is taking place within the labor government, and a genuine will to power is growing within it. Frequently, the question was put on a "philosophical" plan: what does the MacDonald government really represent? Does it represent the last phase of the post-war crisis, or is it the first phase of a new pacifist era? This method of presenting the question appeared to be highly "dialectical." I think that the MacDonald government was both one and the other. In democratic-pacifism we have merely a single link in the continuous chain of events which commenced as far back as 1914, i.e., with the outbreak of the war.

The democratic pacifist "era" of 1924 is but an episode in the epoch of imperialist wars and preparations for proletarian revolution. We do not stand in need of "philosophic" definitions. It is sufficient for us to bear in mind: 1, that this period proved to be short-lived; 2, that the petty-bourgeoisie, even as represented by the labor party, cannot play an independent role; 3, that the present time in England, we must count with two decisive factors of social life, viz., the working class and capitalism, and 4, that the MacDonald government with its "constructive socialism" worked for us, Communists, for the Comintern.

The Estimation of Fascism and Social Democracy.

THE question of the character of democratic pacifism is bound up with the estimation of fascism. You remember comrades, the fight that took place in our ranks over this question. Take the elections in Germany, England and in America. In Germany, the masses of the electors voted for the social-democrats; in England, for the labor party and in America for the party of LaFollette. The broad masses, petty-bourgeois as well as proletarian, voted for the group which represented the ideas of democratic-pacifism, even when its star was setting. The "era" passed away, but the conservative section of the population still clutching at utopias and all kinds of illusions, continued to vote for democratic-pacifist politics. We do not wish to have democratic illusions reigning in the Communist Party, but the conservative masses still cling to them. We had to combat these illusions in the past, and of course, we must continue to do so in the future.

IN the democratic-pacifist "era," we must distinguish between two groups of countries. One of these were subjects and the other objects of the "era." England and France were subjects. Germany was an object. In passing, I will say that the successes achieved by our party in England and France on the one hand, and the difficult position of our German party on the other hand, arise out of the objective condition of things. Both in Germany and in France, pacifist illusions reign.

But, the soil which fosters these illusions, is not the same in Germany as it is in France. When a man, roll- on the ground in the agonies of hunger, is roused with the hope of obtaining a mouthful of bread and water, or a drop of milk, naturally hopes and illusions arise in him. This was the position in which Germany found herself. It was precisely upon this that the social-democrats speculated. It is not surprising therefore, that in the countries which have been the subjects of the 'era," where the ruling class were not in a position to propose or promise anything to the masses, could promise no improvement in their conditions, our Communist Parties obtained successes with relative ease.

Social Democracy "Defeats" Fascism by Affiliating to it.

IN 1924, Radek formulated a resolution on the vitcory of fascism over social-democracy. Was that resolution correct? How in the present instance should the term "victory" be understood? You know for example, that the German bourgeoisie was "victorious" over Karl Liebknecht. The bourgeoisie killed him. That is one form of victory. Another form of victory was observed in the Russian revolutionary movement in the '80's of the last century. I have in mind the well-known revolutionary Leo Tikhomirov. He too, was "defeated," but how? He himself went over to the enemy, to the camp of czarism.

Liebknecht was 'defeated" by the German bourgeoisie; Tikhomirov was "defeated" by Russian czarism. These are two forms of "victory." It was precisely in the latter form that social-democracy was "defeated" by the bourgeoisie, and this on a world scale. The leaders of social-democracy simply turned traitors, followed the example of Tikhomirov, and went over to the side of the bourgeoisie. Radek overlooked this detail. He decided that, as the social-democracy had been "defeated" we ought to unite with it politically. This is an example of the theory of the "united front" according to Radek. He lost sight of the fact that the leaders of the social-democracy were "defeated" by the bourgeoisie in the sense that they began to form a wing of the bourgeoisie. It was for that reason, that the theses of the Fifth Congress, which described the social-democracy as the "third" party of the bourgeoisie, were absolutely correct.

IN Italy, fascism was a synthesees of the strivings of the capitalist bourgeoisie and of the social-democracy, and the social-democracy became a wing of fascism. The theses and resolutions of the Fifth Congress on this question were correct in so far as it has turned out that social-democracy is becoming stronger in proportion as the bourgeoisie is becoming stronger. The conservativeness of the broad masses and the retarded rate of development of class conflicts will have the same effect of increasing the strength of social-democracy in the future.

The whole question is, what should be our attitude to this? Some of the right wing comrades are of the opinion that, in view of the increasing strength of the social-democracy, we must revise all our values! We are of a different opinion, and are convinced that to the extent that the bourgeoisie will increase its strength for a time, the social-democrats will take advantage of this; for in our days the bourgeoisie and the social-democracy are twins. Marx and Engels in their day, quite justly branded venal leaders of the British labor movement. Today, we must do the same thing on an international scale.

A series of events renders this task easier for us. I will deal only with four of them. 1. The Barmat scandal, the Ebert trial, etc.; 2, the agreement concluded between the Hungarian social democrats and Horthey; 3, the last meeting of the Bureau of the Second International and 4, the funerals of Ebert, Branting and Gompers. Recently, I read an obituary notice on Branting written by Huysmans. Huysmans criticizes Branting with having been, in spite of his republican convictions, an old friend and school chum of the king of Sweden. Well said, was it not? Huysmans "buried" Branting a second time.

TO sum up: the social-democracy, Comrade Radek, was indeed "defeated" by the bourgeoisie and by fascism, but unlike Karl Liebknecht and his followers, it did not fall in battle, but was defeated in the sense that it itself, as represented by its leaders, abandoned the labor party and took up a petty-bourgeois position as a wing of bourgeois "democracy." The temporary increase in strength of the bourgeoisie is equal to a certain temporary increase in strength of the sosial-democracy. The doom of the bourgeoisie will at the same time also be the doom of social-democracy.

Consequently, the tactics of the Communist International were absolutely correct. This is evidenced by the class struggle; this is taught us by the episodes in the civil war, this is testified to by the life and the movement of the masses. The Bolshevist Leninist policy of the Fifth Congress has been completely justified. (Applause.)

The Work of the Marx-Engels Institute

Communication of the director of the Marx-Engels Institute, Moscow, D. B. Riasanov to the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International.

The Fifth Congress of the Communist International, upon hearing my report about the activity of the Marx-Engels Institute at Moscow (MEI), acknowledged the necessity of publishing the complete works of Marks and Engels as well as separate editions of some of them. The resolution concerning this point requested moreover all the parties belonging to the III International and the members of those parties to help the Institute in its task of collecting all documents relative to Marx's and Engels' lives and works.

The nine months elapsed since have been employed by the MEI for the multifarious preparatory work necessary to the planned edition. The first thing to do was to secure the possibility of an exhaustive study of the literary heirloom of Marx and Engels preserved at the archives of the German Soc. Dem. Party at Berlin. I have happily succeeded in obtaining this possibility and since December last photos are being systematically taken from all those documents; for the pursuit of scientific research these copies are just as valuable as autograph. Several thousands of them having been taken already in 1923, the moment is not far off when the photos of the whole collection will be concentrated at our institute. Meantimes the MEI has also gathered some precious materials from various other sources, partly in original manuscript and partly in photo copies; it is quite natural however that these documents are not nearly as numerous as those mentioned formerly. Moreover, all kinds of printed materials (books, magazines, papers, etc.) necessary for a critical edition of the works have been collected with the utmost care and good results.

The deciphering of the materials intended for publishing is going on steadfastly. A whole staff of 12-15 persons—scientific collaboraters with their technical helpers—are constantly occupied with it. The work is already advanced considerably enough to allow the first number of the "Marx-Engels Archiv" to appear in May next; it will contain among other valuable contributions part of the "German ideology".

In autum two volumes of the Complete Works will follow—Vol. I with the juvenile writings of Marx, of which many have never been published yet, as, for instance, a rather large study upon Hegel's Philosophy of the State and an essay upon the French Revolution; and Vol. XV containing some unknown manuscrips of Engels, among them his "Dialectics in Nature". See for details the prospectus of the Marx-Engels Archiv, of which every delegate received a copy.

The plan for the separate publishing of some of the works has yet to be discussed. Meanwhile, preliminary steps are being taken for elucidating difficulties which might arise in different countries in connection with the printing of these editions.

I should like to end with the repetition of the earnest request addressed to all comrades by the Fifth Congress: lend a hand to the Marx-Engels Institute in securing the necessary materials! This appeal has remained nearly neglected until now. The Central Committees of the Sections should be somewhat more energetic in this respect.

ment, let us not attach too much importance to numbers and the appearance of outward strength. A few thousand with enthusiastic faith and determination are stronger than a million of more cautious and respectable people. And there is no greater danger for the socialist movement than the danger of becoming an accepted institution.

As we see this is a naive, not well thought-out theoretically, but a thoroly right exhortation against allowing socialism to become rotten and a summons to revolutionary struggle.

WHAT is Blatchford's reply to this? "That war is caused by capitalist and militarist interests, all this is quite true. And I am striving, not less than any other socialist, for peace and the overcoming of capitalism by socialism. But Sinclair will not convince me by means of rhetorical and beautiful phrases, he will not be able to get away from the facts. Facts, my dear Sinclair, are obstinate things and the German danger is a fact. Neither we nor the German socialists are in a position to prevent war. Sinclair tremendously over-estimates our forces. We are not united, we have neither money, nor weapons nor discipline. There only remains one things for us: to help the English government to increase its fleet, as there is and can be no other guarantee for peace."

On the continent of Europe the chauvinists, neither before nor after the outbreak of the war have ever proclaimed themselves so openly. In Germany there prevails in the place of such sincerity the hypocrisy of Kautsky and the playing with sophism; the same is the case with Plekhanoff. It is especially instructive therefore to observe the conditions in a more developed country. Here it is impossible to mislead anybody by sophistry and by a travesty of Marxism. Here the questions are stated directly and correctly. Let us learn from the "advanced English."

Sinclair in his appeal, altho this appeal is at bottom thoroly correct—is naive, as he has neglected to observe the 50 years development of the socialist mass movement and the struggles of tendencies within this mass movement; he fails to observe the conditions of growth of revolutionary action along with the existence of an objective revolutionary situation and a revolutionary organisation. One cannot make up for this lack by "sentiment." One cannot by means of rhetoric evade the hard and ruthless fight of powerful tendencies in socialism—the opportunist and the revolutionary tendency.

BLATCHFORD badly proclaims the truth, and puts forward the concealed argument of the Kautskyites who fear to speak the truth. We are still weak and that is all—say Blatchford. But thru his sincerity he immediately reveals and lays bare his opportunism, his chauvinism. That he serves the bourgeoisie and the opportunists is to be seen at once. After having admitted the "weakness" of socialism, he weakens it himself by advocating an anti-socialist bourgeois policy. Like Sinclair, but on the other side, not as a fighter but as a coward not as a hot-head but as a traitor, he also fails to take into account the conditions for the creation of a revolutionary situation.

But in his practical conclusions and in his policy (renunciation of revolutionary action and of the propagation and preparation of this action), Blatchford, the vulgar chauvinist, follows precisely the same path as Plechanov and Kautsky.

Marxist phrases have nowadays become a cloak for the complete denial of Marxism. In order to be Marxist one must expose the "sham Marxist saintliness" of the leaders of the 2nd International, one must fearlessly keep in view the struggle of two tendencies in socialism and think out the questions of this struggle to their logical conclusion. This is the inference to be drawn from the English conditions which reveal to us the Marxist essence of the matter without Marxist phrases.

REMARKS TO THE MILITANT PARENTS

By NAT KAPLAN.

IN the Communist Children's Movement, the Junior section of the Young Workers' League the basis for the new, more realistic, relationship between adults and children is being laid.

This is demonstrated on the one hand by the methods used by the group leaders (in the main members of the Y. W. L.) in the development of the initiative and self activity instincts of the child; the development of its observing instincts thru which it acquires material for its self instruction, etc., and on the other hand, by drawing the parents into the life and struggle of the children, thru the creation of parents' conferences and proletarian parents' school councils.

Why raise this issue of a new relationship between adults and children? Simply because the old relationship—the one in force at the present time is an utterly false one, is based on the bourgeois conception of the "right of the stronger," and as such must be completely discarded. The wielding of an unpremeditated, nonsensical discipline over the child, by virtue of the economic and physical domination of the adult over the child, in no wise can be conceived as the guiding of the child along a correct line of procedure. In only one sense can the adult gain superiority over the child for the safe of guiding its actions and that is by acquiring a greater knowledge and a more keenly developed mentality than the child itself. Hence, Herbert Spencer in addressing himself to parents at large has ably remarked: "In brief, you will have to carry on your higher education as the same time that you are educating your children." One of the first lessons to be learned in this course of "higher education" is that adults and children must meet on an equal plane of comradeship, that only to the extent that the adult is able to win the confidence and friendship of the child, is he able to guide and lead that child in the acquiring of knowledge and in its general activities.

Militant Parents Must Line Up.

For the Communist parents and the militant parents of the labor movement there can be no better start made in this direction than by acquiring a knowledge of the principles at work in the Communist children's movement. Once this is realistically undertaken, we will no longer hear of the many cases of radical parents who have obstructed the class struggle activities of the young rebels by a parential treat, a castigation, or even by depriving the child of a meal.

We will then see the parents taking the initiative in the creation of school councils. We will see them setting up committees to visit the school authorities and presenting the demands of the children. We will see them helping in every manner possible to strengthen the school organization of the children—the school nuclei of the Junior section and even helping to lead the concerted actions of the children against the school authorities, against the nationalist and religious dope peddled under the guise of "education" and against the general miserable conditions of the proletarian child in our citadels of learning. The American bourgeoisie has long recognized the necessity of coordinating the home life of the child with its life within the public schools. For this purpose they have set up powerful parent-teacher associations which are decidedly reactionary in character. The answer to the American bourgeoisie on this field must be the united front between the proletarian parents and their offspring in the children's struggle and the class struggle at large.

Wherein the Principles Are Contained

In order to make this start the militant parents will have to acquaint themselves with the literature on the Communist children's movement. The international theoretical and practical publication of the Communist children's movement is known as "The Bulletin for the Leaders of Communist Children's Groups" and is published by the executive of the Young Communist International. Volume No. 2. Issue ¾ of the Bulletin (Ten Cents, Y. W. L., 1113 W. Washington St.) has just arrived from the publishing house. This issue is decidedly up to its standard. Under the title: "The Character of our Work in the Communist Children's Group," Comrade Gertrude Graeser has a very clear article dealing with the systematization of the educational work in the C. C. G. She divides the subject into two main features: (a) The training of the leaders, and (b) The education of the children. The important feature of this article is the plan of educational work that the writer presents us, which is especially adaptable to the 12 to 14-year-old children (Those who are about to leave public school and are entering the Young Communist Movement).

Comrade Sigi Bammatter writes in this issue on the necessity of "A closer organisational form for the C. C. G." The American Junior section comes in for special mention as having maintained a compact, centralized organizational form for its children's movement from the very start.

Other important and interesting features of the issue are: A discussion statement on the reorganization of the Communist children's groups on the basis of school nuclei. An article by Comrade Rosa Moeller on the New Generation in Soviet Russia, a contribution to the question of the "New Humanity," which clearly describes the lot of the child in the U. S. S. R. at the present time; an article dealing with the formation of the Young Spartacist League in Germany to replace the loosely knit Communist children's groups. Two highly instructive articles on the functions of the Young Pioneers in Soviet Russia with its 700,000 young members. Two interesting reports from Great Britain and America and an article portraying the literary achievements of the children in accurately picturing the conditions of the workers' children in the capitalist countries. You should not miss the opportunity of securing your copy at once.

STREETCAR UN [illegible] KERS IGNORE CONSTITUTION [illegible] OPEN SHOP AND NAME K. K. K. AS ARBITER

AKRON, Ohio, May 24.—The carmen here have proposed a scale of wages to the Northern Ohio Traction system which will increase the present scale, but they have chosen a decidedly poor way of trying to get the proposal into effect, that is, they have agreed to arbitration and named an "exalted cyclops" of the ku klux klan to be one of their "arbitrators!"

The present scale is 48, 50 and 53 cents an hour, and the proposal, which cannot be dignified as a "demand" owing to the spineless nature of the union officials in expressing the wishes of the men, is for the scale to be increased to 63, 65 and 68 cents an hour. There is also a dispute on the matter of unionizing the bus men working for the company, the local having once voted not to arbitrate this question.

Fakers Rush to Aid Open Shop.

However, the union is to be called again to vote on this matter since the local officials, Mike O'Neil, president and Fred Harper, member of the local executive board, following the usual tactics of labor fakers, have appealed to the chief faker of the union, William D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and owner of a string of non-union hotels, who promptly decided that, of course, the local should arbitrate the matter of the open shop.

The hocus pocus against the plain interest of the union was pulled off by O'Neil and Harper taking a trip from Akron to Detroit to "ask Mahon's advice." Reports state that Mahon told the local officials to drop the dispute on the bus drivers and to arbitrate any and everything. In addition, Vice-President Shea is to attend Monday's session to put over the official agreement to the open shop.

Not a Sign of Struggle for Demands.

The matter is complicated by three other divisions of the N. O. T. system having already surrendered on the open shop issue of the bus drivers. But these as well as Akron, have yet to settle the wage scale altho the usual betrayal by "impartial" arbitration is expected by the company to defeat the demands.

Platform men on the Canton interurban and A. B. C. interurban are asking a ten cent increase, but these are not even willing "to bear the expense of arbitration," hence it is hardly possible that they will "bear the expense" of striking either.

Company Feels Secure.

In the face of such timidity on the part of the union and with the aid of the local and national officials of the union, there is small wonder that the company, thru A. C. Blinn, vice-

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE two Mowrer boys, Paul and Edgar are working overtime giving the world the lowdown on the vile deeds of the wicked Communists. They are getting paid for it. Indeed patriotic saviors of the world from the "menace of Bolshevism" are notoriously fond of the cashier, and never peck at the typewriter unless given assurance that the eagle will scream on Saturday. Paul Mowrer exposes the Bolsheviks, from Paris, where life can be made agreable provided the sojourner's budget is in somewhat better condition than the bank of France.

PAUL tells us that the Communist International aims to overthrow the capitalist system all over the world. He has already written eighteen exposurers, and excepting his own editorial comment and the inevitable forgeries, every "discovered" document with which he pads his stories, appeared already in the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

EDGAR, who writes under a Berlin date line, makes a kick about the new revolutionary pictures made in Russia. The latest film to come out of the workers' republic, is entitled "His Marriage." It's bad, bad stuff. Does it not play up Lenin, as our capitalist producers play up George Washington? Lenin, to the capitalists represents all that is wicked. To the intelligent workers, all that is good. The more the workers see of Lenin, his kindly lovable eyes and the more they understand what he lived and sacrificed for, the more they will sympathize with the Communist movement for which he did so much.

THE story is built around the life of a Russian revolutionist who fights on the streets against the capitalist soldiers. His daughter brings him food, while he fights. Finally he is killed by the capitalists and his daughter and her grandmother leave the city. Later on the daughter is shown as a library worker. Her sweetheart is a proletarian. Her father's murderer returns and charms the girl with his airs. But he gets what is coming to him and the girl marries the worker. This is the kind of a happy ending we like, when there is a good purpose to be served. Let us hope the picture finds its way here.

DR. NORMAN THOMAS has joined the international chorus against Trade Union Unity, in his customary slimy fashion. Thomas is one of those preachers who left his pulpit to save the workingclass. Being a preacher, who has not repudiated the preacher's technique, Thomas hopes to win the capitalists over to the idea of production for use instead of for profit. He has all the patience of the itchy job, when dealing with the masterclass, but his pious heart bursts with rage when the Communists intrude on his equanimity.

COMMENTING on the movement for a united international, sponsored by the British and Russian trade unions, Thomas, as usual starts out by saying a prayer for a united front of all workers, regardless of political differences. But he suddenly turns his mud guns on the Communists and rakes them fore and aft with charges of disruption. There is no indictment of the capitalist system in the reverend preacher's fulmination against

PROGRESSIVE MINERS DEMAND A SPECIAL ILLINOIS CONVENTION TO IMPEACH FAKER FARRINGTON

Statement of the Progressive Miners Committee on District 12, United Mine Workers of America.

Freeman Thompson and John Watt are expelled from office by Frank Farrington in violation of his own rulings and the international constitution Art 18, Sec. 1, on a framed charge of election irregularities.

Fight Expulsions

Thompson and Watt have been the militant backbone of the Illinois miners for years and have consistently fought for progressive policies and fought the class collaboration policies of the bureucracy and have earned the enmity of the officials for their loyalty to the rank and file, resulting in their expulsion.

A special convention to try Farrington must be called at once and for the purpose of reinstating Thompson and Watt into their office.

Starving Women and Children.

The same convention must take up the unemployment question and fight for financial aid for the starving miners, the treasury belongs to the miners and as the officials are getting away with the money the unemployed are demanding aid before the treasury is emptied by the fakers.

Also at this convention the progressive miners are demanding an explanation of what is termed padded expense accounts, the officials are drawing every dollar they can get away with, train fare that would take them around the world, padded hotel bills, and enormous miscellaneous, while the miners are starving the officials are rioting in luxury.

The convention must demand the tabulated report of the last interna-

SOVIET UNION MORE STABLE THAN U. S., SAYS VISCOUNT GOTO; CALLS FOR CLOSE FRIENDSHIP OF JAPAN

MOSCOW, May 24.—That chauvinistic influence were still strong in Japanese policies, both the internal and external, was stated by Viscount S. Goto in an interview with a representative of the Rosta News Agency at Harbin. The Viscount added that he deeply regretted this fact.

Thus, he said, the chauvinistic elements had done all in their power, during the long Russo-Japanese negotiations, to prevent the conclusion of a treaty between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Japan. And

GARY WORKERS FIRM DESPITE DAVIS' VISIT

"Can't Talk on Open Shop," Cal's Aid Says

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., May 24.—The lockout following the strike of plumbers, involving 3,000 building trades workers remainst in effect today, despite the attempts of a representative of the United States department of labor, sent out by the Coolidge government, to break the resistance of the workers and induce the plumbers to return to work at the contractors' terms.

The plumbers, building trade council officials declared, are steadfast in their demand for $1.00 a day wage increase, and the plasterers and other building trades workers refuse to settle with the contractors' association until the plumbers' demands have been met.

Davis Attacks Reds.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, speaking here at the dedication of a new Moose home, attacked the foreign-born workers, openly advocated the deportation of Communists born in foreign lands, and urged that admittance of foreign-born workers be further restricted. Davis made a plea for "American principles and American institutions."

When asked about the deliberate lockout of the building trades workers here, Davis told the DAILY WORKERS, "I know there is a lockout here, but what can I say about it?"

Davis was told that the contractors, backed by the bankers and material men, had declared a lockout in order

The "Split" in the Ranks of Capital Did Not Get Very Far!

WASHINGTON, May 22—The United States chamber of commerce today unanimously passed a resolution censuring speculative fluctuations on grain exchanges and commending the department of agriculture for its efforts to remedy the situation.

The resolution was heatedly opposed in the resolutions committee, it was ascertained, because of belief the exchange officials themselves could solve the problem, but when the measure was presented to the general assembly, it was passed without a dissenting vote.

SHANGHAI TEXTILE WORKERS IN STRIKE BATTLE WITH GUNMEN

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

SHANGHAI, China, May 24—The Japanese capitalists who own the textile mills of Shanghai, are becoming discouraged at the solidarity and courage of the textile strikers, whom they and the Chinese authorities cannot conquer.

A few days ago a group of strikers doing picket duty were attacked by Japanese company sluggers armed with guns. The strikers put up such a battle that nine persons were wounded and one striker was killed. As a result four Nagai Japanese mills were closed down by strike protest and 7,000 more textile workers came out.

Yesterday the dead striker was buried, and at his coffin the strikers gathered en masse and pledged their support to the continuance of the strike. The Chinese radical papers are bitterly criticising the Japanese imperialist exploiters.

PRAGUE, May 24.—The Czecho-Slovak government issued a decree today prohibiting the entry into the country of about twenty-five foreign newspapers, mostly Austrian and German, and also several from the United States. No reason was given for the division.

SILK WEAVERS STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUT AND FOR WAGE INCREASES

By A. HOFFMAN
(Worker Correspondent)

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., May 24.—At two different silk mills the weavers of the Reynolds Silk company, 35 in all, have struck against a three cent cut in piece work wages.

At the Claire Silk company also, the weavers, about 60 in all, are on strike for better conditions and a 25 per cent wage increase. For these strikers the Associated Silk Workers' Union is directing the strike and is holding meetings at the Easton Bakers' (Lithuanian) Hall.

Militant unionists among the silk weavers on strike are appealing to all silk workers to form shop committees, link them together with other silk workers and the union and support the DAILY WORKER, the only workers' daily which backs their interests.

MORGAN, GREEN AND CAL GREET "LABOR BANK"

A. F of L. Fakers Hold Meeting with Bosses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 24.—At the celebration of the second anniversary of the founding of the Federation Bank of New York, largest "labor bank" in the east, President William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke immediately following the reading of a message from President Coolidge.

The gathering might have been a meeting of the manufacturers or bankers associations, judging from those who took part in the celebration held at the Manhattan Opera house.

The speakers in addition to Green were, James A. Drain, commander of the American legion, Senator James J. Walker, and Rt. Rev. A. S. Lloyd, bishop of New York.

Morgan Partner There

The invited guests present included Dwight Morrow, partner of J. P. Morgan, Owen D. Young, head of the General Electric company, Lewis E. Pierson, chairman of the board of the Irving Bank, Columbia Trust company, Benjamin Strong, governor of the federal reserve bank, Senator Copeland, Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, Hugh Frayne, representative of the A. F. of L. in New York, Bernard Gimbel, millionaire department store owner, J. I. Straus, and Rear Admiral C. P. Plunkett.

The American Federation of Labor officials seemed well pleased with themselves that they had gathered together such an array of exploiters of labor. Hugh Frayne fairly beamed when Coolidge's letter declaring, "The bank is a strong piece of evidence that the people of this country own the property of the country" was read. "America is neither owned by nor controlled by a small group of rich men," Coolidge said. And the anti-union employers present applauded.

No Unemployed Present

Raymond Hitchcock and Jackie Coogan were the official entertainers. A discreet silence was maintained about the 2 million unemployed in this country and about the wage cutting open shop drive which some of those present were prominent in furthering.

The Old Gang Gets Back in the Railway Clerks, Despite All

KANSAS CITY.—(FP)— Both Pres. E. H. Fitzgerald and Sec'y. George S. Levi remain in office for three years more as a result of the election by the triennial convention, Brotherhood Railway & Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station employes, which closed in Kansas City. Phil. E. Ziegler was reelected editor of The Railway Clerk, the brotherhood's official monthly organ.

The two outstanding convention issues were not definitely settled. The proportion of funds devoted to death benefits was ordered trebled but remains probably insufficient for the demands on them in years to come. The question of reducing the enormous size and expense of conventions (1200 delegates attended at Kansas City) was turned over to a committee of five whose plan is to be submitted to referendum.

The next convention will be at Columbus, Ohio, in 1928.

5,000 BUILDING TRADESMEN IN STRIKE VOTE

Boston Workers Ask Wage Raise

By TOM BELL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 24.—While the banks are reporting that the projected building operations in this district are 25 per cent greater than last year, the building laborers of this city have voted to strike on Monday to force the bosses to accede to their demand for an increase in wages from 65 and 70 cents an hour to 77 and 80 cents. The strike order affects 5,000 building laborers, and is called after balloting showed a majority in favor of strike of 3,284 out of a total of 4,300 votes cast. The original demands of the union called for an increase to 80 and 90 cents an hour.

The date for the strike was set for Monday at a conference of the wage conference committee of the five Boston locals of the International Hod Carriers', Building and Common Laborers' Union which met Wednesday afternoon to tabulate the votes cast. No work will be carried on on those jobs which refuse to pay the increase, and those bosses who agree to the increase will be supplied with workers.

Sullivan Says Wages Too Low.

In discussing the strike vote and the decision to give the bosses until Monday to put the new rates into effect, Daniel J. Sullivan, president of the district council told the DAILY WORKER that the building laborers feel keenly the fact that they have been working below the 1919 standard of wages and have been receiving less than this peak rate while the other building trades have received increases of 20 cents an hour since that year. The wages of the building laborers have only advanced about 10 cents an hour since 1919.

Members Will Resent Interference.

The result of the referendum vote has been reported to Dominic D'Alessandro, president of the International Union, and it is expected that he will insist on going into conference with the bosses upon his arrival in this city to attempt a settlement of the dispute without a strike.

The feeling among the rank and file of the union is against this procedure since they think that the great vote cast for a strike shows that the overwhelming majority of the building laborers in the city are for a strike if the bosses refuse to come across. Any compromise with the bosses on the part of the international president will be keenly resented by the membership.

Painters' Strike Winning.

Boston, Mass., May 24.—The strike of the Painters' Union here is still in progress against those hard boiled bosses who refuse to raise wages to $1.25 an hour. Many bosses have signed up with the union, and the painters have gone back to work on these jobs. An assessment of $2.50 is being collected from all members of the union at work for the maintenance of those on strike.

It is claimed by the officials of the union that the building boom here favors the union in its struggle since the bosses must soon resume work on their jobs or suffer under the penalty clauses in their contracts. The bosses have been unable to get sufficient scabs to do the work on the struck jobs.

DETROIT AUTO WORKERS FIGHT POLICE RESERVES TO HEAR THE UNIONISTS, COMMUNISTS SPEAK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., May 24.—That conditions in the auto factories of Detroit are rotten ripe for organization was demonstrated at the Harper Ave. Briggs plant when Frank Brunton, secretary of Local 127, Auto Workers' Union, with Edgar Owens and Alfred Goetz held an organization meeting at the entrance of the shop.

The workers in the Briggs plant are allowed from 11:30 till noon for lunch. The day being warm and balmy the men stayed out of doors to soak up a bit of sunshine before going back to the grind.

The situation was ideal for a meeting and the representatives of the union were quick to take advantage of it. Owens mounted a chair and immediately entered into an organization talk.

Deputy Sheriff Interferes.

He had been in action for perhaps five minutes when the chief watchman of the plant flashed a deputy sheriff's badge and demanded that Owens stop speaking and his himself hence. This was a signal for the crowd to step up and take notice and they began to surge forward. The dick was armed with a club, and while he was crabbing at Owens, one of the workers, a young fellow of 19 or 20 years of age grapped the club out of his hand, while the crowd yelled its approval. The dick threatened to arrest Owens and was dared to go thru with it. He then got nasty and attempted to push Owens off the chair.

Workers Take a Hand.

At that moment, one of the workers, a giant of a man, took the dick's arms in hand and politely informed him that if he (the deputy) attempted any rough stuff, he would cave in his face. On demand the dick showed a card issued him by the sheriff's office which stated that he was a Briggs special policeman. However, his authority does not allow him police power outside the factory.

By this time a crowd of upwards to 2,000 had gathered, and Goetz took Owens' place on the chair. The dick made a lunge at Goetz when he was grabbed by the big worker and Brunton and pushed back against the wall. He reached for a black jack which he carried in his hip pocket and they begged him to start something. At that moment one of the workers tossed a nice soft ice cream sandwich at the dick and he got it full in the face. The crowd jeered him and he beat a hasty retreat.

Police Arrive.

Goetz continued to speak without further interruption while Brunton went through the crowd announcing an open organization meeting for Friday night. The response indicated that the slave driving tactics in vogue in the Briggs plant have the men and women employed there in a receptive mood for organization.

Just as Goetz finished speaking two policemen in a Ford drove into the crowd. They too threatened to pull an arrest if the union representatives did not immediately beat a retreat. When the organizers stood their ground the cops dropped their beligerent attitude and requested that the inspector be approached for a permit. However, the organizers declared they

500 MINERS AND THEIR FAMILIES THROWN INTO THE STREET BY BOSSES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WHEELING, W. CAL'S DELEGATE TO ARMS PARLEY CALLED BY LEAGUE OF NATIONS AIDS MOVE "OUTLAWING" SOVIETS

GENEVA, May 24.—The capitalistic world powers, including the United States, again demonstrated their enmity toward the workers' and peasants' governments of the Soviet Union when the arms control conference in effect, declared the Soviet Union an "outlaw nation".

The general commission of the conference, which was called by the league of nations, approved the proposal of the French delegation, dictated by the Painleve government in which the socialists are participating, exempting all nations bordering in the Soviet Union from publishing arms transactions. Other nations are required by the convention of the arms parley to publish all data pertaining to the manufacture and traffic in arms carried on in their countries.

Congressman Theodore Burton, chairman of the American delegation, approved the discrimination against the Soviet Union.

Russia had refused to attend the parley on the grounds that it was called by the league of nations, which is an instrument of the large imperialistic powers to keep the weaker nations in subjection to them.

STANDARD OIL LOSES FIGHT TO SELL LEAD GAS

But Issue Is Not Yet Definitely Settled

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 24.—With nearly one million workers directly exposed to gasoline fumes thru their work and millions more indirectly exposed the labor movement has an enormous stake in the fight to keep tethaethyl lead gasoline off the market, said Mrs. Grace M. Burham, director of the workers' health bureau, on her return from Washington where she was one of the three labor delegates at the U. S. Public Health Service conference on this poisonous fuel.

The conference made some decisions in line with recommendations of the labor officials but the perilous issue has not yet been settled. The conference ordered the surgeon general to make an exhaustive investigation with the assistance of seven scientists. At labor's request it was agreed that the cost of the probe be met from public funds and not from the purses of the corporations affected, as was the case in the recent oration, composed of the Standard Oil of New Jersey and General Motors. Results of the probe must be reported to a public conference at which trade unions will be represented.

Papers Aid Oil Trust

Newspaper reports of the conference obscured issues and softened the facts against the corporations involved in the tetraethyl lead business, said Mrs. Burnham. Thruout the sessions there was sharp cleavage between one group representing labor and science, on one side, and the Ethyl Gasoline corporation, Standard Oil, General Motors on the other. Ten seperate industrial corporations were directly represented, in addition to their medical experts, thus sitting in judgement on their own case.

Efforts of the corporations to show that the new motor fuel was harmless would have been comic had the issues not been so serious. Admission was made at the conference that 11 workers had died and 113 had been poisoned in production plants but Standard Oil and General Motors men insisted production had been made safe. Three hundred million gallons of treated gasoline have already been put on the market and distributed to 20,000 filling stations, they said.

As evidence that there had been no cases of poisoning in the latter group corporation physicians submitted the story that 30 workers engaged in the distribution and sale of the product had been examined and shown to have suffered no harm. Mrs. Burnham replied that at least SHINNSTON, W. Va., May 24.—The value to the coal operators of having their men inside the United Mine Workers is illustrated by the situation in Shinnston Local No. 4009. Last week the local officers formally turned in its charter and notified C. F. Davis, international representative, that the men were going back to work. Such was the report broadcast over the country last week.

However, Davis has issued the following statement:

"Newspaper reports to the contrary, no request has been received at the mine workers' office in Fairmont or by any of the officers of the United Mine Workers from the former officers of Local Union No. 4009 to the

FLORIDA COURT SOLD NEGROES INTO PEONAGE

Turpentine Operators Are Found Guilty

PENSACOLA, Fla., May 24.—A verdict of guilty was returned in federal court here against five Calhoun county men charged with peonage and brutally beating Negroes who were sold into slavery in the turpentine camps by county judges. Those found guilty were Charles Land and M. B. Davis, turpentine operators, and Will Proctor, Carey Whitefield and Frank Daniels, commissary clerks in the turpentine camps.

Henry Sanders, a Negro, who was the last witness to testify against the turpentine operators, told how he had been brutally beaten with clubs. "I was told not to run, or I would be killed," Sanders said.

He told how he was arrested and taken before Calhoun county Judge Chapin, charged with stealing a coat. He was forced to plead guilty, being told by Davis, the owner of the camp, that if he refused to plead guilty he would be given 8 months on the road gang. After Judge Chapin had given Sanders to understand that the threat would be carried out, he pleaded guilty and was given 90 days under a bond, which was to be worked out in Davis' camp.

But Sanders could not get away, the company chalking up $114.00 debt against him at the end of his ninety day sentence, altho he had been given no pay. He escaped, but was caught by sheriffs and brutally beaten. The sheriffs and Judge Chapin are under indictment.

Sanders' body was examined by the court, and altho the beating occurred last September, the scars of the beating were still visible.

THREE FASCISTS ARE KILLED IN STREET FIGHTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, May 24.—Fighting between fascist troops and anti-fascist workers continues in several towns in Italy. At Rovigot one fascist was killed and another seriously wounded in street fighting. At Adria two were killed and one injured.

A mob of fascists wrecked the printing plant of the anti-fascist newspaper, Popolo Veneto at Padue, and smashed several shops belonging to anti-fascists. They set fire to the Concordi theater, and destroyed several headquarters and private homes of their opponents.

Fighting also occurred at Brescia.

Gary Workers Firm Despite Davis

to force the "open shop" on Gary and bring non-union building workers into Gary.

"As a union man do you consider the open shop a good American principle and a good American institution?" the DAILY WORKER reporter asked.

Acts As Strikebreaker.

"Well, that's a controversial matter," Davis replied. "I wouldn't care to go into that. For eight years before I came into the cabinet the department of labor has had a policy of conciliation. We are conciliators. If I declared myself for the closed shop the employers wouldn't have me, and if I declared myself against it the unions wouldn't like it, so I don't express myself on that subject."

Afraid to Defend Workers.

"What can I say about the lockout, what could I say," Davis continued. "What would you say?"

After being told by the DAILY WORKER reporter that a good union man should be for one hundred per cent organization, and therefore against the "open shop," Davis replied: "Well, that's all very well for you to express yourself, but you haven't got a government job tagged ontq you. If I was free of a government job I would commit myself too."

After making this admission that requirements for a cabinet member are cowardice and hypocrisy, Davis continued his handshaking, backslapping and baby patting of the local "Moose."

Davis was the honored guest of the United States Steel corporation, which has taken the lead in attacking the union building workers of Gary. He went thru the steel mills with chamber of commerce members acting as the reception committee.

Steel Trust Ordered Lockout.

The men whom Davis praised, after attacking the foreign-born workers, and the Communists, were Gary employers who are assaulting the trade unions. Davis made not a single mention of the lockout in his public speeches. The steel trust is directly constructing 103 houses to house workers in the new tube works, and has in addition let building contracts to the Germatta Construction company, the John Larguro company, and several other leading contractors.

The next move in the lockout will be Monday night, when a committee of three, Tom McAllister, Bert Drake and G. Elkins, report to the Plumbers' Union on the conferences that have been held with representatives of the contractors. Bert Stevens, business agent of the Plumbers' Union, told the DAILY WORKER.

No Agreement Reached.

Altho building trades council officials told the DAILY WORKER that the union heads are willing to settle independently with the contractors, it is known that the plasterers have already refused to return to work until the contractors meet the plumbers' demands.

The building trades workers were locked out six days ago, when the Gary General Building Contractors' Association announced that an agreement had been reached by the building trades unions, that if the plumbers' demands were met, all of the building trades would strike for a similar increase. The plumbers had been on strike since May 5.

Since the lockout the contractors have made several attempts to break the solidarity of the unions by offering separate settlements to various unions. All of these offers were spurned by the strikers. Last Thursday, after prolonged conferences, the plasterers refused to negotiate with the contractors until the entire situation was cleared up. The building trades workers have refused to return to work pending "artitration." The plasterers are demanding a wage increase from $11.00 to $14.00 per day.

Force Independents to Join.

In declaring the lockout, the contractors' association officials admitted that the fight "may develop into an effort on our part to declare an open shop." But the bankers, including the Midcity State bank, which constructs houses, and the Steel City Construction company, the Deutsch Construction company, and the other larger bankers and contractors, have used the strike and lockout as a club to force the independent, smaller contractors to join the association. "We are cleaning our own house, too," one banker said, at a meeting of the association.

On the first day of the strike, 16 independent contractors were forced into the association. In addition, pressure was brought to bear on the material dealers, who joined with the association, and refused to deliver material to independent contractors. The real estate board, the chamber of commerce, the commercial club, and other business organizations, all of which are controlled by the steel corporations, joined with the bankers and contractors in the "open shop" drive on the building workers.

The contractors' association made desperate efforts to induce the plumbers to return to work and form a committee to settle the wage controversy. Stevens, the business agent, explained, however, that the plumbers have no committee with power to make a settlement. Stevens declared that any action would have to be taken by the union at Monday night's meeting, when all of the plumbers would be given a chance to rule what sort of a settlement should be made.

Four meetings were held with the plumbers during the strike and lockout, and at three of these a "conciliator" sent by Secretary of Labor Davis, attended, and tried to induce the strikers to return to work on their old wage scale, pending settlement.

Davis Lauds Employers.

Davis, in his speech at the Moose Home, glorified the fact that American business has set up such a gigantic system of exploitation, and gloated over the big profits now being made by the employers.

"A magnificent mill," was the term he used for the Gary slave pens where thousands of steel workers toil at wages of 45 cents an hour. "That mill represents real patriotism," Davis said. It represents real Americanism, and we need that kind of Americanism."

Detroit Auto Workers Fight Police

would be back next day without approaching any inspectior for a permit to carry on organization work.

Conditions in the Briggs plants are perhaps more onerous than in any factory in Detroit. For months there has been a steady shoving down of the wage scale. Trimmers who have been getting 90 cents and a dollar an hour are being discharged and the lower scale men are being retained. Girls are replacing men at a wage of from 25 to 35 cents an hour. Experienced painters are dropped and their places taken by unskilled workers operating the Duco process spray, at less than half the wages of the skilled workers. Hundreds of girls are employed. The factory slogan is "Step On It!"

Local 127 Auto Workers is instituting an organization campaign and the noon day factory meetings are in line with the program. Meetings have been held at the Fisher body plants, Packards, American Motor Body Corp., Briggs, and several other plants. The local meets every Friday night at 55 Adelaide.

The Sequel.

Friday noon saw the sequel to the disturbance started by the managers of the Briggs Harper Ave. plant when the organizers of Auto Workers Union No. 127 attempted to speak. Relizing from the previous failure that their own private dicks could not cope with the men who were strong for hearing what the Auto Workers' Union organizers had to say, they secured the services of the Detroit police, and practically the whole force of the Chene and Canfield station were guarding the plant from a handful of organizers.

Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor was the first to speak. However, Martel had no more than started than he was placed under arrest. Frank Brunton, secretary of Local 127 Auto Workers was also arrested for protesting against the arrest of Martel. The crowd was quick to express its resentment against the police and followed the car containing police and prisoners for more than a block.

5,000 Cheer Speaker.

At this moment, Alfred Goetz mounted the chair. Goetz had spoken at the Briggs plant on a number of former occasions and his mounting the chair was the signal for an ovation from the crowd. The local papers stated that fully 5,000 workers were in the crowd. They cheered the speaker when he denounced the police for interferring the right of the workers to organize, and drove home the point that the police are always on the side of the boss when the workers make demands for improved conditions or better wages.

One of the foremen from the shop tried to curry favor with his masters by trying to heckle the speaker, but the heckler was quickly squelched by the impatient crowd in a very effective, even tho crude manner. Just when the men were getting ready to return to work and the speaker was making his closing remarks a detail of police came in a Ford touring car.

Crowd Battle Cops.

The speaker was arrested and thrown into the car whereupon the crowd massed themselves around the car and with shouts of "Don't let them get him," and "Take him away," they kept the car from getting away by holding on to the wheels and fenders until the cops forced them to let go by brandishing their guns.

The crowd of workers, now thoroly aroused by the vicious treatment accorded them, hooted and jeered the cops and treated them to a shower of pop bottles. The cops again had to leave the car and with drawn revolvers worked the crowd back and made their escape with the prisoners.

Police Reserves Arrive But Retreat.

A riot call was sent in and soon the reserves arrived from at least four neighboring precinct stations. The police showed evidence of hysteria and tried to keep the men from the second shift from coming out for their lunches. The men insisted however, and the police decided that discretion was the better part of valor. Briggs employes are very much aroused by the action of the management and the police and are more determined than ever that Local 127 shall have a fair chance to deliver the message of unionism.

In all seven men were arrested. They were held for about one and one-half hours and then realeased without any charges being preferred against them. This is evidently a tactic which the police will employ in an attempt to discourage the noonday factory meetings. The organizers of Local 127 are emphatic in declaring that such tactis will fail.

An open meeting of the Auto Workers' Union was held Friday evening which was well attended and a large number of those present joined the organization. The men in the factories are beginning to resist the oppressive methods the bosses are using. The resentment expressed by the Briggs employes against the bosses and the police at Friday's meeting is becoming general in all the factories in Detroit. Local 127 aims to crystallize this resentment into organizational strenth and will give the bosses the scrap of their lives.

Shinnston Local Officials Turn Fink

effect that they desire to surrender their charter and supplies and request C. F. Davis, financial agent to take charge of same."

Operators' Agents Controlled Local.

But Davis goes on to relate circumstances which show that something lay behind the rumor that J. E. Weeks and C. M. Vincent, former president and secretary of Local 4009 had turned in the charter. Furthermore, these finks have proceeded to organize and incorporate a company union at Shinnston in a dastardly attempt to break the U. M. W. of A. from the outside.

Davis says: "J. E. Weeks, the former member of the U. M. W. of A., who, it is claimed, wrote this letter to the Fairmont office, is brother to the general manager of the Bethlehem Coal company, and members of the U. M. W. of A. in northern West Virginia have intelligence enough to realize that, taking all the facts into consideration, this action is very much on the order of a brotherly affair."

Mass Meetings But No Relief.

To offset the discouragement caused by the above finks who had gotten hold of Local 4009, the union officials called a mass meeting of the Shinnston miners on a lot across from the Bethlehem mines and reported 2,000 miners and their families attended. In addition, they reported 500 at Cassville and 600 at Farmington meetings. However, murmurs are heard among the strikers at the failure of the union to give any strike relief and criticism of the high salaries being paid the international officers while women and children of the miners are starving.

The miners are, none the less, determined to stick by the union and maintain as militant a fight as the white-livered officials will permit them to make. The men scoff at the treachery of Weeks and Vincent and say that they will have nothing to do with the company union incorporated by them with the aid of the U. M. W. of A. Attorney John B. Wyatt, under the name of the Mountaineer Coal Miners' Association, supposed to make an "agreement" with the Bethlehem company.

The traitor attorney, Wyatt, who was lawyer for Local 4009, says that the signers of the charter for this scab company union, including Weeks, Vincent, Roy Wilson, L. E. Seckman, E. J. Curry, W. H. Drummond, O. L. Whiteman and R. D. Buznett, all of Shinnston, were all officers of Local 4009. The membership have got the number of these traitors to the union and promise to give them a severe letting alone.

Determined to Fight on All Fronts.

While the struggle of the miners is bitter, and they have to fight this inner treachery and the spineless and mercenary fakers like Bittner and Lewis who care only for their own high salaries and are ready to betray the struggle at any point, as well as continuing their picketing in the fight against the operators, yet the miners are loyal union men and will stick thru thick and thin, thru hunger and privation, because they know that only by struggle can they win, while surrender now will lead to further and even more bitter hardships.

Spanish-French Pact Reached.

MADRID, Spain, May 24—An agreement has been concluded between the Spanish dictator Primo de Rivera and Louis Malvy, representing the Painleve government, whereby the two countries will remark the border line of Spanish and French Morocco if the Riffians are subdued.

The agreement also stipulates that the Spanish fleet shall enact a stricter blockade along the Mediterranean to prevent the Riffians from securing supplies.

Trees, Not Children, First Care of New York, World's Richest City

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, all that money and tender care can do to save the trees in Central Park, New York City, from ailings afflicting them, is being done. The Davey Tree Expert Company has been brought in especially to "save them" from death. It is declared they are mortally sick.

The park trees are fortunate. The children of the city's congested working class districts are not so fortunate. The New York City government, thru many investigations, knows what troubles the children; malnutrition thru improper food, diseases born of overcrowded housing conditions resulting in lack of fresh air, absence of sunlight, and other evils to be found stalking thru every American municipality. But nothing is done.

• • • •

The trees are to get all the attention. The other day, as carefully reported with pictures in the metropolitan press, "seven khaki-dressed men climbed into the dead tops of two gigantic elms shading the 72nd street entrance to the Mall and cut their lifeless and infected limbs from them. Today a systematic feeding of these and many other trees in the park will continue for a year."

But what of the children of the working class? No such tender care is shown them. Their eyes and teeth may be bad, resulting in many ailments. Their bodies may be afflicted with many easily curable maladies. But they get no attention if their parents are unable to pay the crushing doctor bills. Any effort to have the municipality look after the children as carefully as it does after the trees in the parks is denounced as "Bolshevism."

• • • •

It is now declared that there is almost no healthy tree in the park. They are all ailing. But they can all be made healthy.

They are not affected by the noxious gases that pour from the automobile traffic that continues unceasingly thru the park. They can battle that.

The trees have just received too much artificial attention. They have been too well taken care of. They have been robbed of the correct care that nature always gives them. The soil has been packed down so that no water or air could penetrate it. The trees have been deprived of the decomposing vegetation that develops naturally in the open forest. This condition is now to be remedied by the turning of the soil and the use of fertilizers. An effort is to be made, thru every artificial means available, to imitate nature in the care of these trees.

• • • •

Similarly, workers are forced to live artificial lives in the great cities. Human nature rebels at being forced to labor 10 and 12 hours daily, or even less, under unnatural conditions; the remaining hours to be spent in an equally artificial manner. The pavements of the streets were never intended as playgrounds for children. Yet children are forced to accept them because real playgrounds are scarce and parks almost unknown. Homes are not built in great cities, for the care of healthy families, but rather as a means of collecting high rents from workers forced to live in them. New York has officially reported that its housing conditions for workers are steadily getting worse, not better.

• • • •

New York City, in the days to come, will proudly proclaim that it has saved the trees in its parks; that the unnatural conditions that were killing the trees have been overcome by artificial means.

But the murder of the children, as well as of the grown-ups of the working class, will continue as before. The profit system demands it. An intensely exploited working class, with a low standard of living, results in high dividends for invested capital. That must not be interfered with. So say the capitalists.

But the time will come when the workers will demand the same consideration shown the trees in the parks. They will insist that they also enjoy every possible opportunity to combat the artificiality of the present machine age. They will never win that chance under capitalism. They will learn that this victory can only be achieved thru the ending of capitalism and the building of the new social order—Communism—that abolishes profits and holds first the interests of all toiling humanity.

Union Fakers Aid "Open Shop"

president and general manager, refuses to grant anything, but is willing and even quite anxious to "submit it to arbitration."

The company is said to have named a director, Charles Currie, as its arbiter, while the union has approached J. B. Hannan, exalted cyclops of the Summit county klan and I. S. Myers to serve for the union.

Union Officials Violate Constiution to Aid Open Shop.

The old contract which expired May 1, holds good until another one is made, according to the "gentlemen's agreement." The situation in Cleveland, where the carmen were defeated by somewhat similar treachery on the part of the union officials, is being relied upon by the company to influence the Akron workers. The company feels that it has the open shop fight practically won.

However, the Akron carmen point to the fact that the officials of the local and even President Mahon cannot force arbitration upon them on the question of the unionization of the bus men by including them in the agreement, because the union constitution plainly states that bus men are eligible for membership. If Mahon and O'Neil insist on the open shop they will be violating the union constitution it is pointed out.

Leninism, the application of Marxism in the present period of imperialism, is splendidly treated here by a close co-worker of Lenin, and at present secretary of the Russian Communist Party.

In this book—destined surely to become a classic of Communist literature—the reader will find an important analysis of the problems before every revolutionary party.

A book that should be in the hands of every thinking worker.

STANDARD OIL LOSES FIGHT TO SELL LEAD GAS

But Issue is Not Yet Definitely Settled

40,000 workers must have been employed in these 20,000 filling stations handling the fuel and that the examinations of 30 gave no proof that large numbers of workers were not suffering from lead poisoning.

Many Workers Affected.

The number of workers who will be directly affected by lead fumes if the new fuel comes into general use, said Mrs. Burnham, can be gauged by census reports: 285,045 chauffeurs, 31,450 garage workers, 411,132 teamsters and dray men and 40,000 men in the filling stations.

A. L. Berres, secretary, Metal Trades department, A. F. of L., took the floor to defeat proposals that sale of the new fuel—recently stopped by the corporation as the result of aroused sentiment, be permitted pending the report of the surgeon general's investigators. Said Barres: "I can appreciate what it means to take the knock out of a motor, but I may say at this time that we are more concerned about keeping the knock out of the human make up. From that point of view, Mr. chairman, the American Federation of Labor will attack the sale of this gas."

F. A. Howard, Standard Oil man, argued for the fuel, which he said made one gallon take the place of two, and described tetraethyl lead as sent from heaven to conserve the oil supply of the country. Mererly because some animals had died in the tests he said his conscience would not permit him to deprive his country of the fuel.

Eleven Dead, 118 Injured.

Tp which Mrs. Burnham replied that it was no gift of heaven to the 11 who had died and the 118 who had been poisoned.

Miss Harriet Silberman, director of the Workers' Health Bureau, said that it was not a matter of the deaths of animals but of human beings. She quoted from the boasts of the corporations that maximum precautions were taken, compelling every man to wash frequently during the day, taking full baths daily and observing other rules for failure to follow which his pay was forfeited. Miss Silverman pointed out the injustice of this pay forfeit rule from a corporation profiting from the sale of 300,000,000 gallons at a price 3 cents above the regular gasoline price but she showed that the boasted precautions had failed to prevent the catastrophes the industry had witnessed.

The testimony of Prof. Flinn of Columbia telling how he and another Columbia investigator had been injured in tetraethyl lead experiments was a factor in passing the resolution against resumption of production.

Progressive Miners Special Convention to Fight Farrington

tional election as provided by the constitution, as John L. Lewis has refused to abide by the constitution and have the election returns sent out to each local union. Thousands of miners believe Lewis was defeated and is holding office illegaly and taking this method of concealing his defeat and charges must be made, his removal from office demanded for violation of the international constitution, Art 9, Sec. 36.

No Wage Cut.

The operators are attempting to influence the miners to accept a wage cut to be able to compete with the non union mines. The non union mines are working 40 per cent of the time, on an average not much better than the union mines. A reduction of wages in the union field would result in a like reduction in the non-union field and both fields would be relatively worse off. Wage cuts must be fought against and a campaign of education thruout the district must be started against wage cuts thru the miners papers and in all other available ways.

An increase in wages is necessary to meet the increased cost of living and this end the campaign must be started.

YOUTH ARMED IN SCHOOLS BY CAL TO TRAIN SCABS

Militarize U. S. to Break Strikes

NEW YORK, May 24.—"Industrial troubles" is one of the reasons Secretary of War John Weeks, cites to support compulsory military training in schools, asserts Brent Dow Allison, secretary national students' forum. Allison is one of an investigating committee representing various youth and peace organizations which plans to call a conference next month to seek action on what Allison calls the "conspiracy of the war department to put over compulsory military training without having to go to congress for a law."

Weeks' statement that compulsory military training is necessary because of possible industrial troubles is contained in a letter of which the committee has a copy. About 12,000 secondary schools and 875 universities and colleges in the country, Allison estimates, now have military training. In many it is compulsory for degrees. In some universities and colleges the second two years, non-compulsory, is paid for at soldiers' wages.

Full details of the giant conspiracy to militarize the youth of the country, accustom them to war psychology and standardize thinking will be made public at the conference of interested organizations and action against the conspiracy sought. Allison believes that the situation now is worse than before the last war, with the draft law merely suspended and the espionage the decision.

The conference on youth and war in which 22 national organizations participated made clear that a large body of the nation's young people do not want war. Conservative, liberal and radical organizations of all shades joined in the conference in rapping the citizens' military training camps and in resolving to push peace education in schools.

Human Sandhogs Tie Up Work on Big New York Tunnel Job

NEW YORK, (FP)—Several hundred members of the Compressed Air Workers' Union are carrying on a strike—now in its second month—against Booth & Flynn, contractors, on the Hudson Vehicular Tunnel job. The men are striking for a continuance of the pay rate of $7 to $8.50 a day they received while the compressed air work (sandhogging) was going on. Employers attempted to cut them down to laborers' rate. The finishing work on the tunnel, says Joseph McPartlan, secretary of the refuse to accept any cut. The union has defeated Booth and Flynn in three strikes, one previous strike on the present job, and strikes on the 14th St. East River tunnel and the second East River Interborough Rapid Transit tunnel, and he is confident of again winning. In addition to the finishing work that is being tied up operations on a new power house on the New Jersey side, with 48 caissons to be dug, are also at a standstill.

Great Enthusiasm in Pittsburgh for the World Language

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—About seventy comrades enjoyed the most unique affair ever held in our movement in America, a Communist Ido banquet. On the walls of the Greek Hall several signs were hanging with appropriate text, such as "Workers of the World Unite, said Karl Marx." "In order to unite we must understand each other," adds the Communist Ido Federation. "Correspond with comrades in every country by means of Ido. Korespondez kun kamaradi en omna landi per Ido." "Read Ido 15 min. every day. Lektez Ido 15 min, omnadie," etc.

The chairman, Com. Careathers, opened the banquet, with a few words explaining the world language idea, pointing out, that the diversity of language is one of the props that support the capitalist system and that this movement aims to abolish the same. Thereafter he announced that probably for the first time in America "The International" was to be sung in Ido by a group of singers. The audience rose, while the well-known air combined with the clear Ido words filled the hall. The last words of the refrain,

Frati, audez la signalo
Laste brave kombatar,
La Internacionalo
Sucesos parvinkar.

were followed by a thundering applause.

The chairman then remarked, that among other objections, it is sometimes claimed, that an "artificial" language can not be spoken. In order to give the audience an opportunity to judge for itself, he introduced the Ido speaker, Com. A. Rostrom. With greatest attention and with an air of surprise the audience listened to the speaker, who for fifteen minutes spoke quite fluently in this so-called "artificial" language.

After a talk in English by Careathers ten minutes speeches followed in Croatian, Finnish, Greek, Italian and Jewish. The speakers who are all well known party members explained the need of world language in our movement.

A song was given by some Italian comrades, in their mother tongue. Another attractive point on the program was a song in Greek and "a Internacionalo" (in Ido) by a small nine-year old boy. A resolution on the world language question was also adopted.

After the banquet the present members of the Ido group had a picture taken. During the whole evening a wonderful spirit of comradeship prevailed.—James Sifakis.

'Baby Farm' Infant Was Sold to Woman for $75

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Gieson-Volk baby farm case took a new turn today when it was learned from the district attorney's office that a baby from the infantorium was sold to the wife of a New York clothing manufacturer for $75. The wife, Mrs. Nat Bass, confessed to the police that she took the few days' old infant beside her in a bed in Mrs. Geisen-Volk's infantorium, in the desire to make her husband believe it was their own.

Now, eight months since the deception was carried out, with the "baby farm" investigations getting closer to the exposure of her plot and fearing the police Mrs. Bass confessed to her husband that their son, Nat Martin Bass, was not their own. So far it was not learned whose child it is and the infant has been put in charge of the Children's Society since the husband could not be induced to keep the child after learning that it was not his own.

MONESSEN, A STEEL TRUST HELL TOWN

Business Dependent on Steel Barons

By SANDE, Worker Correspondent.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 24. — Monessen is one of many steel towns, in western Pennsylvania, which is owned and controlled by the steel trust as all steel towns are. It is located on the Monongahela, about 45 miles from Pittsburgh. No unions of any kind exist in this dump for unionism is a heresy here. It's principal workshops (hell-holes) are a seamless tube mill, a steel mill, a tin mill and a foundry.

The three banks in Monessen are owned by the different mills so that even the workers' meager savings are used by the bosses.

A Gang of Babbits.

It has a board of trade, composed of shyster business men and officials of the steel mills. This body does everything in its power to keep the workers in ignorance by preaching the usual capitalist bunk of "thrift, work hard and above all, buy in Monessen."

This gang of Babbitts were taught a severe lesson after the 1919 steel strike when the workers boycotted the stores in Monessen for the part the business men played in refusing to let the strikers hold meetings.

Look at This Speakers' List.

When this gang holds a banquet each year they search the country for the biterest enemies of the working class and pay him to speak. At its four banquets it listened to the vomit of Secretary of Labor Davis, th enemy of the foreign-born workers; ex-Governor Allen of Kansas Anti-Strike court "fame," the man Alex Howat licked; "'Bill" Taft, labor hater and chief justice of the supreme court, and ex-President Harding, the trikebreaking president.

The mayor is a former official of the Pittsburgh Steel company and at present is a real estate shark. In his election he was supported by the steel bosses and he in return is a very obedient servant in carrying out the anti-labor policy of the steel interests.

Coolidge Jealous of Influence of Soviet in Far East

MOSCOW.—(By Mail).—It is reported from London that the situation in the Far East is drawing ever keener attention among the official circles of the United States. It is said that the British ambassador at Washington has been charged to confer with President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg on the question of Soviet-Chinese and Soviet-Japanese relations.

It is again being mentioned, in this reference, that before leaving London on his way to the United States, Mr. Kellogg had an important meeting with Mr. Chamberlain, British foreign secretary who urged the necessity of a common Chinese policy of England and the United States.

It appears to be ascertained that inasmuch as the official reports which have reached the state department from Peking and Tokyo dwelt with emphasis on the growing influence of the Soviet Union in the Far East, such reports have caused a great deal of anxiety in the American administration.

On the other hand, ever since the conclusion of the recent Soviet-Japanese treaty, Senator Borah and his friends have been consistently urging that the best way of solutioning the Far Eastern problems was to recognize the Soviet Union without any further delay.

MORGAN INVITED TO TRUSTIFY COAL INDUSTRY AS OPERATORS USE HUNGER TO BREAK UNION

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The attempt to starve out union coal diggers supplements the attempt of the financial interests to squeeze out the many small mine owners and secure their properties for consolidation at bargain prices. Financiers are out to organize bituminous coal trusts similar to those enforcing monopoly prices in antrracite.

Black Diamond, the coal trade journal, again calls for a Morgan to organize soft coal. Morgan, it says "by a systematic procedure or a controlling interest in corporations effected the organisation of practically 80 per cent of the anthracite tonnage." He could then restrict production until high prices made huge profits on the investment of the wealthy owners.

Good Time to Clean Up

Financiers now consider the soft coal industry ripe for similar consolidations. Says Paul Wooton in Coal Age, another trade journal, "Property values in coal have been liquidated to the vanishing point. Sometime during the present depression there will be a low point. Consolidations made at that low point would have an early chance to profit as values recover."

• • •

The Pittsburgh Coal Co., the largest consolidation in the field, has closed its last union mine. Its union mines normally employ about 12,000 men. These are now idle.

Out To Cut Wages

This move is avowedly an attempt to starve the miners into submission. Letters sent to the miners and the local nespapers by Vice President Dodson, appointed to do the dirty work for the Mellon brothers, state definitely that the company is "endeavoring to bring about a change in conditions" and that it thinks the November 1917 wage scale would go a long way towards giving the men steadier work and higher earnings. This would mean a reduction of about one-third in the union scale.

Pittsburgh coal men express surprise at the way the miners are holding out. For the past 2 months operations in the district have been below one-third full-time. For the past coal year they have been little better than one-third of full-time. "In the circumstances," says the Black Diamond correspondent, "it seems strange that there has not been more unrest. The operators feel that the miners have had an object lesson that should be convincing as to the impracticability of the high union scale, but just what they do think is another matter."

Cold-Blooded About It

Looking into Ohio the secretary of the Pittsburgh Vein Operators Association speaks with satisfaction of the progress of the hunger cure in that state. "Ohio miners," he says, "are standing with their backs to the wall. When a man grows hungry and his children cry for proper nourishment it is only natural that something must happen. It has been clearly demonstrated that the central competitive field cannot successfully compete with the nonunion fields of West Virginia and Kentucky."

Out of 140 mines in Eastern Ohio about 50 are operating, many of them only one or two days a week. Summer prospects for Central Ohio are that five out of 30 mines will operate. Production in Southern Ohio is estimated at around 13 to 15 per cent of normal.

Three Races Strike Against Price Cut of Fish Canneries

New Westminster, B. C., May 24.—White, Indian and Japanese fishermen on the Fraser river numbering upwards of 1,000 are tieing up 700 fishing vessels in protest against a cut in fish prices made by the boss canners. Fish buyers are attempting to cut the price of salmon from 14c to 8c a pound and the fishermen declare they will accept no less than 10c a pound. All the fishermen on the Fraser river have banded together to resist.

Fishing companies of British Columbia have been crying poverty. Last season, however, a number of canneries not only paid heavy running expenses but showed operating profits, and this year, British Columbia fish will practically be assured the complete market of the Antipodes.

Controversy Blocks Work of Trade Union Educational League

The Chicago Trade Union Educational League is divided over numerous controversial matters that are shaking the league to its foundation. This, of course, cannot be allowed to continue, and the local executive committee has decided to liquidate all differences. This will be accomplished on May 30th so that a united league can go forward in the fight to make the unions real organs of the class struggle.

The controversial matters are not on the question of policy but rather of a physical nature. They arose over the announcement that one of the main features of the annual T. U. E. L. picnic would be "Workers' Sports."

Workers' Sport Lead

At first the main event of the picnic was supposed to be a lecture by Wm. Z. Foster on his recent experience in Russia, with Wm. F. Dunne as chairman. Despite the fact that Foster has just returned after an extended tour thru Soviet Russia, and also the keen interest that all militants have in the first Workers' Republic, this event, worth the admission price alone, has become of secondary importance.

In fact so keen is the competition in the sports events, that it was found necessary to start them at 10 a. m. This will begin with a Volley Ball game between two teams from the Young Workers League, and will be followed by an indoor ball game between the T. U. E. L. and the Y. W. L.

Are You Ready?

For an hour the Juniors will hold the center of the stage, in a march and demonstration and a series of games. One of the features of the Juniors sports will be an indoor ball game between a team of children from the west side and a colored team of children from the south side. The losers have to buy the ice cream.

Hammer Drill Without Hammerskmark

Extra events to the general run of picnic sports will be the Hammer Drill by the Finnish Athletic Association and a wrestling exhibition between J. Paivinen of Chicago, amateur welter champion of the central states, and P. Kohko, of Waukegan. This will be followed by a tug of war between the building trades and the metal trades groups.

Oh, Girls!

Not to be out done, the girls are on the job. Billy Ramloff made the bold challenge that her team of ten husky girls can pull any other team that cares to accept the challenge, all over the picnic grounds. Emma Blechschmidt says that her gang of hefty belles will have something to say before the shouting is over. Both teams are in secret training—ice cream and candies are barred.

Singing—Dancing and Eats

Then, there is the Scandinavian Dancing Club in Folk and exhibition dances. The Freiheit Singing Society, foot races, bag, three-legged and peanut rolling races. Dancing from 3:45 to 8 p. m. to the music of Lethchingers' Union Orchestra. Oh, yes! and SOFT drinks Steve Rubicki will serve them with the sandwiches. Any groups or individual who wish to challenge at any sport may do so by writing to Abe Harris, director of T. U. E. L. sports 19 S. Lincoln St.

We expect everybody from Grand-Pap to Junior to be on hand for the biggest time ever. Don't forget! Decoration Day, May 30th, 1925, at the ALTENHEIM GROVE. Take Madison St. Car and transfer to suburban car to end of line, or take Forest Park "L" to end of line. 50c, admits you to everything.

CHILD LABOR FOE GRABBING POWER RIGHT

Connecticut Boss Legislative Clover

HARTFORD, Conn., May 24.—Henry Roraback, already known DAILY WORKER readers as the p tical boss of Connecticut who e neered the crushing defeat of child labor amendment in the st legislature, is showing how disint ested capitalist politicians are.

His name is mentioned in sen bill 587 as one of the three incorpo tors, of the Connecticut Electric vice Co., the others being Randal gan, a Philadelphia capitalist, William P. THE rubbish written by Dr. Thomas is sent out to hundreds of labor papers twice a month. There is not a spark from the class struggle in any of it. Thomas, like his patron saint Oswald Garrison Villard, is always looking for some opportunity to hand the capitalists a boquet. He praises Stanley Baldwin, British tory premier for his action in giving a goodly part of his fortune to the government after the war, in order to help the treasury. And he did this, according to Thomas, without "trying to capitalize his good deeds for political purposes in an election."

WHY should not Stanley Baldwin, whose fortune is estimated at $30,000,000, give one fifth of his income to his own government? If there is any thanks coming to him, the gratitude should be expressed by members of his own class. Capitalists of the Stanley Baldwin type are much more dangerous to the working class movement than common frauds like Horatio Bottomley, who rob on all sides without regard to the interests of the system as a whole. If Thomas prays long enough he may yet convert Stanley Baldwin, Charlie Schwab and John D. Rockefeller and make them hit the sawdust trail.

RUSSIAN monarchists are still contributing to the gaiety of nations even tho their erstwhile admirers no longer contribute very generously to the monarchists' coffers. The poor things are not taken very seriously nowadays, but once in a while an inquiring reporters with a sense of the ridiculous locates a monarchist nest and has a little fun with its contents. Enter Percy Jay Fuller, "humanitarian and financier" who keeps an office on Fifth Ave. Besides a box of cigars, the other equipment of Mr. Fuller's office are several human beings, looking much the worse for wear and lack of jaw exercise on starches, and proteins.

FULLER is engaged in the task of preparing for the restoration to the Russian throne of the Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, who probably does not know that the Czar's throne is now being used by a bootblack. This remarkable individual declares that he does not need money, that his own resources are sufficient. This fact alone should clinch the conviction that he is insane. The idea of a mentally salubrius monarchist turning down cash is unthinkable. Fuller admitted that Cyril did not know all the ins and outs of the preparations for his restoration, but such little trifled should not bother a grand duke. It should not be overlooked that Mr. Fuller is selling stock. No doubt he reasons logically that anybody crazy enough to expect the return of the Czars in Russia should be a good candidate for a block of stock in Greengoods Inc.

Canadian Seafarers Win Fight for Wage Scale on Whalers

Victoria, B. C., May 24.—The Federated Seafarers Union of Canada won a fight to retain union wages and living conditions aboard whaling vessels owned by the Consolidated Whaling Co. A few hours before the first three vessels of the company's whaling fleet set out for the whaling grounds, the crews were informed that the bonus on each whale would be reduced from $3 to $2. The men informed the company that new crews would have to be signed and after some haranguing, the boss agreed to pay all seamen at the old schedule which called for $80 a month wages and no bonus for firemen, and $50 a month and $3 bonus on each whale caught, for sailors.

The company claimed that the Sei whales caught were not as profitable as sperm wales but the men pointed out that the number of whales caught increased each year. The seamen also got the right of checking off dues from wages of seamen joining the union for the first time and then signing on as members of whaling crews.

Hindus, Now Blessed as Citizens, to Be "Denaturalized" Soon

SAN FRANCISCO.—At least 30 naturalized California Hindus, many of whom have been voters and all men of education, will lose their citizenship because of the U. S. supreme court decision that a Hindu is "not white." They claim that pure-blooded Hindus are Aryan, and hence white. The Hindu-American Assn. of San Francisco will contest the decision. The only clemency granted is that they will not be deported.

V. The Fight for Trade Union Unity and the British Labor Movement.

The Slogan of Trade Union Unity put Forward by Comintern.

Nobody, I think, will dispute the correctness of the general policy laid down by the fifth congress on this question. It is true that our opponents in the right wing of the Comintern considered that the resolution of the fifth world congress on the trade union question was essentially contradictory to the other resolutions adopted by it. They regarded the correctness of our position on this question as an "accident." Events have since proved that the trade union resolution of the fifth congress is wholly in accordance with the general tactics of the Comintern. There is no need therefore, at the present moment to discuss this question in principle. What we now need is to draw up practical instructions for our individual fraternal parties.

The most popular of all slogans, the slogan of the fight for international trade union unity, was put forward by the Comintern. With this the Communist International made a great step forward. We must observe that in certain countries the correct policy on the trade union question in the process of being put into effect, may be liable to the same two dangers to which the tactics of the united front in general are liable. This is particularly evident in France and Czecho-Slovakia, and to a lesser extent in other countries.

The first danger lies in regarding these tactics as an unimportant maneuver, as tho the whole affair consisted in writing open letters to social democrats and letting everything else take care of itself. The other danger lies in going to the other extreme and advocating the hurried and unconditional entrance into the reformist trade unions even where just as strong or even stronger revolutionary trade unions exist. That is the other extreme. I have heard that certain comrades in Czecho-Slovakia even believe that the weaker red revolutionary unions are the easier it will be to achieve trade union unity. We consider that where revolutionary trade unions exist, we must try to win over every possible worker and at the same time we must continue the fight for trade union unity. To dissolve with a gesture our red trade union organizations when they represent an important force in comparison with the reformist trade unions, would be a gross mistake.

The Anglo-Russian committee has not yet been formed, but the latest reports regarding the preparations for its formations are of a favorable nature.*) The right Amsterdamers are apparently rather alarmed at the decisions of the British to summon an official conference in conjunction with the Russiah trade unions. We stick to our former policy and shall continue to fight for the unity of the trade union movement without running to either of the extremes. We shall carry on the struggle everywhere, even in those places where we have our revolutionary trade unions.

New Factors in the British Labor Movement.

Historically, our whole trade union campaign arose out of the position which has developed within the British labor movement. The new factors which are making themselves felt in the international labor movement originated in England. The factors facilitating the new movement are briefly as follows: 1. Great Britain is losing her monopolist position in the world market. 2. The colonial power of Britain is being shaken. These two factors alone are of tremendous importance. The second factor, in spite of the fact that is only just becoming apparent, is already making its influence felt upon the whole economic and political position of Great Britain. 3. The class struggle is becoming more acute. 4. The labor aristocracy is losing its privileged position.

It is therefore by no means accidental that a delegation of the British trade unions recently visited Russia and reported comparatively favorable on our revolution. This is by no means to be attributed to the personal qualities of the representatives of the British labor movement in question, to the fact that they are good fellows, but is closely bound up with the four factors above enumerated. A new breeze is blowing in the British labor movement. In my opinion Max Beer is right when, in revelwing the British labor movement of the past few years, he says that the situation of the British working class is being affected by the failure of the classic tactics of the trade unionists and by the old fighting method of the labor party. The failure of the old trade unionist tactics is also not accidental. It is not due to the defects of the leaders or to the errors they committed, but to the fact that Great Britain is losing her monopolist position in the world market and that her influence and the influence of her colonies is meeting with greater and greater opposition, which is accelerating the pace of the class struggle in Britain and is awakening the masses of the British proletariat to a new life.

To this too, is to be attributed the trade union minority movement which has rallied 600,000 workers around Communist ideas (and is consolidating the official left wing of the trade unions) has, more than any other, facilitated the establishing of Anglo-Russian friendship.

The British Labor Party and the Rural Districts.

A tangled situation is developing in Britain. The labor party, in its present form, is hardly likely to persist. But its prospects for the immediate future are good. It has designs on the countryside. At present it is solely an urban party. At the last elections it obtained 52 seats out of 93 in industrial constituencies, and only 38 out of 230 in rural constituencies. I think that we shall be witnessing a two-fold phenomenon in the labor party; firstly, the gradual decline of the prestige and influence of its inert leaders in the ranks of the minority movement and even of the Communist Party (especially in working centers and industrial districts) and secondly, the growth of the influence of the labor party in the small towns and rural districts.

In the light of historical perspectives, the strengthening of the position of the labor party in these districts will objectively be a progressive move. Not so long ago Otto Bauer in Austria, issued the slogan, "Into the countryside." The Austrian social democrats have made up their minds to go into the rural districts; they are not averse to tasting a piece of "Leninism." They declare that Lenin was right in insisting upon an alliance with the peasantry. Lenin, of course, regarded that alliance somewhat differently from Otto Bauer. We know the price of the "Leninism" of the Otto Bauer. For the labor party it would be objectively a step forward to turn its face to the countryside, strike a blow at the conservatives, and push its roots into the rural population.

Comintern has Found the Key to the Problem of the British Labor Movement.

Our trade union campaign is a vital campaign; it has a big future before it, because it is in living, organic contact with the processes which are proceeding within the British labor movement and with the progressive tendencies developing within it.

For many years Engels sought the key to the problem of the British labor movement. Marxism could find no approach to the masses of the British labor movement, because the objective situation at that time did not favor the solution of the problem. Lenin also sought the key. You remember how at the second congress a discussion arose as to whether it was advisable to enter the labor party or not. That was not a question of organization; we were seeking the key to the solution of the problem of the British labor movement. The British labor movement was a puzzle not only in the period of Marx and Engels and in the period of the Second International. It seems to me that, thanks to Lenin, the Third International has found the key. Before our eyes a new situation is developing in the British labor movement and the conditions will finally be created for transforming our Communist Party into a mass party. The circulation of the weekly paper which our comrades in England have just begun to issue, has exceeded all our expectations. The young British Communist Party is moving forward apace. It is progressing thanks, first, to the change in the objective conditions of Britain, and second, to the fact that the British Communists have adopted the right path, along which they will proceed to the conquest of the majority of the British proletariat.

NEGRO CONGRESS GETS RESULTS IN BIG STEEL TOWNS

Workers Take Holiday to Hear Whiteman

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio. (By Mail).—Large audiences of Negro and white workers greeted Lovett Fort-Whiteman who is touring the Youngstown sub-districts, speaking in behalf of the American Negro Labor Congress. Large audiences from Wellsville and East Liverpool greeted Whiteman and the congress is now on a firm footing in the steel and pottery section.

Negro workers joined with their white brothers in applauding the program of the congress and the steel workers look to the congress as a great aid in uniting Negro and white workers against all attempts of their masters to divide them on racial lines.

In East Liverpool the Negro workers laid off work for the day and made a holiday of it. In Youngstown a strong committee of action was organized and under its direction the congress will go ahead.

The steel and pottery workers will send a strong delegation to the coming national session of the congress to be held this summer.

The steel workers are heatily in favor of the congress and are enthusiastic about the much needed work being carried on by the congress and the fearless championing of the workers' cause in a section of Ohio where the K. K. K. rules supreme.

Coolidge Machine on Trade Commission in Plot to Wreck it

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Dismissal of nearly 100 persons constituting the economics staff of the federal trade commission is the next move which the Coolidge majority in the commission is expected to take, to prevent further investigation of methods of big business concerns toward their competitors and the consuming public. Commissioners Van Fleet, Hunt and Humphrey are reported to be preparing to wipe out the personnel on which the work of investigation of business scandals depends. These economists and assistants have been employed, under civil service rules, for years in the special field assigned them by the federal trade act—the gathering of evidence of frauds and other means of unfair competition and the presenting of this evidence to the commission for its use in disciplining the offenders. The investigation of the lawlessness, banditry and wholesale crushing-out of small competitors by the Big Five meat packing companies of Chicago—an investigation which saved scores of millions of dollars to consumers of meats in this country in a single year—illustrates the duty which they have been performing, and which the Coolidge majority in the commission now proposes to prevent them from further performing.

Approve Caillaux Plan.

PARIS, May 24—The French cabinet has approved Finance Minister Caillaux's plan for a readjustment of taxes, which will be presented to the chamber on Monday.

Both at the foreign office and at the finance ministry, it was said the cabinet did not discuss the inter-allied debt question, and this matter will not be among those presented to the chamber by the new government.

DONATIONS FOR IRISH RELIEF COME FROM ALL PARTS OF U. S.

The following is a list of donations to the Irish famine fund received in the office of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, from April 16 to April 30. Several generous contributions have been received since then, which will be published shortly. All contributions to relieve the distress of the Irish famine victims should be sent immediately to the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 South Lincoln Street, Chicago, Ill.

PLUTES GATHER HERE TO FORM WAR AIR FLEET

Commercial Planes to Be Made on War Lines

An electrically lighted airway extending from Chicago to New York and eventually from coast to coast and from Mexico to Canada over which scores of planes will fly day and night, carrying consignments of freight and express for delivery on either coast within eight hours, was predicted today as secrecy surrounding the organisation of the $10,000,000 National Air Transport, Inc., gradually dropped away.

Service over this modern speedway will be inaugurated early in the fall when the Chicago-New York link will be put into operation and within a year, it is thought air contact will be established with every principal city in the nation. According to the tentative program, planes will leave New York nightly at 9:30 and will arrive in Chicago at 5 a. m. No passengers will be carried. The planes will be so constructed as to be easily converted into war planes.

No formal announcement concerning the new organization had been made today, but it became known that among those interested in it are William Wrigley, Jr., Marshall Field III, Edsel Ford, the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company and the Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

Coolidge Man General Manager.

Howard E. Coffin, of the Hudson Motor Car company, Detroit, will head the new organisation as president, according to reliable information, with Clement E. Keys, of the Curtiss Co., New York, as chairman of the executive committee. Col. Paul Henderson, second assistant postmaster general of the United States, will resign August 1, it is said, to become general manager.

N. Y. Teaachers and Principals Hit at New Playground Plan

NEW YORK, May 24.—The New York Teachers' Association has joined with the Principals' Association in protesting against the opening of school playgrounds under voluntary supervision, a plan adopted by the board of education at the suggestion of Mayor Hylan.

In resolutions drawn up by the teachers and the principals the plan was attacked as impractical and inefficient because of the inexperience and lack of training of volunteers.

The resolution also points out that asking teachers to give several hours of hard physical labor immediately after a day of intensive work of a strenuous nerve-straining type, is, not only unfair to the teacher, but makes the children bear the brunt of a system which would tend to undermine the vitality of the teacher for regular classroom work.

ZANKOV POLICE ORDERED TO KILL WORKERS AND PEASANTS LEADERS ON SIGHT—DEATH LIST APALLING

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 24—For more than one and half years, since Zankov at the head of a military clique conquered the government of Bulgaria, murder has been ruling in the country. All followers of the government of Stambulinski, the peasants and the workers, are brutally persecuted and murdered. Inhuman tortures must be suffered by all those who fall into the hands of the authorities.

Justice, law and morals—nothing of these exists in Bulgaria for the workers and peasants; there is only one law—that of brutal violence against all opponents of the Zankov government.

There is no free speech, no right of organization. Who wants to live honestly, is attacked by falsifications, maltreatment, spies, etc. and if no evidence against him can be provided, he is brutally murdered and his body thrown away.

Death List Appalling.

The list of the victims of the bloody regime of Zankov bombing is appalling. In February, 1925 alone the following persons were murdered: W. W. Ivanoff, arrested on Feb. 11, in Sofia by the secret police, strangled and his body thrown in the street. T. Strashimiroff, from Warna, M. P., lawyer, murdered on Feb. 18 in one of the most crowded streets of Sofia. E. Gitcheva, Communist woman, committed suicide according to statements of the police on Feb. 22. On Feb. 12 in Harkova the member of the municipal coucil, Dimitri Sacharieff, member of the Traders associations, was murdered. Treiko, Sgrishowski, member of the municipal council in Charmanli, murdered on Feb. 28; D. Daskaloff, murdered in Philippopel, P. Gaslaroff, murdered "whilst attempting to escape." Ch. Boyatchieff, soldier, murdered in Sofia on Feb. 18. L. Stroitchoff, died in the prison of Shumler from the tortures suffered. Angeloff, died in prison from maltreatment. Daveroff is said to have been poisoned for treason by another prisoner. An unknown anarchist, murdered Feb. 10, in a street in Russe. W. Poneff, murdered in Shumlar on Feb. 16 by police agent, D. Margoff, on Feb. 9, by an "unknown person." P. Margaroff, murdered in Feb., his dead body was found near Levrokop. Unknown, shot in a fight between policemen and persecuted workers. On Feb. 13 near the river Strema a corpse was found. The identity could not be established. S. Raeff, said to have committed suicide in the prison of Varna.

During the last week of March in Berkovitza 40 persons were arrested, in Ferdinand 30 (among them eight women), in Sofia 18, in Russe 22, in Varna 15.

Troops Ordered to Murder.

How systematically the Zankov government organizes the murderous annihilation of the Bulgarian people can be seen from a secret order which has been published by the Belgrad "Politika" Nr. 6086. It reads in part as follows:

"All garrisons and all military units must get into contact with the local committees of the government party for a combination of the means of struggle against the members of the peasants' units and the Communist party against whom it must be proceeded most severely, particularly the more intellectual, most capable and courageous followers of these ideas as well as their organizations must be annihilated. Lists of these people must be compiled as quietly as possible so that in the moment of attack against them all leaders can be killed, without consideration whether they are guilty or not. In places where revolts take place, all arrested rebels, their assistants as well as those who hide them, must be ruthlessly killed. The same applies to their families. Their houses must be burnt down."

It will be clear to everyone that under such horrible conditions the ground is prepared for acts of terror as the attempts on the king and the minister of the Zankov government in the cathedral.

The Bulgarian workers and peasants are fighting against annihilation. They are fighting for their life.

At present the Zankov government intensifies its terror in order to maintain itself despite its acts of brutality. The increase of its army for 7,000 men has been permitted by the allied powers because the international bourgeoisie fears the revolt of the Bulgarian people. Some districts were conquered by the "rebels." The struggle can only end with the complete annihilation of the toiling masses in Bulgaria or with the victory of the workers and peasants over the murder gangs of the military clique.

OUR DAILY PATTERNS

ANOTHER JUMPER STYLE.

Could Not Trick the Union into Scabbing on Underpaid Chinese

VICTORIA, B. C., May 24—When the Chinese crew of the S. S. Tatjana recruited at $10 a month in Hongkong demanded an advance on their wages when the vessel arrived at New Westminster, the white captain refused and the Chinese then went on strike. They were arrested and lodged in the immigration sheds by the port authorities. The owners of the vessel pretended that the crew had been arrested for dope running and tried to secure from the Federated Seafarers Union white seamen to act as scabs. The secretary of the union revealed the true state of affairs and told the owners unionists would see the packet in Davy Jones' locker before they would scab on Chinese getting $10 a month.

SOVIET UNION IS STRONGER THAN U. S., SAYS GOTO

Jap Viscount for Close Relations with Russ

even after the convention of January 20, 1925, was signed, the Japanese chauvinists raged and made frantic efforts to put obstacle in the way of practical execution of the agreement. However, as they met with a widespread national movement in Japan, which approved of the Soviet-Japanese convention just concluded, the situation gradually took a change for the better, and the influence of the chauvinists grew weaker.

A Superannuated Belief

At the present time, their influence is vacillating. However, it will vanish altogether and the chauvinistic counter-efforts against a closer rapprochment between Japan and the Soviet Republics will disappear only when Japanese chauvinists (and, for that matter, the chauvinists of all countries) completely cease to believe that the Third (Communist) International and the Soviet government are one and same thing which belief, added the prominent Japanese statesman, was as unwarranted and absurd as it was, so to speak, superannuated.

"Until now," continues Viscount Goto, "I thought that it was only in Japan herself that there still existed obdurate chauvinists who believed or, perhaps, professed to believe, that relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics would spell ruin to the Japanese people. Now, my observation among the Japanese population residing in Manchuria have shown to me that here too, there are people who seem to be afraid of official relations with the Union.

Soviets More Stable than U. S.

"Such views are deplorable, and I feel indignant at them," declared the viscount emphatically, "the more so that Soviet Russia has a stronger and more stable government than England, the United States of America, or other countries."

There would be no obstacles to economic co-operation between Japan and the Union of Soviet Republics, if it were not for those unnatural fears of would-be Bolshevist danger. However, stressed the viscount, as all such apprehensions are built on sand and are absolutely unwarranted the ensuing suspicious ought to be dismissed without further ado.

What is, however, of more consequence, in the viscount's view, is that the Japanese businessmen seem to have no clear idea yet of the real situation in the Soviet Republics, nor any very definite information as to the Soviet laws on trade and industry.

"Therein"—he says—"lies one of the main reasons why the Japanese capitalists are still preserving an expectant attitude and keeping in the limits of preliminary talk. This gap should be filled very soon now. The barrier of lack of reciprocal knowledge about one another will certainly fall, so that one is entitled to expect that with a fairly short time there will disappear one of the big obstacles to the adequate investment of Japanese capital in the exploitation of natural resources of the Soviet Far East."

In reference to the relations between the Chinese Eastern and the South Manchurian railways, Viscount Goto volunteered the opinion that the unfortunate inimical policies of the two enterprises were due mainly to a lack of mutual understanding and even acquaintance. The viscount voiced his regret at the present unfriendly developments, which, he admitted, were detrimental to both parties concerned.

True Friend of New Russia

"I wish it to be known in Moscow"—concluded the eminent statesman—"that I remain, as before, a true friend of new Russia." The viscount remarked, in this reference, that he appreciated very much the Moscow press, which was far superior to the Harbin papers, as the latter, perhaps with the exception of but one or two, were apt to distort the true facts about Russia and Japan—thus prejudicing the cause of rapproachment of the peoples of the two great countries.

Viscount Goto made some courteous and friendly remarks about the letter he received from Ambassador Karakhan, which had given him much pleasure.. The ambassador of the Soviet Union, he said, had—in spite of his being so busy, found a way to send a letter to Viscount Goto, greeting the latter at Harbin and voicing regrets at not being able to welcome him personally at Peking, where, owing to the call of urgent business, the viscount could not unfortunately go this time.

"MOPR", FIRST HOME OF RED AID TO CARE FOR CHILDREN OF SLAIN WORKERS, IS OPENED IN GERMANY

On Easter Sunday the first workers children's home of the International Red Aid was opened in Elgersburg (Thuringia) with enthusiastic participation of the workers of the district.

It is the greatest crime of the ruling classes that they leave the families of the political prisoners to their misery. The class conscious workers are murdered or imprisoned for years and nobody cares for the fate of their wives and children. On the contrary, the executors of white terror declare cynically that also the progency of the revolution must be annihilated.

"MOPR", First Home of Red Aid

In Esthonia together with the class fighters their families are murdered. Only the children under 10 years are saved. In Bulgaria and Hungary and Jugoslavia the same brutalities take place. But even in those countries where the lives of the families are not attacked, they are left to hunger and need. Innumerable orphans populate Finland, Esthonia and the other Baltic states. In all capitalist states the families of the political prisoners depend upon the charity of their class comrades. It is therefore in agreement with an urgent need that the IRA takes care of the growing generation of the class conscious workers and attempts to accomodate them in children's homes.

Hold 35 Children

For two years the Red Aid of Germany has conducted children's home in Worpsede near Bremen. A great number of children of German revolutionaries have passed several weeks in this home. Despite all attacks by the authorities and reaction this children's home has healed many wounds and protected the children against terrible misery.

With regard to the misery of the children of the political victims in Poland and the Balkans the idea arose to establish in Germany an international children's home for children of other countries. With the assistance of the workers of Thuringia the house in Elgersburg was found and bought by the Quieta society which rented the house to the IRA. After the buildings were renovated, there are now a number of light and well aired sleeping rooms for 35 children, rooms for the employees, kitchen, bath, etc. and two side buildings. A great garden offers to the children an opportunity to play in the open air. The building is situated amidst the forest.

Reaction attempted to prevent the establishment of the children's home. In the municipal council of Elgersburg the reactionary elements made an attack which was crushed by the communist majority. Then the district inspector prohibited the opening of the children's home and the intended celebration. As the reason he mentioned a regulation with regard to housing. The prohibition caused a great exitement among the workers. In a few hours more than 1100 signatures were collected for a protest. A commission under the leadership of the mayor of Elgersburg was sent to the Ministry of Interior of Thuringia and on Easter Sunday in the forenoon the confiscation of the building was finally cancelled.

On account of passport difficulties foreign children could not yet be sent to the home, so German children were accomodated in it. The inhabitants of Elgersburg received the children with great enthusiasm. On the station green gairlands were fastened with a sign "Long Live International Class Solidarity!"

Workers Support Home

The population of the surroundings has activily participated in the equipment of the home. Every child received a Russian blouse. The workers of the china factory provided the china, other workers provided pictures, vases, glasses, and for every child a red tie, and many other things.

Although the prohibition of the district inspector had led to a public announcement that the celebration would not take place, because our comrades wanted to protect the children against possible violence on the part of the police, more than 2000 workers participated in the celebration.

They wanted to welcome the children of their class comrades. On the market square in Elgersburg the representative of the International Red Aid made an inspiring speech and pointed out the significance of the childrens home as an expression of practical solidarity. Then the chairman of the German Red Aid, Comrade Wilhelm Pieck spoke. He appreciated the political significance of the demonstration, described the political situation and appealed to the audience to continue their fight for final victory. The announcement of the abolition of the prohibition was welcomed with enthusiasm.

Workers singing clubs gave the demonstration a solemn character. Then a procession was formed to the children's home. The children stood before the building awaiting the workers. Then the representative of the International Red Aid gave the home to the protection of the workers of Thuringia.

The representative of the workers of Elgersburg made a speech in which he affirmed that they would defend the children's home to the last and see to it that none of the children would ever suffer any injustice. After the mass chorus of the International the impressive demonstration came to an end.

With the opening of this first German children's home of the IRA a monument of international solidarity has been establish which will be a shining example.

UNION BARBERS MUST TURN OUT THURSDAY EV

Reaction Needs Licking Once More

The Progressive Barbers of Chicago who have been charged with "conspiring to disrupt the union" by the fakers who control the union in Chicago will go on trial before the membership at the next meeting of the union to take place on May 28.

The reactionaries exasperated at the militancy of the progressive, desperately grasped the last straw, and brazenly decided to get rid of these men who insisted that it was possible to maintain opinions contrary to those of the officials.

Even tho, there is no evidence to prove that the progressives have advocated at any time the disruption of the union, the officials assert that such is the case.

Eight Militants On Trial

The progressives under charges are Joseph Giganti, Isador Eitingon, A. D. Albright, Paul Petras, Amandus Knoph, Wm. Wolkowski, Ben Polk, and John Haas. The officials want summary expulsion, but it seems as if the rank and file of the union are not as anxious as the officials to get rid of their militants.

The trial committee appointed to investigate the charges held its session last Thursday, and is expected to bring in a verdict of not guilty. At least, that is the opinion of the defendants, who when interviewed expressed their faith in the fairness of the trial committee.

Everybody Turns Out

In view of our former experiences in similar cases we would recommend that each member of the Chicago Barbers Union be present at the next meeting and see that the progressives get a square deal.

Shanghaied on Ship of Salmon Packers; Negro Swims Ashore

By MIRIAM ALLEN deFORD.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24—The fight on the Alaska "hell ships" of the salmon packers has been renewed by sensational disclosures by Jacob Young, a contract slave who at the risk of his life dove off the receiving ship, City of Sidney, belonging to the Union Fish Co., in San Francisco bay, and swam to shore.

Young told a story of men held by Spanish contracts they could not read, of advance wages mulcted for supplies bought from a notorious outfitting firm in league with the packers, of heavy fines for trivial offenses. All these evils had been known, but two bills aimed at their cure have been killed by Gov. Richardson.

Young's further stories resulted in raids by city, county, state and federal authorities, and may cause the libelling of the barkentine, which holds 250 men kept in the bay until a full crew is assured for the Alaska trip. Supplies of liquor, some poisonous, and of dope were found on board. Young claimed that two women were also on board. They were not found, but there were plenty of their belongings to prove his story true. Four men who could no longer stand being fined $10 every time they left their bunks at night, eating bad food in rusty tin dishes and paying 50c a pack for cheap cigarets agreed to jump overboard and swim to safety, but only Young, an educated Negro from Chicago, formerly a Ford employe in Detroit, finally made the plunge. Two other men asked the authorities to arrest them for their own safety.

The Union Fish Co. denies all charges.

"Make Wireless Work for Labor."

NEW YORK, May 24.—"A chain of broadcasting stations thruout Australia, owned and controlled by the Union Movement," is urgently recommended in the leading editorial of the April 10 issues of The Advocate, official organ of the Australian Railways Union, received here. "Make Wireless Work for Labor," must be the slogan of the future, is the advice given unionists. It is pointed out that the capitalists are permeating the ether with mental poison to keep the workers loyal and that the radio is actually used to break strikes. The Australian movement is urged to use this new and mighty machinery of information and education.

The Lockout in Gary

The tremendous amount fo building done in the last two and one-half years has given the building trades unions quite a degree of immunity from the attacks of the bosses, but the lockout of the entire group of building trades unions in Gary, one of the chief strongholds of the steel trust, is probably a sign that this period of immunity is nearing its end.

Assaults upon the wages of the workers in the coal mining and textile industries have been going on for some time, but this is the first attack upon the building trades as a unit in any comparatively important center. Gary is not a very large city, but its closeness to Chicago and the fact that it is dominated by the steel trust makes the lockout a matter of concern to the whole labor movement. If the Gary building tradesmen are beaten an offensive against the Chicago building trades unions will be the next order of business for the bosses.

Support for the locked out Gary workers must be immediately forthcoming from the Chicago labor movement, not only because it is a matter of duty, but also because Gary in this instance appears to be the point at which the capitalists have decided to test the strength of the building trades unions.

Japanese Workers Aid Coal Miners

The Nova Scotia coal miners, on strike against the British Empire Steel company, in the extreme eastern section of the dominion of Canada, have been aided in their struggle by Japanese workers in Vancouver, British Columbia, on the west coast. Japanese and white women worked together in a special relief tag day and raised more than thirteen hundred dollars.

The utter imbecility of the "yellow peril" complex that obsesses the minds of labor officialdom, and which has had its poisonous effect upon the masses of organized workers, is shown up very effectively by the proof of solidarity and understanding of the class struggle displayed by these Japanese toilers.

The Lewises and Greens, following the Gompers tradition, are loudest in the demand for total exclusion of Japanese workers, but in the Besco strike the coal miners have had a very good chance to see who their friends are—the Japanese workers who come to their assistance when aid is badly needed or the fat union officials who fraternize with the corporation and government officials who are fighting the miners.

The discrimination against Japanese workers has been based on the claim that they could not be assimilated and in this statement bosses and union officialdom found complete agreement. The Vancouver incident, however, indicates that the Japanese workers not only can and do take part in the labor movement, but that they play a very active and intelligent role.

Cheap Trickery

The struggle for the reinstatement of an expelled member in Local 38 fo the Amalgamated Clothing Workers which we published Saturday, is a fair sample of the devious methods resorted to by the desperate union officialdom to gain time in the fight they are making on the right of expression of minority opinion.

By lies, and trickery, the labor fakers succeed in expelling militants, but they will do nothing to break with their friends, the bosses, the issues for which the militants fought remain, and sooner or later the rank and file insists on the reinstatement of the persecuted members. It is then we see of what material these safe and sane, "practical" union officials are composed. Unable to stifle any longer the mass demand for a reversal of the blacklist and expulsion policy, these great leaders, whose sneers at Communists and Communism are considered proof of their giant intellects, adopt methods so raw that the most simple person in the union can understand that deceit has been practiced.

A ruling that a local union in accepting the minutes of an executive board meeting upholds the expulsion endorsed by that body, and by rejecting the minutes votes against the victim of official wrath whose case is mentioned in the minutes, may be considered quite a clever piece of business by those who can play only a "heads I win, tails you lose" policy, but it does not alter the fact that the membership is against the policy of the officials.

Machine rule is all very well—for a while. It has, however, a fatal weakness. It never makes any converts, it never wins anyone to its support, it creates the conditions for its own destruction.

This the Amalgamated mountebanks will learn very soon.

Torture and Turpentine

Brutality as cold-blooded and horrifying as an incident in the campaigns of capitalist terror raging in Poland, Spain, Italy and the Balkans is told in the testimony now being heard in the trial of a number of county officials in Pensacola, Florida, charged with peonage. Indicted with them are officials of a turpentine company.

The evidence shows that a flourishing business was conducted in the slave traffic. Negroes were arrested for minor offenses or on framed-up charges and sold to the turpentine company at so much per head by the county officials with the local judge heading the syndicate.

Supposed to be working out fines they could never succeed in getting out of debt. If they tried to escape they were either murdered or captured and tortured into submission.

Only a short distance from the turpentine camps are Miami and Palm Beach, the playgrounds of millionairedom of the south and north. It is probable that only in Russia of the czar could be found such extremes of misery and luxury symbolizing the class struggle in America.

Who can doubt but that the Negro masses who suffer such horrible treatment and who see the reverse side of the shield can feel anything but hate for the white ruling class and are destined to play an important part in the battles of the American workers once the white workers rid themselves of their ruling class inspired prejudices?

Every day get a "sub" for the DAILY WORKER and a member for the Workers Party.

Fighting Injunctions

The strike of the United Mine Workers in and around Fairmont, West Virginia, has been of the most peaceful character and in complete accord with the provisions of a long standing injunction which allowed "peaceful persuasion" to be used by strikers in getting men to quit work.

But gentle as the strikers were, under the direction of the union officials who apparently believed that the coal capitalists get out injunctions because they are shocked by violence, the inevitable has happened—a new injunction has been issued, making even peaceful persuasion illegal.

This is the reward handed to the union for remaining within the law. Even peaceful picketing, with all the restrictions placed upon it by the injunction, kept workers away from the scab mines so the tool of the bosses on the bench simply made a new law that the miners could not comply with and at the same time carry on their strike.

High salaried lawyers with great skill in threading the devious mazes of the law, have collected hundreds of thousands of dollars from the unions for anti-injunction arguments, but in no instance has the damage done labor by injunctions been repaired or their inroads even checked.

Wholesale violation of these injunctions is the only way they can be made ineffective and reluctant as union officialdom is to urge this policy and carry it out, sooner or later it must be put into effect or labor unionism in America will become a memory.

The conditions in the lumber camps of the Pacific coast have been getting steadily worse since the Industrial Workers of the World has become a debating society for declassed proletarians instead of a fighting organization. It is quite all right for militant working class organizations ot have their differences of opinion but after all they have some responsibility to the working class they are trying to arouse, organize and lead. It is the irony of fate that it is the working class that suffers when its best elements forget the struggle and spend all their time in senseless bickering. A Communist Party can stand internal discussion to some extent because it is a disciplined body, but for a decentralized organization like the I. W. W. prolonged difference of opinion is certain suicide.

Those hopeful souls who saw in "regulation" of the trusts a sign of progress in the Unietd States and a willingneses of the big capitalists to submit to restrictions demanded by the smaller fry have had a rude shock. The federal trade commission, the darling of the liberals, has been so thoroly reorganized by Cooldige that its best friends no longer recognize it. It has been deprived of most of its powers and is now ready to be junked. So passes another feeble irritant to American capitalism in its onward march toward unfettered control of industry, government and the lives of the masses.

C. I. Letter to Swedish Communists

To All Members of the Communist Party of Sweden!

DEAR COMRADES,

It is in the interest of the development of the Communist movement in Sweden that you now devote the most serious attention to the inner differences in your party. These differences have arisen as a result of the non-Communist deviations of the right wing of the leading party comrades. You must arrive at clearness and give careful thought to these differences in order, after mature consideration, to adopt a decisive attitude and thereby secure the Communist line in the central committee of your party.

The Executive Committee of the Comintern thru special instructions directed the attention of your central committee to its unavoidable tasks. These instructions however were very inadequately carried out in practice. The right majority of the bureau of the party central has neither in the organizatory work nor in the political and economic struggle shown sufficient interest for the development of a lively Communist activity. It has never taken the trouble to render all party members in Sweden sufficiently acquainted with the decisions of the Comintern.

THE representatives of the right wing have also not always adopted a clear attitude to such remnants of petty bourgeois ideology as pacifism and religion. During the past year the Enlarged Executive was compelled to correct the standpoint of Comrade Hoeglund regarding such an elementary question as the attitude of Communists to religion and to make it clear to him that the Communist Party must not be indifferent to the religious prejudices of their members, even when they demand neutrality towards religion on the part of the bourgeois state.

In addition to this the central committee of the party during the last years has not succeeded in maintaining comradely relations with the Communist Youth League, altho the youth league achieved relatively great success. The fact that Comrade Hoeglund, in the Norwegian question, in the beginning systematically supported the opportunists of the "labor party" in their fraction fight against the Communist wing and finally, after the open breach of the Tranmaelites with the International, sharply attacked the Executive and the Norwegian Communist Party, must be characterized as a serious fault. All the representatives of the remaining parties of the Comintern have recognized that the Tranmaelites were on the wrong path when they desired not to abolish collective membership in the Communist Party of Norway, when they permitted the party to be the cockpit for various anti-Communist tendencies, when they rejected the revolutionary slogan of the workers' and peasants' government, etc.

THE Norwegian opportunists let their own obstinacy come before the resolutions of the world congresses and the unity of international leadership of the movement. Comrade Hoeglund has also disregarded international party discipline. The Executive Committee however acted in a conciliatory manner and endeavored to induce Hoeglund to loyal cooperation with the Comintern and with the left wing of the Swedish party, which upholds the line of the Comintern. After the December Conference in Moscow the Executive hoped that the inner conflicts in the Swedish party would cease. The majority of the central committee of your party wished after the conference to gain time, on the one hand in order to create trifling disputes, and on the other hand to convene in all haste a party conference at which they intended to remove the representatives of the left wing of the central committee. That could only have led to the splitting of the party in Sweden. At the session of the Enlarged Executive the representatives of all Communist parties pronounced against Hoeglund and his followers and supported the standpoint of numerous Swedish party organizations, in accordance with which the party conference should not be held until after the parliamentary elections.

In Moscow, Comrade Hoeglund failed to answer the question, whether he would comply with this decision of the International. We still believe that he will do so. In the event of Hoeglund and his immediate followers, in spite of everything opposing this resolution, then we call upon you, members of the Swedish party, to support with the greatest unanimity the efforts of the left wing in the interest of the preservation of party unity.

THE Executive does not at all wish to remove Comrade Hoeglund from the central committee of the party, unless he himhelf desires to destroy international fighting unity. He must be compelled to co-operate with the most prominent representatives of the left wing, as for example, Comrades Chilbum, Samuelson, Tunnel and others. This effective collaboration can however only be based on the decisions of the Fifth World Congress. Without desiring to limit the right of the Swedish comrades freely to elect their central committee, we say it openly that in our opinion you would best serve the further revolutionary development of your party, if next party congress were to correct the tendency of the central committee of your party in the sense that the majority of the presidium of the central committee should consist not of right but of left leaders, who stand entirely on the standpoint of the Comintern, and show a stronger will for Communist activity. In addition to this all party organs, from the highest to the lowest, must be supplemented by new active forces from the ranks of the factory workers.

DEAR Comrades, study the most important decisions of the Fifth World Congress and also the resolution of the Comintern regarding the Swedish question. We hope that you will be in agreement with these decisions. That is of decisive importance. On the firm basis of these decisions it will not be hard for you to overcome rapidly the inner differences of opinion in the party, to gather together all revoltulonary forces, and in solidarity with the whole Communist International to conduct the fight against the enemies of the Swedish proletariat against the capitalists and the social democratic leaders. In this fight you will build up your party to a powerful, victorious, Communist mass party.

Long live the Communist Party of Sweden!

Long live the Communist International.

Moscow, July 22, 1924.

OUR MARTYRS

Kosta Jankov.

AMONG the latest victims to be claimed by the white terror in Bulgaria is our Comrade Kosta Jankov, a son of the well-known Macedonian revolutionary Colonel Jankov, who in the year 1903, at the head of a division of insurgents fell while fighting against the troops of Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid, for the liberation of Macedonia. Comrade Jankov, on his father's side, was a distant cousin of the old leader and founder of the Bulgarian Communist Party, Comrade Dimitri Blagoyev.

During his whole life Comrade Jankov lived amidst revolutionary surroundings. Twenty years ago he entered the party of the Bulgarian social-democrats (orthodox). During the war he served as a major on the general staff of one of the Bulgarian armies. After the war he wrote a book in which he sharply criticized those responsible for the military disaster at Dobro Polje, and exposed the whole criminal policy of conquest of the Bulgarian bourgeoisie.

During the September events of 1923 the Zankov government had him arrested, but soon set him free. Comrade Jankov was arrested in connection with the explosion in the cathedral of Sofia and at once shot by the Zankov fascists.

In Comrade Jankov the Bulgarian Communist Party and the revolutionary movement have lost one of their best workers.

Minkov.

ON the 16th of April, 1925, Comrade Minkov, at the age of 35, fell at his post as a fighting revolutionary.

Comrade Minkov was the son of a Bulagrian officer with whom he took part in the world war. As an ensign in a technical corps he distinguished himself by extraordinary courage and bravery. After the war Comrade Minkov, along with many young and enthusiastic officers who had perceived the predatory aims of the imperialist slaughter, joined the revolutionary movement of the proletariat, to which he remained true right up to the end of his life.

The Bulgarian government denounced him sa being one of the organizers of the explosion in the cathedral of Sofia, and the fascist militia surrounded the house in which he lived and fired upon it for several hours. Comrade Minkov, along with five other comrades who did not wish to be taken alive by the Zankov hangmen, courageously resisted up to the last.

Actors Strike "His Queen."

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Actors' Equity Association (actors' union), pulled its members off the production of "His Queen" at the Hudson Theater because the management failed to put up a financial guarantee for salaries after two requests from Equity delegates. The union refuses to take a chance for its members not getting their pay.

Meeting of The International Peasants' Council

By N. ORLOV (Moscow)

ON April 17th, the plenary meeting of the International Peasant Council, which met on April 9, and sat for a week, completed its work.

The International Peasant Council is still a very young organization; it has only existed for a year and a half. During this short time it has by no means been able completely to develop its work. As yet the I. P. C. is far from having its own organizations in every country. There are still many countries in which it has no organizing groups. In these circumstances, a numerous attendance at the plenary meeting was hardly to be reckoned with.

Nevertheless the actual attendance at the plenary meeting surpassed all expectations. Seventy-eight delegates from 38 countries were present at the plenary meeting, 49 with power to vote and 29 with only consultative power. All the most important countries of Europe were represented (Germany, France, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Ireland, Roumania, Yugo-Slavia, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Lithuania, Esthonia and Carpathian Russia). There were also representatives from America (United States, Mexico, Canada), from Asia (India, Indonesia, Japan, Turkey, Persia, China, Korea), and from North Africa (Algeria and Egypt).

The most important work of the plenary meeting was done in its commissions. In a series of reports which the delegates laid before these commissions, they gave one another information as to the position of the peasant movement, and worked out a platform for the demands of the peasantry and a series of questions of organization corresponding to the conditions in each individual country.

The chief merit of the plenary meeting consists in the fact that it exactly determines the character of the work which the I. P. C. and its adherents are to carry on among the peasantry. Up to the time of the plenary meeting, there was no unanimity in this question. There were comrades who wanted to construct the peasant organizations as a kind of party organizations and to give them a clearly pronounced political character.

Other comrades endeavored to group the peasantry chiefly on the basis of economic needs and to give their organizations rather an economic character. The plenary meeting struck out on the only correct middle line: it resolved that the "peasants' unions" to be called into being by the I. P. C. should have no firmly pronounced political character as this would render it more difficult to embrace in the ranks of the I. P. C. all the fairly manifold groups of the peasantry which could join a more elastic organization after the manner of a non-party peasant union. It was easy enough to come to an agreement on this platform; the experiences of a year and a half of the movement carried enough powers of conviction.

Among the resolutions of the plenary meeting another important one must be noted. The I. P. C. does not lay particular stress on the formation of organizations and associations of its own, but chiefly on encouraging work within the already existing peasant parties and groups. The chief object should be, not to split these organizations nor to create new organizations which would necessarily be weak at first, but to capture, if not the whole movement, at least its most important part, and to impart to this section of the movement as revolutionary a character as possible.

As a young and therefore still weak organization, the I. P. C. did not wish to split up its work into too many directions at first. It has therefore in its early days deliberately refrained from work in the colonial countries, as it was anxious first of all to consolidate its position in the European countries, where it can much more easily find co-workers. Now it can already register some success in this field of action, some positions have been conquered, and therefore the plenary meeting considered it possible to extend its work to the more distant countries of Asia, Africa and America.

On the other hand, because of the necessity of economizing its forces, the I. P. C. did not, during the first year and a half, concern itself with work among the women in the villages and among the peasant youth. At its last session, the plenary meeting considered it possible to make a start now on these two kinds of work and to carry them on energetically, and it addressed itself to the peasant women and to the youth of the villages in special proclamations.

In general it can be maintained that the plenary meeting achieved some very important work, the results of which will be evident in a very short time in the activities of all the organizations affiliated to the I. P. C.

Ammunition for the Workers' Arsenal

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

Mortgaged Homes.

WHILE glib salesmen tour the working class districts of America with fine sounding "own-your-own-home" propositions, workers who now own (technically) their homes find it difficult to refrain from giving violent expression to their emotions. What good is it to you to have a property title in your pocket when the property is mortgaged up to the hilt?

The department of commerce bureau at Washington has recently published a volume entitled "Mortgages on Homes in the United States, 1920"—which reveals (where it tries to hide) the precariousness and uncertainty which charecterize the living conditions of the workers, as well as the poor farmers.

Most workers do NOT own homes, mortgaged or unmortgaged, but are obliged to pay rent to some landlord—who "owns for a living," while they simply toil. The total number of homes not on farms in the United States in 1920, as shown by the returns of the fourteenth census, was 17,600,472, and of this number 10,188,111 were rented, whereas only a little over 7,000,000 were owned. It will be clear to all that a big proportion of those who own their own homes are capitalists. Thus the great majority of working class families lives in homes (or flats, or "furnished rooms") for which the landlord takes a regular monthly toll of rent.

And how about the 7,041,283 home-owners? Of these owned homes, 2,735,668 were mortgaged, the total mortgage debt for owned homes not on farms amounting to over six billion dollars. It does not take any unusual imagination to deduce that the mortgaged homes include most of those owned by workers, while the unencumbered property is substantially the property of the idle class. The interest on that 6 billion dollar debt constitutes a steady drain on the narrow earnings of the workers. It is really rent insofar as the family budget is concerned.

All this refers to homes not on farms. The volume issued by the census bureau has very little to say about the mortgaged farmers, enough haps there is a reason. No mention is made of the great and growing mass of pauperized tenant farmers. But aobut the mortgaged farmers, enough is said to point out that the estimated mortgage debt of owned mortgaged farms and homes expanded from $2,133,000,000 in 1890, to $11,314,000,000 in 1920, an increase of 430.5 per cent. This increase cannot be adequately explained by the growth of the population (which has been relatively small in rural districts), nor by increased value of the property, nor by decline in the value of the dollar.

The fourteenth census was taken in 1920, on the crest of the prosperity wave based on post-war inflation. Authoritative figures are yet to be compiled which will tell the story of the depression which followed, when millions of poor farmers were ruined when unencumbered property became mortgaged property, when mortgages were foreclosed overnight, when mortgage farmers became tenant farmers, when tenant farmers left their farms in despair and migrated to the city to become wage slaves. The condition revealed in the volume on "Mortgages on Homes in the United States, 1920," is bad enough, but it in no way indicates the extent of subjection to bankers and money lenders to which the workers and poor farmers of this country have now been reduced.

LEE'S PEACE CONFAB GETS LAUGH

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Among spokesmen of railroad labor in Washington the invitation issued by W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, to the executives of 50 chief railroads and the executives of all national railroad labor organizations to gather in a peace parley under his chairmanship, is not taken seriously.

Organized railroad workers look upon Lee as a sick man who has long been an absolute autocrat in his own union, and who has in recent years become erratic in his judgments. He does not co-operate with the other unions in their general policy. They look upon the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen as an organization in which factional differences have made a consistent policy difficiut in recent years. Some of them anticipate Lee's resignation, should he secure re-election at the convention now in session in Cleveland, and the selection of Vice President W. N. Doak as his successor. Doak would carry on the Lee tradition.

Late reports by Lee claim a membership of 180,000 for his organization—this being much larger than that of any of the other railroad brotherhoods.

ST. PAUL [illegible]NISTS DEMAND CROUCH A[illegible]UMBULL RELEASE FROM MILITARY PRISON TORTURE

By O. R. VOTAW.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 25.—The membership of Capitol City Lodge No. 459, International Association of Machinists, are solidly opposed to the capitalist court martial of Privates Crouch and Trumbll, and demand their immediate release.

The following resolution was signed and introduced by twenty-two members and was adopted by unanimous vote:

"WHEREAS, Privates Crouch and Trumbull of the U. S. army have received inhuman sentences of forty years and twenty-six years at the hands of a military court martial at Schoffield barracks, Honolulu, Hawaii, and

"WHEREAS, The only offense of which these soldiers have been accused is that of holding opinions differing from those of their accusers and those whom they serve, and of possessing literature and being members of the Hawaiian Communist League, all of which they openly proclaimed, and

"WHEREAS, These soldiers by their actions have violated no law either civil or military, and were entirely within their rights as American citizens, and

"WHEREAS, Crouch and Trumbull were convicted on the evidence of a spy sent purposely to gain their confidence and perfect a case against them, and

"WHEREAS, The sentences are of a severity seldom inflicted upon even hardened criminals for violent crimes, and the whole proceeding is a plain case of suppression of freedom of speech and even of opinion by military officers who have grossly abused their authority to prevent the spread of intelligence in the ranks of the army; therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, That we, members of Capitol City Lodge No. 459, International Association of Machinists, in regular meeting assembled this 21st day of May, 1925, protest the unjustifiable, savage court martial that condemned Privates Crouch and Trumbull to sentences that amount to a living death in military prison; and be it

"RESOLVED, That while the sentences have been reduced to three years and one year, we will be satisfied with nothing less than immediate release of these soldiers on the grounds that they were acting entirely within their rights; and be it further

"RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be sent to the labor press and to our senators and representative in congress."

At the same meeting the lodge unanimously nominated for re-election as business agent of District No. 77, Brother Herman Husman, who is one of the left wing machinists of this district.

The machinists' union locals of the Twin Cities are making a drive for organization of all machinists and automobile machinists, and in this are led by the left wingers.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE liberals may not be good for much, but they do a lot of harm to the revolutionary movement. A liberal is liable to be a pacifist in the piping days of peace, tho he usually finds some excuse to turn jingo when the bugles of war begin to blow. It does not take an extra good memory to remember some outstanding examples of the truth of this contention. When the late war broke out, most of the pacifists suddenly discovered what the house of Morgan knew right along, viz. that it was in the interests of democracy that the allied powers should win.

RIGHT and left wing liberals began to throw themselves at President Wilson. Oswald Garrison Villard, was willing to talk peace but he placed his pacifism on the shelf until the war was over. Upton Sinclair got out a magazine to boost the war and advertise his literary concoctions. Many other liberals did worse, if possible. Liberals have their uses to the capitalists even in the intervals between wars.

THE China Press, an organ of American imperialism, published in Shanghai, quotes gratefully from the New Republic of New York a lengthy article written by a liberal on the question of civil liberty in Russia. Nobody, least of all a Communist will claim that there is democracy in Russia, that bastard sham which is the pride of the bourgeoisie where they are still virile enough to afford such a luxury. What exists in Russia is a dictatorship of the workers and peasants and not only do Communists make no attempt to hide this fact, but they glory in its existence so much that they advertise the fact and insist on its acceptance for the transition period between the seizure of power by the workers and the flowering of Communism as a cardinal principle of Communist policy.

DICTATORSHIP is not democracy. But in actual practice what is the difference between the dictatorship in Russia and the thing called democracy, that exists in the United States and in England? In the Soviet Union the great majority have decided to run their own country, at the same time taking all governmental power away from the minority which previously owned and governed. This is majority rule, but it is not democracy, tho it sounds very much like it. It sounds good to the ears of the exploited Chinese workers, therefore, the canny capitalist sheet publishes the article against Russia from the liberal New Republic, and says to the

Oil Trust Exploits Teapot Dome While Courts Delay Action

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The federal grand jury today resumed consideration of the government's case against former Secretary of the Interior Fall, Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny, accused of conspiracy to defraud the United States in leasing of oil lands in California and Wyoming.

Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, the government's special oil counsel, said they hoped to obtain indictments before the end of the week. The first indictments were dismissed by the supreme court on technical grounds.

No Action On Fosdick.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 25.—The presbyterian general assembly, in session here today adopted the report of the committee on bills and overtures recommending that no action be taken relative to the request of the First Presbyterian Church, New York City, for approval of its action in the Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick case.

Arrest for Violation of State Law Banned by Strike Injunction

NEW YORK, May 25.—Unlicensed engineers scabbing in the strike of union engineers against a group of big ice companies are protected by an injunction issued by supreme court Justice McCrete of Brooklyn, against arrest for violation of the law requiring engineers on stationary engines and steam boilers to pass examinations and take out licenses.

The injunction was obtained by the Knickerbocker Ice Co., the Putnam Coal and Ice Co., the Ice Services Co. and the Reubel Coal and Ice Co., that serve Brooklyn with 80 per cent of its ice and that are now fighting their employes' demand for the $9 and 8-hour day and the 6-day week.

ANOTHER STANDARD OIL CO. WORKER KILLED BY "LOONEY GAS" POISON

NEW YORK, May 25.—Lead poisoning has taken the life of another Standard Oil worker, Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, city toxicologist at Bellevue Hospital revealed, after autopsy on the viscera of Anatose Levanus, laborer on the Bayonne docks of the oil company.

Supplementing Gettler's report, Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, said there was yet no certainty whether the lead poisoning came from handling tetraethyl lead but further examination of the man's organs will be undertaken to find out the exact cause. Tetraethyl lead from the company's plant at Bawway, was shipped by way of the Bayonne docks. Eleven workers had previously been killed by lead poisoning.

STEPHENSON, CHARGED WITH RAPE AND MURDER, TAKEN TO NEW PRISON

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 25.—Handcuffed to each other, D. C. Stephenson, ku klux klansman and manufacturer, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry, charged with the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, in custody of Sheriff Omer Hawkins and three deputies today were taken to Noblesville, Ind., the trio will go on trial at Noblesville, probably in October.

The case was venued to Hamilton county by Judge James A. Collins in criminal court here Saturday following filing a motion for the change by defense council.

Miss Oberholtzer took poison after an alleged attack by Stephenson. Stephenson refused her medical aid she said, before her death.

MINERS' PARADES BREAK NON-UNION OPEN SHOP DRIVE

Alex Howat Leads the Fight in Kansas

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Kans., May 25.—The open shop drive against the United Mine Workers of District 14 have been stopped by mass demonstration of parades by union miners led by Alexander Howat, fighting chief of the Kansas miners.

Yesterday at Crowberg camp, the non-union stronghold, six hundred automobiles each loaded with union miners turned out and paraded around the non-union camps while out attending a picnic.

At the picnic Howat, Phil Callery and board members of District 14 talked to a crowd of 5,000 miners and their families. Alex Howat received an ovation when he took the platform and he was enthusiastically supported with repeated applause as he pleaded for a united front of all labor against the assaults of capital and for a United Mine Workers Union 100 per cent organized.

The industrial court law, now somewhat battered, the open shop and the open shop operators were roundly denounced.

ARREST OF UNION MEN FOLLOWS FAKE BLAST WHICH HURTS NOBODY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., May 25.—Mine strike trouble broke out anew here early today with the bombing of two houses of miners at Glendale, a smill mining town just outside this city. No one was injured. Five arrests followed of union miners altho it can hardly be said that coal miners are not able to use explosives with more efective results.

North Pole Fliers Still Missing, Say Reports from Oslo

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 25.—Hope for the safety of Captain Roald Amundsen and his companions on the polar flight gave way to apprehension today.

The steamer Hobby, one of the two patrol ships that preceded the airplanes to the rim of the polar ice, has returned to Wellman Bay without word, according to news agency advices from Spitzbergen via Oslo.

Commander K. Prestrud, naval attache of the Norwegian legation here, who accompanied Captain Amundsen to the south pole in 1912, said in an interview today:

"There is as yet no reason for anxiety. Amundsen won't come back without getting observations to prove he actually reached the pole, otherwise his results would be practically valueless. Taking such observations might require three or four days as in the case of the south pole.

"If something has gone wrong, we might have to wait three or four months without hearing from the party, but the members are fully equipped to make the 400 mile walking trip to Cape Columbia and can do it."

Try Iron Manufacturers.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The federal government was successful today in the supreme court fo the United States in a movement to have removed from Illinois to Ohio for trial F. C. Rutz, R. R. Fountleroy, J. R. Steneck and Harry C. Wanner, indicted with 43 other persons and 47 corporations with having violated the anti-trust laws by forming an illegal combination in restraint of trade in malleable iron castings.

WITHDRAW ARMY, HAITIANS TELL U.S. GOVERNMENT

American Imperialism Rules by Bayonet

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 25.—A petition urging that a general election of members of the Haitian legislature be held Jan. 10, 1926, has been presented to Secretary of State Kellogg by Pierre Hudicourt, representing the Union Patriotique D'Haiti. Hudicourt charges that Louis Borno, "president" of the fake government of Haiti, is controlled by the United States army authorities. He asked that American military forces be withdrawn.

Writers Jailed.

Six journalists are in jail in Haiti, says Hudicourt, at the order of "President" Borno, who is upheld by American machine guns. These news writers and editors have dared to point out that Borno's regime is one of force, that it is unconstitutional and in defiance of the will of the people. One of them was jailed after printing an account of the fate that befell a Swedish king, four centuries ago, when he oppressed his people. This reference to Swedish history was called an incitement to murder of Borno. No indictment has yet been lodged against any of the prisoners, who were arrested in December and January.

Hudicourt went to the state department, and talked with Kellogg. He handed Kellogg a memorandum prepared by the Haitian workers' envoy, setting forth at length the facts as to the suppression of their liberties and legal rights and the need for an order from the American military "high commissioner" to Borno to force the holding of elections for the national assembly, according to the constitution.

American Guns Control.

Smedley D. Butler, now director of police in Philadelphia, but then major of marines, was the officer who, in the spring of 1917, "entered the hall of the Haitian national assembly with a score of armed gendarmes and dispersed the members thereof," according to this memorandum. Since 1917 a council of state, whose 21 members are nominated and dismissed by the president of Haiti, who is a puppet of the American commander, have performed the legislative jobs. On April 10, 1922, 14 of these appointed officials chose Borno as president for a four-year term.

Hudicourt asks Kellogg to have Borno instructed to hold "a real election for a constitutional legislative body," by issuing a call on Oct. 10, making it possible to inaugurate a new government on Jan. 10 next. Borno proposes to have his own re-election assured by his own hand-picked council. He changed the constitution assured by his own hand-picked and dismissed 7 of his councillors because they were not loyal enough to himself, and his masters, the U. S. army officers.

U. S. General Rules.

"In fact," the memo explains, "the American general now high commissioner to Haiti, concentrates in his own hands all the powers of the country. The de facto president depends upon him for everything. Under the provisions of an agreement signed in 1918, by Borno, then secretary of state, and Mr. Bailly Blanchard, minister of the United States to Haiti, no act, no law can be enacted by the council of state without the preliminary consent of the American legation (now the American high commissioner). Even the nomination of members of the council should receive the previous approval of Gen. Russell."

Storm Sweeps Texas Town.

SWEETWATER, Tex., May 25—Two buildings were demolished and windows broken throughout the town by a windstorm early today. Temperatures dropped 37 degrees in less than an hour. The wind was followed by a heavy rain.

BELGIAN POLITICIANS UNABLE TO FORM A STABLE GOVERNMENT

BRUSSELS, May 25—The Belgian parliament will probably be dissolved following the forced resignation of Premier Van De Vyvere last week, when the chamber of deputies voted no confidence in his government.

A cabinet formed outside the political parties, or a ministry recruited from catholics, liberals and socialists were talked of as other alternatives.

The Van De Vyvere cabinet fell when Burgomaster Max of Bursseis leader of the liberals, withdrew his support.

ASKS BOYCOTT OF DANISH SHIPS TO AID BIG TRANSPORT STRIKE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, May 25.—The International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee, Joseph Stone, secretary, has issued the following call to the marine workers of this country, emphasizing the need for united action internationally in aid of the Danish transport strike:

To All Marine Workers in the United States!

Comrades: The marine workers in Denmark are on strike. The Norwegian marine workers are out in a sympathy strike with the workers in Denmark. The German and all other European transport workers will, in all probability call a sympathetic strike.

The International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee calls upon all the American seamen to boycott the Danish ships. The longshoremen must not discharge cargoes on vessels under the Danish flag. No seaman shall sign on a Danish vessel.

The Danish seamen are striking for better conditions and we must help them. To load a Danish vessel, while the Danish transport workers are on strike means that you are scabbing on the Danish workers.

The International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee is for international unity. It is for the amalgamation of all marine workers in the United States into one industrial union of marine workers. In the marine transport industry we stand for an International Marine Transport Workers' Union thruout the world. International unity is a necessity.

For united action,

JOSEPH STONE, secretary.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR CONVENTION SHOWS UP BANKRUPTCY OF THE OFFICIALDOM

By J. S. OTIS.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 25.—Out of the 180 delegates to the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor which has recently adjourned, a large portion were either business agents or paid officials in some capacity. The convention was another demonstration of the bankruptcy of the trade union officialdom.

At no other time after the first day's session were there more than 125 delegates out of the 180 present. Of course a convention hall is a monotonous place to be when there are nice clubs where a card game or a pre-Volstead drink will not be interfered with.

Lots of Words—Little Action.

To an observer the opening speech of President Maurer would lead one to believe the convention would go to bat with the employers and capitalist class in general on the daily needs of the workers. He warned the convention that it would either build or go backward and that standing still is a backward step. International capitalism, along with the unemployment in the coal and textile industries, was brot to the attention of he delegates.

But the written report touched on none of these problems. The report contained a long summary of the action of the last legislative session, the manner in which the child labor amendment was deefated, the stealing of the workmen's compensation increase bill but that is where it ended. The struggle that the miners are waging against the "open shop" coal operators, the unemployment in both the coal fields and other industries the official report had no mention of, and recommneded no organization measures to rally the workers against the above.

Need Labor Party to Solve Problems.

To effectively meet these problems also necessitates an independent political party thru which the workers can express themselves—a Labor Party. In place of methods to organize for a fight against the "open shoppers" the attention of the convention was drawn to the dangers of Super-Power.

The left wing severely criticized this report, to which Maurer replied the criticism was justified, but went on to claim that super-power was a bigger and more important issue to the workers. In the meantime as far as Maurer is concerned the workers can go hungry, and have their organizations weakened or destroyed by the "open shop" campaign. Such destruction to be legalized by legislation.

Two whole days out of the four during which the convention proceeded

BLACKLIST SCHEME IS TRIED ON THE DOWELL, ILLINOIS COAL MINERS

DOWELL, ILL, May 25.—A notice has been put up by the Union Colliery Company at their Kathleen mine at Dowell, Ill., to the following effect:

"All men looking for employment at this mine shall sign an application card, which shall be forwarded to the office in St. Louis, Mo. The hiring of men shall be done thru the office in St. Louis, Mo."

The above notice is nothing more than a blacklist scheme. At their office in St. Louis they will procure the record of each applicant. And if the applicant has been a "good fellow," never caused any trouble to his former employer, he shall be consigned to the job. But if he fails to come up to their standard, having fought for his rights—as all workers should do—then he will be turned down.

The local union has put up a notice at the mine, stating that a fine shall be put on all men signing the application for a job.

ANTI-EVOLUTION LAW FOUGHT AT DAYTON HEARING

Grand Jury Indicts John T. Scopes for Teachings

DAYTON, Tenn., May 25.—A special session of the Rhea county grand jury in session here today returned an indictment against John T. Scopes, high school teacher, for teaching evolution to his pupils in violation of a state law recently passed by the Tennessee legislature.

The trial of Scopes will probably begin on June 15. The law under which Scopes is to be indicted, declares, "Be it enacted that it shall be unlawful for any teacher in any of the universities, normals and all other public schools of the state which are supported in whole or in part by public school funds, to teach any theory that denies the story of the divine creation of man as taught in the bible, and to teach instead that man has descended from a lower order of animals."

At the grand jury sitting today the defense, which is to be represented by Clarence Darrow and other prominent lawyers, will appeal to the state constitution, which declares that the legislature "shall foster science." The defense will charge that the anti-evolution law is a violation of the state constitution.

The court room here holds only 100 people, and the Dayton business men, many of whom supported the law which abolishes the teaching of evolution, are devising ways and means to accomodate the huge crowds which are expected to attend the trial. The yard around the court house will be fitted with chairs, and electric amplifiers are to be installed to carry the proceedings to the auditors.

The business men have held a meeting at which they discussed ways of housing the crowds.

"B. & O." BILL CONCEALS HIS SURE DEFEA

Report 1,370 Lead fo Anderson in I. A. M.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 25.—Altho the votes are all in and counted since Friday night, May 22, the Johnston machine in the International Association of Machinists are trying to cover up the unquestioned election of J. F. Anderson, his centrist opponent supported by the left wing, while the Johnston gang calculates what move to make in stealing the election.

16,323 Against Bill's 14,953.

On Thursday night, May 21, the count stood 16,323 for Anderson and 14,953 for Johnston. But about that time the Johnston machine declared a sort of martial law and announced that no results would be given out until May 27. Evidently Johnston figures that during the meanwhile some way of throwing out Anderson votes can be discovered.

In preparation for this steal his gang is officially claiming that Johnston won "by about a thousand" over Anderson. Apparently it is going to require a demonstration of force to pry Johnston out of office even the he was beaten in the election, and the left wing is determined that no stone shall be left unturned or unthrown to drive "B. & O. Bill" out of office.

Tries To Split Anderson Group.

Johnston, while claiming the election for himself, is trying, as reported previously in the DAILY WORKER, to split the Anderson forces by conceding the election of Hannon of the centrist opposition to the vice-presidency and Fry as delegate to the A. F. of L. convention.

Johnston's gang also claim that Secretary Davison of malodorous banking fame has won by over 2,000 and Editor Hewitt by about the same number and that Hannon would be the only one in the new executive council not of his own gang, and by handing Hannon the job Johnston expects to win his more or less open support.

The whole family of interested officialdom is swarming into Washington to fight the matter out in hotel lobbies.

FOUR BLACKSHIRTS IN QUAKER CITY NOW NURSING SORE HEADS

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—Four Italian fascists are mourning the entrance of Italy into the world war, today, as a result of a clash with Italian workers who did not see any reason why they should rejoice because their ruling class saw fit to support the one set of capitalist plunderers against the other in May 1915, almost one year after the opening guns were fired in the world war.

The Philadelphia fascisti, backed by the local capitalists, advertised a parade in honor of Italy's entrance into the war. The papers carried advertisements, for two weeks prior to May 24, the date set. But only seventeen Italians showed up. Those were attacked by anti-fascist workers and four blackshirts were taken to the hospital. The parade continued with the aid of police.

One radical worker was arrested and is still in jail.

WAGE CUT ANTHRACITE OPERATOR WHIPPED BY MILITANT COAL MINERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa. May 25—Managers of the big Jermyn coal mine in Old Forge have surrendered to their union workers and resumed operation at the wage scale called for in the contract.

The miners quit four months ago when told to load a half a carload extra per day without pay. Several weeks later the company offered a flat 10 percent cut instead.

A small group of pro-company men voted to accept the offer but two days later a much larger meeting rescinded this action and the mine remained closed till the company yielded.

Getting a DAILY WORKER sub or two, will make a better Communist of you.

Statement of Progressive Miners' Committee on District 26, United Mine Workers of America.

The struggle against the wage cuts in this district led by the Progressive Miners against monumental obstacles, such as company gunmen, soldiers and the government agencies, has received the open admiration of fair-minded people thruout the world.

FRENCH BAR COMMUNIST ORGAN, 'L'HUMANITE,' FROM MOROCCO AS TROOPS CONDEMN RIFF CAMPAIGN

RABAT, French Morocco, May 25.—The Communist newspaper L'Humanite of Paris was barred from sale or distribution in the French Moroccan zone by official order. The order stated that "certain articles in the newspaper have tended to provoke French soldiers to disobedience during the present operations, and are of a nature to threaten the discipline and safety of the troops.

The Communist Party organ has been widely read by the French soldiers in Morocco and much sympathy with the native Riffians who have been attacked at the behest of French imperialists has been expressed thruout the army.

French Retreat.

French troops under Colonel Freydenburg are fighting the Riffians along the Ouergha river, especially in and around the town of Gara des Mezziat.

In this report on the military situation Marshal Lyautey admits that the Riffian offensive has not been checked. It is now admitted that the Bibane and Tanouat heights have been captured twice in one week, only to be lost again.

The outposts have also been left to themselves, after being revictualed and are again surrounded by the Riffians. Gen. de Chambrun has been succeeded in command by Gen. Daugan. The French have retreated to the Ouergha river, "for strategical purposes," says the French communique.

Chamber Postpones Discussion.

PARIS, France, May 25.—By a vote of 312 to 178 the chamber of deputies today postponed until Wednesday the discussion of voting credits for the French military campaign in Morocco.

Premier Herriot has declared that he approves the government's invasion of northern Africa, and will throw the support of the radical socialist deputies to a continuation of the imperialistic invasion.

Ben Ghabrit, the Mohammedan leader, who was made minister plenipotentiary of France, has been commissioned by the Painleve cabinet to conduct negotiations with the Riffian leader Abd-el-Krim, in the name of the "sultan of Morocco." The sultan has given France the mandate to rule Morocco, and France considers Krim "technically in revolt against the sultan."

The chamber of deputies opened today. The Communist deputies will oppose granting credits for the Riffian campaign, and will condemn the entire project as a move of the French capitalists to subjugate the native Africans in order to exploit their labor and natural resources.

Premier Painleve has drafted a bill for added appropriations for the Moroccan war, and it is this bill which will be discussed Wednesday.

FOSTER SPEAKS WEDNESDAY EVE. AT T. U. E. L. MEET

The British Left Wing Subject of Lecture

All workers interested in the labor movement are invited to be present tomorrow evening, Wednesday, May 27, at the lecture of William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, at the league's monthly meeting in Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western avenues. There is no admissoin charged.

Foster will speak upon the Minority Movement of the Trade Unions of England, and as he attended the last conference of the English left wing and recently returned from Europe, Foster is able to give intimate pictures of the great sweep of radicalism now rising thru the English working class.

Besides this, the T. U. E. L. regular business at the meeting will include an interesting report from the T. U. E. L. needle trades section upon the situation in that industry. Similar meetings are held every month, on the last Wednesday of the month. Militants should miss none of these valuable assemblies.

Mussolini Visits D'Annunzio.

ROME, May 25—The question of the whereabouts of Premier Mussolini was ended today when it was learned he was visiting Gabriele D'Annunzio, poet aviator. It was thought the visit was in connection with the celebration of Italy's entrance into the world war.

Bankruptcy of Labor Officialdom Exposed in Penn.

were wasted with speakers on everything but the problems the workers are confronted with. A representative of the Workers Health Bureau who was one of the few that spoke on the daily problems was given time near the adjournment hour when a convention is restless and most of the delegates gone.

Resolutions Hastily Handled.

Only a few hours were devoted to resolutions. One was introduced by the militant miners who realize the need of unity with the railroad workers calling on the federation to use its influence with the railroad unions to stop hauling of scab coal and scabs. This resolution was adopted.

But the resolution introduced by the left wing that had for its purpose to put the federaion on a fighting basis by inaugurating a free speech campaign in front of the mill gates at McKeesport was referred to the A. F. of L. thereby passing the buck on the grounds of no jurisdiction.

Nothing Practical Done to Beat Gag Law.

A state wide campaign for the repeal of the Flynn anti-sedition law proposed by the left wing delegates was accepted. It is not the first time however, that the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor has accepted such resolution and the method of lobbying with capitalist legislators utilized for all it was worth to put it into effect. No less than three hundred labor representatives at one time went to Harrisburg to plead. It availed nought. The law still remains in force, the past exeprience showing that the time is rotten ripe for a much more aggressive form of campaign based on the mass power of the workers if results are to be obtained.

Another proposal to put the federation on the map as a fighting organization was defeated. This was the holding of the next convention in the city of McKeesport, one of the hell holes in Pennsylvania. After the business agent and paid official delegates heard of the good beer in Erie, the beautiful lake, the beach and that Canada was only 26 miles away they almost put the convention into a turmoil.

It is such conventions as this where highly paid delegates come to look for pleasure instead of taking up the problems of the workers that is building the left wing. As the convention proceeded the left wing grew in numbers and became more and more a factor. Altho it was small it asserted itself and challenged the pleasure hunters. This left wing may prevent many a nice party next year!

Worker Killed While Pulling the World's Fastest R. R. Train

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 25—The Twentieth Century Limited, fastest train in the world, hurtled through Amboy today at a mile a minute clip, headed for Syracuse.

As the locomotive roared through the village, Edward H. Peck, 55, of Buffalo, engineer of the crack train, leaned out the window of the cab, watching the escape valve as he pushed the injector to force water into the boilers. He was struck by a water plug and fell back into the cab unconscious and dying.

Chinese masses: "See, what even the liberals think of the Soviet regime!"

THE liberals are very useful to the capitalists. At critical moments, with very few exceptions, they flop over to the side to which they really belong. Take the tribe who profess to be so much concerned about civil liberties! Naturally, in a capitalist state the workers are always the sufferers, and most of the efforts of the civil libertarians are directed towards making the master class live up to their own laws. But everybody who understands anything about sociology knows that there is a constant struggle going on between the possessing class and the dispossessed class. In this struggle it is impossible to be neutral. One must take either one side or the other.

THE capitalists have the government on their side. They make the laws and obey them or violate them, according to taste and requirement. The Communists say there cannot be any real universal freedom as long as class rule exists. Governments are organs of repression, even the Soviet government. It exists to protect the workers and peasants rule as the governments of England and the United States exist to protect capitalist rule. That's all there is to it. The liberals want to lift the workers into the cloud lands of fancy, where they picture an imaginary world. They want to convince them that what is wrong with our present state of society is not capitalism, but certain capitalists who have not learned to do their robbing painlessly.

SOVIET RUSSIA is engaged in the difficult task of laying the basis for a socialist economy. The rest of the capitalist world is in opposition. The bourgeoisie of all nations, no matter how they quarrel among themselves are united against the workers' and peasants' government. They know that the Red Republic is a standing challenge to them and a beacon light to the rest of the proletarian world. Therefore, they are burning up money in financing plots to overthrow the Soviet power, and placing every obstacle in the way of Soviet progress. They have their conspirators inside Russia as well as outside. What is the Soviet government going to do about it? Throw away its defensive weapons and allow the czarists who have trodden over the workers and peasants of Russia for centuries to return to power?

IF the Russian revolutionists had done this, snow white lilies would now be sprouting over the graves of every bolshevik leader whose name is today anathema to the capitalist class, and the liberals would admit that the bolsheviks were nice fellows but were not "practical." Fortunately for the working class the Russian revolution kept their guns and used them on the enemy. The result is that today they are governing one sixth of the earth's surface. They have proven themselves to be "practical" but they are not "nice."

THE "Anglo-Saxon" New Republic claims that the Russians never experienced freedom of speech and of the press "as they exist (except in wartime) in Anglo-Saxon countries." This is ku klux klan, Nordic hokum. Ask the Irish, Egyptian, Hindoo and other oppressed peoples of the British empire what civil liberty means under the Union Jack? Ask the Hawaiians, Filipinos or Cubans, what civil liberty means under the American flag? Even in England today, Harry Pollitt, Communist, is kidnapped by a fascist gang and the court laughs it off as a good joke. In the same "Anglo-Saxon" country, Communists get six months in jail for making a speech against capitalism. The liberals will not fool the revolutionary working class with their protests against the absence of civil liberty for the bourgeoisie in Russia. This is but a smoke screen to hide an attack on Soviet Russia.

Freight Crash Blocks Traffic.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 25.—With thru passenger trains running hours behind schedule, and freight traffic at a standstill over the middle division, wrecking crews today were working frantically to clear away the debris of last night's midnight crash that killed one and injured two other trainmen, piled an engine and 21 freight cars in kindling wood, and tore out great sections of rails on all four tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad at Bailey station, 20 miles west of here.

'AID THE NOVA SCOTIA MINERS!' APPEAL ISSUED

Call Goes to Labor in All Lands

action by the Canadian Trades Congress, have made the fight keener and harder in every respect.

All Aid to Nova Scotia!

The miners must be supported by the Canadian workers of all trades, together with the workers of the U. S. Their fight is our fight and if they are defeated it will be our turn next.

A militant struggle properly conducted must be continued, and to continue it must be financed. All workers are requested to send financial aid to the address given at the foot of this article.

Masses and Militancy Will Win.

Mass meetings must be arranged thruout the district, the progressive miners must desires the issues, and call upon the officials to properly and militantly lead the miners in the struggle. Mass demonstrations, "parades," must take place thruout the district, and a militant, mass organization of pickets thrown around the miners in each locality.

The white collared scabs tending the pumps, representing the company, must be stopped from working. And it is common knowledge that no pickets can stop scabs from working by merely smiling at them going past.

Workers' Lives Come First.

The company's property is not the first consideration of the pickets, their first consideration must be to win the strike. The wages, conditions, and the lives of the workers themselves depend upon a successful outcome, and human life is the first consideration.

No aid can be expected from the U. M. W. of A. officials. We have at hand a copy of the Miners' Journal. Nowhere in its yellow pages does it even refer to the Nova Scotia situation. The miners can go to hell, as far as John L. Lewis is concerned.

Lewis Paralyzed.

While in Canada, John L. Lewis kowtowed to the government officials, complimented them in every way, but failed to do anything or say anything effectively for the miners.

The morale of the strikers is good, but the tremendous pressure brought to bear must eventually have its effect. The miners, with their wives and families are starving, the company stores are closed against them and the smaller stores have likewise closed and no relief from that source is obtainable.

Mass demonstration, "parades" and militant speaking at meetings will help to keep up the morale of the miners.

Soviet Unions Token of Solidarity.

The present disgraceful attack on the Nova Scotia miners has brought the sympathy of the world to their aid from far off Soviet Russia, the unions have donated and forwarded $5,000.00 to help feed the starving children. This is a glowing tribute to international understanding and class unity, and brings the Russian workers out prominently as the world's leaders in the cause of the working class.

The present strike in Nova Scotia against the 10 per cent reduction in wages is one of many attacks by the beast of Besco during many years, and has resulted in the past, in degradation, disease, starvation, malnutrition and death.

Die Fighting!

The conditions of the miners prior to this strike was deplorable in the extreme. Their living conditions were down to zero, and as one militant progressive miner said, "It is better to starve to death fighting for justice than to starve to death working and yet be unable to make a living."

Thru all the years of bitter struggle in the Nova Scotia field, the many bitter betrayals of the miners by the bureaucracy, the treacherous expulsions of our old fighters, Jim McLachlan and his colleagues who have steadfastly stood in the fight for justice to the miners, find them today in the midst of their industrial battle, determined to win, their slogan no "surrender to the beast" no wage reduction, has cemented them together in a comradely bond that brings forth the open admiration of the workers of the world.

Wall Street Diplomats Fear Red Ambassador's Speech to The Chinese

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the American legation at Peking, China, appoints itself the censor of utterances made by the Soviet ambassador, L. M. Karakhan. It especially objects to statements made in a speech to the students of Tsinghua College, at the invitation of the college president.

This would indicate that Wall Street's diplomats still think they rule unchallenged in the Orient. Or do they fear for their rule? That is more likely.

The dollar diplomats in China should know, if they have not already found it out, that the Chinese revolutionists do not like their speeches. The late American minister, Schurman, now departed for Berlin, where he has been promoted to the post of ambassador, was never known to say anything favorable to the interests of the Chinese people. He was not in China for that purpose. He was there, as his successor is there now, in the interests of the imperialism that seeks to crush the Chinese people.

• • • •

When the American legation protested to the Chinese ministry of foreign affairs against the Soviet ambassador's speech, it was not because Karakhan had said anything inimical to the Chinese, but rather because he had stepped on the toes of the American imperialists. Just one paragraph from what Karakhan said. Here it is:

> "Here, in China, the word 'imperialism' is used very often, and the Chinese people—the revolutionary part—are right when they mean by it every form of oppression, violence and degradation from which this country suffers at the hands of imperialism. To drive out this evil and free their country is the aim of an ever-growing number of Chinese today, and their struggle will have the more chances of success the better and the clearer it will be understood what imperialism is, and in what forms it reveals itself for the most part."

Karakhan was greeted with loud applause when he entered the college hall. He was given an even greater ovation when he left it; all of which was quickly reported by the U. S. secret service to the American legation, that promptly went into hysterics. There will no doubt be a regular tidal wave of editorial attack in the American dollar press against the impertinence of the Chinese students in listening so eagerly to a Soviet spokesman.

The present "socialist" rule in Mexico, for instance, under President Calles, will be held up in contrast. It will be shown that Communists have been expelled from the Mexican labor unions, that all efforts are being made by the Calles regime, under Wall Street guidance to stamp out Communist agitation. Says the Chicago Tribune:

> "Danger to our peace thru red infections from Mexico is not serious, tho if President Calles sees fit to check it from his side of the border the service will be appreciated not merely for the inconvenience it saves our authorities but also as a sign of good feeling on the part of the Mexican government toward us."

Nothing could more clearly indicate the servility of the Calles "socialist" regime to American imperialism than this Tribune editorial; while nothing could better show the friendship of the Chinese for the workers and peasants of the Union of Soviet Republics, than the protest of the American legation at Peking, to the Chinese foreign minister.

• • • •

American workers must not be fooled. The U. S. diplomatic attack on the Chinese indicates that the workers in the Orient are fighting more than ever for their own interests. Praise of Calles' rule shows that the Mexican workers, over their own protest, are being held in leash to the international bankers and oil profiteers of this country. The closing word "us" in the Tribune editorial means the bankers and profiteers of the United States. It cannot mean the workers and poor farmers of the United States who suffer in common with their Mexican comrades.

The events in the Far East, where the revolutionary situation is rapidly developing, would indicate that the regions of the earth where the autocratic rule of "Us" holds sway are rapidly diminishing in extent.

• • • •

The American legation in Peking protests while it can. This only serves to reveal its real mission to the Chinese masses. The workers and peasants of Mexico will in time raise a government to power that will listen to them and not to the gold seekers of Wall Street. Even the workers and poor farmers of the United States will learn that the road to their emancipation lies in the same direction.

Army of Hunger Gets 1,400 More Recruits

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOWELL, Mass., May 25.—The Massachusetts Cotton Mills, largest textile firm in Lowell, has closed down completely. The plant has been running five days a week, with 1,400 workers, less than half the normal number. Misery among the 25,000 cotton workers of Lowell is great for unemployment and part time work are general.

Business Violates Laws.

NEW YORK, May 25.—"Business is living up to the Sherman and Claton (anti-trust) laws as well as the Volstead act is being obeyed," said Federal Trade Commissioner Huston Thompson at a luncheon of the department of research and education of the federal council of churches.

ARNE SWABECK, WORKERS PARTY ORGANIZER, IS UNDER ARREST IN PA.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 25—Arne Swabeck, district organizer for the Workers Party, was arrested and imprisoned at South Brownsville today on a charge of sedition. The Labor Defense Council is looking after the case.

Japan "Registers" Soviet Pact.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 25.—The Japanese government has registered the Russo-Japanese treaty recently concluded in the Far East with the league of nations. According to the Russo-Japanese treaty the Japanese troops evacuated Sakhalin and made arrangements for concesisons and commercial agreements between the two countries.

JENSEN MACHINE MAN SLAMMED IN LOCAL UNION

Lee Green Riddled the Faker's Tirade

Local 62 of the Carpenters' Union listened to a debate between Sands, secretary-treasurer of the district council and brother Lee Green, a rank and file member of the union, at its regular meeting last week; Green, is one of the leaders of the progressive caucus, that is supporting brother Stahl against Harry Jensen for the presidency of the council.

Sand, who is an ex-socialist, delivered the usual tirade against the Communists and particularly against those who are active in the unions. This is where they hit the fakers in the most tender part. He attacked the progressive caucus and made an ass of himself by declaring that "there is now a new organisation being formed under the direction of Moscow, and it is called the caucus." It happens that the caucus is an old institution among the carpenters, so Sand showed mental as well as political bankruptcy in pulling such a boner. Yet he is alleged to be the brain of the Harry Jensen machine.

Exploded Faker's Lies

Brother Green during a speech that took him fully forty five minutes to deliver, exploded the lies peddled out by the faker Sand, particularly the one about the trade union movement in Russia. Green proved that the unions were legal in Russia under the Soviet regime, whereas they were outlawed under the czar. He showed by authentic figures that 97 per cent of the industrial workers of Russia are organized in trade unions;; that officials of the unions are important members of the government and that the Communists in all countries insist that members of their party join the trade unions and become active participants in their activities.

When brother Green got thru talking, the audience applauded. Sentiment for Stahl among the carpenters is so overwhelming that it is impossible for Jensen to win a majority of the votes even with the assistance of the expert counters of "czar" Hutcheson.

LATVIA, TORN FROM RUSSIA, GOES ON ROCKS

Economic Life of Baltic State Is Starving

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Baltic republic of Latvia, lying on the border of Russia, is one of the worst places in the world for workingmen, says Charles Walters, member of the painters' union, returned from a four months' visit with relatives in the land he left 20 years ago.

The once booming industries have gone to pot, he says. Little remains of the great rubber and machinery plants that once were outstanding features of Riga, and the lively harbor activities of former times have waned. Unemployment is rife, wages low, where work is to be had, and the cost of living high.

Walters says the industrial population blames the depression generally on two main causes: (1) The policy of the nationalistic, agrarian government in discouraging industry so that a supply of cheap labor may be assured to the agricultural landlords the government represents; (2) The separation of the little Baltic nation from the economic life of Russia with which it was formerly connected.

Latvia and its great port of Riga are natural outlets for Russian commerce and the policy of nationalistic isolation, which the present government, and its imperialistic backers—France and Poland—insist upon, means starvation for the economic life of the nation.

Walters had his own experiences with the Latvian government when police raided a labor union meeting he was attending and arrested him, with others present, holding him in jail for two days and blackening his eye. Many labor unions are outlawed by the government, he said.

LOCAL PREFERS CHARGES AGAINST 'RINO' CAPPELLINI

Masses of Miners in Hot Resentment

SCRANTON, Pa.—Local Union 699, U. M. W. of A. of Edwardsville, Pa., at a special meeting held last Thursday adopted a motion unanimously to prefer charges against Rinaldo Cappellini, district president, and the majority of the district executive board on grounds of flagrantly violating the district and international law by ordering the duly elected officials of the local deposed and a special held.

This action is the aftermath of the trouble existing at the Woodward colliery. Cappellini revoked the local charter some time ago and deposed Stanley Edmunds and his set of officials as the legal local officers after an outlaw strike had been called by Edmunds. At the same time, Adam Dunn, who had sought office on several occasions, broke away from the local with a set of followers, held "regular" meetings, collected dues and assessments, and classed themselves as the local administration.

Real Dualists Recognized.

Of a membership of 1,700 Dun has but 30 followers. Cappellini recognized Dun as the local President, regardless of the fact that he and his followers "elected" themselves secretly and without the knowledge of the bulk of the membership.

The district board, after several riots occured at Edwardsville, held a three hour session and ordered a special election at the local. Dunn and Edmunds stated their respective cases before the board. The board decided that Dunn and Edmunds shou'd submit a list of candidates and the election should be conducted by the district board. Edmunds refused on the grounds that such action was unconstitutional, as the constitution specifically states charges must be prefered against the local officers in their local union and that the local shall act on these charges.

The "election" was held. Cappellini was in the camp of Dunn. Dunn's followers voted while Edmunds men paraded thru Wilkes Barre and vicinity in protest. Over 1,000 miners of the Edmunds fraction refused to vote and paraded in protest.

Voting Made No Difference

The "official tally" shows that Dunn and his slate received 1022 votes and Edmunds group 1104. (It must be remembered that the membership is but 1700 according to dues payments prior to the trouble, and that Edmunds submitted no slate) On the face of the so-called official returns it is evident that the Edmunds faction were the victors, but Cappellini thinks otherwise as he officially states that Dunn and his group of candidates are the legal local officers.

Edmunds appealed to Lewis and after an intolerable day that well-known faker telegraphed that Cappellini was the district president and any action taken by Cappellini would be concurred in by the international officialdom.

Cheer Attack on Cappellini

Fully 1500 miners packed the Pahukis Hall to hear the latest developments of the case. Great cheers broke forth when the motion was carried that charges be preferred against Cappellini and three of the board members. Wm. J. Brennen, ex-president and now a candidate opposing Cappellini spoke before the local and made a typical fakerish speech. He told the miners that the fight they were waging was a fight to uphold the union laws and to retain the principle of trade unionism in the anthracite coal fields.

George Isaacs, district vice-president also spoke and assured the miners that the Edmunds group was the duly elected officers and urged them to support these officers, urged them to pay their dues to the Edmunds officers and worry about nothing.

Cheer Toohey

Pat Toohey, heading a delegation from another local sent to investigate the Woodward trouble was given an ovation after being introduced as the one who assailed Cappellini, and defended the Woodward miners at a meeting of his local at which Cappellini appeared several weeks ago.

Toohey pointed out that this policy being enforced at Edwardsville was not one of a local character but was the pet policy of Lewis thruout the organization. Recounting the charter revocation of the Kansas miners, Nova Scotia and other instances he urged the miners to view the issue from another angle than that of a local case, but to view the situation nationally and they would find that their own trouble is due to the Lewis policy of charter revocation, overriding the will of the membership and of class collaboration, and that before turmoil in the union dies down that policy of Lewis must be smashed, smashed by the rank and file.

1,500 rebellious miners rose to their feet and applauded when officially speaking for the 900 men of his local. Toohey stated they would go all the way down the line with the Edmunds faction.

WHY NOT THIS, IN PLACE OF BILL GREEN'S MOVIES?

Detroit Auto Workers in Union Campaign

DETROIT, Mich., May 25. — Police again appeared on the scene at the Briggs Manufacturing plant at Harper Ave. when the organisers of Auto Workers Union No. 127 opened up the noonday organization drive before the thousands of workers whose interest in the campaign is at a high pitch. But there was a difference.

At Thursday's meeting the factory dicks attempted to disrupt the meeting and went down to defeat. Police, arriving immediately after the speakers had finished, insisted that the inspector be approached for a permit. They were informed that the drive would continue and that no permits would be asked for.

Federation President Pinched.

At Friday's meeting a squad of police were there before the speakers arrived and when the meeting opened they arrested Frank Martel, president of the Detroit Federaiton of Labor, and Frank Brunton, Secy. of Local 127 Auto Workers' Union.

While they were taking them to jail Alfred Goetz got on the chair and continued the meeting. Some fifty cops soon arrived and attempted to disperse the crowd. Goetz and four others were arrested and held at the station for an hour an a half and then released.

Cops Not Popular—There's a Reason.

At Saturday's meeting some twenty-five or thirty cops were very much in evidence. When the workers left the factory to get their lunches and saw the cops, their anger mounted and they hooted and jeered. They were prepared to take any action that might become necessary to see that the meeting was not disrupted.

However, it was a chastened police department at the meeting. Instead of disrupting the meeting they were there to maintain order and "to keep a passage way open for traffic," as the officer in charge explained.

John Edwards Speaks.

John Edwards was the first speaker and as he mounted the chair the crowd cheered. Thousands of workers listened attentively and showed their appreciation of every point made by the speaker. Frank Martel followed Edwards, and when he stated that the Detroit Federation of Labor would back the right to carry on organisation work with all the strength and power that it could muster it was greeted with a roar of approval.

Then Goetz took the chair. He scored the dicks and police for their past interference and pointed out that this meeting was going forward largely because the Briggs workers had expressed indignation in a very material way because their right to listen to union organizers had been violated by brutal police methods.

Dig In for Big Job.

The campaign to organize the auto workers of Detroit will go forward with increased energy. Everything possible will be done to stop the drastic process of wage reductions, and to improve the situation within the shops. This is one of the most notorious open shop towns in the entire country.

The union is not deceiving itself about the enormity of the task before it, but advantage will be taken of every situation that may arise by Local 127 and there is reason to believe that the union will again become as effective a fighting machine as it was immediately following the world war.

RELIANCE, WYO., MINE REPORTS SHOW WHY HUNDREDS OF MINERS ARE KILLED YEARLY IN THE U. S.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RELIANCE, Wyoming, May 25—The mine inspection reports which are given in this article show very clearly why it is that hundreds of miners are blown up and burnt to death every year in so-called "accidents" which are, in effect, murder.

Recently the Union Pacific Coal company inagugurated a system of inspecting their mines, by which the miners were to select a man to represent the miners and the company to appoint a miner to go along with their safety engineer, and to make a report of their findings direct to the higher officials, showing the condition of the mine and any recommendations.

This was done and reports were submitted. But, coincidently, the newly appointed deputy mine inspector made what he called an inspection. This appointee of the capitalist government, as is customary with his tribe, submitted the following two reports, the first on Reliance Mine No. 1, and the second on Reliance Mine No. 4. These are the sort of "safety" reports whcih send miners to their death without there being anyone hung for murder. The first report says:

"Office of the Chief Inspector of Coal Mines, Rock Springs, Wyo.,
May 2, 1925.

"TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This is to certify that on May 1, 1925, I visited No. 1 mine at Reliance, Wyo., property of the Union Pacific Coal company, accompanied by Mr. William Pryde the foreman of the mine.

"We entered the mine manway and visited every working place in the following entries: No. Seven South Entry, No. Eight South Entry, No. Three North Entry, No. Four North and four and one-half entry, No. Five North Entry, No. Six North Entry, No. Eight North Entry and the first panel No. Ten North Entry.

These entries as they are enumerated represent separate air splits in the system of ventilation. Visited the places where electric hoists are installed and the generator sets furnishing the electric power for the inside workings which were in good condition and cleanliness and very commendable. Rock dusting the haulage roads well applied which in addition to serving the purpose for which it is applied materially aids in the illumination of the mine haulage ways.

"The working places well ventilated and adequate supply of timber kept on hand convenient for working places.

"I exmained the stoppings on No. 2 south, No. 1 north entry, No. 2 north entry and drift entry where fire is sealed off. These stoppings are in good condition and regularly examined day and night.

"The mine was idle when the examination was made and I am advised has been working but one day per week for some weeks past.

"Number of men employed 142. Stock 18.

"Air measurements, main intake 156,360 cubic feet per min. Return 161,860.

"Respectfully submitted, SIGNED—John L. Dykes, Deputy Mine Inspector."

Then the second lying report Inspector Dykes submits:

"Office of the Chief Inspector of Coal Mines, Rock Springs, Wyo.,
May 2, 1925.

"TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This is to certify that on May 2, 1925, I visited Mine No. 4, Reliance, Wyo., property of the Union Pacific Coal Co., accompanied by Mr. William Spence the foreman of the mine. Entered the mine and examined the working places and haulage roads of the following entries: No. 1 South, No. 1 North, No. 4 South and Main Slope workings, No. 2 North entry, No. 3 North, No. 4 North, also visited the hoist room and generator set, which are in good condition and commendable for cleanliness. Ruck dusting in this mine is well under way, and in a short time will be completed. The ventilation is in good condiiton and well cnoducted.

"The timber is used when necessary and the supply adequate kept on hand for working places. Electric lamps are used exclusively in the Reliance mine and all blasting by shot firers when the regular shift is completed.

"This mine also has been working but one day per week for some weeks past. The examination of the mine when the mine was idle.

"No. men employed, 87, No. stock 9.

"Air measurements, intake 63,000; return 63,189.

"Respectfully submitted, SIGNED—John L. Dykes, Deputy Mine Inspector."

But, in flat conflict with the above false reports, the inspection committee, consisting of two miners, one representing the union and one appointed by the Union Pacific Coal company, brot in the following:

"Report of Inspection Committee, Mine No. 1, Reliance, Wyo.,
April 21, 1925.

"1—4th North Entry: Rooms 44 and 45 are 100 to 150 feet ahead of cross cuts. Crosscuts between rooms 43 and 44 too small.

"2—4½ North Entry: Room 38 is 150 feet ahead of air, need curtain.

"3—5th North Entry: Rooms 49 and 50 need ventilation. Room 48 is room driven into pillar, between rooms 42 and 44, both of which have caved in, and this room has broken into caved rooms on each side. This place is dangerous and should be stopped.

"4—6th North entry: Room 44 ahead of air and crosscut to connect air has been abandoned.

"5—8 North entry—Top entry 100 feet and back entry 70 feet ahead of air and no crosscut started.

"6—Northside manway and escapeway: Here we found a naked copper cable carrying 250-volts electricity, unprotected. This is not a manway but is marked as "Manway," and "Escapeway." This line should be fenced off.

"7—As a general rule in Mine No. 1, old cross cuts are not blocked so as to force air to crosscuts at the face, and deflecting brattices on entries are in bad shape.

"8—8 South Entry: Room 19 has bad top and timber of proper length not furnished. Air in rooms on this entry in bad shape, because crosscuts have not been driven.

"SIGNED—Tom Cowan, A. L. Zelher."

"General Suggestions.

"Shots were found tamped in various places in both mines, and also in places shots were found wired together. There is some danger in this practice and we recommend that all shots be tamped and connected up by shot firers, after the men are out of the mine.

"Mine No. 4: Rooms and entries in this mine are very dry and dusty. They should be sprinkled, and also provision made for a proper amount of moisture to be sprayed into the air.

"We believe that safety requires the delivery of caps and powder to the various working places, instead of the present method of men carrying both powder and caps at the mine when all men are entering the mine.

Air Measurements.

"Mine No. 1: Intake exclusive of rock slope, 132,800 feet.

"Air return at manway, 165,600 feet.

"Mine No. 4: Return, 66.600 feet.

"Intake, 61,560 feet.

"SIGNED—A. L. Zelher, Tom Cowan."

"Report of Inspection Committee on Mine No. 4, Reliance, Wyo.,
April 15, 1925.

"1—There is no manway from main parting to outside, nor thru tunnel.

"2.—Trolley wire at parting where man trip is loaded are exposed. These should be properly guarded at all points where men pass under them.

"3—Main hoist is not properly fenced off.

"4—Room 1, first south entry, Rooms A and B turned into pillar toward slope manway have no means of ventilation.

"5—First south entry, first main plane, crossout driven only every 100 feet and no means of ventilation supplied in place of cross cuts. Crosscuts should be driven at 48 foot intervals.

"6—Second south entry, to pentry 140 feet ahead of crosscut, and 90 feet ahead of bottom entry, and no artificial ventilation provided.

"7—Third south entry, rooms 7-8-9-10—are from 120 tho 170 feet advanced with no crosscuts, and no ventilation. Room 6 is also ahead of air. These places should be connected with air at proper intervals or some other means of putting air to face should be provided.

"8—Fourth south top entry, 110 feet ahead of crusscut with no ventilation.

"9—Main Slope, ahead about 160 feet of air with no curtain of brattice to furnish ventilation.

"10—Fourth north top entry, 105 feet ahead of crosscut, and no ventilation, slant from top entry to back entry started 80 feet from heading.

"11—Third north entry, room 8-9-10 not connected with cross cuts and not ventilated.

"12—Third north entry 135 feet ahead of crosscuts, no ventilation.

"13—There is a practice all over the mine of connecting ground wire with rails and laying exposed from entries into rooms. These should be protected in some way so as to eliminate possibility of men or horses from tripping on these wires.

Recommendations.

"1—That no places be driven further ahead of air than distance prescribed by law.

"2—That manway be provided.

"3—That ratificial means of ventilation be provided in places where proper air is not delivered to face in the ordinary manner.

"Respectfully submitted, SIGNED—Tom Cowan, A. L. Zelher."

FARRINGTON IN VIOLATION OF THE AGREEMENT

With Lewis Puts Himself Out of Court

By ALEX. REID

Desperation and panic are seen in the latest move of the fakers of the United Mine Workers. The militant rank and file refuse to be silenced or cowed by the unconstitutional and desperate methods of threats and expulsions of themselves by the fakers.

After a campaign of rule or ruin, Farrington, in abject fear of the rising tide of revolt against his treason to the mine workers, appeals to the "king" of labor fakers, Lewis, to come to his aid and the aid of the bosses generally and the Illinois mine owners in particular.

True to his contemptible reputation, the "king" faker grants to his brother louse, Farrington, the right and powerer to expel the membership by a local at a time or a sub-district, if necessary, to carry his policy into effect.

Demand Farrington's Impeachment

The expulsion of Thompson and Watt, the duly elected president and secretary-treasurer of Sub-District 4, Springfield, and the appointment of a tool who is not even a member of the U. M. W. of A. has created a feeling of disgust thruout the state, and the membership are demanding the impeachment of Farrington, as a result.

The constitution of the U. M. W. of A. is being torn asunder by Farrington in his mad effort to place the militant miners on the defensive and at the same time draw the attention of the miners from his own actions, and to establish his class collaboration policy thruout the district.

R. R. Clearks Hissed Farrington

Farrington has no time to go into the miners' locals to discuss the unemployment question, or any of the miners affairs, but does have the time to go to Kansas City to the clerks convention. But, be it said to the credit of the clerks, that they hissed and booed him and brought it plainly home that even a clerks' convention is no place for such labor fakers as he.

The miners are demanding of you, Farrington, to tell them what proposition you made to the Johnston City miners about the 12 cents per ton reduction. What kind of a proposition did you received from the Old Ben? And why did you advise the acceptance of the reduction when you knew it was plainly a violation of the district agreement?

How About It?

Farrington, the contract specifically provides that existing conditions cannot be changed during the life of the agreement, that would add to the cost of production to the operators or decrease the earning power of the miners.

In the face of this fact, in your treasonable class collaboration policy you ask the men to accept what amounts to a large reduction in wages. The men in the mines now are not receiving a half turn, due to overcrowding the mine, and they are averaging about two days work per week.

The pittance they get for laying in a wet, damp, gas-ridden, foul atmosphere for eight hours, subject to all the dangers of gas and dust explosions, black damp, roof dangers, and occupational diseases, which are many to a coal miner, seems to be too much in view of your advice to accept a 12 cents per ton reduction on the drilling question.

Tried to Break the Wage Front

Don't you know, Farrington, that if the men in Johnston City agreed to accept this reduction the miners over the state would be asked to do likewise wherever conditions would permit? And if this class collaboration policy would succeed, it would be followed by other measures that would soon have the miners of Illinois down to the 1917 scale and standard, or below it.

Not only does this attempted reduction affect the men in Johnston City, but it affects the men in the less economical mines, the miners that are unable to compete now due to physical conditions within the mine, would be further handicapped, and thousands more of our brothers would be thrown out of employment.

However, all this is nothing to the fat salaried and heavy expense accounted gentleman. And it is nothing to him, either, that the constitution provides a penalty for the creation of a condition that makes impossible the carrying out of the terms of the agreement. "To hell with the constitution!" What does it amount to if it stands in the way of Farrington and the coal operators?

The Fight of the Miners

The militant miners of Illinois have refused to accept the class collaboration policy of Farrington, and, led by Brother Thompson, Watt and Parry, have kept up a continuous agitation for justice for the Illinois miners and against the treasonable class collaboration of the fakers, with the result that the miners are demanding a special convention. In fear of this move, Farrington, ably backed by Coolidge's campaign, committeeman is expelling right and left to save himself from being pried loose from his pie-counter.

In the Lewis letter to Farrington, he refers to the militant miners as "dualists," when no man knows better than Lewis that the most bitter enemies of dual unionism are the Progressive Miners of America. And in face of the fact that the officialdom has tried in every way to create a condition that would provoke the militants to form a dual organization and give the bureaucracy an excuse to expel them and because the militants refused to do this, but beat them at their little game, they now in desperation and in brazen open defiance of constitutional law, are expelling the militants.

We're Sure They Won't Be Missed

Lewis' long list of treasonable actions crowned with the latest to hold himself in office, the refusal to comply with the constitution and send out the last vote of the international election tabulated local by local, as provided therein, and the Farrington butchery of the constitution puts those two birds completely outside the pale of the miners' organization.

Lewis will be tried in the forthcoming convention in Indianapolis, in January, 1926. And the miners are preparing to rid themselves once and for all at that time of the greatest labor faker in history.

The Illinois miners are preparing the slide for Peabody's Prince, the faker Farrington, and Lewis will not be able to save him. They will go together, and we will be rid of two nuisances.

RED INTERNATIONALISTS OF I. W. W. HAVE NEW ADDRESS IN CHICAGO

The Red International Affiliation Committee, appointed by the executive bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions to represent the R. I. L. U. in its negotiations with the I. W. W. and to bring about harmony between the two organizations and advocate the affiliation of the I. W. W. to the R. I. L. U., has moved its office from 1514 West Madison street, to 618 S. WORKERS COULD STOP STEEL MILL CRIPPLE FACTORY

Correspondent Tells How to Start

By SANDE
(Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Many workers are killed or injured at the Jones and Laughlin Steel company plant here. This plant is one of the largest units in the steel industry. It is quite a contrast to see the long line of injured workers who visit the company "hospital" and the weary line of workers seeking employment at the employment office which is located next to the "hospital"

It is not an uncommon sight to see the ambulance carrying away an unfortunate worker who thru the company greed for profits has been killed or seriously injured. What is happening at the Jones and Laughlin plant is quite common in the steel industry as a whole. More workers are killed in a year on the battle fields of industry in this country than were lost or killed and injured in the world war.

The Reasons For It

The above conditions are due to the following causes:

1. The dangerous machinery used in the manufacture of steel and steel products. Machinery properly guarded and proper precautions taken would cut down the terrible loss of lives and limbs of the workers.
2. Officials are not strict in closing down defective equipment.
3. The maze of railroads tracks running thruout the plants makes walking dangerous.
4. Long hours of labor.
5. The wages paid the workers are so low that the men are constantly quitting to search for better paying jobs. New men hired are inexperienced and are not acquainted with the dangers confronting them, making them victims of circumstances which they cannot foresee.

These are just a few of the principles causes of accidents. The company's remedy for this condition is to scatter hospital stretchers thruout the shop, tack up ineffective advice on safety and to send a handful of workers to safety committee meetings.

How To Stop It

The workers to remedy this condition must organize shop committees to demand:

1. That all machinery must be carefully guarded, regardless of expense.
2. That all defective equipment must be either repaired immediately or abandoned.
3. Watchman must be placed at all places were workers must cross tracks.
4. A six hour day for all dangerous and exhaustive work. An eight hour day for the rest of the workers.
5. Pay higher wages so that the workers will not have to continually seek new jobs.

If the workers think they can get these conditions without organizing, they must be affected by the heat in the mills or in the furnaces. Only organisation can remedy these ills.

MINERS' LOCALS PROTEST POLICY OF EXPULSIONS

District 5 Aroused at Persecution

By STEPHEN
(Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Miners in all parts of Western Pennsylvania are protesting against the expulsions of two well known progressives that was ordered by the officials of District 5. These protests in some locals are motions or resolutions while others call upon their officials to explain their reason for these persecutions. The whole district is alive to the situation. Here is one of the resolutions passed by Local 280 in New Eagle, Pa.

Resolution:

"WHEREAS, the executive board of District 5 United Mine Workers of America has illegally ordered the expulsions of James Oates, president of Local 4546, and Thomas Ray, of Local 2012, and

"WHEREAS, Thos. Win who presented the charges against James Oates admitted that the charges had been framed and written by the district officials and found so flimsy that Local 4546 refused to even give them any consideration, likewise in the case of Thos. Ray, when charges were presented against him he was completely vindicated by an overwhelming vote of the membership of Local 2012, and

"WHEREAS, the district executive board proceeed to order the expulsions of both James Oates and Thos. Ray in direct violation of the letter and spirit of the constitution but on the charge of having attended a miners meeting which clearly demonstrates that if such rulings were to stand members of our union may become expelled for the crime of attending a moving picture show whenever the officials see fit to interpret such attendence as unauthorized or non permissible, and

"WHEREAS, it is well known that the true underlying reason for this autocratic action by the executive board is the fact that both Oates and Ray have at all times fearlessly taken a progressive position, fought for the building of our union and for militant opposition to the attempts of the operators to impose wage cuts and lower our standard of living, in view of which this expulsion act becomes a deliberate attempt to split and destroy our union, therefore be it

"RESOLVED, that Local No. 280 vigorously protest this arbitrary action of the district executive board in ordering the expulsion of Brothers Oates and Ray, demand that they be immediately reinstated to their former position and standing.

Signed: Geo. Doty, Pres.
Wm. Hedgson, Rec. Sec'y."

In addition to protests, the locals are getting together in the different sections of the district arranging mass meetings of miners at which Oates and Ray, the two expelled miners are invited to speak, in order to acquaint all of the miners of the actions of their officials.

Expelled Members to Speak

Local 3365 of McDonald, Pa., at its last meeting demanded that the district officials come before the local and give reasons why they ordered the expulsions of Ray and Oates. The two expelled members were invited to refute any lies the officials try to put over.

Another local in McDonald 3496 demanded that a stop be put to the persecutions of the militant miners and that the two that were expelled be immediately reinstated.

ARMY AUTHORITIES MANUFACTURED LIES TO MAKE U. S. SOLDIERS HATE GERMANS, A. E. F. GENERAL ADMITS

Revealing the methods of the United States army authorities in manufacturing propaganda to make the soldiers hate their enemy, Gen. Robert Lee Bullard tells how the American soldiers in France during the world war were spurred to hate the Germans.

"Am engaged in a hate campaign agianst the Germans," Gen. Bullard who led the first division of the A. E. F. into the slaughter, wrote on Jan. 8, 1918. "I am trying to imbue our soldiers with a determined hatred of them, their method, their purposes, their acts." Bullard quotes this statement from his diary, in a series of articles he is now writing for the capitalist newspapers.

"It was a part of the preparation," Bullard says, "It was necessary. I deemed it, with our men, especially necessary because without such teaching, many of our soldiers might think the enemy had been lied about by the English and French and there was a consequent danger that in coming in contact with the Germans, American soldiers would be almost ready to fraternise with them."

A Good Slogan.

Showing that even the military leaders who were capitalising Woodrow Wilson's hollow sentimentalities in their war propaganda, did not take the president's utterances seriously. Bullard says, "More powerful and of wider reach as a hate maker was the impression produced by the president's far published idea that the war was nothing else than a life and death struggle of democracy on the side of the allies, against autocracy on the side of the Germans. Tho I could never see it myself nor divine its truth from the origin of the war, it was, nevertheless, a catching idea. Altogether the hate making produced some effect upon our men."

Birds of a Feather.

To the DAILY WORKER:— The DAILY WORKER of May 18, 1925, contains an article dated at Cleveland, Ohio., which criticises "Scabby" Bill Lee and written by "Scabby" T. C. Cashen, president of the Switchmen's Union.

There are 20,000 switchmen in this country that will say, "That Cashen has got lot of guts to say anything about Bill Lee." In 1920, when the switchmen of Chicago, and the rest of the important terminals of the U. S. went on strike, what did Cashen do?

He opened up strike breaking agencies and sent scabs to all parts of the country, so did Bill Lee, Lee and Cashen worked hand and hand then and are today. Grand lodge presidents are friendly enemies, as are all of the fakers of labor.

Lee and Cashen are both strike breakers, in 1920 the S. U. of N. A. had a chance to prove what kind of a union it was and it did, by doing the B. of R. T. a brotherly act and joined with them to scab thousands of old men off the railroads, they were assisted by all of the grand presidents of the various brotherhoods.

The spirit of industrial unionism has not made great headway among the railroad workers yet, generally speaking, they are too selfish, made that way by seniority, a brotherhood teaching of brotherhoodism, which cuts the brothers off the board instead of dividing the work, as the word brothood would imply, yours truly, H. E. Whiteman, Switchman.

Bronx Library.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Bronx comrades invite you all to come to the party headquarters, 1347 Boston Road, Bronx, any evening during the week to inspect their library. Pictures have been brot and hung along the walls; the rooms have been freshly decorated and cleaned; library tables and comfortable chairs have been purchased; many hundreds of volumes have been contributed, and more are coming in every day; shelves have been built, book cases have been contributed; papers and magazines are being brot in and subscribed for by the Bronx comrades; enthusiasm is rife everywhere; the headqurateres are a-hum and a-bustle with commotion—the connection of achievement and accomplishment. The Bronx library is a fact. That which the Bronx comrades have hoped for and worked for so long, has actually come to pass, and the Bronx library promises to be one of the finest in the country, where comrade will meet comrade to collaborate on educational matters, on thesis and learned scripts, or in research work to help the Communist work along.

All are welcome. The library is open every night in the week, commencing Monday, May 25; and is free to all party members and sympathisers.

Books and donations will be thankfully received by the committee in charge each night of the week. Come and bring your friends along, and also your old and used books. Look 'em over comrade. You surely have a couple of books that your are not using, and the Bronx library can use everything that makes good reading material. Don't be bashful. Bring 'em along; the old as well as the new, and we will inscribe your name on our honor roll.

The library committee meets Tuesday, March 26. If your branch has a delegate see that he attends; if the branch has none, elect one, and in the meantime come yourself.

The group leaders' meetings are held on the first and third Tuesdays of the month. Both group meetings will be held at 2613 Hirsch Blvd., until further notice. Group leaders, take notice!

Filipino Bank Cashier Suicides.

MANILA, May 25.—Fred W. Kenny, cashier of the Philippine Trust company, former captain in the United States army, committed suicide here today, according to police authorities, following an alleged plot on the part of the bank subordinates to make it appear he was responsbile for a $50,000 shortage. Vice-President McFerren of the bank, declared Kenny was entirely innocent of any connection with the shortage which, according to McFerran, was caused by a plot between a Filipino clearing house clerk and a petty government official.

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV.

VI. The Task of Bolshevization and the Road to its Achievement.

The road to Bolshevization is the proper organization of the Communist Parties and their conduct of a correct policy.

THESE, then, are the circumstances in which the work of bolshevizing our parties commenced. My theses on the question of bolshevization are drawn up in sufficient detail, so that all I do need now, is to make just a few supplementary remarks to them.

First of all, I wish to touch upon the theme of "organization and politics." After the publication of the theses of the Fifth International Congress, many comrades began to interpret the slogan of bolshevization as implying, merely the organizational reconstruction of the party on the basis of factory nuclei. The basis of the theses we present to you now, is the idea, that the fundamental task of bolshevization is to draw up and conduct a correct line of policy. Of course, one must not contrast organization to politics as two opposite things. A correct policy is impossible without proper organization, and a good organization is not worth a farthing, if it does not carry out a correct policy. I repeat, the essence of bolshevization is to draw up a correct line of policy; the correct approach to the questions of the trade unions, the peasantry, the colonial question, work among the youth, among women, etc. Nor should we minimize the significance of organization; the reorganization on the basis of factory nuclei. I would like to warn you against this very strongly, for in order to conduct a crorect policy, it is necessary to have a proper organization.

THE conference which has just been held on the organization question is of enormous importance. Comrade practical interest from the point off terial of the conference and what caught my eye was an extract from an article in "Rude Pravo" of the 15th of February*, which is of considerable practical interest from the point of view of the question of the bolshevization of the parties and their reconstruction.

It is not necessary to write long theses, but to start from the most simple things, to follow the prescription of this workingman, first to gather together four men, then another four men and then distribute the work among these. This is Leninism and the practical organization of the work.

I want to recall to your mind a letter written by Comrade Lenin in 1902, at the time when our movement was still very young. That letter contains a plan of organization. What Comrade Lenin, more than 20 years ago, recommended to the Russian workers at the time when the proletarian movement in Russia was only just commencing, the workers themselves are doing now, but on a larger scale, under other circumstances, on their own initiative and in countries where the labor movement has existed for many years. That is precisely how we should proceed in the question of organization: step by step. We must say to the workers: we do not need Communists merely for festivals, we do not require Communists merely for parades; every geuine revolutionary must strive to bring over to the party and enlist into its work new comrades from among the rank and file workers. This work must be continued unceasingly.

"Live and—Bolshevize."

REORGANIZATION cannot be brot about mechanically. This has now become perfectly clear. Numerous obstacles are met with on the path of bolshevization partly in the form of social-democratic traditions that have not yet been outlived, and partly of a purely objective character. In conducting and developing the campaign for bolshevization, we must transfer the center of our activity to the factory nuclei. The best theses in the world are valueless if there is no proper organization to carry them among the masses and to explain them and make them popular. Simultaneously with conducting a correct policy we must learn to construct a proper organization.

What does bolshevization mean in the conditions in which we now exist? First of all we must never forget the wise proverb: "Live and learn." We should be merely deceiving ourselves if we believed that it is possible to introduce genuine bolshevization within a few months, or that it could be done at all in any definite time. The genuine bolshevization of the mind of the party, of the labor movement is a continuous process.

Bolshevization also implies the correct study of the experience, social classes and conditions in every country.

IT must not be lost sight of, that the mechanical application of Russian experiences to other countries is impossible. The bourgeoisie, in its way, has also studied the "Lessons of October." This must not be forgotten. We imagined at first, that other countries also will pass thru the Kerensky period. Now it is obvious to us that other countries will not pass thru this period in the same form. Let us recall the episodes of the civil war, in Hamburg, or Reval for example. These show that we may expect anything in the world in these countries, but not a repetition of our Kerensky period.

Bolshevism means, to draw from the Russian revolution, as well as from the struggles in other countries, the most essential lessons and combine them with the concrete conditions and requirements of the given country. First of all, we must study the social classes, and the various strata in the country.

In defining the bases of the dictatorship of the proletariat in various countries, it is necessary, first of all, to study the specific features of the social classes in these countries. It is necessary to know the numerical proportion between the proletariat, the petty-bourgeoisie and the capitalist class, what strata exists among the petty-bourgeoisie, etc.

It is first of all necessary to make an elementary social analysis. Not everywhere have we learned to perform even this preliminary work. For example, we imagined that the conditions in this respect were the same in America, Bulgaria and Germany. We must never forget that correct policy presupposes the ability to differentiate, to calculate the peculiarities of a given enviornment on the specific character of a given country. I must say, to our shame, that I have had occasion to meet "leaders" who in reply to the question: how many peasants are there in your country, replied in confusion: I cannot tell you exactly. As you see, some of us cannot reply even to such an elementary, altho very important question. In this case, no theses on Bolshevism can be of any assistance. If you do not know the social composition of your own country and the numerical relation of forces in it, it is of no use to pretend to be Bolsheviks. At best, you may be courageous champions of the working class, but to think of leading a revolution, of winning over the peasantry under these conditions, is absurd.

enin taught the necessity to fight for penny-an-hour increases as well as ultimate aims.

WE must now discuss, not what is a Bolshevik, but what is a Bolshevik in the concrete conditions of the present period—the period of the retardation of the whole revolution.

When Lenin wrote his book, "What is to be Done":—This "Bible of Bolshevism," the book which lays down the foundations of Bolshevism—the Russian labor movement was living thru the infancy period of its development. But already at that time, Comrade Lenin covered the complete scope of the work in saying that we must fight equally for penny and hour increases in wages as well as for the achievement of our ultimate aims. Simultaneously with the most minute affairs of everyday work, we must strive to achieve our great aims. That is our task.

Comrades, it must be stated, that at the present time, a number of our parties are passing thru a period in which the study of Bolshevism, parciturlarly of the pre-war period, is especially necessary for them. Several of our parties are entering that phase of the struggle and development, in which it is particularly important to master the principles of the politics, tactics and roganization of bolshevism of the period prior to 1917.

Work Among the Peasantry.

WE have achieved definite results both in the field of trade unionism and in the field of work among the peasantry and in the colonies. The organization of the work in the rural districts, it seems to me, is a matter of special importance. We must, however, distinguish between the spontaneous peasant movements on the one hand, and systematic work and Communistic initiative in the rural districts on the other. Spontaneous peasant movements are observed in different countries and frequently they arise without the initiative and work of the Communists. The opposite is also the case. There are countries in which beginnings have been made in Communist work among the peasantry, but where there is no spontaneous peasant movement. The Communist International places great hopes in these first efforts towards embracing the peasantry. We can say that, at least the ice is broken. We are passing from words to deeds. I recall to your mind the peasant conferences called by the Communist Party of France. The same was done in Germany; similar preliminary work is being conducted by the Communist Party of Germany. Successes can be recorded in this direction by the Communist Party of Italy. Attempts to commence systematic work among the peasantry are observed also in Czecho-Slovakia.

The workers of Berlin, Hamburg, and other towns, frequently spend their Sundays in the country. They drive to the surrounding villages in motor lorries, distribute party literature, organize meetings of peasants, etc. This is of enormous importance. We, Russian Bolsheviks did this kind of work. Prior to 1917, the Russian Communist Party was a "town party." Only commencing from 1917, did it begin to penetrate into the country. This was made possible first of all, by workers sending their delegations to the villages and the expenses for these trips were covered by collections made among the workers in the factories.

Since such work is now being undertaken, the slogans which summarize it, acquire enormous importance. One such slogan is "The Workers' and Peasants' Government" as interpreted by the Fifth International Congress. Where this slogan has not yet been issued, it should be issued now, accompanied by extensive propaganda. It would be a mistake to abandon this slogan, simply because Brandler and Radek have discredited it. This circumstance is not an argument against this slogan, for Brandler and Radek tried to discredit our slogans. In all probability, Brandler has never succeeded in bringing over a single peasant to our side, but he was well able to discredit our slogans. We, however, in working to bring the peasantry over to our side, will strive to popularize this slogan in its revolutionary interpretation.

The Tactics of the United Frant.

I COME now to the tactics of the united front. These tactics not only do not contradict Bolshevism, but on the contrary, represent an essential part of it. There can be no bolshevization without these tactics. A Bolshevik, first of all, is a man of the masses, but in order to be a man of the masses he must keep continuous contact with the masses of the workers, including the social democrats and non-party masses.

I think comrades, that we are only just beginning to apply the tactics of the united front properly. In the period when great social changes are taking place in England, when one trade union after another is being drawn into the discussion of the question of the united front, the application of these tactics must be definite, resolute, revolutionary and Bolshevistic.

The Policy of Partial Demands.

I WILL deal in a few words with the question of partial demands, which the parties must advance in carrying out the every day work of leading the struggles of the workers. This question also belongs to the sphere of bolshevization.

It must not be supposed that we have just entered the period of reform. We understand perfectly well that the period of the retarded development of the revolution is not at all a propitious period for obtaining reforms.

A period such as this does not favor reforms and reformism. We shall get an outbreak of "right sickness" but we see no symptoms of serious reforms.

But this does not mean that, on these grounds, we must abstain from putting forward partial demands. It is precisely in periods such as the present one, that we must conduct correct, sensible, systematic and carefully thot out tactics of partial demands, without however, departing from the revolutionary struggle, and taking care not to dilute bolshevism with reformism. We must consistently raise the rank and file worker above the plane of petty questions of the day. We must demonstrate to and convince the worker by facts in his own experience that he can never lift himself out of his present poverty by means of petty demands. Precisely at such a moment as this is, partial demands are a definite plan of our tactics.

CLARK SHATTERS SOCIALISTS IN SEATTLE DEBATE

Proves Futility of MacDonald Leadership

By AARON FISHERMAN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Wash., May 25.—Another debate was held on Sunday evening between a spokesman of Communism and a representative of social-democracy. Stanley J. Clark, assistant district organizer of the Workers Party, and W. D. Lane of the Seattle Labor College.

From beginning to end the audience was with the spokesman for Communism, if we are to judge by the applause accorded him by the audience. And the audience was correct. In merits, logic, arguments and presentation Stanley J. Clark has proven to be the master of the two.

Liberal Praises MacDonald.

W. D. Lane, liberal and a former city councilman, who represented the affirmative side, opened the debate with a 25 minute speech in which he tried hard to prove the wonderful accomplishment (?) of the British Labor Party and minimize the tactics of the Communists.

The subject of the debate was: "Resolved, That the producers of America will achieve greater success thru the methods of the British Labor Party than they will thru adopting the tactics of the Communist Party."

Each one of the debaters was given 25 minutes for argument and 30 minutes for rebuttal.

Clark Shatters Socialist.

Comrade Clark battered and shattered every argument and point of his opponent into pieces. He proved by uncontradictable facts that the British Labor Party was one of the most servile governments of the ruling class and that the oppression of other nations under its regime, was at least as severe as under the Tory government and in fact the same officialdom remained in power; and that no particular achievement for the interests of the working class was brot about. The dictatorship of the proletariat is the only possible hope of the working class by which it can bring about its emancipation, he concluded.

INTERNATIONAL PICNIC.

The Russian, Ukrainian and Polish Branches of the Workers Party have arranged a joint International Picnic for Sunday, June 14, at Marvel Inn Grove, at the end of Milwaukee Ave.

All friendly organizations are requested not to arrange other affairs on that date.

TAKE NOTICE!

The Workers' House has arranged picnics for the following dates:

May 30, at National Grove.

June 28 and August 9, at William Rimek Grove, Lyons, Ill.

All friendly organizations are requested not to arrange other affairs on those dates.

Move to Trustify Churches.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 25.—Prospects for union with allied churches, including congregational and reformed, were expected to stir up another battle between liberals and conservatives in the presbyterian general assembly here. Fundamentalists will try to block any move looking toward organic union with the congregational church, it was expected.

At no time has there ever been issued in this country a book of children's stories like these.

Thru every story runs the warmth and feeling for the working class—and the sheer beauty of them will hold the deep interest of both child and grown-up.

Don't let your little boy or girl—(or the child of any worker you know)—be without this collection of working class stories written by an author whose work so distinctly proletarian, and of such a high standard, makes the book a real contribution to working class literature.

Get this book for the boy or girl you know—you also will be delighted with it.

WANT NO UNION MINERS AROUND STEEL MILLS

Fayette Miner Discovers Something

By YEAGER
(Worker Correspnodent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The Carnegie steel mills at Clairton, Pa., offers 44c an hour, 10 hours a day for skilled men, while others, having received a higher rate, are being laid off. A miner, formerly working in the Fayette County district near Uniontown, after many futile efforts trying to get into some mill, finally succeeded in getting a job at the Clairton plant.

Before getting this job he looked for work in other steel mills in Ohio in other places. When asked what his previous work was he was very thuthful, stated that he had been a miner. After the company had gotten this information he was gently pushed aside and told there were no jobs open.

After several such failures he decided to try another method to get a job. When he came to the Clairton and was asked what he had worked at before he told them he had been a helper in a boiler shop. It worked, and he was given a job at the rate of 44c for 10 hours.

Why was he turned down before for simply stating that he had been a miner? The Carnegie Steel company desires no former miners working for them as they have practically all more or less participated in union activities. The Carnegie Steel company wants no talk of organization going on in its mills, hence the precaution when it comes to hiring former miners.

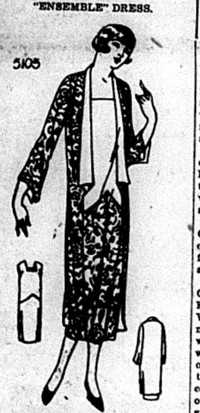
It's a Nice Country—For Millionaires.

No wonder Carnegie could make his millions and be a philanthropist, donating libraries, while the men toil for miserable wages, scarcely enuf to live on.

The miner who just secured the job in the Clariton mill had formerly worked in Fayette County coke fields. During the strike of 1922 he was evicted with many others. He was compelled to move into one of the barracks in which eight families with 22 children lived in six rooms. Under these conditions his wife gave birth to a child and he went in debt $1,100 but kept on fighting to the last.

Our Daily Patterns

"ENSEMBLE" DRESS.



5105. This portrays a very attractive version of a popular style. The under dress may be worn separately. The tunic may be worn over any slip or foundation.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. To make the dress as illustrated for a 38 inch size will require 5⅛ yards of figured material, and ⅞ yard of plain material 40 inches wide. To make the dress of one material alone will require 6⅝ yards. The under dress alone of one material requires 3¼ yards. The width of the dress at the lower edge is 1½ yards.

RELIGION YIELDS FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, INCREASES PROFITS, AS DIRECTED BY SAINT ROCKEFELLER

NEW YORK, May 24.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has been figuring largely in the publicity of getting religious enterprises in New York City lately. An appeal received by the DAILY WORKER for the (methodist) Broadway Temple Building corporation—that plans a $4,000,00 skyscraper community church with apartments to let—asks us to buy five per cent bonds towards the project and encloses, as a clinching argument, a copy of a letter from the oil king's son endorsing the plans and announcing his own subscription for $250,000.

Rockefeller's letter is an excellent illustration of business christianity, stating "Not only will the structure dominate the surrounding buildings, as religion should dominate all human activities, but this type of structure, because convertible entirely into business uses if necessary, renders far safer, in these days of constantly changing city life, the large investment involved."

The personal appeal says blandly, "You are not asked to donate a single cent. You are asked to allow a part of your money to earn 5 per cent."

Rockefeller's religious investments are inter-denominational. He recently gave $500,000 to the building fund of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and subscribed $1,083,333 to the $4,000,000 drive of Union Theological Seminary. His own "worship" is at the Fifth Avenue Baptist church to which Raymond Fosdick, liberal preacher, has been called. Cornelius Woelfkin, retiring pastor, was buffer for Rockefeller during the stormy days after the burning of the women and children at Ludlow, Colorado. When Bouck White, pastor of the church of the social revolution, attempted to ask Woelfkin about his parishioner's crimes he was roughed up by detectives, hustled off to jail and sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

PEARSE-CONNOLLY CLUB FORMED IN SAN FRANCISCO

Condemn Irish World for Attacking Relief Work

By J. C. READ

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—A Pearse-Connolly Club has been formed in San Francisco with headquarters at 225 Valencia street. Of this club, Timothy McCarthy is permanent chairman, and Brother Fitzgerald is organizer. The purpose of the organization is the education of its membership in working class philosophy, and the assisting of the sufferers of the present Irish famine. To accomplish the latter purpose, the club will work in close conjunction with the International Workers' Aid. The club is arranging to hold a benefit dance and entertainment early in June, and will endeavor in the future to hold monthly or bi-monthly dances as long as the famine crisis lasts.

The club meets every Wednesday evening at 225 Valencia, and people of Irish birth or extraction who are interested, are urged to communicate with the organizer, Brother Fitzgerald at 225 Valencia, San Francisco.

At the last meeting of the Pearse-Connolly Club, held in San Francisco on Wednesday evening, May 20th, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved: That the Pearse-Connolly Club, in conjunction with the San Francisco branch of the International Workers' Aid, condemn the attack made on the latter organization by the writer of an anonymous letter which was published in the April 25th issue of the Irish World, and suggests that the Irish World should not lend its columns in the future for the abusing of organizations and individuals engaged in humanitarian work.

Church Modernists Win.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 25.—Modernists of the Presbyterian general assembly were scheduled to win their second battle with ultra-fundamentalists over demands for the rescinding of the New York presbytery, according to predictions of which church parliamentarians.

The overture of the Chester, Pa., presbytery demanding abolition of the New York presbytery as a result of the Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick case in the first Presbyterian church, New York, and the setting up of a new presbytery "loyal to the standards of the church," cannot be pushed to a decision, it was said.

More Racial Minorities Downed.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Under the new regime in the bureau of immigration, the 65,000 Hawaiian-born Japanese who are citizens in Hawaii will not be admitted to the continental United States as Americans. Nor will any encouragement be given, from the bureau, to the aspirations of Porto Rico for statehood. The reason behind this attitude is the so-called fear of "inferior racial strains and cheaper labor," backed by the knowledge that the Pacific and southern states have much power in congress while Hawaii and Porto Rico have none.

Doctors Meet in Atlantic City.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 25.—A concerted publicity campaign against "fads, cults and fallacies," which impose on the public worthless cures was recommended before the opening meeting of the Americal Medical Association here today.

Leninism, the application of Marxism in the present period of imperialism, is splendidly treated here by a close co-worker of Lenin, and at present secretary of the Russian Communist Party.

In this book—destined surely to become a classic of Communist literature—the reader will find an important analysis of the problems before every revolutionary party.

A book that should be in the hands of every thinking worker.

WORKER FIRED BY "B. & O. PLAN" FOR BEING UNIONIST

Here's Something to Tell Your Buddy

By STEPHEN,
(Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—A former local officer of the machinists in the Glenwood shops of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad has been fired for opposing "B. and O. Bill" co-operative plan. Of course that is not the reason given by the company or their committee, but nevertheless it is so.

While working in the Glenwood shops Harry Smith was taken off his job because he wiped his hands on the heavy grease before the whistle blew, a custom existing in all the railroad shops of the country. He turned his case over to the co-operative committee.

Some Tall Dodging

According to the "plan" grievances must be taken up within 15 days, but the committee did not present it until after six weeks had passed. In place of fighting to have Smith put back on the job the committee acted true to its name and co-operated with the company, giving it the right to fire Smith, using as the excuse that the time limit to take up grievances had passed.

Smith during the time he worked in the Glenwood shops served on many committees. The last office he held was secretary of the machinists local and owing to his opposition to the B. and O. plan, although he was not very active or aggressive, he was defeated in a three cornered election by a dyed in the wool conservative and a supporter of Johnston and his plan, and who at one time had to be removed from the shop committee for the manner in which he handled the grievances.

A Job Against Unionism

The defeat of Smith became an opening wedge after which it was easier for the company to get rid of him which they did at the opportune time. This terrorizing of the workers who are opposed to the plan is the reason they are afraid here to openly oppose it and which is reducing the one time militant shop crafts organization to nothing more than a company union.

U. S. S. R. Imports Increase

MOSCOW, May 22.—A tendency towards a considerable increase of imports is being noticeable of late in the Soviet government's foreign trade policy. Thus, in March last, the imports exceeded the exports by 22 million roubles and amounted to 54,600,000 roubles. The increase falls mainly on the import into the U. S. S. R. of agricultural machinery, and, also, cotton. As compared with the February figures, imports in March increased by 9 million roubles; while the March export amounted to 32 million roubles, it was 4,900,000 roubles lower than in February.

Philadelphia Takes Leadership from Milwaukee

Minneapolis and Detroit Threaten

Due to the splendid work of the Philadelphia local led by City Agent Comrade Lena Rosenberg, they have succeeded in displacing Milwaukee as the leaders in the campaign for subs among those locals having a quota of 100 subs or more.

While this battle is going on between them, others and especially Minneapolis and Detroit are threatening to overtake both leaders in the last three weeks. Here is

COSSACK GETS GOD'S REWARD FOR MURDER

Klux Sky Pilot Vetos "Shall Not Kill"

By SANDE
(Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Rev. Charles P. Irwin, pastor of the Wilmerding Presbyterian church and a group of "citizens" from the ku klux klan controlled town of East McKeesport, Pa., has presented state cossack Teofil Cavaleski with a silver loving cup for murdering Michael Kraynik, a machinist who was employed at the Westinghouse Airbrake company.

Cold Blooded Murder.

On Feb. 22 a gang of cossacks entered a confectionery store in charge of Kraynik's wife, and without showing a warrant began ransacking the place in search of liquor. Kraynik demanded that the cossacks leave his place as they had no lawful right in searching the store. During the argument which followed the cossack shot Kyraynik thru the head and he died instantly.

The dead worker's wife, son and customer, who were in the store at the time, claim that there was no liquor found in the place and that the cossacks worked the old and often-used trick of planting one pop bottle of moonshine which was presented as evidence.

The trick was so raw that the steel trust police of Allegheny County were forced to arrest the cossack on the charge of murder, and he is at liberty after putting up $7,500 bail until his trial comes up.

Belly Crawling Minister of God.

Rev. Irwin, in his presentation speech at the state cossacks' barracks at Greensburg, stated that the cossack was doing his duty when he shot the Westinghouse worker and commended him for his "fearless" action.

One of Kraynik's fellow workers at the Westinghouse plant, in commenting on the preacher's action said, "It is simply another case of a sky pilot showing his true colors."

Corn and Other Crops Hard Hit by Cold Weather

Virtually complete annihilation of the early tomato and bean crops and great damage to corn in the sections where the low temperatures struck over the week-end was forecast today following a preliminary survey by agricultural agencies here.

Damage, it was estimated, will run to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Warnings of another frost were issued by the local weather bureau.

Big Damage in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—Killing frosts of Saturday and Sunday nights took a heavy toll in Indiana crops, according to scattered reports reaching the government weather bureau here today.

A report from Warsaw stated frost early today caused thousands of dollars loss in North Central Indiana, destroying scores of acres of vegetation, chiefly tomatoes, onions, potatoes and beans.

Strawberries were hard hit and even apple trees suffered considerably, according to the report.

Arbitration in Many Different Styles; You May Take Your Choice

BOSTON, Mass., May 25.—An overflowing mass meeting of the Boston Carmen's Union unanimously rejected the proposal of the Boston Elevated Railway to substitute a board of "impartial" arbitrators for the long established method of arbitration by a board of three, with one direct representative from each side and a third arbitrator chosen by the two.

The company proposed that each side submit the names of five "disinterested" or "impartial" persons, not connected with the industry. From the five submitted by the company the men were to pick one arbitrator and from the five submitted by the men the company was to pick its choice, the two arbitrators to select a third.

The union declares that it has more faith in its own direct representative than it would in an outsider.

Japanese Troops Withdrawn

MOSCOW, May 25.—An official ceremony took place at Alexandrovsk, Northern Saghalien, when the Japanese troops that are being withdrawn from the Soviet territory of the Island were relieved by the Red army detachment sent from Vladivostok. The Soviet institutions have also been officially opened.

Oppose Wage Cuts in Shoe Trades

HAVERHILL, Mass., May 25.—The Shoe Workers Protective Union is presenting arguments to the shoe board against the demands of the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers Association, representing 31 manufacturers, for wage reductions.

Organization Work in Detroit

The news stories of the organization campaign now being conducted in the auto factories of Detroit by the local labor movement give the lie to the pessimistic attitude of the officialdom of the international unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

In response of the workers to the remarks of the speakers outside the factory gates, the readiness with which the workers rallied to the defense of the speakers against the company gunmen and the police, all indicate that they are willing to organize and fight—providing the labor movement adopts the right tactics.

We do not want to be understood as saying that the present organisation campaign in Deetroit will be a huge success. Far from it. The automobile industry is organized on a national scale and only a national campaign can bring its workers into the unions. But the interest displayed by the workers in the Briggs plant is undoubtedly a sign of discontent with existing conditions which, if given an opportunity for expression on a national scale, with the whole labor movement solidly behind an organization drive, would result in thousands of these workers swelling the ranks of the labor movement.

The work that is being done in Detroit is of the pioneer kind accompanied with all the hardships that pioneers usually suffer. But it is just such work as this that lays the basis for real organization and it is demonstrating to thousands of workers that it is not necessary or advisable to continue to act as individuals in the daily struggle against the bosses.

This agitational work should go hand in hand with the setting up of shop committees as the basis of future campaigns and with the whole struggle of the left wing to arouse the fighting spirit of the labor movement so that sooner or later the hesitancy and cowardice of officialdom can be overcome.

"Labor" Bankers

That was a fine flock of vultures gathered in New York City to celebrate the second anniversary of the banking enterprise launched by the officialdom of the New York labor movement.

It proved to the hilt our contention that "labor banking" is nothing more or less than one of the methods by which the superprofits of imperialism are shared with its agents in the labor unions. Nothing was missing from the list of attractions with which the ruling class shows its complete domination of the labor bureaucracy. There was a letter from Coolidge, read as drooling lips of labor fakers murmered approval of the pladitudes contained therein, there was a galaxy of labor-hating multi-millionaires on the job to see that their proteges kept to the line of capitalism, there were representatives of the strikebreaking legionaires and the clergy.

The meeting was an orgy of class collaboration, open and shameless. Labor leaders consorted with the worst class enemies of the workers.

The miners and the textile workers are fighting with their backs to the wall while the high-salaried officials ignore their struggles and uphold the hands of the capitalists who fight them.

It is going to take some time for the working class to understand the sinister meaning of such gatherings, but that understandings will come. When it does, the defeat suffered by that arch-apostle of class collaboration, William Johnston, will be repeated right down the line.

Backward the American working class may be, but it is already showing impatience with businessmen masquerading as labor officials.

Boston Follows Gary

Five thousand laborers in Boston have voted to strike for a wage increase. Painters in Boston have been on strike for some time.

The trade magazines report huge building contracts showing an average increase of 25 per cent in construction for that city and the building trades unions have had to bring but little pressure to bear on the bosses to get wage increases and the fact that the strike method must now be used shows that wages and construction in the industry have reached the peak and that the bosses, believing that the demand for labor will soon slacken, are going to fight further advances.

The lockout in Gary, affecting 3,000 building tradesmen, coupled with the Boston dispute, shows which way the wind is blowing. We have pointed out many times that the building trades union officials have not taken advantage of the busy conditions in the industry to conduct active organizing campaigns and that, from the national standpoint the building trades unions have simply drifted with the tide. In many cities the dissensions that have resulted in dual building trades councils have not been overcome and the employers have profited from the division.

In addition to bringing the whole building trades section of the labor movement into action in support of the Boston building laborers the unions should begin to close up their ranks in preparation for the attack for which the preliminary arrangements on the part of the bosses can already be seen.

The eviction of 500 miners and their families by the West Virginia-Pittsburgh Coal company marks an offensive in a new direction by the coal capitalists. Unable to break the resistance of the miners themselves the coal operators are now making war on women and children. In the face of such acts as this we say again that there is no place in the labor movement for tactics based on the belief that a sense of pity or justice exists in the ranks of the capitalist class when a question of their profits or power over the workers are concerned.

The striking textile workers in Shanghai have answered the attack upon them by the gunmen of the capitalists by the extension of the strike to four more mills involving 7,000 additional workers. Such resistance shatters all the ready-made conceptions of the Chinese workers as docile slaves which foreign capital can rob with impunity. This is an exhibition of solidarity of the highest order and one which American textile workers could follow with great benefit to themselves.

The Soviet Power and Private Capital in Russia

By LEO (MOSCOW)

A SHORT time ago there was held in Moscow an extremely interesting meeting. One of the biggest halls in Moscow was almost entirely filled with so-called Nep people, as the new bourgeoisie in Russia are called, who have ventured to make their appearance after the introduction of the new economic policy, or "Nep." A discussion took place as to the role of private capital in Russia and the ways and means in order to attract it to commerce. The chairmanship of this meeting was in the hands of representatives of economic institutions of the Soviet government.

For Moscow, the capital of the country of the proletarian dictatorship, such a meeting, consisting for the greater part of representatives of private capital, is quite a unique phenomenon. The subject of the meeting, the role which private capital has to play under the present conditions in Russia, where, on the one hand, the central and most important positions of economy are in the hands of the proletarian state and, on the other hand, the forms of money and goods economy are still retained, touches one of the most interesting questions regarding the economic construction and economic future of Russia. This is all the more so as the bourgeois press abroad and its social democratic allies are deliberately spreading all kinds of stories regarding the role of private capital and of the new bourgeoisie in Russia. A favorite method of their is to represent things as if Communism and the commencement of a socialist organization of economy are nothing more than a mere screen behind which the economic life is rapidly developing in private capitalist forms and in the interests of private capital.

THE outward appearance of the meeting, where one saw more private capitalists than one ever sees in Moscow at one gathering, gave a quite different impression. The new bourgeoisie have a quite different appearance from that which one usually associates with the ordinary type of bourgeoisie.

Some prominent representatives of the economic institutions of the Soviet power delivered speeches, in which they sketched the problem which is implied when one speaks of the role of private capital in Russia. Comrades Smilga, the vice chairman of the state commission for planned economy, Scheinmann, the people's commissar for home trade, Kaganovitch, the vice chairman of the All-Russian exchange congress, Schleifer, deputy people's commissar for finance, and Syromolotov, deputy people's commissar for home trade drew attention to the following facts:

The development of Russian industry is proceeding at a pace which, compared with the pre-war development, can be described as rapid. In the pre-war period an annual increase of production by 3 to 5 per cent was regarded as very considerable, whilst the increase of industrial production in the past economic year already amounted to over 30 per cent, and in the past half of the new economic year 25 per cent, and in various branches of industry even to 40 to 50 per cent. At the same time we observe, in consequence of the development of peasant agriculture, an increased purchasing power and an increased demand for goods in the villages. It is evident that these two factors render necessary an extension of trade, and in particular an increase of the commercial apparatus and of the capital invested in trade. The apparatus of the state and co-operative trade, in spite of the considerable progress they have already made in recent times, does not suffice for this rapid growth. The Soviet state, is therefore, faced with the question whether it will invest the net profits which it receives from industry in order to extend the industrial apparatus and renew machinery, or whether it will invest it as trading capital.

THE second method is less advantageous for the general development of economy. The Soviet government will, therefore, to a certain extent, admit private capital in trade, in order to guarantee the turn-over of the industrial products, and thereby the development of industry, and to promote the exchange between town and country and, as a result, the alliance between the peasants and the workers.

Private capital, which is again, to a certain extent, making its appearance as a result of the situation created by the new economic policy, prefers to indulge in all kinds of shady business speculations which promise a high profit, which however attempt to evade the control of the state and of the state economy and disturb and hamper the general economic construction of the country. It is therefore in the interest of the Soviet state to indicate a definite field of activity for private capital, in order to have the possibility of constantly controlling its activity.

The various comrades who spoke pointed out that if private capital would abandon its shady backstairs speculations and develop its activity in the sphere indicated by the state, there would take place a certain alteration in the policy of the state towards trade-capital. The necessity of stabilizing the valuta involved an extremely sharp struggle against private capital, as the latter's speculative tendencies, which were specially directed towards forcing up prices, were calculated to endanger the whole stabilization reform, which is still the most important pre-requisite for economic construction. Comrade Scheinmann stated at the same time, however, that the pre-condition for another regulation of the taxation of private capital is that private capital keeps its books correctly. The pre-requisite for the discounting of private trade bills by the state bank is that these bills are genuine. Some speakers who came forward as representatives of private capital, emphasized the political loyalty of the private business people, whereupon a comrade pointed out that it was not a question of political loyalty, but mainly a question of business loyalty and the exclusion of those jobbing and speculating methods which are mentioned in the penal code.

SOME other representatives of private capital attempted in speeches and questions to complain that in proletarian Russia they had to take second place to the workers as being "non-working elements." It is difficult for them to obtain housing acommodation etc. This called forth a sharp reply on the part of various comrades. Comrade Scheinmann declared: there can be no talk of the government concerning itself with such questions. It is known to all that the government is conducting a proletarian class policy, that it will continue to do so and that it will give preference to the workers in everything. There can be no talk that the government is calling for private capital. In the first place it does not need it. It can live without private capital, and if private capital does not agree to the proposals which are made to it, then the government will draw the necessary conclusions. Secondly, it is here a question of business. Capital does not come when one asks for it, but only when it is assured of certain advantages. And if it does not come, it is only because it believes it can gain more by shady speculations.

The above is a picture of a meeting of private capitalists in Moscow. And this is how the representatives of the Soviet government talk to private capital. If private capital still exists today in Soviet Russia, and if it has certain economic functions, this is only on condition that the economic power of the proletarian state is not touched.

It is a different matter when, for example, social-democratic ministers "attract" Barmat and his capital, and when the Soviet government permits private capital under definite limitations and under a firm control, while at the same time, as was repeatedly stated at the meeting, the state and co-operative trade is given preference and support by all means. If private capital, however, indulges in shady speculations, then there exists for it the proletarian class justice and that terror of all terrors of the West European philistines, the G. P. U., or better known under the name of the Tcheka. It suffices to read the reports of the law court proceedings in the Russian papers in order to see how energetically and with what severity the profiteers are dealt with in Russia, while at the time it must be remembered that what is regarded as profiteering in Russia, would in other countries receive the euphemistic title of "a good stroke of business."

In addition, and that is the chief thing, the ruling class is and remains the working class. This is not only expressed in the political life of the country, but in all the affairs of daily life, in all spheres of social policy, housing policy, educational policy etc. That is the Alpha and Omega of the entire policy in Russia.

Labor Party Organized In India - - - -

By Evelyn Roy

RESPONDING slowly to the pressure of events and the spirit of our age, a labor party has been launched in India and formally announced during the session recently concluded of the All-India Trade Union Congress. Its sponsors are Messrs. Lajpat Rai, Sir Sankaran Nair, Chaman Lal, D. P. Sinha, M. N. Joshi and other well-known leaders of the Indian labor world. Reference has been made to the nature of the declarations made by these leaders in the preliminary conferences which led to the formation of the labor party.

The prevailing spirit was that of opportunistic nationalism seeking a new instrument to further its own purposes, rather than the creation of a truly working class party which would reflect the genuine interests and aspirations of the Indian proletariat.

Moderatism and excessive caution marked the speeches of these pioneers of an Indian labor party. The sentiment was expressed by one of them that "an Indian capitalist was preferable to a British one," and it was further declared by another that the newly-formed party should not over-emphasize the labor point of view! It is considered undesirable by these new-found champions of the Indian working class to introduce into India the doctrine of the class struggle, or to create such a party which will in any way jeopardize the interests and ambitions of Indian capitalism.

IN such hands, the new labor party will not go very far. The birth of a political organization of the Indian workers is a still-birth, and no amount of theoretical schemes on paper will succeed in breathing the breath of life into this defunct embryo.

Yet the growth of an Indian labor party is a historical necessity, already long overdue. The position of India as the seventh on the list of industrialized countries of the world, and her aggregate total of 20,000,000 proletarian workers prove that some organization to express the economic and political needs of this vast mass of workers must come into being sooner or later.

The divagations of Indian nationalism have so far hindered rather than helped the growth of labor conceptions and labor ideals, for the masses have obediently followed those self-appointed leaders who have been drawn invariably from the educated middle class, and who are linked closely in sympathy and interest with the Indian bourgeoisie.

It is the Indian bourgeoisie in conflict with the inordinate monopoly of British capitalism furninshing both its ideological direction and the sinews of war in the shape of necessary funds. It is but natural therefore, that the program of Indian nati nalism was subordinated to the needs and interests of the Indian bourgeoisie.

BUT the non-co-operation movement succeeded in one thing, in diffusing the idea of emancipation with all its manifold implications, among the masses of the Indian people. An expression was provided for an unrest which had hitherto remained dormant and unself-conscious among the ignorant and illiterate workers and peasants. Strikes and hartals, adopted as the instruments of the non-co-operation campaign, taught the dumb millions of India their potential strength and the power that lies in co-ordinated action on a large scale. The national movement, from being confined to a small sect of the rich and propertied class or to the revolutionary student groups of different provinces became for the first time a nation-wide movement of the toiling masses.

It is difficult, if not impossible, to lull to sleep those forces once awakened to consciousness. But it is very easy to mislead those forces by false programs and tactics. Mr. Gandhi, once the undisputed leader of one of the mightiest movements known to history, abdicated ignominiously before the battle-array of British imperialism and the prospects of meeting force with force, and now heads a small faction which seeks to lead the Indian movement along the channels of social reform on a program of the boycott of foreign cloth, Hindu-Mussulman unity, the production and use of homespun khadar, and the abolition of untouchability and the drink-evil. The sole message which he gives to the demoralized and dispirited country is that of the charka (spinning-wheel).

C. R. DAS, head of the Swarja faction which succeeded to the control of the Indian National Congress at Belgaum in December of 1924, has given another slogan to the nation,—that of council-entry "for the purpose of mending or ending" the present system of government. He has led his own particular faction back to the folds of safe and sane constitutionalism, away from the stormy sea of mass-action envisaged in the original program of non-co-operation. Both he and Mr. Gandhi have repudiated all forms of direct action, including civil disobedience and non-payment of taxes, and they have automatically cut off from themselves the very backbone of the great mass-movement that shook the country from 1919 to 1922—the Indian workers and peasants.

The inevitable slump and disintegration of the militant nationalist movement since the abandonment of mass action in favor of the "constructive program" and council-entry, has become patent to all. The consequent policy of repression, launched upon by the Indian government, with the consent of the labor government in Britain as well as of its successor, the present tory administration, has become bolder and more far-retaching. The incipient reversion to terrorism on the part of the young revolutionaries, who had held themselves in check during the course of the non-co-operation campaign, was anticipated by the government with unerring prescience, and measures were taken to check it before it could get under way. The employment of agents provacateurs to push the rash and inexperienced youth of the country to acts of terrorism, previously unmasked to the police by their vile hirelings; the publications of false documents inciting the country to violence, and the organization of "inspired" parties of terrorism, led by government spies, are but a few of the methods employed by the most unscrupulous and cunning police-system in existence. These provocative measures were taken and broadcasted thruout the world in order to justify the policy of unrestricted repression launched upon since the collapse of the non-co-operation movement.

THE only reply to such methods is the reorganization of the national forces along new lines, conforming to the interests and desires of the Indian masses. But so strong is the spirit of class-interest, and so selfish the leadership of the movement, that the prospects of freedom are deliberately jeopardized by a policy of compromise and concession. The Indian bourgeoisie is selling the birthright of the Indian people for a mass of pottage secured to themselves by bargaining with the imperial overlord. Both the Indian upper classes and the British rulers have combined to prevent and stifle the growth of a united national movement based upon a program of social and economic liberation for the toiling masses, along with political freedom. The movement is divided, disintegrated and moribund, for lack of that program and those tactics which correspond to the crying needs of the overwhelming majority of the population—the abolition of landlordism, reduction of taxation, an eight-hour day and a minimum wage for labor, protective social legislation, the nationalization of public utilities and profit-sharing in large industries. Instead of rallying the nation to the cry of political independence and the establishment of a democratic federated republic based upon universal suffrage Mr. Das and the Swarajists join with Mr. Gandhi and his followers in repudiating national independence, and accepting "home rule within the empire."

Meanwhile, the economic condition of the Indian working class grows steadily worse, as wages are forced down and hours of work increased to enable Indian capitalism to compete with its British rival. The deadly competition of Indian sweated labor with British labor in the metropolis is becoming a real fact; wages in Great Britain are being forced down to the level of "coolie labor" in the colonies, before the constant threat of unemployment and "the dole." Hence the new cry in British labor circles for the organization of Indian labor to protect itself and its British confrere from extermination between the upper and nether millstones of British and Indian capitalism. Hence the new alliance between the British labor party and certain leaders of Indian nationalism who pretend to see farther than the rest.

BUT what is needed in India is a real party of the working class and peasantry, which will reflect the vital needs and interests of their class, irrespective of the complex and often conflicting interests of Indian nationalism, and of certain privileged sections of the British labor bureaucracy. Until such a party is formed, under leadership which unhesitatingly places itself in the service of the Indian proletariat, upon a program which corresponds with their fundamental needs and desires, no mass movement is possible in India, and without a mass movement, no success can be achieved in the realization of the demands put forward.

The new labor party under its present leadership will be a pale reflection of British labor at its most reactionary and conservative stage, strongly adulterated by the questionable influences of Indian bourgeois nationalism. It may be the herald of the dawn; it cannot usher in the splendid day of the birth of Indian labor to its heritage of power as an organised and revolutionary factor in Indian national life. What is needed is a peoples' party, embracing the vast masses of India, led by men and women with a revolutionary vision, who can bring the Indian movement for social, economic and political emancipation into line with the world movement for social revolution.

MUSIC -:- LITERATURE -:- DRAMA

Ibsen's Attack on Conventions Still Goes Strong.

OPPORTUNITY to appreciate the sturdy pioneer qualities of Ibsen's attack upon conventions of his time, the end of the 19th century, is again given New York in current production of The Wild Duck and of Rosmersholm. The Actors' Theaters presentation of The Wild Duck, one of the season's finest offerings, shows the Norsemen's merciless exposure of the Idealist. With his "claim of the ideal" and philosophy of sacrifice, the Idealist becomes a veritable fiend who wrecks where he would have built. Relling, doctor of common sense, tells the idealist that the matter with him is "plaguy integrity-fever" and continual "delirium of hero-worship." He can't see life as it is. The doctor's solution is to cultivate the "life-lie" or life illusion in his patients. The play is one of the most real bits of life ever staged and is exceptionally well done by the Actor's Theater.

Rosmerholm is in strong contrast to the Wild Duck and depicts the decadent middle class: the struggle of pastor Rosmer to escape the family tradition of religion and war. The Stagers, Inc., do not give such an adequate performance of the play as is given in The Wild Duck, but the drama is powerful none the less. Conservatives in Isben's time, when the liberal party was in the ascendency in Norway, were as bitterly reactionary and as prone to incite to violence as today, if Dr. Kroll, headmaster of the school, is indication. "In my house, the very home of obedience and order—where one will, and one only, has prevailed," Kroll finds the ringleader of the school boy's free-thinking club in his own son. And he has to admit that "the worst of it is that it's all the cleverest boys in the form that have banded together in this conspiracy against me. Only the dunces at the bottom of the class have kept out of it." But it is Mortensgard, Party of Freedom leader, who "can do whatever he will. . . he never wills more than he can do." The pastor saps the strength of the woman who would save him, has no courage to sustain his conversion to the light, and finally drags Rebecca and himself into the mill race where his wife had thrown herself, demonstrating the ineffectiveness of his kind in the movement for emancipation.

OUR MARTYRS

Simeonov-Georgiev.

COMRADE Simeonov-Georgiev, a young student, has been killed in Losence by the Zankov murder bands after the house in which he lived had been fired upon. The Young Communist League and the revloutionary movement of the working class and the peasantry of Bulgaria have lost in him one of the best, most courageous and self-sacrificing young revolutionaries.

Only 22 years old when he died, he had, while still a scholar, joined the Communist movement. In 1920 he entered the Bulgarian Young Communist League. The outbreak of the revolt in September found him in Plevna, where actively participated in the struggle.

After the suppression of the revolt he unwaveringly continued to work in the Young Communist League. At the end of March police agents surrounded the house in which he lived along with two members of the Young Communist League. In order not to fall alive into the hands of the police he defended himself heroically up to the last

The Peasant International and the International Co-operative Alliance

THE Peasant International (International Peasants' Council) has addressed a letter to the International Co-operative Alliance in London, proposing that connections shall be established between the Alliance and the Peasant International, which latter body is at the same time the only international union of agricultural and peasant co-operatives. It is suggested in the letter that there shall be a constant exchange of material as well as the setting up of connections for joint trade in the agrucultural, peasant and workers' co-operatives, while it also contains a number of practical proposals as:

1. The establishment of an International Society for wholesale purchasing in which the consumers' societies of the International Co-operative Alliance, as well as the agricultural unions of the International Peasant Council, shall participate.

2. The establishment of an international co-operative bank in which the co-operative unions of both international organizations shall have shares.

3. Constant inter-communication both in the field of business and ideas, joint participation in international actions against exploitation by private capital, for the protection of the interests of the workers and peasants and their co-operative organizations, and against war and economic decay.

In addition to this the International Peasants' Council suggests its participation in the Congress of the International Co-operative Alliance which is to be held at the beginning of September in Geneva and expresses its readiness to send its representatives to the Congress.

The German "Arbeitgemeinschaft," which is a member of the I. P. C., and also the Small Holders' and Peasants' League of Baden have approached the I. P. C. with the request that the latter assist them thru the Soviet Co-operatives in supplying them with food for poultry.

The co-operative section of the I. P. C. applied to the appropriate Soviet and economic organs in order to ascertain the conditions and possibilities for carrying out a definite order on the part of the above named organizations.

This case marks the beginning of direct trade connections between the organizations affiliated to the I. P. C.

EVEN tho the United States government does not recognize the Soviet Union, the U. S. post office department does. There is no longer such a country as Russia. If you intend your letter to arrive at its destination inside the land of the victorious workers and peasants, address it "Union of Socialist Soviet Republics." This is according to an instruction sent out by the post office officials. If you mark the letter Russia, it will be returned with the legend "nobody home" or "no such country on the ante-revolutionary map."

MANY people make the mistake of thinking that there is only one Soviet Republic. In fact, there is a little world full of them. Russia proper is the nucleus around which all the other Soviet planets revolve. Every once in a while a couple of republics apply for affiliation. It is getting so now that the central committee fails to get excited unless half a dozen beg to come into the union at the same time. Just now two eastern countries are clamoring for admission No doubt, they will be admitted, provided their credentials are in good order.

THE young school teacher who is on trial down in Tennessee for teaching that man may have at least a grinning acquaintance with the ape, is lucky that he did not break into the front page a few hundred years ago. Instead of being on trial in a nice cool court house with scores of telegraph wires clicking out every word he utters, with several legal luminaries volunteering to defend him without pay, (greatest of miracles) his ears would be treated to the sound of tinkling bells, while monks got ready to feed him to the faggots.

YOUNG Mr. Scopes may ruminate on the experience of Messers. Bruno, Copernicus, and Galileo, who had a warm time owing to their indiscretion in making public their belief that the earth was not flat, neither did it stay in the one place, but spun around in a circle, like a lot of other planets, while the sun occupied a position in the center of the circles, keeping the planets at a safe distance, for their own good. The church informed the gentlemen above referred to that this teaching was contrary to what the christian god told the Hebrew Moses on the mountain and that unless they recanted, their tongues would be plucked out of their heads as a slight indication of the heavenly father's merciful indignation.

BRUNO, being a conscientious objector against recanting, took his seat on a bundle of sticks and was turned into ashes, while a multitude of ku klux klan and Bryanic morons applauded the sight. 40,000 GARMENT WORKERS GETTING 20 CENTS A DAY

Porto Ricans Slave for U. S. Bosses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 26—The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is interested in a bill forbidding home work introduced into the Porto Rican senate by Senator Santiago Iglesias.

The competition of the non-union home-sweatshop dress industry of the island, in which 40,000 women and children toil at an average wage of 20 cents daily, affects standards in the American industry.

Employers of the Porto Rican workers live in America and have their central offices in New York, say letters from Iglesias. His bill would penalize factory managers with fines and imprisonment for giving out home work.

FRENCH RETREAT TOWARD FEZ IN FACE OF RIFFS

Forced to Abandon 30 Outposts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, May 26. — The French troops have been forced to evacuate thirty beleaguered outposts in the Ouergha sector, French Morocco, the foreign office has admitted. The Riffian natives have advanced to the Ouergha river. The French invaders are now concentrating their efforts on a defense of Fez, the capital and largest city of Morocco. Bobane and Tounat have been fortified, according to the communique. These two posts control the road to Fez.

Interpellations on the Morocco invasion directed by the Painlevé government will be taken up in the chamber of deputies Wednesday, according to the present schedule. The Communists will condemn the entire Moroccan campaign as a war of aggression on behalf of the French imperialists.

M. Caillaux, minister of finance, has presented his financial program to the chamber of deputies. Its main feature is a heavier tax on the workers, while the employers and financiers are allowed to escape the biggest share of the tax burden.

Caillaux declared that even after the balancing of the budget, "if France succeeds in freeing herself from the burden of reconstruction, France will still face a crushing international debt of more than 14 billion dollars."

War Against Riffs Comes High.

Finance Minister Caillaux will ask parliament for an appropriation of 30,000,000 francs for the cost of the Riff war. The request will be referred to the finance committee for examination before coming before the chamber of deputies. The debate on Morocco will be immediately started when the Communist Deputy Doriot will demand an interpellation on the Riffian invasion.

EX-SEC'Y HUGHES DENIES HE WILL AID W. VA. MINERS

Canard Circulated by U. M. W. Officials

HAMILTON, Bermuda, May 26.—Denial was made today by Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state, that he has enlisted his services in the legal fight of the United Mine Workers against the injunctions issued by Judge William E. Baker, restraining the miners from attempting to organize the West Virginia non-union coal fields.

It was announced in Wheeling last Friday that Hughes had volunteered his services to aid the miners.

When this announcement was called to Hughes' attention, it was stated on his behalf that the report was not correct and that Hughes had no information regarding the matter. The former secretary of state is still vacationing at Pomander Gate.

WOOD'S TROOPS ATTACK MORO PEASANTS WHO CHARGE MISTREATMENT

MANILA, May 26.—A joint constabulary and navy seaplane attack was launched today under the command of Major Orville Johnson against the Moro peasants in the Lake Lanao region of Mindanao island, according to advices reaching Manila.

The Moros recently removed their children from the public schools and withdrew to their jungle fastness declaring they were being mistreated by Filipino officials.

Governor General Leonard Wood sent them an ultimatum last week to return to their villages. Refusal of the Moros to comply led to today's attacks.

REPORT DANISH GENERAL STRIKE WON WITH PAY RAISE FOR UNION

LONDON, May 26.—According to reports from Denmark, tho not yet confirmed by labor union sources, the Danish general transport workers' strike is won by the workers, the shipping companies having signed an agreement with the seamen and firemen granting an increase of five per cent in wages. The agreement is said to run for two years.

TROTSKY REFUTES ATTACK ON RUSSIAN COMMUNIST PARTY IN COMMENT ON BOURGEOIS CRITICS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 12—(By Mail.)—The tempest created by capitalist book-reviewers and editors over the book by Max Eastman concerning the differences existing since last year between Leon Trotsky, former commissar of war in the Soviet government and the Russian Communist Party has turned out to be a tempest in a teapot and to have left the hysterical "defenders" of Trotsky without an objejct for their volunteer solicitude. All thru a cablegram sent over the signature of Trotsky to the Sunday Worker thru the paper's correspondent at Moscow.

Upon the return of Trotsky from the south, where his health has apparently been recuperated and his abounding energy restored at the Sukhum sanitoria, Trotsky issued the following statement:

"Eastman's book to which you refer is unknown to me. The bourgeois newspapers which quoted it have not reached me.

"Of course, I refute in advance and most categorically any commentaries directed against the Russian Communist Party.

"The assertions of the press, which you cite, that I am favorably inclined towards bourgeois democracy and free trade, are crude inventions.

"I, at one with the whole Communist Party, consider that the Soviet system of the dictatorship of the proletariat and monopoly of foreign trade are inalienable conditions for socialist construction.

"Our party policy of enlisting the active participation of the broad masses of non-partisan workers and peasants in the management of the state is by no means an approach to the bourgeois parliamentary system. It is being effected within the bounds of the Soviet regime, which is directed by the Communist Party.

"The party's policy of carefully considering the interests of the peasant as a small producer, can by

POLE EXPLORER STILL MISSING ON FIFTH DAY

No Word from Amundsen, Lost Since Thursday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OSLO, May 26.—"No word from Amundsen."

That was the only answer the government could give on this the fifth day since Captain Raold Amundsen and Lieutenant Lincoln Ellsworth hopped off Spitzbergen in two aeroplanes last Thursday for what was supposed to have been a sixteen hour continuous flight to the pole.

Conflicting reports are reaching Oslo as to what the weather has been at the Pole. It is generally conceded, however, that snow has been falling and that the great stretch of sea and frozen land has been shrouded in fog.

If there has been a recent fall of snow, it was pointed out that this would make it difficult for the Amundsen-Ellsworth party to return either by air or foot.

LONDON, May 26.—Grettir Algarsson, young explorer who hoped to race in his collapsible dirigible against Captain Roald Amundsen's airplanes for the honor of first reaching the Pole thru the air, may assume the role of rescuer, it appeared today.

Airship difficulties have delayed his departure from Liverpool, but he may send his ship on ahead to Spitzbergen and follow in his blimp.

The young explorer, whose plan it first was to push his vessel as far north as the ice would permit, then inflate his collapsible dirigible and fly to the pole, would start his polar rescue flight from Spitzbergen, according to dispatches from Liverpool.

Charge Shepherd Witness Offered to Change Evidence

A charge that Robert White, missing prosecution witness, demanded $5,000 from defense attorneys for repudiation of his statement that he had seen William D. Shepherd at Charles C. Faiman's national university of science, was hurled into the Shepherd-McClintock maze as the trial of Shepherd on a charge of murder swung into the closing session of its eight almost futile days this afternoon. John J. Kelly, an insurance man made the charge.

Meanwhile, 15 of the 20 attorneys involved in the litigation over the will of young McClintock which left the bulk of his fortune to Shepherd, agreed to a postponement of the hearing until June 15.

Trial of Kluxer, Alleged Killer, is Delayed Until Aug.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 26.—D. C. Stephenson, former K. K. K. leader in Indiana, who with Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry face trial for murder as a result of the death of Madge Oberholtzer following an attack on her may not go to trial before August 1st.

The present term of the Hamilton county circuit, to which the trial of Stephenson and his alleged accomplices was venued from here last week, ends on August 1. When the transfer was made it was stated the trial would probably not be held until October since the Hamilton court docket is crowded for the remainder of the current term.

Judge Hines was said to have pointed out that important criminal cases take precedence over all others and that he would probably be able to fix a date before August 1, for trial of Stephenson, Klinck and Gentry if such a request was made.

Thirteen Off for Prison.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 26—Thirteen persons who pleaded guilty recently in federal court to various charges and were given prison sentences were taken to Leavenworth, Kansas, this afternoon under guard of deputies headed by Deputy United States Marshal Simmons T. Hickman.

BLAST KILLS 5 COAL MINERS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Lack of Ventilation by Management

By PAT H. TOOHEY.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EDWARDSVILLE, Pa.—(By Mail) A terrific gas explosion in the Red Ash vein of the Woodward Colliery, Glen Alden Coal Co., at Edwardsville late Friday afternoon, cost the lives of five miners and seriously injured many others. Laxity on the part of officials at the mine, by not insuring sufficent ventilation, is the probable reason.

Following on the heels of the near fatal explosion at Kingston, an adjoining mine, last Saturday, which imperilled the lives of 800 miners and injured 40, the families of many workers here today suffer the results of the carelessness of the lackeys of the coal operators of the Edwardsville mine.

Gas Explosion Probable.

The accident occurred last Friday afternoon as the men were about to quit work for the day. Suddenly there was a deafening report and a blinding flash and the lives of three workers were snuffed out in a moment. There were eight men working together and only one was able to make his way out to the section entrance to call for rescuers. The opinion prevails that a spark from an electric motor ignited a deep pocket of gas.

One of the miners who was saved, when interviewed at the hospital, described the tragedy as the most gruesome and appalling experience that he had ever known. Making his way out of the gaseous chamber he stum-

BRITISH AMBASSADOR WARNS OF IMPERIALIST COLLAPSE IN TALK TO IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE

By LAURENCE TODD

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, has answered the chorus of optimistic predictions as to American commercial and industrial prosperity voiced in Washington during the convention of the U. S. chamber of commerce by predicting the most terrible economic crisis that the modern world has yet encountered.

He has told the American nation bluntly, in a speech to the Iron and Steel Institute, that unless American tariff walls are promptly torn down, so that British and other European manufactured good may freely compete in our market, European business will go to smash. When that occurs, Britain as well as the rest of Europe will cease to pay interest on their war debts to America. They will have no income with which to make payments. And their distress will drag down American industries relentlessly.

All this has come as a shock to the tariff-drugged optimists in the capital. Just after Julius Barnes and Henry Robinson and the other leaders of the chamber of commerce crowd that will go to Brussels in June to run the international commerce chamber meeting had declared that America must have no competition from Germany, Britain serves notice that America cannot live within her tariff barricade; she must permit competition or she must expect Europe to repudiate.

Danger Ahead!

"If Great Britain cannot sell her products abroad," said Sir Esme, commenting bitterly on the unfavorable balance of British trade with the United States, "she cannot, of course, continue to buy raw materials and manufactured goods in the United States in the same heavy quantities as had been her custom.

"It is, I am sure, fully realized that Great Britain could scarcely carry on an unfavorable trade balance with the United States forever and yet pay the thirty-two odd million pounds per annum required to meet her indebtedness to the United States government. . . .

"I am not speaking now only for the United Kingdom, nor for the British Empire, but for the world at large in declaring that as I see things unless we can shortly restore a firm basis of confidence and credit thruout Europe and a return to the natural flow of trade—unless we can work on the principle of goods across the sea—we are heading for a worse cataclysm than that produced by the actual state of war."

The Dilemma of Imperialism.

Discounting the possible bluff and political motive in this statement, economists in the federal government still admit that it is essentially sound. If Europe is to pay its debts to America, it must pay in goods, and those goods must get thru our tariff wall.

But when that wall is broken, either American labor must be left to tragically widespread disemployment or it must accept a lower standard of living. A lower standard of living means less consumption of goods, which implies further industrial depression.

What Will Labor Do?

As tho to reply at once to this warning, the state department announced that it had sent word to European governments owing the United States for loans made after the armistice, that America wants them to pay up in accordance with contract. That is to say, Belgium and Italy and Czecho-Slovakia, highly industrialized, must manufacture goods cheaply enough to undersell their competitors, so that they can deliver a surplus in the world market and pay the United States.

Competition is to be brought home to American labor, thru depressing the standards of foreign labor. Yet a republican administration dare not reduce the tariff without peril to its own political existence. So the Coolidge administration is going to both eat its cake and have it—and let the smash come!

CAL ORDERS WAR DAY FOR JULY 4, TO KEEP WORKERS FROM HOLIDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 26.—President Coolidge, in a letter to the war department, has indorsed an annual "defense day," similar to the war demonstration held on last armistice day, for the purpose of disseminating propaganda for a larger army and navy.

Coolidge declared the date should be changed to July fourth. He made this recommendation at the request of business men who objected to giving their employes another holiday.

GARY LOCKOUT ENDS, BUILDERS RETURN TO WORK

GARY, Ind., May 26—The contractors' association, which had locked out three thousand Gary building trades workers a week ago, were reported to have called off the lockout and agreed that the men should return to work tomorrow morning.

Agreement was reached with building trades officials this afternoon. The lockout followed a strike of plumbers, who walked out on May 5, demanding an increase in pay of from $12 to $13 per day. A building program of approximately $6,000,000 had been suspended because of the controversy.

TOOTHLESS PICKETING BILL PASSES SENATE AND GOES TO HOUSE

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 26.—The senate today passed the Cuthbertson injunction bill, 28 to 15, and sent it to the house. The measure was brought forth following the house defeat of the Soderstrom anti-injunction bill, regarded as labor's prime issue in the legislature. It developed a mild form and specifies no injunction shall be issued against strikers so long as they assemble, picket or solicit peacefully.

KARAKHAN, SOVIET AMBASSADOR, TELLS CHINESE STUDENTS THE MEANING OF WORLD SOVIET RULE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKIN, China, May 26.—Additional extracts of the speech by L. M. Karakhan, Soviet ambassador to China, made to students of Tsinghua College, which aroused the American legation to protest to the Chinese foreign office, were made public here today.

They show that Karakhan went after the world imperialists with bare fists, much to the delight of the Chinese studnets, who urged that he provide them with complete copies of his address, which was made in Russian and then translated into Chinese by Prof. A. I. Ivanoff, Chinese secretary of the embassy of the Union of Soviet Republics.

Karakhan addressed the students at the invitation of the college president, Tsao, and was given a tremendous ovation.

Reviews Soviet Policies.

It was hardly possible, Karakhan declared, to cover in so short a time all the subject of the very essence and the policy of the Union, and so the speaker was compelled to confine himself to noting in the most general way such peculiar features and the main lines of policy of the Union as differentiate it from the capitalistic countries and allot to the U. S. S. R.

INJUNCTION FORBIDDING MINERS FROM TALKING, COMPARED TO THE DRED SCOTT DECISION OF 1858

WHEELING, W. Va., May 26. — Local miners are forbidden to talk of joining the union, and when spoken to regarding a union they must remain dumb, under the terms of the temporary injunction granted by Federal Judge W. E. Baker to coal operators in northern West Virginia. So-called peaceful persuation methods of picketing are strictily forbidden.

T. C. Townsend, counsel for the United Mine Workers, declared that the miners look upon the order as being "as momentous as that handed down in 1858 in the Dred Scott case, which declared a Negro to be a mere piece of property."

"This new injunction," said Townsend, "prohibits an employe of the company from talking of joining a labor union, and makes him dumb to anyone who cares to discuss unionization with him. It is in effect a thousand times worse than the Dred Scott decision, because it establishes an enslavement of the human mind, while the Scott decision merely placed in bondage the human body."

TO ERECT HUGE HALL FOR SCOPES' DARWIN TRIAL

Bryan to Display His Antics to Crowd

DAYTON, Tenn., May 26.—With the expectation that at least 20,000 persons would gather here July 10, for the trial of John T. Scopes, charged with teaching evolution to his high school pupils in violation of the Tennessee law, plans were being discussed here today to build a vast temporary auditorium to handle the crowd.

Bryan to Perform.

Judge John T. Raulston, who will preside at the trial, believes that the hearing will last for weeks and that some of the attorneys, such as William Jennings Bryan and the leading defense lawyers, will speak for two or three days.

"My suggestion," said Judge Raulston today, "is that a roof be built over a large vacant lot, perhaps, the Dayton baseball field and seats be built on tiers.

"At the very least, the place should seat 20,000 people. In my estimation the trial is of such interest and importance. I believe it fair to give both sides ample time to present their cases, also have set a date when all universities and schools will be thru so that scientists, theologians and other school men will be able to act as expert witnesses."

Study of Evolution Needed.

It is believed the judge's plans will be carried out.

When asked for his opinion of his indictment by the grand jury, Scopes said, "The verdict was as I had expected. I am pleased with it. The question involved in the case is one that will have to be decided some time so it might as well be now. I believe that the study of evolution is needed."

Scopes Counsel Also Persecuted.

Scopes chief counsel, John Randolph Neal of Knoxville, was dismissed from the university of Tennessee two years ago for teachings which the trustees declared were "too radical."

The attorney general had a bible at his table which he used as evidence against Scopes while the indictment was being argued. His evidence against Scopes included the textbook, "A Civic Biology," by George William Hunter, Ph. D. of Knox College, Illinois, and "General Science," by Lewis Elhuff, A. M., Yale, teacher at George Washington H. S., Pittsburgh, which Scopes had used as textbooks.

U. S. CRACKS THE LASH ON 'POOR LITTLE BELGIUM'

'Allies' Pet Martyr Told to Come Across

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The position of the United States with respect to the funding of the $470,000,000 Belgian debt has been fully explained to the Brussels government in a note transmitted thru Ambassador Phillips, it was announced officially at the state department today.

In this note, the contents of which were dictated by Secretary of State Kellogg, Belgium was informed that this government could not consent under any circumstances to receiving German reparations payments direct to liquidate the Belgian debt, but that payments would have to be made by Belgium without any regard to where the money was obtained.

MACHINES, SWELLING PROFITS OF A FEW OWNERS, DISPLACE WORKERS AND INCREASE UNEMPLOYED ARMY

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The report of the national industrial (employers') conference board showing that in March, 1925, industry was employing 20 per cent fewer workers than in June, 1920, marks the rapidity with which automatic machines are displacing human workers. With production so high that the country could not absrob all the goods turned out hundreds of thousands of workers were looking for a chance to work.

The Wall Street Journal reports that B. F. Goodrich Co., manufacturers of tires and rubber footwear, are producing approximately the same number of tires as in 1920 with a little over half as many workers—15,000 compared with 25,000 in 1920. An important factor in the profitable showing made by Goodrich in 1924, says the journal, was the installation of more modern machinery which resulted in reducing overhead.

Machines Ground Out Profits.

The latest issue of Iron Age shows the following example of modern machinery reducing the labor on various operations:

A shop cutting bronze driving-box shoes replaced a 10-year old planing machine with a new 48-inch Gray maximum service planer. Operating time was cut from 30 to 20 minutes. The investment of $4,700 is earning annual net profits of 43.6 per cent.

A railroad shop reduced the time for grinding crank pins from 45 to 20 minutes by an investment of $2,540 in new machinery. The annual net profit on the new investment is estimated at 108.3 per cent.

In milk bottle factories the substitution of a jigged up turret lathe for an engine lathe operated by a craftsman of the old school has reduced the time for making molds from 480 to 50 minutes. The addition investment of $4,793 made a net profit of 384.4 per cent tho the tools were depreciated a 100 per cent a year and the machine was busy only two-thirds of the time.

Not Used for Service.

Development of the internal gear spindle drive in connection with radial drills by the American Tool works reduced the time for boring locomotive side rods from 540 to 58 minutes.

The time required for one roughing and two finishing cuts on the inner cam surface of a pump body was reduced from 40 to 12 minutes by a No. 2-A Kearney & Trecker Milwaukee Milling machine. Allowing 100 per cent annual depreciation the net profits of this equipment were 309.2 per cent.

These are instances of the new industrial revolution which is producing chronic unemployment. The huge profits from capital invested in automatic machines comes largely out of corresponding reductions in wage payments. In spite of the apparent maintenance of peak wage rates the spending power of the workers is steadily reduced.

Making It Hot for the Ice Plant Bosses in New York

NEW YORK, May 26.— A strike for a $9 and 8-hour day and the 6-day week is being waged by engineers of Local Union No. 56, employed in ice plants. Union men are warned that the ice of the Knickerbocker Ice Co., the Williamsburgh Ice Co., Ruber Brothers Ice and Coal Co., and the Putnam Ice and Coal Co. is scab ice.

TAX PUBLICITY UPHELD BY U. S. SUPREME COURT

Newspapers Permitted to Reveal Incomes

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The United States supreme court today upheld as legal the publication of income tax payments in American newspapers.

This opinion was rendered by the court in a decision upholding the publication of income returns in the Kansas City Post and reaffirmed a moment later in legalizing similar publications in the Baltimore Sun.

The court held that newspapers may publish legally any income tax payments made public by commissioners of international revenue by order of the 1924 revenue law.

Lower courts sustained the right of the newspapers to treat as news the public report of the internal revenue commissioners, but the government held there was a distinction between making the returns open to public inspection by tax payers and printing or publishing them in newspapers, and brought the suit to the highest court.

The opinion was read by Justice Sutherland. He said congress, in making the income tax returns public had intended they should be open to all forms of publicity. This, he added, included their publication by newspapers.

Wealthy persons, especially those in government positions, objected to disclose their large incomes.

"Congress meant to abandon its policy of secrecy," he said.

LYNCHING MOB SEEKS VICTIM AT PORTLAND, MAINE

Call Out Police to Protect Jail

AUGUSTA, Maine, May 26.—Harry A. Kirby, arrested in connection with the murder of Miss Aida Hayward at Winthrop, was spirited away from Cumberland county jail at Portland today and brought to the Kennebec county jail here.

The authorities admitted that they feared open threats to lynch Kirby and every state highway policeman in Maine was mobilized to guard the local jail.

Prisoner is Transferred.

The transfer of Kirby from one jail to another was accomplished with great caution and with special squads of state highway patrolmen covering the Portland-Augusta road on motorcycles.

Plans then were begun to arraign Kirby in court on charges of murder and arson. Warrants charge him not only with the slaying of Miss Hayward, but the shooting of her aunt, Mrs. Emma M. Towns and the firing of the Hayward cottage at Lake Maranocook.

Claims He is Innocent.

Kirby has not changed his statement that he was innocent of slaying Miss Hayward, but that he found her body, feared that because of his record he would be blamed and sought to hide the body by placing it between two mattresses in the cottage which he occupied at the lake.

Precautions to guard Kirby were taken as the result of a gathering of five thousand persons in front of the local jail. Shouts of "lynch him" were heard on every hand.

Circulation of Soviet Ruble at Record Figure

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 26.—The Soviet Union had in circulation on April 1, 765,700,000 rubles, which represents an increase of 35,700 rubles, and the highest figure on record.

The previous high record was reached on Dec. 21, last, when 751,400,000 rubles were outstanding.

Chinese Students Hear Karakhan

a special role in the development of mankind.

"The Union," said Karakhan, "with its internal system and its international policy, is a creation of Lenin—inasmuch as with his mind and genius he discerned in the complex and entangled developments of world policy and the internal life of Russia herself the offsprings of a new world—the world of Soviet Republics, with their power of workers and peasants and their role of grave-diggers of capitalism and imperialism in the common struggle with all the oppressed nations of the world against any form of imperialistic oppression.

"Here, in China, the word imperialism is used very often, and the Chinese people—the revolutionary part—are right when they mean by it every form of oppression, violence and depredation from which this country suffers at the hands of imperialism. To drive this evil and free their country is the aim of an ever growing number of Chinese today and their struggle will have the more chances of success the better and the clearer it will be understood what imperialism is and in what forms it reveals itself for the most party."

The speaker then explained that imperialism is, above all, a phenomenon of the economic order; it is the highest form of capitalism, a stage which, in the scheme of world economy, is to be followed by the socialist order. Its depredatory nature imperialism may have been able to conceal on the eve of the world war; but, today, no one will be deceived any longer, especially here—in Asia, in China, where are to be found the chief sources of the world power of imperialism and where the latter's depredatory policy is felt daily by all the people as a whole and every Chinese individually.

Soviet Rule Opens New Era.

Karakhan then briefly stated the scientific theories on imperialism, mainly as expounded in what is called the "Leninism," demonstrating that ours is an epoch when capitalism, or rather, its supreme form—imperialism, has outlived its time, and when we are entering upon a new era of a long struggle for new economic and political forms, for the rising to power of the social layers oppressed as a class or nationally.

"The first pages of this new era"—the speaker declares—"have been opened by the creation of the Soviet Republics and their seven year's existence."

Tells of Chinese Struggles.

Karakhan then proceeded to sketch a parallel between the struggle which the Soviet Union has gone thru victoriously against the world imperialists and the struggle that faces China, a parallel from which this country must draw hope and courage.

"The appearance of the Union of Soviet Republics on the world historical stage meant more than a victory of the oppressed class of workers and peasants; it also means the victory of the nationally oppressed peoples of the former Russian empire and the beginning of the fight of the oppressed peoples of the world for their national liberation.

"In this fight, the triumph of the oppressed peoples is assured," the speaker declared emphatically.

Indeed, shortly before his death, Lenin was writing that the "issue depends in the long run on the fact that Russia, India, China, etc., make up a huge majority of mankind." Lenin divided all mankind into two categories—the group of oppressors and that of the oppressed peoples, three quarters of all mankind being in the latter group.

Moreover, it may be safely said that imperialism is itself, so to say, preparing the peoples of Asia for the fight against imperialism itself—mainly, owing to the inevitable industrialization of the oriental countries and training them in the art of war. And what is fatal for the west is that, being to live at the cost of the east, the west must supply to its colonies or the semi-colonial oriental countries the very means that will help the latter to overthrow their oppressors.

Karakhan also touched upon the oriental and, more particularly, the Chinese policy of the Soviet governments, which has ever since its rise to power been inspired by feelings of brotherhood and friendship—a token thereof being the Soviet-Chinese agreement of 1924.

As the speaker had to considerably shorten his lecture, in view of the rather late hour, he was requested by the audience to send them the text more at length in print.

War Department Saves Bosses Money

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The war department has accepted the suggestion of President Coolidge and will hold a national defense test on the fourth of July, instead of on Armistice Day, as originally planned, Dwight Davis, acting secretary of war announced this afternoon. The change was made to prevent the workers from getting an extra holiday.

HEROIC WILLIMANTIC TEXTILE WORKERS THREATENED BY BOSS

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., May 25.—Threats of the American Thread Co. that those of its 2,500 striking employes who do not return at once will lose seniority rights are met by a statement of the United Textile Workers' Union that the strike will continue till the 10 per cent cut has been restored.

Baltic Beggar Nations Getting Slim Handouts From Capitalist States

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Baltic beggar nations, cap in hand at the beck and call of allied imperialism, do not find as rich pickings among the great capitalist states, as they did in the days immediately following the war. Most of them, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia, Finland—torn from the Union of Soviet Republics by the Versailles peace, their economic life shattered as a result—cannot even get a hand-out from the House of Morgan.

American workers might study with interest the statement made by Charles Walters, member of the Painters' Union, just returned from Latvia, where he has spent a four months' visit. Latvia, under Morgan-French guidance, is anti-Bolshevik. Here is the picture Walters paints:

• • • •

"The once booming industries of Latvia have gone to pot. Little remains of the great rubber and machinery plants that once were outstanding features of Riga, and the lively harbor activities of former times have waned. Unemployment is rife, wages low, where work is to be had, and the cost of living high."

Morgan, the banker, agrees with the findings of Walters, the worker. Morgan knows that the city of Riga has defaulted on her pre-war debts, and that Latvia's bankers and landlords can't repay the loans secured to combat workers' and peasants' rule.

The money lenders, of London and New York, are therefore turning their backs on Latvia. Morgan finds safer fields of investment in the Argentine, rich with natural resources, where he is now floating a $45,000,000 loan.

There is no use turning to France, that tried to build of the Baltic states a "cordon sanitaire" against the Soviet Union. Right now imperialist France is too busy spending what money she can get her hands on fighting the Riffs in Africa; at the same time not being allowed to forget that her great American creditors, the U. S. government and Wall Street's international bankers are loudly demanding payment of the war debts.

• • • •

Economic malnutrition seizes the Baltic states just as it has taken hold of Austria, incubator offspring of the treaty of Versailles, and other nations artificially carved out of Europe, with no thought as to whether they will live or starve. They are mostly starving in the best Latvian style.

While the Soviet Union is extending its railroads, rebuilding its harbors, reconstructing all industry, developing its agriculture and working out an extensive program of electrification, resulting in the rejuvenation of the whole nation under Bolshevik rule; the reports from Lithuania for instance say that a special commission has been appointed to find out what's wrong with its capitalist rule. The country is going to seed, with no direct railway connection between Memel and Kovno, inadequate harbor facilities, lack of sufficient warehouses, and other necessities absolutely demanded by the economic life of the nation. But capitalist Lithuania, like all her Baltic neighbors, stagnates with its working and farming masses under the heel of its terror rule.

• • • •

The Baltic states must and will become a part of the Soviet Union. The workers and peasants of these small nations, being closest to the Workers' Republic, appreciate most the benefits to be achieved under liberating Soviet rule.

Notice the Turcomans in Persia under the British. They are jealous of the freedom, of the new life enjoyed by the Turcomans under the Soviets. Over there, in far Asia, these Persian Turcomans are struggling to enlist under the Soviet banner. They will succeed.

• • • •

It was for raising this cry, of the march toward Communism knocking at their very doors, among the workers of Poland, that the Polish reaction jailed and sought the life of Stanislav Lanzutsky. Capitalism's blockade against Communism—the small nations along the western frontier of the Soviet Union—is crumbliing. Communism comes marching on in the wake of the Proletarian Dictatorship.

mers of monkdom muttered over their crackers and booze.

HISTORY does not record an exodus of lawyers to defend Bruno, Galileo and Copernicus against the ecclesiastical witch hunters of that time. The lawyers might share the fate of the clients, and furthermore, the art of publicity was only in its infancy. If the Tennessee school teacher attempted to put across Leninism instead of Darwinism, it is not very likely that Dudley Field Malone, who specializes in the matrimonial tangles of the upper classes and Clarence Darrow who snaps his pet suspenders and drenches emotional juries with tears of eloquence in prosperous murder cases, would be now on their way to Dayton, Tennessee, giving their services free in his defense. Such is evoluttion.

NO sooner had Wall Street's battleships finished the maneuvers in the Pacific, maneuvers directed at Japan, than another offensive of American imperialism was organized with a base in the same region. The new game will be called "peace maneuvers" and the object is, obviously, to cover up the belligerent aims of the recent war games with a pacific smoke screen. It is announced that the nationals of seven countries will confer at Honolulu for two weeks beginning July 1.

THERE will be representatives there from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, China, the United States, and the Philippine Islands. With the possible exception of China, Japan is completely isolated in this conference. And the chairman of the American group is Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland University, Jr., and brother of the secretary of the United States navy. Among those backing the conspiracy are Rockefeller, the oil mogul; Barney Baruch, the gambler and subsidizer of the Williamstown Institute and practically every faker who has been used by the American capitalists for years to bluff the world into believing that Wall Street had only pacific intentions. This outfit will bear watching.

BOTH KINDS OF EDUCATION AT B. R. T. MEET

Chamber of Commerce versus Foster

By Paul Lukachie

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 26.—(By Mail).—The Ladies Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen held their meeting May 21-25 while the B. of R. T. was in convention.

The chamber of commerce thought that it would make a hit with the B. of R. T. by lolly-popping the ladies' auxiliary. So after making a long speech a chamber of commerce guy presented the president, Clara Bradley, with a large and expensive fan.

Then there was an enormous box of chocolates brought in by two men. The box weighed about 75 pounds and each lady was presented with a piece of candy. It should have been taffy to match the flattering action of the slick bourgeoisie.

Finally, the chamber of commerce presented the auxiliary with a large flag (not a red flag, however) and got them to march around the room with the flag. Then they got the ladies to singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee." But not everyone stood up during the singing.

While a sympathiser here was distributing handbills advertising the Foster's meeting of railroaders, he got to an engine in the yards but was told someone had beaten him to it and the engine crew already had a handbill.

While talking, along came a railroad shopman, rushing thru the yards with still more leaflets distributing to those who had not yet received them. All were interested and showed the discontent of the railroad men with Bill Lee's treachery and class collaboration policy.

AVERAGE WAGE IS LOWER THAN GOVT. MINIMUM

Garment Workers Need Demanded Raise

NEW YORK, May 26.— Wages in the cloak industry are still far below the sums needed to support a family of five, say the International Ladies' Garment Workers in their final briefed arguments before the Smith mediation commission which is sitting on the demand for wage increases and other improvements in conditions.

The average cloak worker earns $1,760 annually and the amount estimated by the bureau of municipal research for a family of five is $2,066 a year, leaving a deficit of $306.

The department of labor estimate of a living standard is $2,088; the labor bureau's minimum for unskilled workers' costs is $2,275 and for skilled workers $2,889.

The glaring difference between the $1,760 paid the average cloak worker and these figures disposes of employers' arguments that demands for small increases are excessive.

AMERICAN CAPITAL TO MOBILIZE LABOR FAKERS IN FIGHT UPON INTERNATIONAL LABOR UNITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, May 26.—The labor fakers, big business men and bankers associated in the National Civic Federation are all heated up about the DAILY WORKER and the story it carried recently on the possibility of the issue of international trade union unity being brought into discussion of the American labor movement by the fraternal delegates from the British Trade Union Congress who will visit the A. F. of L. convention next October.

Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the executive council and one of the leading exponents in America of the open shop movement, in a statement Sunday to the New York Times, declared the "labor members" of the Civic Federation were very much worried at the prospect of A. A. Purcell, president of the Amsterdam International and leader of the British unions in the Anglo-Russian committee for International Unity of all unions, coming as delegate.

Easley announces that Hugh Frayne general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and Peter J. Brady, president of Federation Bank in New York City, are going to explain the danger of getting a breath of sense and solidarity into the American labor movement to a meeting of the startled members of the Civic Federation.

To Mobilize Labor Fakers

The inference of Easly is that the two mentioned labor fakers and all the faker family would be mobilized by the American capitalist to prevent the British delegation from making any speeches to American unionists in favor of the uniting in one great international organization all the unions of the world, upon a basis of the class struggle for the overthrowal of capitalism.

In his statement to the New York Times, Mr. Easley quotes at length from the DAILY WORKER, but does not indicate what measures, whether of deportation, imprisonment or a "Karolyi gag," shall be used on the sedate representatives of several millions of British union men to keep them from bringing the message of unity to American labor.

A Mean Dilemma

Another angle of the dilemma is the fact that both right and left wings of British labor is to be represented, and while the open shoppers and labor fakers can get along amicably with Ex-Premier MacDonald, the difficulty of shutting out Purcell of the left wing while admitting MacDonald and his kind, is sure to cause an international scandal if carried out.

The world seems, to Mr. Easley, to be controlled by a malevolent deity bent on making trouble for American capitalism.

Blast Kills Five Coal Miners in Pennsylvania Pit

bled over the body of another miner. He attempted to carry the unconscious miner to the fresh air, but his strength gave out and he was forced to abandon his fellow worker. The miner he tried to save died later in the hospital. After the blast of the explosion, the mine became dense with smoke and fumes. Concussion and the after-damp (poisonous gas) are believed to be what killed the miners.

Find Motorman Dead.

Workers on the following shift, on their way to the foot of the slope, found an electric motor, demolished and off the track, with the burned and mangled body of the motorman, a 26-year-old youth, underneath. A jack was necessary to extricate the body.

This explosion is a total of three within a month, costing the lives of eight unfortunate miners, with misery and hardships to the scores that were injured. Gas explosions would not occur if the bosses would see that sufficient brattices are built in order to insure sufficient and proper ventilation.

The bosses do not care. They care for the profits that will accrue from the life blood of their underground slaves. They do not care for the many little children and dependents of those who have been killed in their service, they care only for returns on their investments, piously pretending not to see the blood upon the coal, the blood of an oppressed working class.

Building Unions Drive Against "Open Shop."

The building trades unions of Chicago will make a general drive for the closed shop on June 1, the "citizens' committee for the enforcement of the Landis award" declares. MAYOR HYLAN HAS N. Y. JOBLESS ARRESTED FOR ANNOYING RICH SHARKS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 26—It has been the custom for restaurant workers to gather around the corners of Fulton and Nassau Streets for the purpose of securing (commonly called a dinner trick) short days' work of about three or four hours, the minnimum wage being one dollar and two meals.

Thus the workers save the 10 per cent employment fee extracted by the employment sharks. For the past twenty years it was a general thing to see from one hundred to one hundred and fifty gather around daily in accordance with the economic conditions prevailing in the country.

Some of our select citizenry owning real estate in the neighborhood sent in a complaint to Mayor Hylan, who turned the matter over to the police department. The result was a wholesale arrest this morning of these workers.

At least now they are sure of their subsistence. They do feed you in jail.

Erie Wins Division of Profits.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The interstate commerce commission ordered that the Erie railroad receive a division of the 3 cents a 100 pounds on all fresh fruit and vegetable shipments coming into its Duane street station in New York City over transcontinental lines.

The commission ordered that on the remainder of the revenue, the lines east of Chicago shall receive 27.5 per cent and the lines west of Chicago 72.5 per cent. The order made retroactive and will take effect as of September 13, 1922.

Several hundred railroads are affected by the decision.

BRITISH GOVT. THREATENS WAR ON UNEMPLOYED

Churchill's Contemptuous Sneer at Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON,—(By Mail).—Churchill's jibe at the unemployed as "learning to qualify for the dole" is more than a piece of ill-mannered abuse. It is symtomatic of the intention of the conservative government to give ear to the shrieks of its supporters and begin the offensive on the dole at the same time as they start the offensive on the wages. The period from 1919 on, has shown a tendency on the part of the unemployed, especially those in receipt of any benefit at all, to take the side of any section of workers on strike.

This healthy attitude on the part of the unemployed is of course hotly resented by the capitalists. Only fear of agitation has prevented the wiping out of the dole hitherto, but now that the labor government has prepared the way for the conservative re-actionaries there is going to be a tightening of the screw on the unemployed. This can be affected without any new legislation, the mandate of the minister of labor enables him to erase practically every person in receipt of what is known as uncovenanted benefit, that is benefit over and above what the deductions from wages while working entitle a recipient to draw.

Churchill's budgeteering prepares the way for dividing the workers along the line of covenanted and uncovenanted benefit receivers, and bases his new insurance proposals on a solvent unemployment fund, which can be secured when the unemployed drawing benefit number not more than 800,000.

Removed Thousands

The capitalist press has been howling for a drastic use of the powers of the minister of labor to cut down the numbers on the dole, and Sir S. H. Maitland the minister in question, has removed eleven to twelve thousand from the register of those entitled to draw benefit. Solvency is to be secured at the expense of the most poverty stricken workers. These in turn it is hoped to use to break all the strikes that are bound to occur in resistance to the new offensive being prepared against miners, engineers, railway workers, etc. Fortunately the unemployed are rousing themselves a little, street demonstrations are becoming more common, and there is talk of another hunger march on London, to compel the conservative government to keep its hands off the dole.—R. Stewart.

Foster Speaks this Evening on British Minority Movement

The fact that the combined forces of American capitalism and labor bureaucracy is alarmed over the prospect of the visit of British labor union leaders who have moved to the left and are actively championing world trade union unity, is sufficient indication of the importance of the left wing in the British unions.

Tonight, Wednesday, May 27, William Z. Foster, who attended the conference of the British minority left wing while on a recent trip to Europe, will speak on the Minority Movement in the British Unions at Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western avenues at 8 o'clock. This is the regular monthly meeting of the T. U. E. L. in Chicago, and other interesting reports on union matters are also up. There is no admission charged and all workers are invited to come.

AUSTRIAN WORKERS DEMONSTRATE AGAINST FASCIST MURDERERS

VIENNA, May 26.— Members of the Austrian nationalist organization, which is a part of the "Rheinland" branch of the Rossbach German fascisti, have been arrested charged with participating in the riot at Moedling. Workers turned out by the thousands at the funeral of one of the workers who was killed in the fighting. Most of them carried revolvers in their hands.

CAL AIDS WHITE TERROR AGAINST ESTHONIAN REDS

Workers Party Paper Barred from Reval

NEW YORK, May 26—The "Uus Ilm," the Esthonian organ of the Workers (Communist) Party has received the following communication from the United States post office:

"This office is advised by the postal administration of Esthonia thru the office of the second postmaster general that copies of the "Uus Ilm" edited by the American Esthonian Society, this city, is prohibited by the sentence of the court of justice for a period of two years and that in execution of said sentence and in conformity with Article 18, section 4 of the Postal Convention of Madrid of 1920, all numbers of the weekly mentioned, upon arriving in Ethonia will be confiscated.

"Please take due notice of the information furnished regarding the prohibition against copies of your publication addressed for delivery in Esthonia.

"Respectfully yours,
"J. J. Kiely, Postmaster."

This communication proves conclusively that the United States government is acting in alliance with the hangman government of Esthonia in order to keep the workers of Esthonia ignorant of the Communist Party's program. The United States government believes that, in this way, it will keep down the revolution in Esthonia.

The Esthonian government has a good white guard agent in the Esthonian ambassador, Professor Antonius Piip, who is publishing a white guard paper in this country and doing everything in his power to caluminate the Communist Party and to distort the intentions of the Communists.

Afraid of Truth.

This persecution of the Communist press will not keep the Communist press from operating. The persecution in itself proves that the government of Esthonia and of the United States are afraid to let the workers know the truth of the system under which they live and suffer. This joint persecution is in line with the alliance of all capitalist governments against the Communist parties, just as they are conducting a joint campaign against Soviet Russian and the Communist International. The "Uus Ilm" will continue its work, despite this decision.

PARIS, May 26.—The Spanish observation balloon Jupiter, was seen to sink early today during a severe storm which carried her out to sea, according to a Barcelona despatch to Le Journal. The entire crew are believed to have drowned.

CARMEN DEMAND BETTER WORKING CONDITIONS, PAY

Corporation Would Reduce Their Wages

The Chicago street car men will not vote on the wage controversy between the Chicago Surface Lines company and the union, at their meeting in Carmen's Hall Monday night, William Quinlan, president of the union, told the DAILY WORKER. The contract between the union and the utilities corporation expires on May 30, and the union has demanded a five-cent an hour increase in wages. The Surface Lines made a counterproposal that the wages be reduced five cents an hour in the new contract. The union meets on Monday night to consider the new contract.

That a new agreement will be reached without permitting the street car workers to vote to fight for their demands, which include better conditions as well as the wage increase, was indicated by Quinlan, who told the DAILY WORKER, "President Blair of the Chicago Surface Lines will be in town Wednesday, and I expect him to telephone me. I will not take the matter to the men Monday night for a vote but will discuss the agreement with Blair."

The 18,000 employes of the company voted three weeks ago for the increase in wages. They also asked that night runs be closed at six o'clock in the morning and for the inauguration of an insurance plan to be paid for by the company.

Quinlan declared a strike would not be called, "Until the men have had an opportunity to vote on the proposal of the company."

Mellon Would Repeal Tax Publicity Law to Shield Wealthy

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Administration officials indicated the treasury department would ask congress to repeal the publicity clause following the decision of the U. S Supreme Court upholding the law. This would be in line with the known opposition of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who himself was hurt by the publicity as it revealed his huge income, as head of the aluminum trust.

The treasury department which along with Coolidge, is opposed to the law announced that the 1924 income tax payments will be released for publication some time between August 1 and September 15. Officials explained that returns both for the calendar year of 1924 and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, will be included in the payments published. It was charged that undue delay had been permitted in the hope that the supreme court would hold the law unconstitutional.

It is harder for the millionaires to dodge income tax payments then publicity is allowed.

To Investigate "Heretics."

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 26—Complete investigation of all charges against the New York presbytery involving the Fosdick case and alleged licensing of ministers failing to affirm certain tenets was recommended to the presbyterian general assembly by the committee on bills and overtures today. Report will be made to the assembly next year.

GREEK WORKERS OF YORKVILLE, O., GIVE $14 TO CROUCH CASE

YORKVILLE, Ohio, May 26.—The Greek workers of Yorkville, at a meeting here to protest against the imprisonment of Walter Trumbull and Paul Crouch, U. S. soldiers stationed at Hawaii, donated $14.00 for the defense of the prisoners, and forwarded the money direct to the Schofield Barracks guard house.

Crouch was sentenced to 40 years, but his sentenced was later cut to three. Trumbull's sentence was reduced from 26 to 2 years. The soldiers were arrested solely because they are Communists.

Eight-hour Day Buried.

GENEVA, May 26.—Speaking of the Washington convention of six years ago which provided for an eight-hour day as a "workers' victory," M. Jouhaux, French delegate to the league of nations international labor conference, urged ratifiecation of the convention. The convention has had not the least effect in securing the eight-hour day for the workers.

Close Up Bucketshop.

Twelve employes of the Jack H. Davis & Co., alleged bucketshop at 332 S. La Salle St., closed by federal authorities who charge that downstate small town investors have lost $250,000 thru the firm, have been subpoenaed for questioning about the crash by Federal Judge Wilkerson.

A lawyer, Harry Z. Perel, also has been subpoenaed to explain what he knows about the operations of the firm.

Arthur S. Gerson, manager of Davis & Co., meanwhile is being held by United States Marshal Anderson, who questioned him in an effort to learn the identity of the real heads of the firm. Letterheads gave a frank Thomas as president and an August W. Pearson as vice-president of the company.

WORLD WAR VETERANS DEMAND THAT FRENCH TROOPS LEAVE AFRICA

MINNEAPOLIS, May 26.— "We ask all organizations to join with us in requesting Pres. Coolidge to call upon France to withdraw the troops and permit the natives of Morocco to rule their own country," asserts Emil E. Hopkins, national president, world war veterans.

"Reparations payments to France by Germany under the Dawes plan are being used for the French army in bringing the free natives of Morocco under subjection. Germany is paying the bills for the terrible French outrages in Morocco."

BY HERMINIA ZUR MÜHLEN
TRANSLATED BY IDA DAILES

This book of Fairy Tales is the first ever issued in the country to really fill the urgent need for children's stories from a working class view-point.

The author, Herminia Zur Mühlen, is recognized in Germany as a writer of children's stories of the highest order—stories that are distinct from any ever written and carrying a promise of the new proletarian literature of the future.

The translation by Ida Dailes brings out in bold relief the beauty of these stories.

This American publication is also enriched by four, full page, beautiful drawings and cover designs by Lydia Gibson—in addition to many smaller drawings from the original German edition.

COMRADES DOING SPLENDID WORK IN SHEBOYGAN

Pack Big Hall for Soviet Russia Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., May 26—One of the most successful exhibitions of the pictures showing scenes in Russia and Germany staged in any part of the country was given here last week when the local opera house was packed with an audience that enjoyed every minute of the show.

The local members of the Workers Party, mostly South Slavs, are pleased with themselves. It was their hard work that made the affair the success that it was. Tho few in numbers they covered the town with posters and leaflets, and sold enough tickets before the doors were opened to guarantee all expenses. The manager of the local opera house expressed surprise that a few radicals could pull off such an organizing feat.

Comrade McCarthy addressed the audience in behalf of Irish Famine Relief and a collection amounting to $48.00 was taken up for the relief of the Irish peasants in the famine region.

Last Sunday a meeting was held in the Labor Temple, with T. J. O'Flaherty and Comrade Zinnich, of the South Slavic Federation, as speakers.

Comrade Matt Shooks, organizer of the South Slavic branch of the Workers Party in Sheboygan, presided. Comrade Shooks is a live wire and he and the other comrades in Sheboygan deserve credit for the splendid work they are doing despite the usual obstacles that confront pioneers engaged in the task of laying the basis for a revolutionary organization.

Annual Picnic of Y. W. L. at Beyer's Grove on June 14

The committee on the arrangements for the coming Young Workers' League picnic to be held at the Beyer's Grove, California Ave. and Irving Park Blvd. has made all preliminary arrangements for the best attended and most interesting gathering of young workers and juniors ever held in the city of Chicago.

The committees for various tasks at the picnic were elected. Committees for entertainment were especially picked out to consist of the most active and inventive comrades. Besides the regular entertainments at the picnic such as the various games and athletics, there will be a short musical program with mass singing, a few solos and a couple of good speakers.

The Juniors who are helping the League to put the picnic across, are instructed by the League to prepare an elaborate program and no doubt they will do that with their usual energy and enthusiasm.

The grove is easily accessible from every part of the city. Tickets in advance are 35 cents, at the door 50 cents. They can be secured at either the national or local office of the League, 1113 W. Washington Blvd. or 19 S. Lincoln St. and at every branch meeting of the Party or League and from every member.

Young workers at the factories where the League is carrying on campaigns will be especially invited to this picnic by special pluggers printed for that purpose.

Calles Acts as Strikebreaker.

MEXICO CITY, May 26.—President Calles has promised American ambassador James Sheffield that he will protect the property of the United States mill and sugar cane owners here. He is driving Mexicans off the land, Calles said, and is settling labor troubles for the American Smelting and Refining company.

WHITEMAN SPEAKS ON NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS AT CLEVELAND MEETING

By NELL AMTER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., May 26.—The local American Negro Labor Congress committee held a meeting here at Beulah church, East 31st St. and Cedar Ave., at which Lovett Fort-Whiteman was the principal speaker. He had an enthusiastic audience to hear about the congress.

Whiteman proved himself an excellent speaker, as the response of the audience showed. A collection was taken by the chairman, Brother Whitlow, representative of the Negro members of the Building Laborers' Union. The secretary-treasurer of the Hod Carriers' Union, as well as two members of the Workers (Communist) Party spoke, with discussion by various people in the audience.

Altogether the meeting was a success. Seventeen copies of the Young Worker were sold. The Foster meeting for Sunday at the Labor Temple was announced, and the meeting was adjourned at 10:30 o'clcok.

This meeting marks the beginning of what appears to be a promising career of the American Negro Labor Congress Committee, Local Cleveland

Discussion in the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International on the American Question

Statement of the Central Executive Committee.

OWING to the circulation of many false rumors in the party relative to the stand of Comrade Zinoviev regarding the construction of the central executive committee of our party at the next party convention, the C. E. C. finds it necessary to issue the following statement of fact as to what actually transpired in this connection.

After the recent party delegation had been in Moscow for over two months, and after the issues involved had been thoroly discussed in the American commission and the decision was about to be made, the representatives of the C. E. C. (majority), Comrades Foster and Cannon, had a conference with Comrade Zinoviev in which the latter, upon his own initiative, proposed that the present majority of the C. E. C. should be given a two-thirds majority in the incoming central executive committee. In accordance with this proposition, the following clause was contained in the first draft of the decision on the American question:

"The central committee of the Workers Party will retain its present composition until the party conference is held and the new central committee is to be so elected at the party conference that the Foster group obtains a majority within it, and the Ruthenberg group is represented proportionately at least by one-third. The two leading comrades, Foster and Ruthenberg, are to be re-elected."

Two or three days after this draft appeared, Comrades Foster and Cannon had another conference with Comrade Zinoviev, in which the latter stated that opposition had developed towards his proposal based upon constitutional grounds. He stated that this opposition maintained that under the statutes of the Comintern each party had the right to select its own central executive committee and that only in serious crises, where there is a revolutionary situation or where the party is in great danger, is the Comintern justified in organizing the central executive committee. The claim was made that no such critical situation existed in America and that, therefore, the direct organization of the C. E. C. by the Comintern was inadvisable. Comrade Zinoviev stated that he recognized the force of the objection that there was no critical situation in America, and would, therefore, withdraw his proposal. He agreed to appear before the plenum of the enlarged executive and to state that he had made this proposal upon his own initiative and to give the reason for its withdrawal, which he did.

Following are the speeches in the enlarged executive committee of the C. I. when the report of the American commission was presented.

COMRADE KUUSINEN gave a report on the work in the American commission:

The American commission, with the American comrades, unanimously decided today to recommend that the draft resolution which are submitting here be adopted. The question upon which the conflict arose in the American party was whether the party should fight in the immediate future for a labor party or not. As you know, the majority of the central committee of the American party opposed it, and the minority supported it. In the opinion of the commission, the majority based its policy in this respect too much on superficial temporary phenomena. The minority is absolutely right in its confidence in the vitality of the labor party movement.

But the question has also another side. In speaking of the labor party, it was evident that one side has an entirely different conception of the labor party from the other. One side thought of the coming labor party in a much narrower sense than it ought. A revolutionary, or at least semi-revolutionary labor party will probably always remain a pious wish. A revolutionary labor party is so long an impossibility, as long as the Workers Party of America will become this labor party. But it is possible that a labor party will rise earlier than that.

WHAT purpose can a labor party serve for us? It will become a field of activity for our revolutionary work among the masses, in order to win them over gradually to the revolutionary standpoint. But it will also be a school for the working masses themselves, where they will get the experience of the necessity of class organization, and one other very important experience—the experience of the treacherous role of the reformists, who will in all probability take the lead in this movement. We have already had a clear symptom of this during the last few weeks. The socialist party under the leadership of the well-known Mr. Hillquit, was compelled recently to oppose the LaFollette party on the question of the labor party. The reformists could not formally abandon their leading role in the labor organizations. Otherwise they would be politically dead.

The commission proposed that the former slogan "Farmer Labor Party" must be changed from now on to that of "The Labor Party" only. That must be done in conformity with the change in the objective situation in America. The agricultural crisis was temporarily overcome by capitalism in America, although it was accomplished by the expropriation of the property of a large mass of small farmers. At present there is no basis for a joint party of the workers and small farmers. That naturally does not mean that the Communists must not continue their work among the small farmers with the greatest energy.

THE working class is approaching great mass struggles. On the whole, however, it must be said that at present the situation is not yet pregnant with revolution. American capitalism seems to be standing at the height of its power. At present it has overcome the situation created by the superfluity of capital by exporting capital to impoverished Europe. The Dawes affair seems a step toward world monopoly to American finance capital. This great power is, however, deceitful. When one is standing on top and can stay there, it is a very advantageous position. But when he comes to a slant and begins to slide, then the higher he stands, the worse it is for him. The great task of the American comrades is to help finance capital to slide down.

In the resolution the commission stated that both the leading groups have made mistakes in their platform; the party is, however, well on the road to Bolshevization, but it is still much too weak. The party comrades of both groups must together do everything in their power to strengthen the party.

One other important task: the party has a right wing led by a comrade named Lore, who may not be altogether unknown to you, and of whom there can be no doubt that he is an opportunist. The commission declares in its resolution that there is no room for such an opportunist as Lore in the central committee of the party. The commission did not express an opinion on what the right place is for him. that has been left to the congress of the Workers Party to decide. We are convinced that all the comrades of the central committee of the party, irrespective of the group to which they belong, will deal with this question without ambiguity at the party congress. (Applause).

COMRADE ZINOVIEV said:

Comrades, I should like to make the following statement on the American question:

In the course of the negotiations I myself moved that the composition of the future central committees of the American party be already intimated here in Moscow. I proposed that the present majority retain a majority in the future central committee, but that the present minority be assured representation proportional to its strength, to wit, not under one-third.

During the negoitations I then withdrew my motion as inexpedient. We are of the opinion that after having formulated a unified political platform we may leave it to the party itself to elect its central committee at the next party convention as it sees fit. This is in no way intended to express a preference for one of the two wings of the party.

I must emphasize that the Foster majority did not absolutely insist upon having the composition of the central committee fixed here. That means that my motion was made neither at the initiative of the majority nor of the minority, but on my own initiative.

YOU know, comrades, that the commission has put only one condition, that the opposition, that is the social-democratic group headed by Lore, be not represented in the central committee.

We believe that both wings, Foster's as well as Ruthenberg's, by all means belong in the central committee. Of course it is not easy for both wings to obtain a majority. Nevertheless, each maintains that it will gain the majority. The future will show which of the two has deceived itself. We can only wish both wings the best of good luck. Let them try to win a victory on the basis of the platform of the Communist International, however, only on the basis of the platform here formulated.

The wish was also expressed that both tendencies unite in fighting the social democratic tendency of Lore. If one wing should endeavour to defeat the other thru collaboration with Lore that would be disloyalty to the Communist International. After eliminating the social democratic opposition a free-for-all struggle is permissible, of course in a comradely form within the organization and only up to the party convention. After the convention peace and tranquility must prevail so that an American question should not again require the attention of the Comintern for a long time to come.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the American majority, Comrade Foster, said:

On behalf of the majority, I would like to state that we fully accept the resolution of the American commission. We believe it provides a solution of all the disputed points in relation to the labor party question which have divided the party for the last two years and that it lays down the correct line for the future.

From the beginning of the controversy which first arose in 1923 over the question of the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the present majority has contended that the labor party must be a mass organization with a firm basis of trade union support, and should not be merely a combination of the Workers Party and its sympathising organizations, and fought the theory that the Communists should endeavor to split off a left wing from the labor party as soon as possible to transform this split-off section into a mass Communist Party. The resolution of the commission has clearly upheld this point of view and has declared that we are right in emphasising it.

After the presidential election, the majority of the C. E. C. in its determined opposition to further attempts to organise a fictitious labor party which could not fulfill the role of a mass labor party in the United States, went to an extreme and rejected the agitation for the formation of a labor party in the present situation. This was a mistake which is acknowledged and which will be corrected in accordance with the resolution.

On the basis of this decision the majority will strive to unite our party to end the factional strife that has weakened our party and to eradicate energetically the right deviations present in the Workers (Communist) Party.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the American minority, Comrade Ruthenberg, said:

The minority of the American party appealed to the Communist International on the American question, because it considered that there was at stake an issue which involved the whole question of the future of the Communist movement in the United States, the question of developing the class consciousness of the American working class.

We see that in recent years a new tendency had arisen which expressed itself in the movement for the labor party. We believed that it was necessary for our party to take the forefront in this struggle and so to move the backward masses in America a step forward. We believe that to cut loose from this movement would be to take from our party the best avenue of its future development.

In the decision that has been proposed here we have the Communist International's approval of this fundamental viewpoint that the Communist Party in America must remain at the head of and take the lead in developing this movement; and consequently we can give our full approval to the thesis.

In the inner party question also we have a decision to which we can give our full approval. One of the big differences in our party was the question of the struggle against the social-democratic Lore faction in our party. We insisted upon an uncompromising struggle to eradicate this tendency and this has been approved in the thesis.

Thus in the inner party situation we believe that the thesis follows the correct line for the future good of the Communist Party in the United States.

As to the question of the next central executive committee, we accept Comrade Zinoviev's statement, that he wishes both groups good luck, and I can assure you we shall take full advantage to establish a leadership of a good Communist character in the Workers Party of America.

The draft resolution of the American commission was unanimously adopted.

Charges Cops With Graft.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 26—Highly incensed over his arrest and subsequent fine in Chicago last week for parking his automobile over the time limit, Representative Harry Weisbrod of Chicago, introduced a resolution in the house today condemning Captain Patrick Hogan of the Chicago police force, as a "bully," resenting his verbal attack on the legislator, and asking for the appointment of a committee of five members to investigate charges that Chicago traffic police are selling parking spaces in the loop district to favored customers at $5 and $10 a month. The resolution was laid on the speaker's table.

WORKING CLASS WOMEN WILL MARCH TO GRAVES OF TRIANGLE VICTIMS, SUNDAY, MAY 31

NEW YORK, May 26.—Many workers in New York City recall the horror that befell the 146 working girls who lost their lives in the Triangle Waist factory fire it New York City in March 1911.

The Triangle Waist factory was a sweat shop. Fire safeguards were very inadequate. The factory was a real fire trap. It is not to the interest of the capitalist class who employ labor to provide safe working places. The interest of the bosses is to extract as much profit as possible from the labor of the workers with as little expense as they can get away with. This means low wages and bad working conditions for the workers.

Girls Were Unorganized.

The only way to secure safe working shops is thru the organized effort of the workers themselves. The girls working in the Triangle Waist factory were not organized, therefore no pressure was brought upon these employers to install safety fire escapes. When in March, 1911, fire broke out in the Triangle Waist factory, 146 girls were trapped in the burning building and actually burned to cinders.

The capitalist class in New York City wants no mention made of this horrible disaster. But the workers must commemorate the death of our sisters of the working class who perished in the fire because of the greedy profit seeking interests of the employing class. We must demonstrate to the workers in New York City what fate may befall them if they fail to fight for the organization of their shops and factories.

Women to Demonstrate on May 31.

The women's committee of the Workers Party District No. 2 in cooperation with the United Council of Working Class Women and other women's organizations call upon other women of the working class to gather together on Sunday, May 31, between the hours of 12 noon and 1 p. m. at 108 E. 14th street, N. Y. C., room No. 23. From there we will proceed with banners to the Washington cemetery, in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the graves of our sisters, the victims of the Triangle Waist factory fire. Speakers will address the gathering in the cemetery.

This demonstration is not a women's affair. It concerns the men workers as well. Men workers are also urged to participate and bring along their women folks and children. The Y. W. L. and Junior section will also participate.

A MIDNIGHT TRIP ON THE HUDSON AND CAMPING IS NOVY MIR'S NOVEL WEEK END ENTERTAIMENT PLAN

NEW YORK, May 26—Votaries of the muse, fighting revolutionaries, class conscious workers, all lovers of a "fling," a unique and delightful way of spending a week-end, fit for their purse, will go to the First Grand Spring Round-Trip Excursion into the Catskills up the Hudson river, which has been arranged by the Novy Mir for Decoration-Day week-end.

The steamer will leave New York Friday, May 29, 8 p. m. and will return Sunday, midnight.

Innumerable ways of enjoyment have been planned. On the steamer there will be dancing, concert, entertainment. At the camp, which will be reached Saturday morning, there will be rowing, fishing and more entertainment.

Everyone is acquainted with the gorgeous scenery along the Hudson by daylight but few have experienced the keen delight in witnessing the sun, adorning herself in all her glory, flirting with the hills before she retires for the night and then the moon, playing peek-a-boo with these hills. Can anything be more sweet to the ear than the sounds of revolutionary songs being carried along for miles and miles along the quiet Hudson?

Those who wish to experience these delights—and many more, should obtain their tickets as son as possible, as the number is limited, at the office of the Novy Mir, 30 Union Square. They cost $4.25 and include sleeping accommodations on the boat.

25 Boy Pupils Are Overcome in School Classroom by Foul Air

Twenty-five boy pupils were overcome in the school auditorium of the Blaine elementary public school at Southport and Grace street yesterday morning during a singing exercise. A few recovered after firemen were rushed to the scene, but most of the children had to be taken to the north side hospital for treatment. Panic-stricken parents rushed to the school as soon as news of the disaster spread in the neighborhood.

The boys, it was learned, had just come in from a gymnasium session in the playground. They had hardly begun singing when the first boy dropped to the floor. Bad ventilation and the presence of noxious gas were responsible for the asphyxiation, it was claimed by the firemen.

Riksdag Votes for Reduced Army.

STOCKHOLM, May 26.—Recommendations for reducing the cost of national defense has been adopted by the riksdag (lower house). They provide for reduction of the army from six corps to four, a decrease in the training period and postponement of any definite naval building program. This will bring the cost of all Sweden's defenses to 96,000,000 kroner as compared with 181,500,000 in the 1924 plan.

EXTRA! EXTRA! T. U. E. L. ISSUES MARCHING ORDERS

Red Forces to Occupy Altenheim Grove

It's a long jump from Dayton, Tenn., to Altenheim Grove, Illinois. But it is a jump that is worth taking. Down in Tennessee they are making the welkins ring about evolution—the most harmless kind. Corrugated professors will wag their chin whiskers, lawyers will break into the front page, evangelists will get the necessary advertising for Chatauqua engagements; the defendant will come off alright. It's almost as good as a murder case, for the circulation managers.

But in Altenheim Grove, on next Saturday, May 30, the question will not be whether man ascended from an ape, but how long he is going to remain one. We never heard of a hairy ape, outside of Eugene O'Neill's play who ever worked for another. But the ape that walks like a man does that and seems to think it can't be otherwise. He doesn't use his head eonugh.

To Use Their Pedals.

That cannot be said for those who will be in Altenheim Grove next Saturday. They use their heads so much that some of them are getting fiat. For a change they will be given the opportunity to use their feet as well as their heads.

To come to a climax, the occasion will be the famous hardy annual T. U. E. L. picnic. Address: Altenheim Grove. How to get there: Take Madison street car and transfer to suburban car to end of line, or take Forest Park "L" to end of line. Half a dollar gets you inside the gate. What you spend on the inside is your own business, tho we will help you make up your mind.

Some Brain Food.

Fun will be what highbrow writers call the "theme" of the picnic. A few people go to picnics to learn something. They will not be ignored. William Z. Foster is scheduled to speak on his recent experience in Russia. William F. Dunne will act as master of ceremonies.

The writer does not know of anybody who is not coming to the picnic next Saturday. He knows of hundreds who are. They are young and old, male and female. To miss next Saturday's picnic is to miss a chance to enjoy yourself and to contribute to the treasury of the Trade Union Educational League, which, you may have already guessed, is the reason for the picnic.

CHINESE TEXTILE WORKERS AGAIN OUT ON STRIKE

Twelve Demands Given in Detail

(By Rosta.)

SHANGHAI, China, April 28.—(By Mail.)—Over ten thousand textile workers have gone on strike at the Tsingtao mills owned by the Japanese proprietors of the Shanghai mills.

The demands put forth by the strikers are: first, the abolition of corporal punishment and personal searches; second, an increase in wages: 10 cents a day to daily workers, [illegible] per cent to piece workers, 100 per cent to night workers, and no work on Sundays; third, the abolition of the system of retaining fines from the wages; fourth, the medical treatment of injuries at the cost of the employers, the payment of wages during illness and the payment of a year's salary to the bereaved family in case of death; fifth, free lodgings at the works; sixth, tiffin interval of one hour, instead of half an hour; seventh, the handing over of the money received from fines to children's schools thru the trade unions; eight, 8-hour working day for laborers under sixteen years of age; ninth, two days' leave every month for working women; tenth, the wages are to be paid for the strike period; eleventh, no dismissals for participation in the strike; twelfth, the acceptance of the workers' demands by the Nagai works should be binding on the other mills.

The strikers have issued an appeal to the public, in which they lay down all their grievances.

Irish Republicans in Cleveland Raise Funds for Relief

CLEVELAND, May 26.—Tom Kilbane, 2035 West 50th street, is now puffing at a genuine Irish briar pipe from the well-known Kapp and Peterson's, Dublin, as a result of an affair held here on May 17, for Irish famine relief, under the auspices of the James Connolly club of Cleveland.

The club, which is affiliated with the International Workers, Aid, is planning to hold a dance in the near future. Since its organization, the club has been very active and has already sent funds to the Irish famine sufferers thru the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief, at 19 South Lincoln street, Chicago. The local office is at 5027 Euclid avenue.

Wants European Labor Imported to Replace Negroes Gone North

NEW YORK, 26.— Colonel Harvie Johnson, secretary of the American Cotton Association, virtually admits that labor conditions in factory and farm are worst in his Dixieland than in the north, where he says, that the million southerners who have emigrated to the north, largely to northern factories, in the last four years, will never return. Johnson wants the immigration laws changed so that European labor can be imported for the southern cotton industry.

U. S. GOVERNMENT CANCELS CITIZENSHIP PAPERS OF JAPANESE COAST GUARD

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The United States supreme court today cancelled the naturalization papers granted by the federal district court of Massachusetts in 1921 to Hidemitsu Toyoto, a Japanese who served nine years in the coast guard.

The supreme court held Japanese were not entitled to citizenship by naturalization under the laws.

SOVIET-CHINESE PARLEY DELAYED BY DIFFERENCES

Dispersal of the Russian White Guards Demanded

PEKING.—(By Mail.)—The Rosta correspondent learns that the reports having appeared in the press to the effect that the Soviet-Chinese conference would be opened in May, are incorrect. As a matter of fact, the date of the inauguration of the conference has not been fixed yet, the parties to it having not reached any agreement so far.

It appears that previous to the conference there are to be settled some questions connected with the execution of the agrement concluded between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and China on May 31, 1924. Thus, it is supposed that a series of questions, such as the disbandment of white guards enlisted in the Chinese army, the handing over of the property of the Russian orthodox church mission, and a number of others, will be settled before the conference, so as thus to clear the way for the successful labors of the latter.

It has been learned, in particular, that a serious discussion was taken up between the Chinese delegates and the Soviet embassy of the question of the railway, which has been leased to the Japanese in Manchuria and which is aimed economically against the interests of the Chinese Eastern railway and in favor of those of the South Manchurian railway, and, strategically, against the safety of the union and China. It is suggested that the issue will also be taken up between Moscow and Tokio.

Palmer Raid Victim Deported After Five Year Court Process

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 26.—Peter Stankovitch, South Slav, has been ordered deported.

This action marks the end of a five-year fight in the courts conducted mainly by the Labor Defense Council against the deportation of Stankovitch. The case had hung fire for years and appeared to be dropped, when suddenly, Stankovitch was ordered deported. He is bound, as a prisoner, to Jugo-Slavia where he will be turned over to the reactionary Patchitch government there, for them to do with him as they see fit. The extreme persecution that has been meted out to Communists in Jugo-Slavia makes it not at all improbable that Stankovitch's journey to his home country amounts to his going to jail. Stankovitch was one of the victims of the infamous Palmer "Red Raids" of 1920. He leaves a wife and family in this country.

ROCHESTER COURT UPHOLDS BLL WHCH OUTLAWS K. K. K.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 26.—By a vote of four to one, the justices of the appellate court held the legislature had the power to compel secret societies to file membership lists and took a direct hit at the ku klux klan as a group which "exercises activities tending to the prejudice and intimidation of sundry classes of citizens." The decision upheld the Walker law, which outlaws the klan.

SOVIET UNION SENDS TWO MILLION GOLD POUNDS TO ENGLAND

LONDON, May 26.—Gold valued at £2,000,000 sterling, has just arrived in London from Leningrad.

The metal was consigned by the Soviet State Bank and deposited in the Bank of England to the credit of Arcos, Ltd., the All-Russian Cooperative Society's trading organization.

Don't Think Much of U. T. W. of McMahon in Maynard, Mass., Mill

By ARMAS WEST.

MAYNARD, Mass., May 25.—There is only one industry in this town, the Assabet Mill, owned by American Woolen Co. The Assabet employs three thousand one hundred operatives—nearly half of Maynard's population. The factory produces only wool.

Unionism prevails only among the spinners and weavers, but their membership is small and select. They all are associated with the United Textile Workers.

Last night there was a mass meeting for the purpose of organizing all mill workers. President McMahon and Organizer T. Reagan of U.T.W., spoke to a "mass" of 50 to 60 workers of Local 771. McMahon stressed upon the "economy" of the employers and reviewed the struggles of textile workers since 1919. Organizer Reagan spoke about the American Woolen Co.'s reorganization plan, which might reduce wages and repeal the 48-hour law in Massachusetts.

I asked several workers why didn't they join the union? And all answered that the U. T. W. in Maynard is a company union subject to the power of the bosses. All have been former members. All that the U. T. W. is doing in Maynard is collecting dues from members ($1.00) a month.

One worker remembers when during the war several liberty bonds were bought with the dues money. These workers all say that radicals are refused membership in the union and their idea of a strong union is one industrial union and not several petty ones. The spinners refuse membership to everybody unless they are spinners.

Here's hoping for militant organization in local 771.

Calls Bryan "Religious Brawler."

NEW YORK, May 26. — Sixteen charges were made against William J. Bryan in an attack delivered from the pulpit of Kings Highway congregational church here by Rev. Dr. James S. Williamson. Bryan was characterized as a "religious brawler," who perverts the teachings of Jesus."

RECOGNITION OF SOVIETS AIM OF U. S. BUSINESS

NEW YORK, May 26.— The New York correspondent of the Rosta News Agency reports that an influential, tho not official, institution representing American commercial circles has made a thoro study of the commercial treaties existing between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and other countries, with a view to determining the eventual conditions and possibilities of a Soviet-American treaty of commerce.

The treaty recently concluded between Germany and the United States was taken as a basic document, which was then carefully compared with the Italo-Soviet treaty.

Agreement Possible.

It is learned that while the investigators did come to the conclusion that the monopoly of foreign trade, as established in the Union of Soviet Republics, presents obstacles to the conclusion of a treaty between the U. S. S. R. and the U. S. A. on the usual lines of American commercial treaties with other countries, yet an agreement is held quite possible provided the United States decides to make a slight departure from the traditional American policy.

The institution in question has also been going into the recent Soviet-Japanese treaty from the viewpoint of its consequences for American commerce. As a result, it has been recognized that the Japanese forestry concessions in Siberia may, in the future, unfavorably affect the export of paper and wood pulp from the United States to Japan.

Japan Gets Soviet Oil.

The fact that this treaty will contribute to a considerable increase of Japan's oil and coal stocks is also causing some anxiety in the States.

All the above considerations, emanating as they do from informal sources, certainly reflect the ever-growing interest for the U. S. S. R. among the American business circles.

Defense League Gets Six Workers Released in Michoacan, Mexico

MEXICO CITY, May 26.—The Liga Internacional Pro-Luchradores Perseguidos, a Mexican workers' organization for defense of victims of the class war has succeeded in effecting the release of six workers who were jailed in the state of Michoacan following upon a May Day demonstration. The demonstration was directed chiefly against American imperialist methods in the state of Michoacan. Vigorous protests from the "liga" and other workers' organizations account for the quick release.

The killing of nine peons in the state of Puebla has aroused considerable consternation in working class circles here. The reports as to the circumstances of the killings are somewhat garbled and details are lacking, but there is little doubt that the murders are the direct result of the growing power of peon organizations in Puebla. The league for workers' defense has sent its representative Monzon to Puebla to investigate the case.

Rail Merger Hearing Proceeds.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—A flareup between Henry W. Anderson, counsel for a group of dissenting Chesapeake and Ohio stockholders, and W. A. Colston, chief lieutenant of the Van Sweringen brothers, marked the resumption of hearings today before the interstate commerce commission on the Van Sweringen plan to unify five large railroad systems.

Anderson accused the Van Sweringens of "trying their case in the newspapers."

BUILDERS AT WORK

NEW YORK SWINGS INTO ACTION

Both Group and Individual Challenges Hurled

With a drive to build "Our Daily" the New York builders are sure to push their local right among the leaders in the Sub Campaign before the week is over.

About 4,000 copies are being distributed door-to-door, at factory gates and in the shops every day this week in a drive to secure subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER to build the Communist movement. Four thousand copies distributed every day where workers live and work are sure to bring a flood of subs.

Already they are beginning to come in. Enclosed with a batch of subs City Agent Comrade L. E. Katterfield sends this challenge placed in his hands:

• • • •

NEW YORK WILLIAMSBURG ENGLISH BRANCH—ATTENTION!

The Downtown English Branch sends in 15 subs and challenges the Williamsburg English to match this WITHIN ONE WEEK. Will you comrades accept this challenge? Answer thru this column P. D. O.

• • • •

COMRADE MALKIN—COMRADE ZAM MADE GOOD!

COMRADE KRUMBEIN—ON THE JOB!

Comrade Zam who was challenged by Comrade Malkin, came thru on a challenge and has secured a new sub. With it he picks out a real builder and aims a challenge at Comrade Krumbein, District Organizer to get another.

WHEN WILL WE GET THIS SUB COMRADE KRUMBEIN? And be sure to pick out another builder to challenge when you send it in.

DEPT. OF LABOR STARTS MOVE TO DEPORT FINNS

Follows Advice of White Guard Informers

DULUTH, Minn., May 26. — Antt Johannes Rintala is held in $1,000 bail, set in a hearing before Immigration Inspector O. S. Remington after his arrest in Two Harbors on the charge of illegal entry. Rintala was accompanying his 10-year old daughter on a tour of the country. Signe, the daughter, is an accomplished singer and has been in concert in various parts of the United States.

This arrest comes on the heels of the prosecution of Mrs. Sanna Kannasta, who aside from being charged with Mal-entry, is also held under the war-time passport act. Mrs. Kannasto, who like Rintala, is Finnish, was arrested on the information of a white guard Finnish informer.

Work of Stoolpigeon.

It is revealed that Rintala, in conjunction with his daughter's concerts, has been showing stereoptican pictures of the Finnish civil war, ten per cent of the proceeds of the entertainments going to the aid of Finnish class-war orphans. There is no doubt but that Rintala's arrest was also made on the advice of a stoolpigeon.

This persecution of Finnish radicals in this section of the country where the Finnish population is quite heavy, is the direct outgrowth of a struggle in both the United States and Canada between the "red" Finns who support the working class movement in Finland and the "white" Finns whose sympathies are with the reactionary Finnish government. It is plain that the United States department of labor, thru its local immigration authorities, is giving unqualified support to the "white" Finnish faction in its diligence in following the advice of informers in making these two arrests.

It is very possible that the arrests of Mrs. Kannasto and Rintala are the beginnings of a concerted drive against radical Finnish residents in Northern Minnesota.

Cincinnati Clothing Firms Renew Contract with the Amalgamated

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union announces that the three largest clothing firms in Cincinnati have renewed agreements with the union. The firms are the American Art Co., the A. Block Co. and the Globe Trading Co. The strike of 100 workers in Los Angeles is reported as progressing satisfactorily. Children's Jacket Workers in New York have refused the demand of employers for a 10 percent cut.

Charges of Jury Fixing Thrown at Shepherd Defense

A canvass of all veniremen who were called for service in the trial of William D. Shepherd for the alleged "germ murder" of William Nelson McClintock in an effort to learn "who has been approached and talked to regarding jury service in this case," was ordered by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

The action was taken after 13 more veeniremen had been examined and rejected, preceeding which, interrogatories were filed ordering James Callan, ward politician, to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt of court for his alleged attempt to influence Philip J. Barry, a prospective juror.

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF LENINISM
By I. Stalin.
With an attractive duroflex cover and frontispiece (photograph) of the author.
35 CENTS

Leninism, the application of Marxism in the present period of imperialism, is splendidly treated here by a close co-worker of Lenin, and at present secretary of the Russian Communist Party.

In this book—destined surely to become a classic of Communist literature—the reader will find an important analysis of the problems before every revolutionary party.

A book that should be in the hands of every thinking worker.

"Safety First!"

The story from Reliance, Wyoming, published yesterday on the Trade Union Educational League page, may be dry reading for workers who are not miners, but it is certainly damning proof of the conspiracy, time after time resulting in the deaths of coal miners, between the state government, its agents, the mine inspectors and the coal capitalists.

One item contained in the report of the miners' committee but not mentioned in the report of the state inspector is enough:

> We believe that safety requires the delivery of caps and powder to the various working places, instead of men carrying both powder and caps at the time when all men are entering the mine.

Hundreds of fatal accidents have bene caused by this practice alone altho the reports of coroner's juries are usually unable to give the actual reason for the very good reason that the evidence is entirely destroyed.

Extra men have to be employed to carry powder and caps to the miners working at the face. It costs money to take this precaution, so mine inspectors coveniently forget to mention it in their reports and miners continue to be sacrificed. But the coal operators keep on yelling "Safety First!"

The miners are organized in Wyoming and have been able, by concerted action, to expose many of the murderous practices of the coal companies. But try to picture to yourself, when such conditions still prevail in union mines, what they must be where no union exists and the coal capitalists have the power to do as they please.

Miners' lives are cheap and this is one of the reasons why the coal capitalists go to such desperate lengths, as in West Virginia, for instance, to prevent unionizing of their properties.

War on Soviet Russia?

Obviously inspired dispatches telling of plans laid by the Soviet government for an offensive against Roumania, Bulgaria and Poland some time this summer are flooding the capitalist press.

The reason for this, taken in connection with the world-wide drive against the workers' and peasants' government of Russia, is quite plain. Somwehere in the imperialist nests of Paris and London is being hatched a scheme for war on Russia and in conformity with the first rule of modern warfare, an effort is to blame the injured party for whatever happens, an effort is made to convict Soviet Russia of beginning hostilities.

The deluge of articles "exposing" the Communist International, the hushing up of the real causes of the Sofia bomb explosion, the recent meeting of the general staffs of the puppet border governments, the threat of a financial blockade, all point to the conclusion that the capitalist world is seriously considering another attempt to crush the Russian revolution by force.

That such a scheme, which would mean a war exceeding in bloodiness the conflict of 1914-18, is even considered, is evidence of the desperate situation in which world capitalism finds itself. The tension between France and Great Britain is increasing, colonial uprisings are something more than threats while industrial and financial crises afflict both nations.

The much vaunted stabilization of capitalism is seen to be an empty thing when looked at in the light of world capitalism with its constant menace of war in half a dozen sections of the globe, anyone of which may be the start of a world struggle.

The working class must be on its guard every moment, neglecting no opportunity to strengthen its unions and to keep ready everyone of its weapons of defense and offense.

Negro Workers Strike in Toledo

Negro workers employed by the Standard Oil company in Toledo, Ohio, have struck for higher wages and better working conditions. Since the strike it has been discovered that there are white workers in the same plant getting lower pay than the Negroes, but at the time our story was written they had not yet joined the strike.

The only conclusion that can be drawn from this incident is that the Negro workers in this plant have more fighting spirit than the whites. This will be an unpleasant surprise to the bosses who hire them on the theory that they will be afraid to take any action to protect themselves.

The plant where the strike occurs is completely unorganized thruout, but if the Toledo labor unions are on the job they will begin an organization campaign on the strength of the evidence that the strike offers of the militancy among the Negro workers. The fact that the labor movement lets slip so many opportuniites of this kind is one of the reasons why it remains numerically weak, with great numbers of workers refusing to take it seriously.

In the same story which tells of the adoption of a resolution demanding the release of Crouch and Trumbull by a local union of machinists in St. Paul is the announcement of an organization drive that union is conducting.

There is a direct connection between the two items. Unions which are class conscious enough to adopt such a resolution are always found attending to the matter of organization of the unorganized in a businesslike manner. It is the fashion of the reactionaries to carp about the visionary schemes of the left wingers, but when stock is taken it develops that the left wing groups not only display keen interest in the theoretical phase of the class struggle, support the victims of capitalism in other countries and strive to give the whole labor movement a broader outlook, but take good care of such commonplace needs as building the union—a need much neglected and quite often ignored entirely by the "safe and sane" labor leaders.

It is the left wing that is really practical.

The French imperialists have had to make a change in the high command in the Riffian war. It is becoming plainer every day that punitive detachments will not win for the French and that the present struggle takes on all the characteristics aroused of a major war. With the French working class thoroly aroused by the brutal slaughter we can expect stirring events in France from now on.

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV.

VII. The Danger of "Right Sickness" in the Comintern.

I FORESEE, that after our open confession concerning the absence of a direct revolutionary situation in Germany, our genuine views will be subjected to all kinds of distortions and misinterpretations. The right wing tendencies will revive. Certain "Communists" who in some cases have not the slightest conception of what Communism is, were of the opinion that the revolution must come within two or three years, and, since it did not come, they think it were better now to join the social-democrats. These heroes will now say: "There you are, we were right!" The "ultra-lefts" will now swing over to the right, as has been the case already with Comrade Bordiga.

The case of Com. Bordiga serves is an extremely instructive illustrations of what I have said. But, comrades, read what Comrade Bordiga now writes; try to penetrate his "philosophy" and ponder over the question: why this change took place within him. The reason for it lies in Bordiga's inability to understand the role of the Communist Party in the period of retarded revolutionary development, his inability to understand the petty everyday minute, but at the same time, bolshevist work, which must be carried on in such a period, his failure to see the connections in the tactics of the united front, partial demands, etc., with our activities directed towards the achievement of our ultimate aim. This explains his leap (I hope it will be temporary, I hope he will come back to the position of the Comintern) from the ultra-lefts to the right.

An Example of the Failure to Understand the Task of Bolshevization

BUT we have among us more dangerous right wingers who are already proposing to us to take a sharp turn and adopt "new" tactics. I will take the liberty of quoting an example taken from the experience of the Czecho-Slovak party, which shows how bolshevization should not be understood.

A comrade from Brunn, quite properly, sent us the printed theses on the differences within the Communist Party in Czecho-Slovakia. There is much in these theses that are of no interest, much that is petty, much concerning personal conflicts, etc., of this I will speak in another place. Therefore, irrespective of the outcome of the struggle within the Czecho-Slovak party, I would like to reveal to you what kind of Communists we still have among us. The comrade from Brunn, in the introduction to his memorandum, refers to the important party played by Brunn, even in the Second International. I would not in the least question the revolutionary past (or present) of the Brunn workers, but I will say this, that the Brunn comrades ought to send some of their leaders to a school of Leninism and only after that to discuss whether they are suitable as leaders or not. In these theses, there is a chapter entitled, "The Revolutionary Course," in which demonstrations against the high cost of living is confused with nothing more nor less than—revolution.

This is what it says:

"The so-called left demanded from us in Brunn to bring things to a conflict even in those places where we can place against large forces of the police only a couple of hundreds or so of workers, without taking into consideration what these sanguinary sacrifices may entail for us."

Further on it says:

"Some of the so-called left comrades are of the opinion that we should continuously 'make revolution.' We, however, are of the opinion that the task of the Communist Party is not to call out a revolutionary movement by some means or other, but to take advantage of an existing revolutionary movement, and to lead it to the end. The theses of the third congress of the Comintern are very far from being carried out in Czecho-Slovakia, and it would be very important for the present central committee of the Communist Party of Czecho-Slovakia, even at this late hour to study the theses on tactics passed by the third congress. To send agitators among the workers instructed to rouse fresh revolutions every day, belongs as much to the sphere of illusionist tactics to which we have referred above, as to the infantile view, that the stage of revolutionary development in a given epoch may be judged by the number of windows broken in a demonstration. The raiding of shops during a demonstration against the high cost of living by the order of the central committee, is something quite different to the raiding of shops by a hangry mass, in spite of the orders of their leaders. In the first case, we have an example of an excess of romanticism, in the second, we have a true symptom of a revolutionary epoch."

Excellent! I must say. I never knew that breaking windows is an "excess of romanticism."

Here we must say quite frankly comrades, that behind every one of these phrases, can be seen the asses' ears of social-democracy. Just think! The poor Brunners are called upon to make "revolutions" every day, and in such a frightful form too! To organize demonstrations against high cost of living and break windows! Indeed, the Brunn workers cannot be congratulated on the wisdom of their leaders. In the foreword to these epistles, we find complaints about the Brunn comrades being compelled to send delegations to Moscow composed exclusively of workingmen with the secret intention, it is alleged, "of deliberately keeping out" the theoreticians. The fear is also expressed that the workingmen sent in the delegation would not be able to explain to the international all that was necessary sufficiently clearly and with sufficient theoretical backing. Hence, they honored us with this memorandum containing these brilliant "theoretical" arguments. (Laughter).

I must confess that I certainly prefer to converse with Brunn workingmen, who, in the opinion of the authors of these theses, have not the training to enter into theoretical discussion with us, than to converse with the "theoretician" authors of these epistles. It would be a sheer waste of effort to enter into a discussion with the authors of this document.

Observe, that the authors of this document do not yet know that we have asserted here the absence at the present time of a direct revolutionary situation in Germany. If they had got wind of this, they would not have contented themselves with merely talking romanticism, but no doubt would begin to talk about the necessity to go over to the social-democrats. (Laughter).

Precisely at this Time of Retarded Revolutionary Development is it Necessary to Imbue Our Parties with a Spirit of Leninism.

COMRADES, we must foresee such "turns" and commence right now to put up a resistance against those comrades, who advocate them. It is true, in Western Europe at the present time there is not a direct revolutionary situation. But is this any reason why we must abandon bolshevism, make concessions to the social-democrats and place a mark of equality between demonstrations of high cost of living and revolutions. On the contrary. Precisely because we have to pass thru hard times: when some drop out of the fight, when some are already overcome by weariness, when the social-democratic party is beginning to raise its head—it is precisely for this reason that we must imperatively conduct a deliberate, determined, definite policy of our own, that we must imperatively be irreconciliable Bolsheviks. Let this sink deeply into the minds of the Brunn comrades.

Comrades, the path that we have just outlined for our parties, does not in the least imply the slowing down of the rate of bolshevization; on the contrary, it implies the acceleration of the process of bolshevizating our brother parties. A genuine revolutionary, a genuine Bolshevik, reveals his character in difficult situations, when there is no limelight. This is what Com. Lenin constantly emphasized. As soon as the revolutionary wave rises again, and particularly if it is victorious, crowds of new revolutionaries will rush to us. In 1920, when the situation in Germany appeared to be revolutionary, we had Messrs. Crispin and Dittman here. When the revolution is victorious, numerous people come into our ranks: even bourgeois elements—bourgeois officers join the Red Army etc. This is what happens when the working class is victorious. For us it is important that the parties become Bolshevistic, now, at the present time: in this relatively dull period they must become imbued with the spirit of Leninism.

The Problem of Party Leadership

I WANT briefly to deal with the problem of party leadership. Certain to bring up at a metting of party leaders the problem of selecting leaders, is sometime a very delicate matter. But we are not concerned with the subjective aspect of the subject, not in the appreciation of individuals, but with the objective approach to the problem which also represents a complete chapter of bolshevization. In the product of Brunn inventiveness, there is the following passage:

"To achieve victory, it is perhaps necessary that not only should the general be imbued with the will to fight, but principally that the masses be so imbued."

A great discovery! Profound theoretical wisdom! It is indeed a pity that we have not the pleasure of seeing these Brunn "theoreticians" among us here; but we do not lose much by their absence.

But joking apart, after the fifth congress, two rather curious articles were written which unfortunately have not been published to this day. One of these was written by Thalheimer and the other by Kreibich. In essentials, the authors of both these articles take up the same position. Both represent a repudiation of the policy of the fifth congress. One of the authors, as always, declares his absolute solidarity with the resolutions of the fifth congress, but in doing so, loses sight of a mere bagatelle, viz., that his article is directed against the resolutions of the fifth congress. I will not deal with the article as a whole, but only with those parts of it which deal with the problem of leadership.

The authors of both these articles charge the fifth congress with having devised a new theory and practice of selecting leaders, who are like "blank sheets." In their opinion numerous old leaders have been removed from the leadership of party organizations and replaced by novices, who represent "blank sheets." These novices, say our authors, simply listen to what they are told from Moscow, do everything they are ordered, are ready to put their names to anything that is dictated to them. You, of course, understand comrades, what this means. The attack is a very malicious one This controversy is not over a question of principle, but it poisons the political atmosphere.

WE must take up this question concretely. The question arises: is it possible that leaders must never be changed, that the leadership must never be refreshed by continually infusing fresh forces obtained from other strata into it? Our reply is—no! Are those right who say that we do not appreciate old leaders who have great political experience? Not in the least. They cannot be regarded as right. Under no circumstances! Almost all our parties emerged from the womb of the Second International. That was the case with the Russian party, which up to 1918 called itself the Russian social-democratic labor party. We too, were at one time affiliated to the Second International. We know that a social-democrat cannot be converted into a Bolshevik in one night. Every leader passes thru a process of more or less prolonged development. We all know that the comrades who come to us from the social-democracy have their weak sides; their strong side frequently is their accumulated political experience. It has never entered the heads of any of us to say that we must get rid of the old leaders. On the contrary, every objective observer must admit that we exhibit considerable tolerance towards them. For example in the French party, we did all we could in order to keep them among us, and we were always glad when we succeeded in doing so. This applies to other countries also.

Does it follow from this that we, older workers,—and I include myself in this category,—must keep everything in our hands, and tell the youth to wait? Of course, not. Nor must we flatter the young leaders. We openly say that politically, they have many defects, that they must study hard and perfect themselves. We always say to them: Become Bolsheviks yourselves, see to your own training; and the young leaders understand us. What we require is a sort of amalgam of the best representatives of the older generation with the most gifted representatives of the younger generation which has sprung up in the post-war epoch. We are in urgent need of such a combination, but a "sheet" of rusty iron cannot be used for this amalgam. Everybody will agree with this. Comrade Lenin used to say jestingly: "When a man reaches the age of 50, he inevitably becomes an opportunist," and from this he drew the conclusion that a leader who has passed the age of 50 should be placed in the archives, more or less. We sometimes agreed with him, but demanded that he make an exception,—with regard to himself. It may turn out however, that numerous other exceptions will have to be made. Let us hope so, at any rate. Those who have become so ossified that they remain impervious to the new currents of the new epoch, should go away. But the problem of the party leadership can only be solved by the organic combination of the representatives of two generations for the purposes of leading the party.

THE "blank sheet theory" absolutely distorts the position. The inventor of this theory argues that the selection of new central committees is determined by the mood or the arbitrary will of the members of the Presidium of the executive committee of the Comintern. Of course it is not so. The reasons for changing leaders are much more profound. They reach back to the moment of the birth of the Communist International. The fact that the Third International emerged from the womb of the Second International had its consequences. This is evident in the struggle which many comrades have to conduct against the social-democratic survivals of their own past. Let those who preach to us the necessity of sparing the old leaders, keep their sermons for their own instruction. To charge us with intolerance towards the old leaders is entirely baseless. If we deserve any reproach at all, it is not for frivolously sweeping away comrades of the old mould. Similarly unfair and totally undeserved is the charge that we have transferred the leadership to those who are ready to sign their names to everything that is put before them.

Consequently, we have nothing to fear at all from presenting the question of the leading cadres of the movement to the masses of the workers. Comrade Lenin never feared to raise this question openly. At the same time, he taught us that without cadres of leaders deliberately aiming at a definite goal, full of determination and discipline, there can be no revolutionary proletarian party. For decades, right to 1917, in all the branches of the Second International, Lenin was charged with having dictatorial propensities. This was one of the favorite charges brought against Lenin by the bourgeoisie and a considerable section of the Second International. All of them howled at him: You are a dictator. You wish to have obedient subjects; you wish to place your will above the will of the organization. That was at a time when Lenin was not yet recognized as the leader of the international proletariat. The social-democrats joined in these howls. We however, know, that without centralized disciplined leadership, the revolutionary workers party could not have been formed.

IN our day of retarded revolutionary development, this postulate is more applicable than ever before, and therefore comrades, we do not hesitate for a moment to raise this question. The E. C. C. I. has never approached the question in this manner: you have sinned, consequently your sin will be visited upon you and your children to the seventh generation. We say: if you are an opportunist, we will fight you until you admit your error. Frequently, it is made to appear that we wish to humble a comrade and demand that he beg forgiveness, to cry: "mea culpa." We have never demanded anything of the kind. In this article, Kreibich asks: what sort of a habit is this to demand the self-humiliation of a man who has committed an error? This implied rebuke is sheer nonsense. In the world party of the proletarian revolution there can be no talk of self-humiliation. Nobody has ever presented the question in this manner.

In our theses on bolshevizing the parties, we have a passage which emphasizes the necessity for internal party democracy. We need this internal party democracy, not for opportunists, not for those who demand "freedom of criticism" in the interests of the bourgeoisie. We will fight such people as avowed enemies. We demand freedom of criticism for those comrades who tread the same path with us in the quest for revolutionary truth.

An article which I wrote on the youth, in Czecho-Slovakia, if I am not mistaken, was regarded by some as a new theory. We are charged with desiring to obtain leaders only and exclusively from the Young Communist International. We give the Young Communist League all the credit it deserves. It has rendered great service, and in some places has helped to bolshevize our parties. Under normal conditions, the party trains the youth, and not vice-versa. The party should help the youth to become Bolshevistic. Let those who think that the E. C. C. I. desires to "select" the leaders for the party from the Young Communist International, calm their fears.

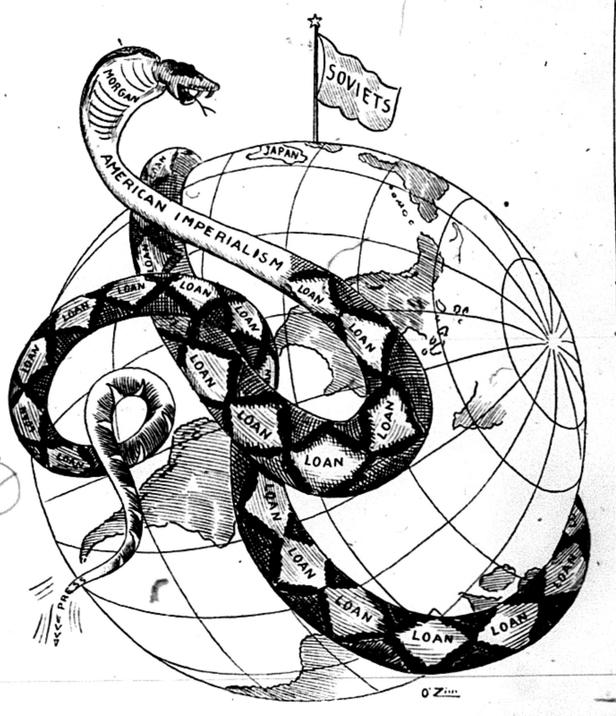
AMERICAN IMPERIALISM BEHOLDS ITS DOOM



New Quake Shakes Japanese Islands

TOKIO, May 26.—A strong earthquake shook the Tajima district of southeastern Nippon Island this morning, including the towns of Toyo-Oka and Kinosaka, which were all but destroyed by last Saturday's terrific shock. Several damaged buildings were tumbled down, alarming the populace, but no loss of life was reported.

LONDON, May 26.—A new vertical earthquake in the Hyogo prefecture occurred today and shook down many buildings which survived the earthquake in the same district Saturday, according to an evening news dispatch from Tokio today.

U. S. ATTEMPT TO COLLECT WAR DEBTS FR[illegible]NKRUPT EUROPE TURNING [illegible]OMPLETE FAILURE

[illegible]E TODD

(Federat[illegible] Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Ma[illegible]retary of State Kellogg's attempt to collect from Eu[illegible] of the war debts and after-war loans made by the t[illegible]sury of the United States to the hungry governments of the allied group has come close to complete failure.

Nobody will seriously discuss paying until they see what France is going to do. France—as pointed out in a bitter editorial by George Harvey—has scattered Legion of Honor titles among American journalists and bankers and college presidents, and has sidestepped payment. Now she has developed a big colonial war in Africa, and will call on the world to witness that she needs new loans from Wall Street.

Senator Borah, who stirred up Kellogg to demand that France pay her debt, is getting a lot of indignant letters from France. Some of these call him stupid, others find him a dangerous agent of Moscow for ruining western civilization, and some brand him as a narrow-minded provincial. None inclose any checks.

Bankers Claim First Mortgage.

At the White House there persists a deadly calm. No undue help has been given Kellogg in his bill-collecting effort. Mellon and Morgan & Co. are not anxious that France and Belgium and Roumania and the rest shall be forced to levy heavy taxes on their people in order to begin paying what they owe the United States treasury.

Our international bankers have exported so much capital to Europe that they feel themselves to have a sort of first mortgage on the whole place. They agree with the Houghton demands—that Europe shall stop using borrowed money for war preparations. But they want to take a profit from loaning a great deal more of American money to European governments.

Now the element in congress, led by Borah, that is insisting that France and Belgium and Italy begin to pay, recognises that no payment will be made until congress shall have taken a hand in the game. It is preparing, for the December session, a measure forbidding to private bankers the right to make loans to governments that have failed to pay their debts to our government. This can be done by an amendment to the law governing the federal reserve system to which these big bankers belong. It will draw a financial blockade around our debtors.

Fear Economic Collapse.

As soon as the Mellon-Morgan banks realize that congress is going to insist on debt collection, the skeleton will be dragged forth from the economic closet—the fact that the war bankrupt western Europe and the Balkans, and that Germany cannot be made to pay the debts of France and Belgium and Italy. The bankers will ask congress to forgive Europe these debts in order that economic collapse may not undermine American as well as foreign trade and industry.

Borah says that France and Belgium can pay, regardless of the tariff wall around the United States and regardless of German reparations. He concedes that Britain would find it more difficult tho she seems able to charge off her whole payments to America by raising the price of the rubber which America buys from her, and by steadily increasing her hold on the oil supplies of the world.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IT is perfectly alright for a Japanese to endanger life and limb by enlisting in the United States army, but if he should imagine that such action entitles him to citizenship, he is due for a rude awakening. A Japanese who served as a coast guard from 1913 until 1923 was naturalized in 1921. Some snooper discovered the crime and the Massachusetts federal court decided that he had no right to citizenship papers.

THE case was carried to the United States supreme court and the decision was sustained, despite the fact that congress passed a law in 1919 providing that "any person of foreign birth who served in the military or naval forces of the United States during the present war" might acquire naturalization papers. But war between the United States and Japan had not then reached the stage of open naval maneuvers in the Pacific. What does the law mean to the capitalists when it no longer suits their interests? Nothing.

THE National Civic Federation is worried very much over the promised visits of British labor leaders to this country in the near future. Ralph Easley, secretary of the federation, called a hurried meeting of that body to discuss the latest menace to American civilization. This invasion has two wings: the right and the left. But for the DAILY WORKER, it is possible that the enemy would slip in without Easley's knowledge. It was in our daily, the watchdog of Wall Street secured the information. A bit too open to suggest a "plot."

EASLEY immediately got in touch with Peter Brady, who by the way is reported to be a Pole, despite his Hibernian cognomen. The Poles have a right to an apology if the report is not well founded. Brady, is president of a "labor bank" in New York. He is also supervisor of the New York City Record and occupies a nice suite of offices in the city hall, unless he lost them since 1921. He is a prominent labor faker and admits that he runs the New York Central Trades and Labor Council. Brady did not like the idea of men like Purcell and Wheatley coming to the United States tho the Right Honorable fakers, James Ramsay MacDonald and J. H. Thomas would be very welcome.

BRADY and Hugh Frayne were called on by Easley to explain the significance of the new invasion to the terrified subsidizers of the Civic Federation. No doubt those gentry will be able to satisfy the plutes that the officials of the American Federation of Labor are sufficiently strong in their loyalty to capitalism to escape contamination from Purcell, who it should be noted was in the Soviet Union a short time ago and is now actively engaged in the task of bringing about a united front of labor internationally, in conjunction with the Soviet trade union leaders.

POINTING out incidents of treachery to the working class on the part of the American labor leaders is a monotonous task. But it is necessary. Every intelligent worker knows that what is good for Rockefeller and Morgan, politically and economically,

LOS ANGELES COSSACK WOULD FINGERPRINT UNEMPLOYED WORKERS

SANT ANA, May 27.—George K. Home, chief of detectives of Los Angeles, speaking before the California division of the international association for identification, urged that the fingerprints of unemployed workers be taken by the police.

"We handled hordes of unemployed in Los Angeles," the official protector of Los Angeles property said, "And we found many professional criminals among them."

Home intimated that he considered it a crime to be unemployed. "Were the registration system in vogue it would be possible for police to identify criminals and pick them out," Home added.

JAPAN SENDS WARSHIP TO HELP JAP MILL OWNERS MAKE WAR ON CHINESE WORKERS AT TSINTAO

TOKIO, May 27.—Uneasiness was felt here today over an ugly situation which has arisen at Tsintao as a result of a strike of Chinese employes against Japanese mill owners. Information received today indicates the dispute is rapidly becoming an anti-Japanese boycott and the Japanese colony at Tsintao fears violence.

The consul general has referred the details to the foreign office and have advised them that conditions are growing worse. The Tsintao chamber of commerce today asked the Japanese government to send additional police and a warship to protect Japanese citizen~

LEFT WING WINS FURRIERS POLL FOR N. Y. BOARD

Three Militants Within Opposition Elected

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 27.—The left wing slate scored a signal victory in the New York joint board of the Furriers' Uunion. With the exception of one candidate, B. Wexler, the left wing candidates secured the highest votes. Wexler was a progressive bloc candidate and the machine of Morris Kaufmann, present conservative manager of the joint board, was overwhelmingly defeated.

The left wing candidates winning were: B. Gold, Local One, who secured 1,032 votes; A. Gros, Local Five, 989 votes, and Fanny Warshafsky, Local Fifteen, 1,108 votes. B. Gold is expected to be chosen the next manager of the board. The New York joint board is the most important in the International.

Others elected to the joint board, belonging to the progressive opposition bloc, are: A. Winnick, Local One, 935 votes; M. Goldfield, Local Five, 855 votes; B. Wexler, Local Ten, 1,040 votes; George Strauss, Local Fifteen, 932 votes.

Many Take Part.

More membres are said to have taken part in this election than in any for years previous. The progressive bloc opposed to the reactionary machine won every seat, and the three left wingers within the progressive bloc gained the highest votes of any except Wexler who ran second highest.

SEVERINO CASE IS POSTPONED BY GOVERNMENT

District Attorney Shy on Chief Witness

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 27.—On motion of the district attorney, the action against A. Severino, to cancel his naturalization papers on the grounds that he is a Communist, was postponed to the October or November term of the federal district court.

The case came up for hearing before Judge Paul Jones of the federal district court this morning. In anticipation of the prosecution of the case, federal authorities had subpoenaed withnesses, among them Chas. Krumbein and Jay Lovestone, both of whom had testified for the defense in the Michigan trial of C. E. Ruthenberg. Krumbein and Lovestone came to Cleveland determined not to become witnesses for the prosecution in this case and rather to accept prison sentences for contempt of court than give any testimony on the witness stand.

Prosecution Moves for Delay

When the case came up for hearing, the district attorney moved that it be delayed until the next court calendar, declaring, "The witness on whom the government bases its entire case and who is to show all the threads," had not been found by the government and therefore it was unable to proceed. The reference evidently was to Frank Morrow, the government stolo-pigeon who testified against William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg in the trials at St. Joseph.

Rumor has it that Morrow feels that he was not well treated by the government for his work as stool-pigeon and that he has withdrawn from the scene so for as prosecution of Communist cases is concerned.

How Case Developed

Efforts to cancel Severino's naturalization papers grew out of his candidacy in the Cleveland municipal elections in 1923, when he ran as a candidate for city council. An attempt was made to rule him from the ballot on the grounds that he was indicted in the Michigan case.

When this failed because Severino was not under conviction and there-

SURE THING! YOU CAN NEVER TELL WHAT'LL HAPPEN UNDER CAPITALISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONESSEN, Pa., May 27.—While the miners are being laid off at the mines, and are not busy putting up posts in the mines, the ground is caving in and taking with it whatever is on top the earth.

Several days ago near Old Madison a house sank into a mine cave damaging the house. Not very long ago near Belle Vernon a house sank into a mine causing damage of several thousand dollars.

Some day these miners, that are told to keep out of the mines, till they agree to accept the 1917 scale, will wake up some morning and find themselves in a mine, and liable to be held by the coal company for trespassing. You can never tell what happens in this capitalist world.

KLUXERS CAUSE DISTURBANCE IN CLINTON, MASS.

Two Clashes Follow K. K. K. Meeting

CLINTON, Mass., May 27.—Sounding of six false alarms of fire in various parts of the city early today following a ku klux klan meeting in Berlin and the mobilizing of the Clinton police, created great excitement in the town.

Two clashes between klansmen and anti-klansmen were reported, but no injuries were reported. The disturbance was the latest of a series of klan and anti-klan troubles in Worcester county.

As the klan meeting in Brewer field, conducted with the burning of a cross, broke up, police were informed that the klansmen were going to parade thru Clinton. Residents of Clinton were aroused by the repeated ringing of the fire alarms, but the klan parade failed to appear altho two or three klan automobiles came into town.

Wild reports were circulated about the disturbances. One report to the police had it that a klan parade was attacked and scores injured, but later investigation showed this report to be untrue.

AIRPLANES TO BE USED AGAINST CUBAN LABOR TO AID SUGAR TRUST

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, May 27.—The Cuban government, which is an appendix to Wall street's National City Bank, has bought ten new airplanes, each equipped with a machine gun and carrying forty pound bombs.

The position of Cuba makes it impossible for these planes to be used for any other purpose than the suppression of the Cuban workers whose recent strikes in the sugar cane plantations have given apprehension to the powerful American owned corporations organized in the Sugar Trust.

FRANCE, SPAIN SEEK TRUCE IN NORTH AFRICA

Ask Negotiations with Abd-el-Krim, Is Report

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, May 27.—The Spanish and French governments have made advances to Abd-el-Krim to recognize the independence of the Riffians under Krim, and thus end the Morocco war by a joint agreement, it is admitted here in official circles. The French imperialists hope to gain by negotiations what they have not gained by the bayonet, a free hand in the plundering of French Morocco.

The French and Spanish governments have held off from suggesting because of the added prestige which such a course would give Krim, and the confidence it would instill in his followers, but they have made the step as a stark necessity.

Fear Cabinet Crisis.

The only other course open to the French government would be a costly and prolonged war on a large scale, which at any time might bring on a cabinet crisis.

The debate on the invasion of Morocco comes before the French chamber of deputies on Wednesday, and the Communists will offer opposition to the imperialistic campaign in Northern Africa.

The government has been concerning itself with attempts to balance the budget and map out a program on the payment of the war debt to America. The Painleve government offered the chamber a program of raising the taxes on salaries and reducing the taxes on unearned incomes, thus shifting the burden of the debt payments from the rich to the workers.

Gen. Tauffieb of Alsace, speaking before the senate, disclosed that Coolidge is insisting on debt payments in order to force France into a con-

TEXTILE TRUST DELIBERATELY CLOSING MILLS TO TERRORIZE WORKERS AND FORCE WAGE CUT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 27.—Unemployment in the cotton mills of the North and South—already bad—is being deliberately fostered by manufacturers' associations. Authority for this statement are the official declarations of Morgan Butler, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and A. M. Fairley, president of the Southern Yarn Spinners' Association.

Butler, who is the son of the United States senator from Massachusetts and Coolidge's campaign manager, told a meeting of the regional association of his national organization for the Fall River district that mill owners are following the recommendations of the national body to curtail production. He referred to circulars that his office sent to all employer members in the North and South.

Will Deliberately Starve Workers.

Fairley's statement, sent from his home in Laurinburg, N. C., says the mills in his community are already on a 3-day a week basis but that drastic curtailment must b speedily made by all members of the association.

The meaning of all this for cotton mill workers is that they will find it still harder to exist during the coming season than in the past. Week by week more mills are shutting down in New England, particularly. The big Massachusetts Mills of Lowell, Mass. have closed their doors and the other mills of this cotton center are on a part time basis.

The Starvation Line.

The reason given to the press for this curtailment advice, is that the market is bad and needs stiffening up: less goods, higher prices.

Unionists are convinced, however, that there is a further reason—that production is being systematically cut down for the sake of increasing the unemployed army and frightening the workers still on the jobs with the fear of dismissal, so that changes in piece work rates and speeding up devices such as adding more looms to the weaver and spindles to the spinner may be put thru without resistence.

PROGRESSIVE MINERS DEMAND LEWIS LEAD MINERS' MARCH ON W. VA. AND DEFY INJUNCTIONS

The Progressive Miners' Committee, which is rallying the left wing in the U. M. W. of A. against the reactionary officialdom whose acts are bringing that magnificent union to point of dissolution, has issued the following statement concerning the present situation in West Virginia, where the policies of the U. M. W. of A. officials are seen at work:

• • • •

The so-called organization campaign now being conducted among the West Virginia miners proves conclusively that the labor bureaucracy is either incapable of solving the problems of the miners or is determined that these fine fighters of that state shall not be organized.

A Defeatist Campaign.

The feminine, apologetic method of the campaign, the excusing of themselves for being in the district at all by the organizers, the meek bows to capitalist authorities, the statements of class collaboration, the recognition of the usurped power of courts to grant injunctions, the repudiation of class struggle at a time when consumption of coal is down to a minimum—all prove the incompetence or treason of the officials.

If the bureaucracy desired to organize the West Virginia miners, why doesn't it declare a national general strike thruout the industry?

Contract Practically Non-Existent.

There would be no violation of "sacred contractual obligation" as there is no contract being enforced in the industry now. In every field the operators have torn up the contract—and John L. Lewis knows it. Yet, he has not only refused to enforce the contract provisions, but has tacitly agreed to its violation by refusing to carry on an aggressive struggle against the assault in every district.

In view of this fact, the progressive miners demand an intensive campaign to enforce the contract, stop the open shop drive and fight the wage cuts, together with a real organization campaign in West Virginia and Kentucky. Mass demonstration are necessary in West Virginia and if arranged by the U. M. W. of A. they would receive such support as to be a success.

For a Lewis-led March on Non-union Fields.

A call to the miners of eastern Ohio and the territory surrounding West Virginia would rally, together with the union miners, the militant miners in that field waiting to be organized. These, if led by Lewis, Green and all the officials of the International, District and sub-district of the whole country and marched into and thru

ZANKOV TERROR CLAIMS LIVES OF 3 WORKERS

Public Hanging Follows Court Death Sentence

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 27—The Zankov fascist government claimed the lives of three more workers today when Peter Zadgorsky, Marco Friedman and Georgi Koev were hanged in a public square just behind the Jewish cemetery.

The three men who were condemned to death by a military court, were charged with being involved in the Sveti Kral cathedral bombing. Koev was the first to mount the scaffold while thousands of eyes watched. Zadgorsky was next to die. Then came Friedman, custodian of the cathedral, who approached the hangmen with head held proudly erect. Troops were massed in the vicinity.

Three more persons have been threatened to death, convicted of sheltering the "conspirators." They are M. Perchomliev, M. Leger, and Mme. Nicolova. Mme. Leger was sentenced to life imprisonment.

CALL POLICE RESERVES TO STOP UNION DRIVE; RESULT, A RIOT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, May 27.—Merely because a rank and file organization committee visited three non-union shops in the downtown cloak and suit district today, the bosses called out the police reserves, and when the battle was over seven men were injured and a score of women were backed off to hospitals for first aid to the hysteric and shell shocked scabs.

The police responded to the call of the bosses with drawn revolvers and created such a commotion in the heart of the dress making district that great throngs gathered and blocked the streets, necessitating a calling out of further police reserves to cope with the crowds who cheered the five unionists who were dragged off to jail.

SOVIET REDUCE PEASANT TAX 20 MILLION RUBLES

Now One Fourth of Pre-War Assessment

MOSCOW, May 27.—The central executive committee of the Council of People's Commissariat of the Soviet Unions has just passed a bill on agricultural taxes for 1925-26. In comparison with 470 million rubles of taxes of last year, and instead of 300 million rubles of taxes projected for this year, the taxes of this year were cut down to 280 million rubles only. Out of this amount 100 million rubles will be devoted to village administration and other needs in villages.

An interesting comparison can be made of the taxes of pre-war times with taxes of recent years. In pre-war times all direct and indirect taxes amounted to 10 rubles 37 kopecks per capita. After the revolution, the peasants' taxes per capita have been as follows:

1920-21	10 rubles	30 kopecks
1921-22	6 "	11 "
1923-24	3 "	93 "
1924-25	3 "	96 "

In accordance with the above bill, in 1925-36 the Russian peasant will pay only 2 rubles 77 kopecks, which equals ¼ of pre-war taxes. It is even less than ¼, taking in consideration that the value of Soviet ruble is lower than that of pre-war times.

Two Million Dessiatins Seeded In Corn

The Council of People's Commissariat of U. S. S. R. has accepted a plan for the increase of the area to be seeded with corn. According to this plan, during the next 3 years the area will be increased to 3½ million dessiatins. During 1925-26 the area seeded with corn will amount to 1,900,000 dessiatins. In comparison with the last year's area there will be an increase of 450,000 dessiatins. The Council of People's Commissariat has also pointed out the necessity of taking steps toward the manufacture of corn food products and by-products.

Condition of the Crops.

According to the latest bulletins of the department of agriculture, the crops in the central provinces have been greatly benefited by the rainfalls of the last days and there is a noticeable improvement in the winter crops. The winter crops in Ukrainia show a considerable improvement especially in these regions, where the condition of the winter crops are quite satisfactory. Winter and spring crops in north Caucasus are in a very good condition.

Reduce Price of Machinery.

In connection with the increased production of agricultural machinery and implements by the Soviet factories, beginning May 1, prices on all agricultural machinery and implements will be reduced to pre-war standards.

A considerable reduction will also be made in fuel and lubricating oils.

Refrigerators for Butter.

The work has been started on building refrigerators for butter in different parts of Siberia. The butter collected at these various points will be shipped to a huge main refrigerator to be built in Omsk, where the supplies of butter and other dairy products will be stored for export and domestic market.

PROGRESSIVE MINERS OF U. S. CALL FOR WORLD UNION UNITY IN MESSAGE TO COAL MINERS

A call to hte miners of the world for international trade union unity is being sent out today by the progressive miners committee of the United Mine Workers of America. The call says:

Never before in the history of mining has international unity been more desireous or necessary than at present. The coal miners of the world, except Soviet Russia are being ground down under the despotic heel of international capitalism as exemplified in the Dawes plan which has reduced the miners of Germany, Italy, Belgium, Britain and also in America to the verge of slavery.

International Open Shop Drive.

An open shop drive is taking place in all countries to crush the only economic weapon of the workers—their trade unions—and leave them defenseless and at the mercy of the monopolistic exploiters.

The miners' wages are being cut, their hours of labor are being lengthened, their working conditions are being destroyed, conditions which have been won after many bloody struggles on the industrial battlefield, to satisfy, the insatiable lust of moneyed parasites.

For World Unity of Labor.

Brother miners of the world! In this hour of bitter struggle we greet you! In the name of international trade union unity we call upon you to join in an industrial struggle for solidarity and we pledge ourselves to fight on this side of the pond for the realization of One International Union composed of the trade unions of the world for the overthrow of capitalism and the erection of a government by and for the workers and peasants.

Comrades miners and workers of Russia! Your sacrifices have won you the reward you so richly deserve. The example you have set to the workers of the world is bearing fruit, and in the desperate onslaught against the toilers of the globe is found ample proof that your sacrifles have awakened the world proletariat, and the drive for world solidarity is but one of many expression of its awakened conscience.

To the British trade union delegation to Russia! We salute you. Your fearless, honest, unprejudiced statement on your investigations, and your drive for unconditional admission of the Russian trade unions to Amsterdam, in spite of all the brazen lying of the kept press and government agencies, deserve the admiration of the workers of the world.

Hands around the world! The day of emancipation is drawing near. Comrades, stand ready to march onward in one united international.

is bad for him. Only those who are saddled with a slave mind would follow their advice. But when John D. and J. P. are able to get Peter Brady, William Green and others of that ilk to speak for them there is no doubt but the workers are taking their instructions from their class enemies. When the bosses get scared over the visits of such comparatively mild people as Purcell and John Weatley, what would happen if Zinoviev or Trotsky had purchased tickets for New York?

THE United States department of agriculture has hit upon the right idea to solve the farmers' problems if we are to believe a press notice sent out by that department. Let the farmers laugh off their heads! This is the solution. In reply to a questionnaire the farmers almost unanimously asked for a laugh. Low rail rates or better prices for their product did not seem to worry them. What they were after was the loud haw, haw. They are getting it.

ONE picture sent out by the department that made quite a hit was entitled, "A Tale of Two Bulls." This is a good idea for mortgage bankers when they come to pack the poor farmer out of his home. An irate farmer is not pleasant to look at, but a picture of a horny son of toil, turning over his patrimony to the banker accompanied by considerable wiggling of the inevitable chin spinach and a little of Charlie Chaplin's foot shuffling, might get the banker over the unpleasantness and put the farmer in the right mood to face the high road with his pack on his back and his family for a body guard.

"Of Practical Political Importance"

SAYS

V. I. Ulianov (Lenin)

the great Communist teacher and leader, on this question in his introduction to written in August, 1917. Concluding he states:

> The question of the relation of a proletarian socialist revolution to the state is therefore not only of practical political importance, but is an urgent need of the day, being concerned with the elucidation for the masses of what they will have to do for their liberation from the yoke of capitalism in the very near future.

Further light on how and when this book was written, he gives in this well known afterword, written in Petrograd in December, 1917:

> This little book was written in August and September, 1917. I had already drawn up the plan for the next, the seventh chapter, on the experiences of the Russian Revolution of 1905 and 1917. But, apart from the title, I had not succeeded in writing a single line of the chapter, being prevented therefrom by a political crisis—the eve of the November Revolution of 1917. Such a hindrance can only be welcomed. However, this final part of the book devoted to the lessons of the Russian Revolutions of 1905 and 1917, will probably have to be put off for a long time. It is more pleasant and more useful to live thru the experience of a revolution than to write about it.

A new edition of this great book can now be had bound in an attractive, duroflex cover—with a sympathetic drawing of the author.

Coast Jobs Get Scarcer, Timber Mills Shut Down

PORTLAND, Ore., May 27.—Along with the usual agricultural layoff after spring planting, comes a further reduction in timber operations. Cutting has been greatly reduced, more mills and camps closed and many night shifts abolished. Operators claim 50 to 75 per cent normal conditions, and the 4 to 5-day week prevails, with more lowering of wages and a rumor of entire cessation in the lumber industry. At least the capitalist press here notes a "marked decline" in employment.

The serious unemployment in Oregon prompts the farmers to offer as low as $25 a month for general work. Spring wages had been $40 to $50 a month.

British, French Rift Seen in Differences Over German Note

LONDON, May 27—The reply of Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, to the note of Austen Chamberlain, on the German security pact shows that France is anxious to block Germany's participation in the league of nations.

France also is reluctant to evacuate Cologne, and is opposed to extending Germany's eastern frontiers. England takes a different attitude on all these points.

Slight Change in Grain Crop.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—A slight decrease in wheat acreage is reported for 21 countries, according to the new estimate received by the United States department of agriculture from the international institute of agriculture at Rome.

This including the new French estimate brings the total of 21 countries reported to date to 127,046,000 acres compared with 129,075,000 acres for the same countries last year, a decrease of 2,029,000 acres or 1.6 per cent. This represents about two-thirds of the Northern Hemisphere wheat area outside of the Soviet Union and China.

Oil Trust Lawyer Gets Job.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—Silas Strawn, whose name as lawyer to prosecute the Teapot Dome conspirators was withdrawn when his connection with the oil trust was revealed, has been chosen to represent the United States at the conference on Chinese customs.

The conference is part of the nine-power treaty for the division of China by the world powers, which must be ratified by France to make it effective.

Hoover Boosts Brazilian Trade.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—The United States, again the chief supplier of Brazil, exported merchandise to that country in 1924 amounting to approximately $66,000,000, according to a pamphlet on the economic situation of Brazil just issued by the department of commerce.

This export trade shows a growth of $20,000,000 over the figures of 1923.

FIGHT DEMANDED BY PROGRESSIVE COAL DIGGERS

Urge Attack on the West Virginia Injunction

West Virginia would certainly bring every miner of that state into the union in spite of all the injunctions of all the courts.

The courts, state and federal, have issued injunctions against Lewis and the U. M. W. of A. to prevent "peaceful picketing." This has been done many times, previously, and with the same procedure. We have seen high-priced lawyers engaged to fight the injunction in courtrooms, one decision favoring the miners, then the discovery of endless technicalities, another injunction, and so on and so on.

The Method of Failure.

Meanwhile this is going on, the abandonment of "peaceful picketing," the working of scabs, the renewed production of coal, the creeping danger of company unions chartered by the state, the weakening of the fighting spirit of the miners by the long seige of hunger, the long drawn out and sickly policy of the officials and—finally, the collapse of the movement.

Mass violation of injunctions, led by Lewis—whose duty it is as head of the union to lead or get out—would once and for all end the injunctions in West Virginia. Mass meetings in each locality with progressive miner speakers to solidify the fighting spirit and lead a militant picketing campaign would clinch the victory.

From Courts to Picket Line.

Tens of thousands of dollars have been wasted in the courts fighting the injunctions, together with wasted time of the officials. This has crippled the campaign—but above all, it has sidetracked the struggle from a place where the miners can win—the picket line—to a place where they can never win—the capitalist courts.

This money would much better be used to feed and shelter the destitute women and children of the miners who are being evicted from the homes and who have had all grocery stores closed against them and who suffer danger of slow starvation and actual death.

Is It a Plot Against Union?

The meek and apologetic policy of the leaders, their hypocritical prayer meetings, their class collaboration with sheriffs and state police, have disgusted the miners, who now ask, "Is this campaign a part of an arrangement with the coal operators to fool the workers into defeat, to keep the officials in office and to give them an excuse for the tragic lack of organization?"

The progressive miners also demand an immediate working alliance with the railroad unions, to aid them in their organization campaign. Not an agreement to pass resolutions of sympathy for each other, but a pledge of co-operation where during strikes the railroaders would refuse to haul scab coal and in return would receive similar support when the railway men are on strike.

Pacifism Leads to Defeat.

Every miner, even every intelligent worker, knows that West Virginia is under the brutal terror of company gunmen, cossacks, and innumerable spies, that union men who venture alone and unprotected by a miners' army into the unorganized fields are beaten up and jailed, deported or shot down in cold blood.

Under such conditions the miners are actual slaves, and any officials who pretend to organize by prayer meetings and peaceful picketing are either totally ignorant or traitors to the union.

Make Labor Leaders Lead.

No one can doubt the earnest desire of the West Virginia miners to organize. But the U. M. W. of A. must give them the chance. It must lead a real militant campaign—call out the miners of the whole country on strike, organize a march into West Virginia under the banner of the union, compel Lewis, Green, Murray, and the tribe of cowards and weak sisters drawing fat salaries to walk at the head of the march as is their duty as labor leaders occupying office.

Let this be done and thousands of men would respond to the call for a war on the open shop that would shake the rule of scabdom in West Virginia and thruout the country into ruins. Let this be done and the U. M. W. of A. would regain its power and the miners their wages and jobs.

RUSSIAN BUDGET NOW DEFINITE

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Reports from the Soviet Union commissariat of finance to the Russian information bureau in Washington show that the stabilization of Soviet currency has permitted the Union of Republics to establish a fixed budget for the current half year, and to calculate a fixed budget for the year beginning next October. Government revenues for the past six months were $58,000,000 more than anticipated, and left a surplus. This surplus is now being applied to development of industry and agriculture, and to electrification.

American Labor Must Defeat U. S. Aid to New Attack on Soviet Rule

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the press of the international bankers repeats, what the DAILY WORKER published in detail last week, that the Baltic and Balkan capitalist states are frantically clutching at one another in an effort to develop some sort of compact against their common dread—the Union of Soviet Republics.

In its issue of Thursday, May 21st, the DAILY WORKER carried an exposure of this new move of the offspring of the Versailles peace under the heading of: "Military Staffs of Border States Meet to Prepare New War Against Soviet Rule."

It was not until its issue of May 25th, that the Chicago Daily News, for instance, published a cable from its chief anti-Soviet lie fabricator, F. A. MacKenzie, at Reval, Esthonia, under the title, "New Move in Baltic Union Against Russia; President Visits Reval and Sees Esthonian Army Parade."

• • • •

This should be enough to stir the workers everywhere to be on their guard against "the new war." Morgan has just floated a $10,000,00 loan to bulwark terror rule in Finland. No wonder the Esthonian white guard government declares a two-day holiday when the Finnish president comes to Reval. The white guards, ages from 16 to 60, drilled to make war on Esthonia's militant workers, are paraded for the approval of Finland's fascist chief.

But Esthonia, like Latvia, cannot live cut off from the economic life of the Union of Soviet Republics. Even the anti-Bolshevik propagandist, MacKenzie, is forced to report that:

> "Esthonia's metal trade, once prosperous, has now largely disappeared. Narva's textile mills, capable of employing 15,000 people, running only in part. The Russians recently offered to buy them. Military parades upon Petersplatz and even the formation of white guards are powerless to fight this economic menace."

• • • •

These little buffer states, organized and supported to feed bullets and not bread to the workers, cannot long endure unless outside aid is continually granted them.

One of the main sponsors for the anti-Soviet "little entente" is Foreign Minister Benes of Czecho-Slovakia, who acted recently as chairman of the "socialist" sponsored international labor bureau of the League of Nations. The Czechs did their best in the war on Soviet Rule. They marched against the Hungarian Soviet Republic. Now the Czechish foreign minister promises to win the support of the League of Nations, at its fall assembly, for the "little entente," vassal of French imperialism, for the new war against the Workers' Republics.

• • • •

This new drive is being auspiciously launched under a huge smokescreen of propaganda to the effect that the Soviet Union is planning to increase its Red Army to several millions for an open attack on its western neighbors. The DAILY WORKER has already exposed this propaganda that calls for a saviour against the "imperialism of Moscow." In our May 21st issue it was shown:

> "As for the 'imperialism of Moscow,' this is a demagogic lie which is completely played out. This is nothing but a cheap excuse, intended to justify the war plans which are now being openly admitted. The measures of defense are obviously warlike measures. As concerns the word 'defense,' history has shown that up to now every predatory war has been carried on under the flag of self-defense."

• • • •

American workers must be aroused to the danger of this new war,—the war against Soviet Rule. It will be the wealth stolen from American workers, in the form of profits, that will be used to finance this war, since capitalist Europe is bankrupt. Wage cuts and the longer workday in the United States mean more gold to feed the war beast in Europe. Workers of America must fight this scheme of the international bankers. They must defeat it.

GUDOK, NEWPAPER OF SOVIET R. R. WORKERS, OBSERVES 5th BIRTHDAY

By M. A. SKROMNY

On May 11, Gudok, the official organ of the Soviet Railwaymen's Union, celebrated the fifth anniversary of its existence. The issue of May 11, 1925, is full of greetings from all parts of the world, including the United States.

The growth of circulation and influence of this paper is remarkable.

Gudok Born in Battle.

The first issue of Gudok as a daily newspaper appeared on May 11, 1920, during the fierce battles of the Russian workers and peasants against the world's bourgeoisie. It was during the blockade and invasions, at the time of the almost total destruction of the economic life of the country when Gudok was born.

The transport of Russia was in a terrible condition. The Soviet government had no time to reorganize it, everything in the country was being used for the defense of the revolution. Some of the old officials of the railways made use of this situation and attempted still further to obstruct transportation. They were sabotaging, stealing, destroying.

Gudok began an offensive against them. It began to expose them and called upon the workers to do their bit in exposing the enemies of the revolution. The workers responded. They began to write to Gudok. At first they were hesitating, expecting the editors to be "highbrows," and not to pay much attention to letters written by half-illiterate workers. But soon they found out that this was not the case. The utmost attention was paid to these letters. The workers began to send in more letters, and the circulation and influence of the paper began to grow.

Bill Dunne a Correspondent.

The circulation of the paper in October, 1923, was 95,000 daily. At that time the paper used to receive about 4,000 letters a month. The paper had 325 regular worker-correspondents. In May, 1924, this group of correspondents has grown to 1,115 and the circulation went up to 232,500.

At the present time (May, 1925) the paper has 10,000 worker-correspondents and the circulation has grown to 260,000. Besides these correspondents it has correspondents in all countries including the United States. One of their U. S. correspondents is Bill Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER.

In the issue of May 11, 1925, there are greetings from groups of workers' correspondents from other Russian newspapers as well as from the worker-correspondents of the Rote Fahne of Germany, the worker-correspondents of France and others.

The movement of worker-correspondents which started in Russia is spreading rapidly all over the world and has reached by this time also the United States.

But so far Gudok is far ahead of all other newspapers in the world in the space devoted to its worker-correspondents, and that is the reason why the workers of Russia love it so much.

U. S. To Sell Ford Ships

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the shipping board this afternoon left Washington for Detroit to resume negotiations for the purchase by Henry Ford of between 200 and 400 government vessels.

The ships are those designated by the board to be scrapped. Before leaving, O'Connor announced he would ask ford to convert the vessels into Diesel burners, and put as many as possible into service.

FARMERS' CROP LOSSES REACH MANY MILLIONS

Cold Wave Took Toll of Much Produce

A toll of damaged crops which will run into millions was left in the wake of the week-end cold wave, according to statistics compiled here today from reports of observers in Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and North Dakota.

The survey is the first comprehensive report available since thermometers dropped from the nineties to the freezing point and below, in the face of Arctic blasts from the northwest last Saturday and Sunday.

Damages Reported.

Van Buren county, Michigan: Frost has wiped out entire fruit crop. Most complete disaster to fruit growers in 15 years.

Clinton county, Mich.: Plums total loss, Cherry yield reduced 50 to 90 per cent. Late cherry yield reduced 50 to 75 per cent.

Eaton county, Mich.: Strawberry crop reduced 50 per cent throut Michigan. Light damage to early garden produce.

Whiteside county, Ill.: Total loss of all berry and fruit crops. Twenty-five per cent apples loss. Lowlands oats and barley cut to 50 per cent yield. Early planted corn cut 50 per cent.

Wells county, Ind.: Heavy corn and sugar beet losses. Total losses in truck garden crops.

Greatest Loss In 12 Years.

"It is impossible to estimate the loss accurately in dollars," a statement from the foundation issued with the survey reads, "but it can be said conservatively to be the greatest in 12 years.

"Prices in such commodities as cannot be replanted in time for seasonal maturity, will be extremely high."

ference of world powers. At such a conference Tauffieb pointed out, "Problems cannot be taken up with the United States under conditions favorable to France unless the debt question is first disposed of." Tauffieb said France should carry on more active propaganda in America.

U. S. Business Got Loans.

Former minister of finance Klotz, who served during the close of the war, declared that the money borrowed by France has been spent in America. "Thru war taxes the American treasury has recovered 80 per cent of it," Klotz said, in a speech here.

France and Spain are reported to be offering Krim the right into trade without hinderance by the customs of the territory, now held by both. Krim has so far refused to negotiate unless he is conceded Tetuan.

The Riffians, meanwhile, have attacked the French Moroccan front at three vital points, and inflicted severe losses on the French.

Severino Case is Postponed to Fall by the Government

fore had not suffered a loss of citizenship, the government went a step further and began the proceedings to cancel his naturalization papers, evidently hoping to set a precedent for similar action against all naturalized citizens who become Communists. The case has been pending for some time and the government has sought to secure deposition in various places to aid it in proving Severino's Communist views. It seems not to have succeeded in securing the testimony it relies upon to make its case.

Light is thrown on the proceedings by the fact that Severino was naturalized in 1915, ten years ago, which was before the Communist Party and the Communist International existed, and yet the contention of the government is that he secured his naturalization papers thru fraud because he since has become a Communist and an active worker in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Bill Asks New State

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 27.—"A new state" in Illinois was requested in a bill introduced in the senate memorializing the United States congress to "divide Illinois into two seperate states to be known as north Illinois and south Illinois." the bill was scheduled to go the executive committee.

It was freely admitted the bill, was echoing the disappointment of Chicago politicians who, thus far, have failed in their effort at reapportionment o fthe state to give the metropolis a decided increase in the number of its senators and representatives at the expense of the "Downstate."

Fire Sweeps Toledo Building.

TOLEDO, O., May 27—Two persons weer injured and a loss mounting into the hundreds of thousands of dollars will result from a fire which is sweeping the terminal building here this afternoon.

BODIES OF 6 DEAD REMOVED OF THE 71 TRAPPED

Pit Had No Facilities for Fighting Fire

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Seventy-one miners were trapped today in the Carolina Coal company's mine at Raleigh, N. C., of which six have been recovered dead, according to telephonic advices received here by the bureau of mines.

The men were trapped in an explosion which was almost immediately followed by fire, bureau officials said.

A heavy loss of life is feared because the mine has no facilities for fighting fires, and has only one gas mask, it was stated by Dr. T. T. Read, safety service director of the bureau.

Rescuers at Work.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 27.— Fears that between fifty and sixty-five men met death in the explosion and are in the mine of the Carolina Coal company, near Sanford, were expressed here this afternoon as state authorities prepared to send rescue equipment to the scene of the disaster.

The exact number of men who were trapped was not known, but rescuers at a late hour today had been unable to penetrate into the mine because of the fire that followed the explosion. Six bodies had been recovered near the mouth of the mine shortly after three o'clock.

Martial Spirit Pipes Down

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill., May 27.—All is not well in case of invasion by a foreign foe, it is learned in the freshwater gold coast town of Highland Park, revealed the weakness in the local defenses. The day had been set apart to bum every resident for a cash handout for the memorial that remains unbuilt seven years after the armistice. The delegated beggars reported an astonishing lack of interest in the scheme. One amateur collector said he had been insolently rebuffed three times in one city block. The town was well over 100 per cent patriotic eight years ago.

Infant Mortality in Scotland

GLASGOW, May 27.—Ninety-eight out of every 1,000 babies born in Scotland in 1924 died before reaching their first birthday, according to the latest report of the Scotland registrar general. The birth rate for 1924 was the lowest recorded since the war.

Housing Shortage in England

LONDON, Eng., May 27.—Olbury, a manufacturing town with a population of about 37,000 inhabitants, situated between Birmingham and Wolverhampton in the almost completely industrialized "black country" has since the war been suffering from an acute housing shortage, as has been the case with nearly all English cities.

Quake Shock Felt.

NEW ORLEANS, May 26—An earthquake shock, roughly reckoned to have had its center 10,000 miles south of New Orleans, was registered on the seismograph at Loyola University between 2:23 and 3 a. m. today, it was reported by Father Abell, scientist in charge of the department at the university.

SIXTY-FIVE MINERS, TRAPPED IN RALEIGH MINE, THOT DOOMED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 27—Emergency first aid equipment has been rushed by airplane direct to the Carolina Coal company's mine, near Raleigh, N. C., where approximately 65 miners are trapped, from Birmingham, Ala., it was announced at the United States bureau of mines. The plane should arrive early this evening.

WILL FOLLOW IN FOOTSTEPS OF SUN YAT SEN

Koumintang Leader in Letter to Communist

The American branch of the Kuo Min Tang Party, intends to follow in the footsteps of its dead leader, Sun Yat Sen, says a letter written by the president of that organization to Martin Abern, district organizer of the Workers Party. The letter reads:

"Dear Mr. Abern:

"I am very sorry that on account of my absence from Chicago, answer to you has been delayed for such a long time.

"I have read your enclosed clippings which breathe with so much sincere sympathy and interest in the Chinese people in their struggle for freedom and independence. We thank you heartily for your sympathy with us in mourning the death of our departed leader, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, who devoted his whole life in the cause of the Chinese working masses.

"We, the Kuo Min Tang Party will follow in the path of our great leader, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, and continue the fight for the liberation of the Chinese masses against their oppressors. We are very grateful to the workers of the world for encouraging and rendering support to our emancipation movement.

"Sincerely yours,
"Kuo Min Tang,
"Hinla Eng, President."

Furniture Men Up for Price Fixing, Refuse to Pay Fines

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 27.—Grand Rapids furniture men are involved in the indictments it is expected will be returned against 201 furniture manufacturers of the country by a federal grand jury in Chicago whcih, it is said, is prepared to charge them with a technical violation of the Sherman law.

Plans for the contest have been laid by representatives of the National Association of Case Goods Manufacturers at a meeting in Chicago which was attended by a committee representing 11 Grand Rapids plants.

The government's reported compromise offer by which they were to plead guilty to price fixing and pay a fine of $5,000 each will not be accepted, it was stated here.

Chrales R. Sligh, president of the Sligh Furntiure company, said his company will never pay the $5,000 unless it is ordered to by the United States supreme court.

U. S. BANKERS LOOKED TO FOR GERMAN LOANS

Rely on Hindenburg to Suppress Labor

NEW YORK, May 27.—Employers' periodicals for the garment and textile industries are informed thru B. J. Perkins, Berlin correspondent for the Fairchilds' Service, that German labor is no longer so docile as before the war and will resist the mailed fist policies that General Hindenburg is expected in many quarters to use.

But big business is counting on the general to accomplish the disciplining of the workers, says Perkins, and feels that in any case American capital will be so pleased with the election of the militarist that more ample loans will be extended from across the water.

Hindy Ecpected to Be Good Bet.

"Today," continues the correspondent, "any application of what the unions choose to interpret as the mailed fist principle will meet organised opposition not so much to the ascendency of the nationalist party, as a fight to retain what power German labor has acquired since 1919.

"The industrialist professes to believe that the ultimate reaction to Hindenburg's election will be favorable, especially in Wall Street, on the ground that America's money market, in which numerous German enterprises still hope to negotiate loans, will appreciate the necessity of the Bismarckian touch, and in consequence regard the fatherland as a bullish proposition. It is more of a hope than a prophecy."

$5 to $9 a Week.

Speaking of the woolen and worsted trades, he says:

"The present wage in this industry, employing a large amount of home work, is the equivalent of $5 weekly, but in other branches the pay averages 6 marks a day, or nearly $9 a week."

Negroes Arrested for Trying to Get White Slave to Join Union

By A. B., Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 27.—A colored girl picketing in front of A. Biranbaum, 63 E. 11th street, a small dress shop, was arrested for getting into a scrap with the slave she was trying to get to join the union. While the colored girl was talking to her the scab set up such a howl that a crowd gathered, the boss came running out of the shop and in the struggle the scab received a blow on the nose. All were taken to court, but the case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

A. Biranbaum's dress shop is a dirty hole where girls work under the most wretched conditions and for a miserable wage. Lately a struggle between the dressmakers' union and this exploiter of labor was evident and during the last few days a union picket appeared in front of the shop talking to the girls as they come and go. The fight is still on.

Manufacturers Probe Fire.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 27—Newman T. Miller, state fire marshal, today received a request from city officials of Brazil to investigate a fire which destroyed the plant of the Chicago Sewer Pipe Co., there with a loss of $250,000.

MANY CHARGED WITH DRAFT DODGING FOUGHT AT FRONT IN FRANCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 27.—There are 3,350 indictments on the calendars of the federal court here, against persons charged with evading the conscription law during the world war.

Many of those against whom indictments were brot, were at the front, United States attorney Buckner declared, and still others are dead.

Buckner is endeavoring to clear the calendar of these cases, as it is thot they will not be prosecuted.

Presbyterians Argue Over the Virginity of Christ's Mother

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 27—Leaders of the Presbyterian church, cheered by clearing skies in the raging doctrinal controversy, were laboring here today to avoid steps which would lead to a split in the church as a result of the Gantz decision.

Predictions were freely made that the bitter threats of modernist New York leaders that the wealthy and powerful metropolitan church would break with the main church body, would be reduced to only vigorous protests against the judicial commission's ruling that complete faith in the virgin birth is an essential qualification for licensure as a Presbyterian minister.

Modernist members declared, however, that the New York presbytery, battleground of the fight over moot church tenets, would defy the general assembly and continue to license members without requiring direct affirmation of faith in the virgin birth.

Wheat Gamblers, Host to Jardine, Charged with Manipulating

Information that the Chicago board of trade has been under secret investigation by department of justice agents for the last six weeks in which various charges of artificial price manipulations have been voiced and denied, trickled here today coincident with the announcement that Secretary of Agriculture Jardine would visit the board and confer with the directors tomorrow.

The directors denied, however, that they hid any knowledge or expectancy that Jardine would demand a "house cleaning." A persistent report is current that threats of revoking their charter unless conditions on the board were remedied immediately, have been made.

Bandits Loot Kentland, Ind.

KENTLAND, Ind., May 27.—Bandits invaded the town of Brook, Ind., near here today, looted the bank, cut all telephone wires and sped away toward Chicago, leaving the town completely isolated from all communication. The amount of the loot or details of the robbery had not reached here a few hours after the crime.

Scab Bands Supplant Union Music.

NEW ORLEANS, May 27.— Union musicians are protesting "company bands" that supply music free at the New Orleans playgrounds. Union musicians had been engaged on a salary basis until the "open shop" bosses got behind this move to wreck the musicians' union.

Fire Destroys Farmer's Home.

ROSCOE, Ill., May 27.—The farm house of Albert Burns was destroyed by fire early today and the family barely escaped with their lives when the back part of the house was found in flames by a daughter who was returning from a dance.

Prisoner Burns to Death.

PANA, Ill., May 27.—Ed Roach, 45, a prisoner, was burned to death today in a fire that destroyed the jail here.

POLICE ATTACK NEGRO WHO ASKS FOOD SERVICE

Noted African Beaten in Restaurant

Kojo Tovalou-Houenou, hereditary head of the African nation of Dahomey which is now under French colonial rule, and president of the Universal League for the Defense of the Black Race, was the center of an uproar and violent fight in a Clark St. restaurant Tuesday night which he had entered with a party of friends for a quiet supper.

No sooner had the prepossessing figure of the young African chief appeared at the door, than a wild shriek rang out.

Negro Is Attacked

"Kill him! I am from Virginia!" shouted a well-dressed white woman, throwing up her hands.

"I am from Texas!" shouted a prosperous looking man, who arose to give battle.

As Tovalou and his friends quietly ignored these genteel remarks and proceeded toward a table, the proprietor of the restaurant rushed up to bar the way. "The tables are all reserved," he said, "we can't serve you, you'll have to go."

But the young Negro, himself a lawyer and physician, and knowing the law of the state to be that restaurants are obliged to serve without discrimination of race or color, pointed to the many vacant tables and insisted on his right to be served.

Altho Tovalou-Houenou was discharged in the night court at the city hall, the policemen who arrested him subjected him to a severe beating. Patrolman Murphy, Costello, Webb and Cmith of the central police station severely beat Tovalou-Houenou, threw him into the street, and rode him to the station in a patrolwagon.

Tovalou-Houenou had addressed members of the Women's International League, with Miss Jane Adams presiding over the meeting, and left with Mrs. Harry Norton, and Gustave Arcila Uribe, a sculptor. They went to the Schulder's restaurant at 170 N. Clark St., and the waiters and proprietors immediately refused to serve them. They were insulted and cursed by the waiters. The manager then called the police, and asked them to eject Tovalou-Houenou.

Soon after Tovalou-Houenou entrance a swarm of ladies, gentlemen and policemen were piling over each other like a swarm of jungle-beasts to pummel the "nigger." He was severely beaten about the face, bleeding profusely. Finally the crowd of policemen dragged him out of the restaurant and took him to the night court on a charge of "disorderly conduct." the white hoodlums were not arrested. The proprietor of the restaurant and of course.

Well Known Foe of Imperialism

Kojo Tovalou-Houenou is known far and wide for his protests against the cruelties practiced in Africa by the imperialist government. He is recognized by the French government as the champion of the people of Dahomey who suffer torture and death at the hands of the French rulers. After serving in the French army during the world war as an officer and surgeon, Tovalou's protests on behalf of his people caused him to fall into the bad graces of the French government. He is touring the United States seeking support for his movement for the liberation of the African peoples.

"They are more savage than the Africans," was the short comment of the young Negro to a reported for the DAILY WORKER. "In Africa, at least they respect foreigners and travellers."

Will Bring Suit

Tovalou will begin, he said, immediate suit against the proprietor of the restaurant and also against the policemen who joined in the assault and riot.

OVERGAARD TO SPEAK TO MILITANT METAL WORKERS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK—A general meeting of all militants and progressive metal workers will be held this Friday, May 29, 8 p. m. at 108 E. 14th.

Andrew Overgaard, who has just returned from Russia, and who has attended the Metal Workers International Congress recently held in France, will give a report at this meeting. You should not miss this opportunity to hear such an interesting report. There will also be reports and discussions of local problems in order to formulate a proper plan of activity for the growth of our movement within the Metal Trades.

All of the progressive metal workers interested in the labor movement, and the trade in particular, should not stay away from this meeting. N. Y. Committee for Amalgamation of the Metal Trades. G. Obergfell, secretary.

Amalgamated metal workers especially invited to discuss policy for unity with machinists.

Fascist Ambassador Talks Cash to Mellon, But Leaves No Coin

WASHINGTON, May 27—A slight rift in the foreign debt clouds was seen today in the opening of a series of conversations here between the Italian ambassador and secretary of the treasury Mellon on the funding of Italy's $2,000,000,000 debt to the United States. As Italy was looked on by the government as one of the nations which probably would mark time until France made a concrete debt paying proposal, the visit of Baron G. de Martino to the treasury department was hailed with considerable satisfaction in administration circles.

Shepherd Witness Continues to Elude Searching Police

NEW YORK, May 27.—A search for Robert White, missing chauffeur, wanted in Chicago as a material witness in the murder trial of William D. Shepherd, was continued by police and detectives here today after it had been learned that the Manhattan address to which White had shipped a trunk was fictitious.

A man answered White's description obtained a trunk, it was learned, direct from the office of the American express company, calling for it in an automobile bearing an Illinois license plate, number 169-02.

Germany Welcomes Negroes.

BERLIN, May 27—German newspapers today characterized the American Negroes "American children of Israel," following the simultaneous and heartily welcomed presentations of the "Chocolate Kids," a Negro jazz band, and the Negro folk songs of the Fisk Institute singers.

ANCKLAND, New Zealand, May 27.—Considerable trouble has been recently experienced between waterside employers and employees at several New Zealand ports, resulting in a severe retardation to shipping, on account of strikes.

WALES W. AFRICA VISIT LEAVES A WAKE OF DEATH

Chiefs Snubbed After Forced Attendance

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

FREETOWN, Sierre Leone, West Africa, May 27.—The recent visit of the Prince of Wales here caused great dissatisfaction among the natives. The prince was heavily guarded at a reception and dance given in his honor at the government house here, and race discrimination was evident, the prince and his party dancing only with the few white women present, and ignoring the natives who attended.

The protectorate chiefs, whose photographs welcoming the prince were sent thruout the world, were ordered to come to Freetown for the purpose, and when many of them at last refused, they were ordered to immediately board a train for Freetown or suffer the action of the authorities. They expressed displeasure at the treatment accorded them.

The Prince of Wales was to attend the demonstration of school children at the parade grounds, but delayed his schedule, so that the children were left standing in the scorching heat. Thirty-two fainted, and were given medical attention, by doctors who were prepared for such an emergency.

One of the Paramount chiefs of the Kerene district, who had traveled a long distance in obedience to the orders of the commissioners to attend the gatherings of the chiefs at Freetown, landed in such a prostrated condition that he was immediately sent back to his country by the authorities, who anticipated his death. The unfortunate chief has since died.

Teapot Dome Gang Again Indicted for Fraud in Oil Leases

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, and the oil magnates, E. L. Doheny, and Harry F. Sinclair, were indicted here again today by a federal grand jury for alleged conspiracy to defraud the government in the California and Wyoming naval oil leases. This is the second time the three men have been indicted on the same charge. The first indictment was dismissed by the district of Columbia supreme court because unauthorized persons were in the grand jury room while the inquiry was being made.

The indictments are the outgrowth of the senate oil lease investigation of a year ago.

Edward L. Doheney, Jr., was not included by the grand jury, altho he previously had been indicted.

Oppose Wage Cuts in Shoe Industry

RAILWAYMEN OF AUSTRALIA FOR AMALGAMATION

Negotiate With Other Transport Unions

By W. FRANCIS AHERN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 27.—At a conference of railwaymen, members of the Australian Railways Union held at Melbourne recently the question of amalgamation with other transport unions as a first move to constituting the transport division of the One Big Union was discussed. The following resolution was carried:—

"That an effort be made to amalgamate with other transport unions with the view to bringing about closer industrial organization, and the formation of a transport department of the Australian organization called the One Big Union. Conference again affirms its belief and confidence in the One Big Industrial Union, and favors a shop committee system to secure control at the point of production, as well as of distribution, thus organizing both the employed and unemployed."

Negotiate With Engineers

Negotiations were opened up with the Locomotive Engineers' Union with a view to bringing about an amalgamation of the two unions, but proved abortive. The A. R. U. then carried a resolution instructing its organizers to enroll locomotive engineers in the A. R. U. The A. R. U. also decided to co-operate with other unions with a view to establishing a labor radio station for the broadcasting of labor news and propaganda.

Call Mass Meeting

It was also decided that a mass meeting of members of the A. R. U. be called at an early date to discuss (a) past, present, and future dismissals of employees from the railway services; (b) protest against the action of the state railway department in going outside Australia for their requirements, which can be locally produced.

Turkey Tears Down Flag of League of Nations on Ship

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 27.—The new league of nations flag, has been seized by the Turkish government and has been prohibited from being flown here. The straits commission created under the Lausanne treaty to report on the number of warships in the black sea, hoisted the flag, a dark blue with two golden bars.

Admiral Vassif Pasha, Turkish delegate on the commission, seized the flag by order of his government, and announced that police would tear down any other league of nations flag raised.

International Prospects and Bolshevization

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV.
(Concluded from last issue.)

VIII. Marxism and Leninism.

The Bolshevization of the Parties Must Proceed on the Basis of Leninism.

COMRADES! The whole question of bolshevization must be treated on the basis of Leninism. What Leninism is and with what fresh conclusions it has enriched the theory of Marxism generally we have set forth in detail in our theses.

I am obliged to admit that not all our comrades correctly understand the relation between Marxism and Leninism. I hold in my hands a statement by a French comrade who, partly in jest, calls himself the only French Marxist. I am referring to Charles Rappaport. It concerns a passage in the speech which he delivered at the last congress of the French party. This is how the Humanite of January 19 reports this passage:

"Many comrades fail to understand the real meaning of bolshevization," Rappaport declared. "He expressed regret," the paper went on to say, "that a tendency was to be observed to substitute Marxism by Leninism."

Rappaport complains "that there is a tendency to substitute Marxism by Leninism!" In other words "the only French Marxist" believes that we want to replace Marxism by Leninism. We recently heard the same statement from the mouth of Friedrich Adler. Adler says that a tendency is growing up in the Communist International to refer more and more rarely to Marxism and to speak more and more frequently of Leninism. Friedrich Adler regards this as evidence of our renunciation of Marxism. When Adler tells such fables we are very little affected. But it is very sad when they are told by our own comrades. I must, however, frankly state that even in Russia there are certain Marxists who express similar ideas to that of "the only French Marxist," Charles Rappaport.

I THINK the matter is clear to the Enlarged Executive. The Plenum understands why we lay emphasis on the importance of Lenin. Lenin is unthinkable without Marx. Lenin was Marx's pupil. Leninism is the true undistorted Marxism of our epoch. When the Second International had mutilated Marxism until it was unrecognizable and began to drag his banner in the mire, true Marxism remained living only in Leninism, and that is why the bolshevization of the parties must be carried out on the basis of Leninism. That is the idea we have given expression to in our theses. We shall carry it further both in theory and in practice. We are far from wishing to renounce the glorious traditions of the First International and the many, truly valuable, traditions even of the Second International. It is unthinkable, for instance, that a French Communist should not know Guesdes and Lafargue, that a Russian Bolshevik should know Plekhanov only as an opportunist, and not know that Plekhanov was once the teacher of Lenin; or that a German Communist should forget the valuable contributions made by social democracy in to the earlier revolutionary period of its activities. We will not surrender to the present social democrats the Wilhelm Liebknecht and the Bebel of the time of the "exceptional law against the socialists." That which is truly Marxism in the revolutionary traditions of the old Polish democrats must also be carefully preserved as a valuable historical heritage. The same should be said of the "Spartacus Bund." But it would be a profound error to regard all the Spartacists as finished leaders, whom it is inconvenient for instance to ask how they regard the "Saxon" policy or the event of October, 1923. That cannot be allowed, comrades. We cannot allow every Spartacist a carte blanche on the plea of an old name. But, on the other hand, it becomes nobody to boast that "we, thank god, are no Spartacists." We know how to value the good such what the left independents gave us. The left independents brought masses into our party (voice from the body of the hall: "Quite true!"). But on the other hand they had such serious weaknesses that they were only able to overcome their defects after a series of crises. We must learn how to unite under the banner of revolutionary Marxism all the valuable things that were given us in their time both by the "Spartacus Bund" and the left independents. Every young worker perfectly understands that the Communist movement rose up on the backs of several preceding generations, generations who had both their weak and their strong sides. The Communist International did not appear in the world all of a sudden. It stands upon the foundation constructed by the revolutionaries of former generations. The great pupil of Marx, Lenin, carefully studied the theory and practice of the former generations of revolutionaries and trained the young generation in a spirit of reverence towards the historical exploits which prepared the soil for the Communist International. Lenin always pointed out the lessons which we owe to the success and the failure of those who fought before us. Communism began not in 1919, not at the moment of the foundation of the Communist International, but much earlier; it has a glorious and spacious past. We must acquaint ourselves with that past, we must study it; that is often neglected by us. In this respect the slowing up of the pace of revolutionary development has its good sides, since we are taking advantage of the breathing space which history is allowing the bourgeoisie. The breathing space will be to the advantage of the working class if it is used for extending our knowledge, even tho our universities may for the time being be prisons. Systematic study with the help of lectures, party schools, study circles, etc., are assuming tremendous importance. We are taking advantage of the breathing space not only to perfect the structure of our organizations, but also to study, to perfect ourselves, and to make ourselves true Communists such as Comrade Lenin imagined them. That is one of the aims of Bolshevization.

Forward! In Spite of all Difficulties and Obstacles.

COMRADES, we were obliged to record a number of not very pleasant facts and were obliged to admit many defeats and faults. We must look the truth in the face. We just admit that the question of the period of the revolution is liable to re-examination. We formerly used to count the time in months; now we are obliged to count in years.

We must definitely say that in certain countries all immediate revolutionary situation is still not existent. We must realize that we are entering upon a phase of protracted and stubborn work in the way of bolshevizing our parties. Leninism does not fall from heaven.

We are faced with a serious fight against right dangers. The slogan of bolshevization, in fact was advanced in the fight against right tendencies. And in future too it will mainly be a fight against right — and of course against ultra-left—tendencies and against the backsliding, which is making itself felt in many places. It is enough to cite the instance of Brunn. It is possible that similar manifestations are revealing themselves in other countries. That, in view of the slackening down of the pace of revolutionary developments, is now to be expected. In many of our parties the majority consists of the mass which came over to us from the social democratic organizations. That factor and its consequence is making itself particularly felt in Czecho-Slovakia, where 73 per cent of the party members are former social democrats. The proportion, I think, it is same in the German party, and in many other parties. Of course, we should be proud of the fact that we are breaking up the social democratic parties and we are attracting the workers away from them. We shall continue to sever the workers from the social democrats. But it is not enough to win them over to our side. Those workers must be re-educated, we must make them revolutionaries, true Leninists, Bolsheviks.

THE pace of the revolution has slackened. But we must not use it as a justification or explanation of our own faults and defects and of our ideological inertia, or to justify the fact that the social democratic traditions have not yet been extirpated. The workers who have come over from the social democrats to the Communist Party are excellent proletarians. Even in Brunn in all probability, the workers are in 99 cases out of 100 earnestly devoted to Communism and to the Communist International. But they are being perverted by men who have in fact remained social democrats and who are confusing window smashing with revolution. We must say that if we are obliged "to break a window pane or two" of these opportunists, we shall do it with pleasure.

In conclusion, comrades, let me say the following: Our policy on the whole remains the same, and we ourselves shall remain true to our cause. To adapt ourselves to a new situation, while remaining true to Marxism, is not opportunism. It is the revolutionary duty of a Communist. The path to victory is a long one. The path to the world revolution is a far one to go. We once thought that in five years or so our aim would be achieved. We set out on our journey, but soon realized that the path was far more stony and thorny than we at first thought. We had to remove the stones and pull out the thorns; we had to overcome obstacle after obstacle and at times to retreat and prepare for a fresh sally. We became convinced that there are still great obstacles to overcome. Well, we shall overcome them. But the direction remains the same: our will remains as unshakable as our aim is great. We shall succeed in removing the stones and the thorns from our path, we shall clear the road and we shall achieve the aim which lends profundity and magnificent purpose to our fight. We shall achieve Communism! (Stormy applause.)

(Conclusion.)

GERMAN SCAB ORGANIZATION SEES TROUBLE

Dawes Plan Will Make More Strikes, it Says

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, May 27.—So bitter is the exploitation of labor under the Dawes plan and so little hope of improvement in its condition is there, that the league of German industrialists are planning to continue their "technical emergency aid" organization of strikebreakers and are urging that the government also continue its support of the plan.

The league of German industrialists is an organization of business men and clerks which acts as a strikebreaking organization whenever any labor dispute threatens to tie up any industry.

This precious lot of scoundrels shrewdly foresee as they say, "that as the Dawes plan obligations increase, there may be renewed radical outbursts among the masses and it then would be doubtful whether the German trade union leaders could live up to their promise to keep the industrial life of the country going at the necessary pace."

Australian Labor Party Demands More Than Minimum Wage

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 27.—At the annual conference of the Victoria state branch of the Australian Labor Party, held at Melbourne last month there was an animated discussion regarding the fixation of wages. Delegates demanded the amendment of all legislation dealing with wages, to provide, that they should be assessed and paid "in accordance with the values created by labor."

After discussion, the following resolution was agreed to:—"That it be an instruction to the parliamentary labor party, when in power, to amend all acts dealing with wages, to provide that, in addition to the adjustment of the minimum standard of comfort in accordance with the standards of the time, the increasing productivity of industry must also be considered with a view to the workers sharing in any increased prosperity."

Jobless Army Grows in Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 27.—The number of unemployment in Sweden on March 1, 1925, was reported as 21,600, as against 20,600 on February 1, 1925. The number of unemployed reported on March 1, 1924, was 15,900, which shows a slight increase of unemployment in 1925. Metal and machine workers comprise the majority class in the total number of unemployed.

Ridiculous Predictions of Russo-Japanese War

By R. KAWASLINNA.

Count Soejima, one of the agents of the aristocracy and capitalists in a speech recently in Chicago predicted that a Russo-Japanese war will take place in ten years. His reason for this deduction is the conflict of interests that has existed in Manchuria between Russia and Japan where the former czar's ambitious army was defeated and that defeat, he said, caused the 1905 revolution.

Regarding the relations between America and Japan, he said Japan was more friendly to America because of economic interests linking both countries together. America is a customer for Japan and the world financial center whose strength no country could afford to ignore.

His argument defeats his prediction. Since America as a monetary power, is the center of capitalist regime, and since a conflict resulting in war will be unavoidable because of expansion of capitalism, war is only possible where there is the inferiority complex of bourgeois capitalism. There cannot be any conflict in Manchuria so long as Russia is governed by workers and peasants.

In spite of Soejima,s wish which was father to the prediction, Russia will stand afoot helping the poor overpopulated workers of Japan and unite the workers in both countries not only against Japanese aristocrats and capitalists, but also and equally successfully against the American bourgeois money makers.

IRON WORKERS SUE UNION SECRETARY FOR $50,000 STOLEN FUNDS

ST. LOUIS, May 27.—The International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron workers has filed suit against Harry Jones, former general secretary-treasurer of the union, to compel him to account for, the petition says, "a sum in excess of $50,000" of union funds. Jones was general secretary-treasurer from March 4, 1913 until April 25, 1925 at which time he was ousted from office and expelled from union membership when, it is alleged, he was found short in his accounts. The plaintiffs are General President Morrin and the executive board. Frank P. Walsh is one of the union's attorneys.

Philadelphia May 30th Picnic.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—All preparations are being completed for the first Workers Party outing of the summer season for Saturday, May 30, from 10 in the morning until midnight. The picnic will be held at the Burholme Park. The arrangements committee has made a definite agreement with the weather bureau for bright sunshine weatner for Saturday, May 30, and comrades need not worry about rain, there will be no rain for three days before and after the picnic.

By all means the comrades are requested to secure their lunch tickets at the party or the Freiheit office. Two hundred comrades have already agreed not to take any lunch along which assures everyone a large variety of wholesome and fresh refreshments.

Directions: Take car No. 50 on 5th Street at any time during the day and ask any comrade where to get off or tell the conductor to let you off at Cottman street which is 7200 North and walk three blocks West.

Civil Liberties Fights for Civil Trial for Crouch

NEW YORK, May 27.—Following the recommendation of Major Gen. William R. Smith that the prison sentences of 40 and 26 years against Private Paul Crouch and Private Walter Trumbull by court martial at Honolulu for their Communist beliefs be reduced to 3 and 1 years respectively, the American Civil Liberties Union announces that efforts are being made to bring the cases into the civil courts.

John Albert Matthewman, former attorney-general of the territory and judge in the local courts, has been retained to open the case in the civil courts. "We are trying to take these cases out of the hand of the military authorities because we believe that these men did not have a fair trial and the civil courts ought to review it," the union declares.

The ground on which it is expected to carry the case into the civil courts is that the military court erred in pronouncing a sentence that was itself in violation of the 42nd article of war. This article provides that no person shall be sentenced to imprisonment in a federal or military prison by any court martial unless the offense with which he is charged is punishable by imprisonment for at least one year under the civil laws of the state. Even if Crouch and Trumbull were guilty of forming a secret society in violation of the territorial statute, as was charged at their trial, the maximum sentence that could be imposed upon them under the civil code would be three months.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

Junior Activities in Los Angeles.

THE second anniversary celebrated by the Junior section of Los Angeles was a success. More than eight hundred people (three hundred children) crowded the hall, and according to all reports, were satisfied that this was the best concert that they have heard for a long time. Many inquiries were made since as to when the Juniors will give another concert, and repeated calls were made for numbers performed on that evening, such as the "Spirit of Communism," "The Happy Prince" and the "Labor Defense Operata." The proceeds of this affair could not have possibly gone for a better cause, as $72.32 was turned over to the Local Labor Defense, $30 to the Co-operative Building and $6.50 to the national office.

The Juniors of Los Angeles are "always ready"' always doing something, always planning a head. At the present time all groups are busily engaged in a project which is something new, something different, it is a Communist Children's Week, which will be carried thru within about three weeks. More details about this later.

One of the groups is having a debate on "Resolved, that Capitalism is better than Communism." For this debate, one of the Juniors, who was trying to convince some of his fellow students that the Junior section, Y. W. L., is the best organization for working class children to belong to, was challenged by two boys from his class room. The challenge was accepted by the Junior group and the debate will take place. The Juniors are now seriously thinking of organizing a debating team, and thus be able to challenge different organizations on different subjects from time to time.

Monday, June 1, the Irish Famine Relief Committee of this city, is arranging a big mass meeting at the Blanchard Hall, to collect funds for the famine stricken workers and peasants in Ireland. The Juniors have been asked to contribute to the musical program and decided to give the "Happy Prince" again.

All children who are not yet members of the Juniors, are urged to join this organization at once. The Juniors meet every Monday at 407 S. Pecan St. and every Tuesday and Wednesday at the Co-operative Center, Mott and Brooklyn. Meeting commences 7 p. m. sharp. In the near future we will also have meetings on Friday night at the Co-operative. If any further information is desired please communicate with A. Lyons, Jr., director of Los Angeles, 407 Forest St., Los Angeles, Cal.

A Proletarian's Review of a Perletarian Playlet.

NEXT time some bourgeois hi-brow starts crowin' about capitalist culture particularly about its theater, I'm gonna give him the merry ha-ha and then maybe tell him a few. And well I may. Didn't I see the juniors in "School Days"?

On second thought, I won't. Melted a compassion for him in his benighted ignorance, "I'll take him by the hand and lead him gently—as gently as his ignorance, fear and servility will allow me. And if his machine isn't yet atrophying them to capitalist servility he'll well realize that he has seen something. He will see a playlet, portraying a Communist version of a day in a capitalist school, and if that isn't great stuff it is, at least, potentially alive, and in the hands of the Juniors it becomes more so. Even the propaganda features in the mouths of George and Vera do not fall flat, as propaganda usually does, but become inspired words. And that's art of a high order. The wistful burlesquery of ten-year-old emanciated laundry-washing imp, Vera—is enough to make one laugh and cry at one and the same time. The rest of the players were deliciously grotesque. The playlet as a whole is stirring and it's propaganda value is great.

The wonder of it all is that these are not budding geniuses selected and pampered in some bourgeois school but an ordinary Junior group—the Brownsville group—trained and directed not by a highly tutored director but by a gifted comrade of the Young Workers League. More power to them and to us.

NEGRO WORKERS STRIKE FOR A WAGE RAISE

Teach Whites a Good Lesson in Fighting

By A. N. HARVITT.
(Worker Correspondent.)

TOLEDO, Ohio, (By Mail)—Saturday morning, May 23, all the Negro employes at the big Standard Oil plant here went out for more pay.

They went back wtih the promise from the superintendent that he would give them an answer by Monday morning. The men say if they don't get the raise they won't work.

The men involved in the action include still cleaners, coal passers and general laborers.

The still cleaners have been working piece work, which they insist is not rated high enough as this is very hard work as well as being very unhealthful.

None of the white workers have joined the Negroes as yet, but some of them who get less wages than the Negro workers are expected to follow if the demand for the raise is successful.

There is no union organization among the Negroes yet, but they are the only ones so far to protest against the low wages paid by John D.

MINERS OF EACH COUNTRY SET AGAINST ALL OTHERS BY COAL OPERATORS TO BREAK UNIONS

(By The Federated Press)

BRUSSELS, Belgium, May 27.—Why must English miners accept starvation wages? To undersell Belgian and German and American miners.—Why must Belgian miners accept starvation wages? To undersell German and American and English miners.—Why must German miners accept starvation wages? To undersell American and English and Belgian miners.—Why are American operators demanding a 33 per cent wage cut? Oh! quit your kidding, it just works round in a circle and starts over again.

That is what the Mine Workers' International meeting at Brussels has decided. It elected Frank Hodges, former secretary of the British miners, as permanent salaried secretary to handle the interests of coal miners of all countries as a single world problem.

Long Hours—Accumulation—Then Unemployment.

Ruhr miners, forced to accept long hours and low wages, have accumulated 8,000,000 tons of coal for which there is no market and are now facing part-time. Yet Italians have closed their purchasing office in England and contracted for 2,000,000 tons a year for six years from the Ruhr.

American miners have accepted such low wages that they have taken away the French state railway market from British miners who are now faced with part-time employment or none at all in spite of the lowest wages in their history.

Belgian miners accept a five per cent wage cut May 1, and face a demand for a further five per cent cut tentatively set for July 1. German coal has killed even their home market.

Amsterdamers Slaps I. L. O. Gently on Wrist.

Says the ((Amsterdam) Intl. Federation of Trade Unions: "Since the coal slump is international it is not in the power of individual nations to take any very effective steps toward remedying it. If the International Labor Office, instead of being able merely to institute inquiries, could use its highly qualified staff to intervene in acute situations and to provide the expert advice requisite for an immediate and effective solution it would have drawn the conclusion that less coal would be needed and that permanent adjustments and conversions must be made."

Production of coal has been overdeveloped on a world basis. This is a natural result of competitive capitalism. It means a waste of world resources. But it means still more the ability of the owning class to pit national groups of coal miners against each other to force low wages.

Instructing Worker Correspondents in New York City Class

NEW YORK, May 27.—Members of the Worker Correspondents' school will bring in one story each to the next meeting to be held Saturday evening, June 6, at 7 p. m., at the party headquarters. Jack Carney will again conduct the class.

"Worker correspondents are invaluable, and without them editors of party papers are helpless," declared Jack Carney at the last class. "Do not pass up what seem trivial items of news, because out of the small affairs of life big events develop."

Carney's talk was cut short due to the presence of Moritz J. Loeb, who addressed the class on the necessity for a wider circulation of the DAILY WORKER.

Weather Retards Crops

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27. — The season was early and conditions were generally favorable for farm work so that for a time all farm operations were in advance of the usual in most of the country the U. S. department of agriculture reports. For some weeks past, however, the weather has been too cool for growth and germination of crops and progress in this regard has been slow.

Drought and lack of moisture in the soil have also prevailed in many areas and have checked up the preparation of the ground and the seeding and growth of the crops. Recent rains and slightly higher temperatures have improved conditions considerably, however, but more moisture and warmer weather were still greatly needed in many areas on May 15th.

NOVY MIR RUNS EXCURSION 100 MILES FROM N. Y.

Charters Steamer for Workers' Hudson Trip

NEW YORK, May 27.—Are you a worker? Are you a New Yorker? Are you spending your days in the sweatshop, factory, office or store? If you are then we have a message of cheer for you.

The Novy Mir invites you to take part in its first Grand Excursion, up the Hudson River and into the most beautiful part of the Catskills.

We have been most fortunate in securing one of the finest steamers of the Hudson River line—the "Ida." The steamer departs on Friday evening, May 29, 8 p. m., from the Christopher St. ferry, Pier 43, N. R.

Entertainment on Steamer.

On the steamer will be concerts, dances, entertainments, lots of fun and enjoyment, after which staterooms are provided for the night. After a restful night on the steamer the boat will arrive in Saugertise, more than 100 miles from New York—Saturday morning, 7 p. m.

Automobiles will await us at Saugertise and a most refreshing morning ride in the snappy morning country air will take us inland 12 miles to the camp. The camp is some 2,000 miles above the sea level and the air is most invigorating.

In the camp, will be arranged hiking parties, canoeing, bathing, fishing, sight seeing and other things too numerous to describe here.

Dancing in Camp.

In the evening there will be again concerts, theatrical performances and of course, dancing.

The sleeping quarters are taken care of for Saturday night in the camp.

Regular meals will be served. The food will be most wholesome and fresh. Vegetarians will find plenty to choose from.

Full provisions will be made for the sleeping quarters. Therefore, it is not necessary to take any blankets.

The steamer will return to New York on Sunday midnight.

The price of the ticket is $4.25 and includes a round trip on the steamer, automobile riding, boating, canoeing, fishing, sleeping quarters. There will be no overcrowding as the tickets are limited and everything is assigned. The administration wishes to secure the most comfort for all participating and is making adequate arrangements for such.

Tickets may be obtained at the office of the Novy Mir, 30 Union Square (near 15th St.).

Those coming first will of course get the best staterooms as well as the best accomodations in the camp, tho of course, all will be comfortable. Get your tickets early.

Both Old Parties Aim to Reduce Tax on Wealthy Incomes

WASHINGTON, May 27.—A $500,000,000 tax reduction drive will be started in the next congress by the democratic party. Senator King, of Utah, democratic member of the senate finance committee, announced today following a conference at the White House with President Coolidge. The tax reduction would relieve the rich from payment of income takes. Among other features of the King measure will be a maximum sur-tax on large incomes of not more than 25 per cent. The republicans aim at similiar legislation to relieve the pocketbooks of the wealthy.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Buffalo Finnish Branch Takes Lead

A GOOD WAY TO FILL THE CAMPAIGN QUOTA

LOCAL Buffalo, considering it's size and local difficulties, has made splendid efforts to make the DAILY WORKER Sub Campaign a success—and not without results. And now, as one means of reaching the quota of subs apportioned to it, Comrade Dirba, city DAILY WORKER agent, writes of a method adopted by the comrades in the Buffalo Finnish Branch which could well be adopted everywhere. Here is

A PRACTICAL SUGGESTION.

Dear Comrades:

The Finnish Branch, the largest in the city, in order to raise their quota of 42 new subscribers, have decided to run an entertainment, the net proceeds of which will go toward PROPAGANDA SUBS.

Of course the DAILY WORKER agents of all other branches are going to do all they can to make this entertainment a big success.

This entertainment, in the nature of a concert and dance, will be held Saturday evening, June 13, at the Finnish Hall, 159 Grider St., and we trust that every Buffalo reader of the DAILY WORKER will be present to make this affair a great success, which will also help to make the DAILY WORKER a greater success as well.

Fraternally Yours,
CHAS. DIRBA, Buffalo Daily Worker Agent.

If you live in Buffalo—or anywhere near it—BE THERE!

• • • •

This is a practical way to net the amount needed for PROPAGANDA SUBS to fill your quota to "Make Another Communist." We can build the Communist movement—with the DAILY WORKER.

• • • •

A Reminder to All C. C. C's.

Now is the time to make arrangements for a picnic to be held for the DAILY WORKER. Take this matter up at the next meeting.

Skilled German Labor Working for 20 Cents An Hour 'Under Dawes'

BERLIN,—(FP).—Rising labor costs are being actively opposed by German employer associations. The number of wage demands is increasing. There have been sporadic lockouts in branches of the metal industries. No serious strikes have developed.

Official estimates show that the general wage level rose 2.5 per cent in March and about as much again in April. This brings the average pay of unskilled labor to about 58 pfennigs (14c.) and of skilled labor to 82 pfennigs (20c.) an hour.

Increases were most marked in the textile and paper industries, although there were advances in the metal, chemical, wood working, building and rubber industries. The number of workers employed on part-time increased but the average number of hours worked per week by part-time workers also increased materially.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS DISCUSSES HOW TO MURDER "ETHICALLY"

GENEVA, May 27.—The military committee of the league of nations' conference on the limitation of traffic in arms and munitions decided that it is much more moral to blow a worker to pieces with a cannon than to kill him with poison gas, and recommended a conference to discuss the use of poisons and germs in war.

The resolution passed by the conference declared that the killing of soldiers by using disease germs and gas, "has been condemned by the civilized world." They consider it ethical, however, to slice a worker to ribbons with bayonets, to club him to death, or to blow him to atoms with bombs, grenades and artillery.
